14. Judge may express his opinion on evidence, but must add that jury must form their own opinion.—A Sessions Judge in summing up is bound to advise a jury on questions of fact, and may tell the jury the impression which the evidence has made upon his own mind, 13 W. R. 34. But it is not a misdirection if he omits to enter into details regarding the identification of stolen property, 1 W. R. 22. In giving a warning to a jury not to disbelieve a mass of otherwise consistent evidence because in one or two minor and immaterial points, the witnesses made different statements a judge exercises a wise discretion and affords no ground for an objection that he misdirected the jury, 1 W. R. 17. It is open to a judge in charging the jury to express his opinion as to the effect of a certain portion of the evidence; but he should always be careful to add that it is for the jury to form their own opinion on the evidence and that they are the sole judges of fact, 10 C. 970; (1884) W. R. 5; 19 W. R. 72 = 10 B. L. R. Appx. XXXVI; 4 C. W. N. 198; 14 A. 25; 23 B. 316; 25 C. 230; 4 C. W. N. 576; 12 W. R. 80; 35 C. 531. He should not state his own view of important matters of fact so positively as to leave the jury no loop-hole for taking any other views, Ratanlal 743; 1 W. R. 25. He should not tell the jury that there was no doubt regarding certain facts which it was the duty of the jury to determine. A judge is not entitled under sub-c. (2) to give his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, 1 W. R. 2 and 36; but he may unfavourably comment on the defence evidence as compared with that adduced by the prosecution, 2 W. R. 60.

15. Jury sole judge of facts—Judge not to present his own views of facts too positively.—The duty of a judge charging a jury is to present the facts in their natural aspect and not to suggest far fetched explanations of points that tell in favour of or against either party, Weir II, 388. The judge ought to leave the jury to decide the facts for themselves and it would be a misdirection if he explains away the fact without leaving it to the jury, 14 M. L. T. 442 = 14 Cr. L. J. 623. In trials by jury, the judge in his charge should not state his own view of important matters of fact so positively as to leave the jury no loop-hole for taking any other view. This section requires the judge to sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence and s. 299 leaves it to the jury to decide which view of the facts is true. The duty of the judge is simply to lay down the law authoritatively to the jury and to decide on the admissibility of the evidence, Ratanlal 748. It is not for the judge to tell the jury that any explanation which the accused may offer of any fact appearing against him in evidence is incredible without any qualification that it is merely his own opinion and that the jury is at liberty to draw their own conclusions, Weir II, 383. Where a Sessions Judge charged the jury in a trial for dacoity that there was no force in the argument that the accused may not have foreseen and may not have intended that dacoity should have taken place, held that the judge should not have taken the matter out of the hands of the jury in this way, but should have set out the evidence bearing on the question and left it to the jury to say what was the proper inference to be drawn from that evidence, 7 M. L. T. 191 = 11 Cr. L. J. 334 following Mad. Cr. A. 592 of 1905. An expression of opinion by the judge on the facts without telling the jury that they are at liberty to form their own opinion in regard thereto and also without cautioning them to give the accused the benefit of a reasonable doubt amounts to a misdirection, 34 C. 698. Where the judge expressed his opinion on various questions of fact without telling the jury that his opinion was not binding on them and that they were the sole judges of fact, held, the charge was unsatisfactory, 35 C. 531. Even if he informs the jury that on questions of fact they are not bound by any opinion of his it may amount to a misdirection if he expresses his own opinion on the evidence in terms too dogmatic and unqualified 18 C. W. N. 180.

16. Directing jury to neglect evidence improper.—Where a judge in the charge to the jury stated that there was a mass of oral evidence for the prosecution and another mass for the defence and then told them "It may literally be stated that the jury may neglect it all" Held, this was a misdirection to the jury. It is not the duty of a judge to say that the jury may neglect any portion of the evidence. That is clearly against the provisions of the law, which says that the jury are to give their verdict upon the whole of the evidence recorded, 6 Bom. L. R. 31. It would be a material misdirection to the jury to tell them to leave out of consideration the evidence of a witness and the retracted confession of the accused, 8 M. L. T. 372 = 11 Cr. L. J. 683.

17. Judge should charge the jury that expert evidence should be approached with considerable care and caution.—An accused was charged under s. 82 (c) of the Registration Act with false personation in getting a document registered and the case depended on evidence as to the identity of thumb-impersonations. Held, that the judge should call the attention of the jury to the nature and history of the case as laid down before the Court by the prosecution. Where a case depends on expert evidence, the Judge should call the attention of the jury to the fact that the evidence of an expert should be approached with considerable care and caution. In the present case the charge of the Judge to the jury was far from satisfactory and that certain statements in the charge—that certain exhibits being identical must be of the same person—was eminently a matter for the jury to decide upon and not for the Judge. The Judge was wrong in not drawing the attention of the jury to the actual thumb-mark on the mortgage-deed, nor was the expert asked any question about it. The conviction was therefore quashed as the prejudice to the accused was apparent and a fresh trial was ordered, 1 C. L. J. 385 = 2 Cr. L. J. 311.

18. Judge ought to point out presumptions that may be drawn from facts—effect of possession of recently stolen property.—It is a serious misdirection if the Judge fails to point out to the jury that recent possession of a murdered man's jewels is a fact from which they might presume not merely their receipt of stolen property, but also murder with which the accused was charged, 17 C. W. M. 1077 = 14 Cr. L. J. 556. It is specially important that a Judge should point out a presumption of this kind because jurors are often reluctant to act on that which is commonly known as circumstantial evidence, ibid.

19. Duty of Judge in respect of statements of witnesses taken under s. 164.—The Judge ought to tell the jury that the evidence of witnesses taken under s. 164 must be accepted with a great deal of caution. He ought to point out that it is not always proper for the Police-officer to get such statements recorded for the purpose of pinning the witnesses down to some statement especially at a time when they are not free from Police influence, 7 C. L. J. 246 = 7 Cr. L. J. 315.

19-A. Judge should not unduly dwell upon the evasion of arrest by accused.—In pointing out the absence of the accused the Judge should warn the jury that even if they believed he absconded, absconding is not necessarily or invariably incompatible with innocence, 18 C. W. M. 180 = 15 Cr. L. J. 187. An attempt to evade arrest should not be unduly insisted upon as evidence of guilt, R v Hampson, C. C. A. 11 Cr. Ap. R. 75. Where a criminal succeeded in evading arrest for some considerable period and meanwhile obtained honest employment, the jury were told that they could convict the prisoner of being an habitual criminal because he was a fugitive from justice. Held, that this amounted to a misdirection R v Brown, C. C. A. 23 Cox C. C. 615 = 75 J. P. 79.

III.—NON-DIRECTION.

20. Non-direction is not a misdirection unless the jury have been misled.—See Note 8. A mere omission or misstatement in a summing up is not in itself a misdirection when the case has been fully heard by the jury, but there is a miscarriage of justice where the omission or misstatement is such that the jury may have probably been misled by it, R v Wann, 76 J. P. 269 (1913) = 23 Cox C. C. 183. As a general rule, non-direction does not amount to misdirection, and the High Court will not interfere with the verdict of a jury, because there was non-direction, unless the circumstances were such as to make the non-direction amount to a misdirection, Ratanal 644; 5 W. R. 13; 7 C. 42. A non-direction is not a misdirection, unless it is on a matter of prime importance and especially if it tells in favour of the accused, 22 L. R. 103 = 11 Cr. L. J. 13. The omission of the Judge to enter into details regarding the identification of stolen property does not amount to a misdirection, 1 W. R. 22. See Note 17.

21. Where non-direction is on a point of prime importance especially in favour of the accused, it may amount to misdirection.—A non-direction amounts to a misdirection if the point is one of prime importance, generally tell the jury that the point is one of prime importance, ibid.

observed, that his defence may be properly and adequately presented to the jury by a person qualified to do so. Thus where a Sessions Judge omitted to point out that certain of the prisoners under trial were not originally accused and that their names were not mentioned until eighteen days afterwards, it was held that there was a misdirection and the verdict in respect to these accused was set aside, 21 C. 10. Where the Sessions Judge failed to bring to the notice of the jury, a fact of prime importance elicited in the cross-examination of the only witness who identified the accused, viz that she was terrified and not in her proper senses on the night of the dacoity Held the failure to do so amounted to a misdirection, (1912) M. W. M. 100 = 13 Cr. L. J. 271. Similarly, in a murder case, where the medical opinion was that the injuries of the deceased were not in the case of a man of ordinary health dangerous to life, held that the Judge should have specially called the attention of the jury to such opinion 34 C. 699; 4 C. W. M. 102. So, too the omission by the Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury to mention the fact of the original witnesses named in the first information, having been abandoned by the prosecution, of two of them having given evidence for the defence and of the witnesses actually examined for the prosecution being entirely new witnesses, was deemed to be a sufficient misdirection to the jury to justify the setting aside of the conviction, 34 C. 325. In his charge to the jury, the Judge is not justified in making comments on the first information without placing it as a whole before the jury 33 C. 531. In summing up the case to the jury the Judge omitted to call their attention to the evidence of the witnesses for the defence. This evidence appeared to the High Court to be untrustworthy. Held, that the summing up is not defective on account of this omission on the part of the Judge, 7 C. 42. But where the accused pleaded alibi and the Sessions Judge in the beginning of his charge to the jury referred to the plea of the accused but omitted all reference to it in the subsequent part of the charge. Held that this was a misdirection. The Judge ought to have told the jury that before they could convict the accused they must find that the accused were present at the occurrence, 35 C. 551. It is for the jury to decide whether a defence of alibi is true or not, 14 M. L. T. 442 = 14 Cr. L. J. 623. It is a misdirection if the Judge fails to draw the attention of the jury to the allegation of the defence that the prosecution witness had sufficient motive for concocting a false charge against the accused, (1911) M. W. N. 190 = 13 Cr. L. J. 140. The Judge ought to ask the jury to consider whether the delay in giving the information was sufficiently accounted for, ibid. When the charge to the jury placed prominently before the jury all the circumstances that went against the accused, but did not call their attention to any of those that went in their favour, and especially when it omitted to tell the jury what the defence of the accused was, held, that there was misdirection sufficient to vitiate the trial, 4 C. W. N. 195; 7 C. 42; 11 C. 10. There is misdirection, if the Judge omits to point out to the jury the case for the accused, 30 C. 822. Three persons, who were attacked and wounded in an affray, informed the Police on the same day that the persons who had attacked them were A, B and C. Eighteen days afterwards the same complainants gave to the Magistrate inquiring into the case the names of four other persons who, they said with the three persons first accused, formed the attacking party. The seven accused were tried jointly for the offence before the Additional Recorder of Rangoon and a jury. In his charge to the jury the Additional Recorder omitted to call their attention to the fact that four out of the seven accused had not been mentioned by the prosecutors until after eighteen days had passed over. The prisoners were convicted. Held, that the Additional Recorder misdirected the jury, that under the circumstances the misdirection prejudiced the four persons last accused; and that the verdict must be set aside as far as they were concerned, 4 C. W. N. 195 at p. 200. Similarly, where the accused was charged with forging a will and there was no evidence to prove that the signature on the will was not genuine, held, that it was the duty of the Judge to draw the attention of the jury to the point and his not having done so was a misdirection, 27 B. 625 at p. 635; 5 Bom. L.R. 599. Also in placing a suggestion made by the Crown Prosecutor without any evidence to support it before the jury, the Judge ought to point out that there is no evidence to support the prosecution, 7 C. L. J. 246 = 7 Cr. L. J. 315. Where a Sessions Judge, in his direction to the jury, omitted to point out the absence of evidence very material to the case of the prosecution, and where he directed the jury to attribute an undue importance to the statements or excuses made by the prisoners in the explanation of a certain document, the High Court set aside the verdict of the jury, 23 W. R. 21. A Judge should draw the attention of the jury to the case made out for defence and the non-production by the prosecution of witnesses who were present at the time of the alleged occurrence pointing out to them that the non production of those witnesses created a presumption under s. 114 of the Evidence Act which did not help the case for prosecution, 17 Cr. L. J. 92 (C) = 32 Cr. L. J. 684, 25 C. W. N. 142.

22. Omission to point out the contention of the accused that he acted in self-defence.—See 16 C. W. N. 46 = 13 Cr. L. J. 26. Where the accused's defence that he acted in self defence was not put to the jury the conviction was quashed, R v Hill, (1912) 28 T. L. R. 13.

In a charge under s. 304, I P. C., the defence was that the deceased man came to the house at night with the intention of robbery and that the accused on awaking found him coming from inside the house and inflicted wounds on him which proved fatal. The Judge in charging the jury expounded the law with regard to the right of private defence of the body, but neglected to direct the jury with regard to the right of private defence of property. Held, that the Judge should have charged the jury on the right of private defence of property and omission to do so was misdirection. 28 C. W. N. 585.

23. Omission to direct the jury to give the accused the benefit of any doubt.—It is usual and most proper direction for a Judge to instruct the jury that if they entertain any reasonable doubt as to the guilt of any one of the accused, they should give him the benefit of the doubt and acquit him, and as a matter of practice this direction should always be given in every case, though the omission to give it may not in every case constitute a misdirection of such a character as to render a conviction invalid. Where in regard to one of the accused the Judge after summing up the evidence in detail observed "there only seems to be some vague suggestion that he might have been concerned in the offence. When we scrutinise the evidence, it seems very weak and for the reasons I have pointed to jury, it seems to be wholly inconclusive." Held, that with regard to this accused, the omission by the Judge to give the above direction to the jury amounted to a misdirection which prejudiced the accused and he must therefore be acquitted, 1 M. L. T. R. 350. See also 15 C. W. N. 198 = 43 Cr. L. J. 557; Weir II, 500. Where the probabilities in favour of the prosecution outweigh the probabilities in favour of the defence, but looking to all the circumstances there remains a reasonable doubt in favour of the accused, the accused must get the benefit of the doubt, Ratanlal 127; 14 Bom. L. R. 710 = 33 Cr. L. J. 677.

24. Omission to point out circumstances under which confession was made and retracted.—In case of a retracted confession, the circumstances under which it was originally made and the fact of its repetition a few days later, ought to be brought to the attention of the jury. The question which should have been put to them with regard to the confessions is not whether they were corroborated by independent evidence, but whether having regard to the circumstances under which they were made and the circumstances under which they were retracted—having regard to all the circumstances connected with the confessions, whether it was more probable that the original confessions, or statements before committing Magistrate were true. The omission on the part of the Judge to place the circumstances before the jury and to put this question to them amounts to a misdirection, 21 M. 83; see 23 C. 689; Weir II, 510.

Omission to refer to provisions of s. 101 in charge under s. 326, L. P. C., amounts to a misdirection, 50 C. 318.

24-A. Omission to point out that a confessional statement if believed showed that the offence charged was not committed.—Where a confessional statement by the wife charged with abetment of murder alleged that she held her husband's legs while another struck him with an axe, but that she protested against the murder, and only assisted because such other person threatened to kill her also, Held that the omission of the Judge to direct the jury that if they believed the statement, she could not having regard to s. 94, L. P. C., be convicted of abetment of murder under s. 109 was a misdirection vitiating the conviction 52 C. 112.

IV.—ADMISSION, RELEVANCY, ETC., OF EVIDENCE.

25. Question what the jury are to receive is for the Judge, what they are to believe is for the jury.—Where a Sessions Judge allowed certain documents to go upon the record which were not proved, for the purpose of comparison of handwriting and left it to the jury to form their opinion whether the accused wrote the disputed signature. Held, that the irregularity was not such as to make interference of the High Court necessary, Ratanlal 452.

26. Judge should decide whether confession voluntary and admissible.—It is the duty of the Judge, not the jury, to decide the point whether an accused person, while making a confession was or was not in Police custody as it is a matter which it is necessary to prove in order to enable the confession to be admitted in evidence and his omission to state to the jury his finding on the point is not a misdirection and could not prejudice the accused, 31 M. 127. The question whether a confession was voluntarily made or not has to be decided by the Judge himself for the purpose of admitting it in, or excluding it from the evidence in the case. If the Judge finds it was voluntarily made and was not caused by any threat or inducement, he must admit it in evidence, once it is so admitted, it is for the jury to say whether it is true or not, 11 Bom. L. R. 332 = 10 Cr. L. J. 65. When a retracted confession of an accused is tendered in evidence at the trial of a case tried by a jury, it is the duty of the Judge to determine the question of its admissibility under this section and s. 24 of the Indian Evidence Act Ratanlal 730. When the Judge omitted to charge regarding the relevancy or otherwise of a confession, but said that if the confession were true it was enough to warrant the conviction and the jury convicted, it was held that there was material misdirection 26 M. 38.

27. Where beating is alleged by the prisoner, Judge must make an inquiry.—On his trial before the Court on Session, the accused retracted the confessions which he had made before a first-class Magistrate and the committing Magistrate alleging that he was beaten by the Police and that the confession was the result of an offer of inducement. Held, that under cl (c) of this section the Judge ought to have made some inquiry into the allegation of the prisoner about torturing, which, he said had resulted in his confessions, Ratanlal 245.

28. Judge must decide if a communication is privileged.—A Judge should not leave it to the jury to find whether a communication is privileged or not, but should himself decide it as a point of law, 40 W. R. 14.

29 Judge must decide upon the admissibility of evidence.—It is also his duty to see that evidence which is not admissible in itself e.g., statement made to a pleader, mukhtar or his clerk, should not be allowed to go in to the prejudice of the accused, though no objection is taken thereto by the accused 23 C. 738; see also 27 B. 626. In a trial by jury, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to determine whether confessions retracted at the trial are admissible. If he finds them irrelevant under s 24 of the Evidence Act, he should so direct the jury. If there is no evidence on the record showing that they are invalid by reason of any improper inducement or threat, they should go to the jury with a direction that in absence of evidence it is not to be presumed that they are inadmissible, Ratanlal 842.

30. Judge must find documents admitted or proved before admitting them for comparison.—Before admitting documents under s 73 of the Evidence Act, for the purpose only of comparison with a document alleged to be a forgery, it is the duty of the Judge to find whether they are admitted or proved, and the fact that the question of admissibility has been determined, should be noted by the Judge in the record of the case, Ratanlal 491.

31. Judge must decide on the capacity of a witness to justify.—The question of the capacity of a witness to testify is a question for the Judge himself to decide and not for the jury, although after he has decided in favour of the competency of a witness it is for the jury to determine the amount of credit to be given to the statements made by such witness, 41 C. 406 following 3 W. R. 60.

Y.—ADMISSION OF INADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.

32 When jury placed in possession of evidence which ought not to be admitted, there is misdirection.—Where material evidence which ought not to be admitted, is admitted and the jury are placed in possession of it, there is a misdirection in law when the Judge tells the jury that it is evidence which they can consider and on which they can, if they think proper, convict the accused, 27 B. 626. Where evidence which the law says shall not be admitted is let in with other evidence legally admissible and where the former is of a material character, it would be mere speculative refinement to hold that the jury must have in convicting the accused relied upon the latter and neglected the former, 3 C. 768.

33. Cases where relying on inadmissible evidence held to vitiate verdict.—

(i) Hearsay evidence and anonymous letter—Where a Judge in his charge to the jury admitted hearsay evidence and an anonymous letter put in by the prosecution, without showing how or by whom it was sent or that it reached the accused. Held, that the jury were misdirected and the accused prejudiced, 24 W. R. 77. See also 18 M. L. J. 250 = 3 M. L. T. 263 = 7 Cr. L. J. 358; see R v. Campbell, (1915) 77 J. P. 93; where a conviction for burglary was quashed on the ground that the trial Judge had admitted hearsay evidence which refused an alibi set up by the prisoner. See also 7 W. R. 2 and 23 as to the duty of a Judge when a witness proposes to give inadmissible evidence.

(ii) Statements made before investigating Magistrate—A direction by the Judge to the jury that statements made before an investigating Magistrate and not admissible under s 293 is strong evidence against the accused is clearly a serious misdirection, 31 M. 127; 27 B. 626; 18 M. L. J. 250 = 3 M. L. T. 263 = 7 Cr. L. J. 358.

(iii) Confessions to Police—A confession made by the accused was irrelevant under s 24, Indian Evidence Act, being induced by a person in authority. The Judge in his charge made no reference to its relevancy but told the jury that if the confession was true, it was enough to warrant the conviction of the accused. The accused took no objection to the admission of the confession. Held that there was a misdirection that was material and important and the conviction was set aside, 26 M. 38. "Where the Sessions Judge told the jury generally that confessions to the Police if followed by the production of stolen property are admissible but omitted to point out that such confessions are only admissible in so far as they relate distinctly to the fact evidence as to the guilt of one of the accused, and statements made by the accused while in custody, were received as confessions and the jury was misdirected by being told that such statements followed up by the production of stolen property were admissible and the Judge did so state the case of each accused separately, and that a confession by one accused involving himself alone could not be received against the other accused, held that a new trial must be ordered, 18 M. L. J. 220 = 3 M. L. T. 263 = 7 Cr. L. J. 358. See Note 45

(iv) First information—It is a misdirection to ask the jury to accept the statement in the first information in preference to the evidence in the case. The first information is not evidence in the case. It is tendered by the Crown for such use as the defence may be able to make of it and to test the consistency of the prosecution evidence. The most that the Judge can make of it is say, whether, although it gave a different account of the occurrence from that in the evidence, it could be reconciled with the evidence, and give the jury an opportunity of judging whether in that view the positive evidence in the case could be believed, 18 C. W. N. 198 = 11 Cr. L. J. 557. See also 34 C. 325; 35 C. 531, Note 21 above.

(v) Previous conviction or bad character—In charging a jury, a Sessions Judge should not tell them that the prisoners had previously been bad characters. The fact may be taken into consideration by him in passing sentence when the prisoners are convicted, 10 W. R. 39. In charging a jury upon the trial of a prisoner for being dishonestly in possession of stolen goods, the Judge directed the jury to consider the proof of previous convictions for theft as evidence from which inference might fairly be drawn as to the character of the accused. Held that this amounted to a misdirection, as the evidence of bad character of the accused is irrelevant and inadmissible under s. 54 of the Evidence Act, 5 C. 768. See also 31 M. 127, Note 2 to s. 310. See also R v Hemmingway, 77 J. P. 15 (1912) and R v Cutris, (1912) 29 T. L. R. 512, where a conviction was quashed because evidence of a previous conviction was wrongly admitted.

(vi) Reasons given by a Magistrate in discharging the accused and the committal order of a Judge—The reasons given by a Magistrate in discharging the accused and the contents of the Sessions Judge's order in setting aside the conviction and directing a commitment and the opinions of the committing Magistrate should not be admitted in evidence and it is a misdirection for the Judge to lay stress on them, 11 Cr. L. J. 558 (C), it is a misdirection to lay stress on a document a statement reduced to writing under s. 167 improperly admitted in evidence, 13 Cr. L. J. 244 (Mad).

(vii) Reference to previous cases against others implicated and the opinion of the High Court therein—A Judge should not in charging the jury refer to a previous case against some other persons tried for the same offence, except to warn the jury not to be influenced by it. It is a misdirection to tell the jury that the High Court had come to a certain finding in the previous case and they were to consider if they had any reason to come to a different conclusion, 9 C. L. J. 380 = 10 Cr. L. J. 495.

34. Duty of Judge when inadmissible evidence has come to the knowledge of jury.—When in the course of a trial inadmissible evidence has come to the knowledge of the jury such as the fact that the accused has been in prison or that he has been previously convicted, the Judge should expressly tell the jury to disregard it and warn them not to let it influence their judgment. The accused was charged with altering counterfeit coin and evidence was given that a fortnight earlier he had tendered a counterfeit coin to the same person. This he showed conclusively was not true, he was in prison at the time. The Judge did not expressly warn the jury that they ought to disregard the fact that the accused had been in prison. The Appeal Court quashed the conviction, R v Lee, (1908) 73 J. P. 253. See also R v Warner, (1908) 73 J. P. 53. Where the accused has been asked an inadmissible question which the Judge has disallowed, the Appeal Court will consider in each case whether the prejudice created against the defendant by such question has been sufficiently dispelled by the Judge R v Kurasel, 11 Cr. App. R. 166 (1915). See Note 76.

In holding a re trial, the Judge ought not to comment on evidence adduced at the previous trial 1 C. L. R. 62; 7 C. L. R. 193.

VI.—JUDGE'S DUTY TO DEAL WITH THE LAW.

35. It is imperatively necessary for the Judge to expound the law to the jury.—The jury must be told what the law is and what constitutes the offence charged and what matters must be proved to their satisfaction to constitute that offence, a total omission to lay down the law as required by s. 257 is not a mere irregularity which can be cured by s. 537, and the conviction must be set aside, 8 L. B. R. 149 = 11 Cr. L. J. 340. It is incumbent on the Judge to explain the law relating to the particular offence charged against the accused in order to enable the jury to apply the law to the special facts of the case. A mere mention of the sections of the Penal Code under which the accused were charged is insufficient, 25 C. 735; 25 C. 561. Merely to read out to the jury the sections of the Penal Code, applicable to the case is not an explication of the law sufficient for the guidance of the jury 4 C. W. N. 193; 15 B. 369. Even when the jury has already been addressed on a question of law by the leaders on both sides it is the duty of the Judge to lay down the law by which the jury is to be guided. Omission to do so is a misdirection and the conviction is liable to be quashed. A Judge ought not merely leave with the jury a copy of the Penal Code, 16 C. 164. It is immaterial how much or how often the jury may have been addressed by the pleaders on both sides upon the law. The responsibility of laying down the law for the guidance of the jury rests entirely with the Judge and the verdict arrived at in the absence of such direction is not a valid verdict, 29 C. 379. See also 7 Bar. L. T. 30 = 13 Cr. L. J. 257; 47 Cr. L. J. 92. See Note 8.

36. Judge must not cite number of rulings and ask the jury to form their opinion on the authorities — It should appear on the face of the record that the law bearing on the charge under trial has been explained to the jury, 25 C. 631. The duty of a Judge in charging the jury is to make up his mind as to what the law is and to tell the jury what it is as succinctly and clearly as he can. If he turns out to be wrong, a higher tribunal can set him right. A large number of cases should not be cited to the jury, for such a course is calculated to confuse them and to lead to a miscarriage of justice. Further, charges of inordinate length and involved nature should not be delivered to the jury, 1 C. L. J. 159 = 2 Cr. L. J. 157. It is the duty of the Judge to give a direction upon the law to the jury so far as to make them understand the law as bearing upon the facts, and if he does not give them an explanation of the law sufficiently comprehensive to enable them to decide the particular issue, it is a misdirection. Per FIELD, J., 8 C. 739 = 12 C. L. R. 233. It is a misdirection for a Judge to cite and comment on a number of rulings and tell the jury that it was for them to say whether any of those rulings are exactly on all fours with the circumstances of the case then being tried. No rulings or authorities are ever to be cited to the jury nor are they to be asked to differentiate or form an opinion whatever on any authorities. It is for the Judge and the Judge only to tell the jury what law is and before he tells them what it is he may consult as many authorities as he pleases and the authorities are no doubt binding upon him. The minds of the jury should never be confused by having a number of authorities or any authorities laid before them, 16 C. W. N. 46 = 13 Cr. L. J. 26.

36-A.—The Judge should lay down the law only in so far as it bears on the evidence adduced in the case.—See Notes 7 and 8

37. Judge must call attention of jury to different elements of the offence.—In charging a jury it is not sufficient for the Judge merely to read the definition of the offence and to leave it to them to find out whether the evidence makes out a case against the accused. It is the duty of the Judge to call the attention of the jury to the different elements constituting the offence and to deal with the evidence by which it is proposed to make the accused liable, 35 C. 711; 30 M. L. T. 82 = 11 Cr. L. J. 437. See 14 C. 164, eg., upon a charge of murder the Judge must point out to the jury accurately the difference between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder, 9 W. R. 51; 15 W. R. 80; 15 W. R. 17 = 6 B. L. R. Appx. LXXXVI. The Judge should adhere to the words of the particular section of the Penal Code in charging the jury and not substitute phraseology of his own, 13 C. W. N. 754 = 11 Cr. L. J. 9. In a charge of trespass, the Judge should explain to the jury the distinction between civil and criminal trespass, 41 C. 662.

38 Discussion in Judge's charge of law points raised by defence unnecessary.—A Judge should not, in his charge to the jury, discuss points of law raised by prisoner's counsel and dispose of them. He should avoid all extraneous and unnecessary discussion and argument, and should confine himself to a mere summoning up of evidence on both sides, showing how the law applies to it, 8 W. R. 87; see also the remarks of PHEAR, J., in 19 W. R. 71 at p. 73 = 10 B. L. R. Appx. XXXVI.

39. Duty of Judge when jury are uncertain as to law on the offence committed.—If the jury after finding the accused guilty, be unable to determine what offence has been committed, a Judge should not, by handing over to them a copy of the Penal Code, leave them to decide under what section the offence fell, but should solve their doubts, if they have any, by explaining the law to them, and should state to them what offence is proved by the facts of the case, if they believed those facts, 14 C. 164. The jury should take the law from the Judge. They are not entitled to resort to a commentary on the law during their consultation, Ratanlal 736; 6 Bom. L. R. 258. It is the duty of the Judge when he is told that the jury do not understand the law in the matter to explain the law to them again, (1911) M. W. N. 190 = 9 M. L. T. 345 = 12 Cr. L. J. 140. Where a Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury stated "the accused are charged with offences under ss. 147, 323/159, 325/149 and 304/149, I. P. C. The law bearing on the case has been placed before you more than once in the addresses delivered by the learned pleaders on either side. I need not go into detail as to the law therefore." Held there was misdirection and a re-trial was ordered. It is immaterial how much or how often the jury may have been addressed by the pleaders on both sides upon the law. The responsibility of laying down the law for the guidance of the jury rests entirely with the Judge and the verdict arrived at in the absence of such direction, is not a valid verdict, 29 C. 379; 27 B. 644.

VII—ACCOMPLICE'S TESTIMONY AND CONFESSIONS

40 How a jury ought to be charged regarding testimony of accomplices.—(s) The Judge should an accomplice unless it is corroborated.—It is no an accomplice is not confirmed to recommend the prohibiting the conviction of an offender upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice and (b) that as a rule of practice it is considered unsafe to convict upon such evidence and then to point out circumstances if any in the particular case for relying upon the evidence 4 M H. C. R. Appx VII. In a trial by jury the Sessions Judge should in his direction add to what s 114 of the Evidence Act illus (b) says of an accomplice the direction about the corroboration as to each prisoner as laid down long ago in 3 B H. C. R. Cr Ca. 57, Ratanlal 848. The omission to caution the jury not to accept the evidence of an approver unless corroborated was in 12 M. 198 held to be a misdirection requiring the reversal of the verdict. In the case of a trial by jury it the principles relative to the reception of an accomplice's testimony which the Legislature sanctioned by the Indian Evidence Act, and we think the Judge was wrong in telling the jury that this case was one in which no caution or instruction from him was needed on this head. It is in all cases where an accomplice's testimony is admitted incumbent on the Judge to inform the jury of the results of the law bearing on this point substantially as we have endeavoured to explain it. Per PHILLIPS J, in 21 W. R. 69. The omission by a Judge to direct the jury in his charge that although a conviction upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is valid in law it is dangerous to convict a prisoner on such evidence alone and that they must look for corroboration of it in material particulars from independent sources in the case is an error of law, which if it materially prejudiced the prisoner justifies the High Court in setting aside the verdict, Ratanlal 866, 12 M. 198; 8 B. H. C. R. Cr Ca. 57, 1 B. 475, 14 B. 115, but see 1 M. 394; 5 W. R. 80; 9 A. 528, 1884 A. W. N. 288; 8 A. 306, 2 C. W. N. 85 and 672; 21 M. 83, 5 M. L. T. 335 = 9 C. R. L. J. 308

(vi) The Judge should direct the attention of the jury to the evidence corroborating the accomplice—The Judge ought in his charge direct the jury that the corroboration of an accomplice or accomplices ought to be that which is derivable from unimpeachable or independent evidence as distinguished from that derived from the earlier statements of the same accomplice or the statements of other accomplices, and to point out the danger of convicting any one of several prisoners charged at the trial about whose identity as one of the persons committing the crime the accomplice testimony is not corroborated. The accomplice often knows all the circumstances and may speak truth about them yet may put some innocent man in his own place or that of some other guilty person Ratanlal 840. See also 10 B. 319 at p. 327, 1 B. 475, 8 A. 306 and 309 and 10 C. 970

(vii) Judge should not mislead the jury by stating that a witness who is really an accomplice is not an accomplice—In 17 O. 842 (F.B.), the Judge charged the jury that they were not to convict upon the evidence of G if satisfied that he was an accomplice and uncorroborated but coupled the direction with a strong expression of opinion that G was not an accomplice, it was held that this constituted a misdirection in fact though not in form calculated seriously to prejudice the prisoner's case as the substantial effect of the direction was that the evidence of G was entitled to as much weight as that of a perfectly independent and unprejudiced witness

(viii) It is an error if the Judge points out that the accomplice evidence is corroborated by a fact when it is not so—In a dicotchy case where the conviction depended mainly on the evidence of an approver the Judge stated in his charge "If you think that the approver's story is worthy of credit in itself you have to consider whether it has been corroborated on material points. He then described what in his opinion were the points of corroboration and he told the jury that the above are points on which the evidence has been corroborated and that corroboration is full and complete if you believe it you have to consider these points and decide whether the approver has been corroborated in material points and if you find that to be so then you have in his story sufficient evidence to connect all three accused with the crime. Held that this was not a proper way to place the case before the jury. The Sessions Judge should have told the jury that although the law permits them to convict on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice it is not the practice of the Court which in prudence has invariably required some corroboration sufficient to connect each of the accused with the offence committed. With this caution the Sessions Judge should have laid before the jury the evidence corroborating the statement of the accomplice 29 C. 782. As a general rule juries ought to be advised and directed that the accused ought not to be convicted upon an accomplice's testimony unless it is confirmed not only as to the offence but as to the identity of the individual prisoner as the person or one of the persons who participated in the crime, Wells II 796; 12 L. J. 537 (Qudh); 12 O. C. 418—11 Cr. L. J. 71. It would be an error in summing up if a Judge, after pointing out the danger of acting upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice were to tell the jury that the evidence of the accomplice was corroborated by facts which did not amount to any corroboration at all 29 C. 782 where 8 W. R. 80 at p. 88 and 8 W. R. 19 at p. 25 are followed. See also 17 C. 642 and 2 C. W. N. 672; 10 Cr. L. J. 567 (W). A Judge might misdirect a jury as to what is corroboration of the testimony of an approver 10 C. 979. As to what amounts to legal corroboration see 11 B. H. C. R. 196, 19 W. R. 57; 23 W. R. 26; 8 A. 120 at p. 137; 1 B. 475; 14 B. 331; 40 B. 231, 25 C. 339 and Note to s. 337.

41 Duty of Judge when the only evidence is the uncorroborated testimony of approver—The law as to the duty of a Judge in charging a jury in respect of accomplice evidence was exhaustively dealt with in the recent case of E. N. Nilakanti 35 M. 267, which was a case before a Special Bench constituted under the Criminal Law Amendment Act and in the appeal therefrom under the Letters Patent on a certificate of the Advocate-General E. v. Muthukumaraswami 35 M. 397 (F.B.). In this case there was no jury and the question was whether the Special Bench could act on the uncorroborated testimony of three approvers. In discussing the law on the subject the duty of a Judge in charging a jury was considered, and the majority of the Special Bench consisting of WHITE C.J. and AYLING J. (SANKARAN NAIR, J. dissenting) held that—

The proper direction seems to be—Consider the evidence of the approvers always to bear in mind that it is tainted evidence scrutinise it with the utmost care accept it with the greatest caution consider it in the light of the circumstances in which it is given and in the light of all the other circumstances in the case of which evidence is legally admissible. Then if you believe it act on it even if there is no corroboration in the strict sense of the word. If you do not believe it reject it.' And they approved of the law laid down in 9 A. 528, 1 M. 394 and 27 M. 271. On appeal the view of the majority was approved by the majority of the Full Bench. 'It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the taint and infirmity which ordinarily attach to the testimony of an accomplice and to remind them that they may presume that this evidence is unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars. But it is also his duty to refer to any circumstances of fact (see illustrations to s. 114 Indian Evidence Act) which show that the presumption should not be drawn in the particular case or which rebut the presumption if drawn and all other circumstances tending to show its truth or falsehood if they believe it to be true they should act upon it even though there may be no corroboration of it in the strict sense of the word but that if they are not satisfied of its truth they should refuse to act upon it. BENSON J. WALLIS J. while approving of the law as laid down by WHITE C.J. and AYLING J. were of opinion that the trend of English authorities is that the Judge should where there is no corroboration with draw the case from the jury and direct them to acquit but such a practice would be at variance with the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act. As a matter of practice a Court should not accept the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice as sufficient evidence to support a conviction but it is impossible consistently with the Evidence Act to hold that as a matter of law the presumption must be raised and rebutted by special circumstances or by corroboration. MILLER J. who approved of the view of the majority held that while Judges are bound by law to advise juries to adhere to this practice it does not follow the juries are bound as a matter of law to do so. SUNDARA IYER J. In approving of the majority view holds that the English practice in its uncertain state is not a safe guide to determine the law in this country and approves of the law laid down by EDGE C.J. 9 A. 528. Where he says 'A Judge would advise the jury that it would be unsafe to act upon in other words believe the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice as he would advise the jury not to act upon the evidence of any other witness whose evidence might from any cause be open to suspicion. But in either case he would tell the jury that if they believed the evidence they might legally convict the prisoner either in fact or in conclusion.

Court to raise the presumption that accomplice's evidence is unworthy of credit as against the accused persons unless it is corroborated in material particulars and the failure of the Judge to direct the jury to that effect is an error in law.

The next proposition which is also well recognized is that if there are any special circumstances which would justify a disregard of this rule those circumstances in a trial by a jury must be clearly set out in the direction of the Judge, and the Appellate Court is entitled to consider as a matter of law whether those circumstances are such as to justify exceptional treatment. If in the opinion of the Appellate Court, the facts in this connection are such that they in no sense negative the danger of acting upon the uncorroborated testimony of the accomplice, but if the Judge told the jury otherwise, verdict must be set aside as being due to an error in law, if the especial facts, however are such as may reasonably be considered to take the case out of the rule even though it is possible to hold a different view, the verdict cannot be interfered with by a Court of error, (1911) 1 M. W. N. 327 = 21 M. L. J. 223 = 12 Cr. L. J. 150 followed SANKARAN NAIR, J., who dissented from the view of WHITE, C. J. and ALLING J., in the special Bench held, that "The question is (1) not whether a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is legal but whether there is a presumption that such testimony cannot be accepted without corroboration, (2) a person should not be convicted except under very special circumstances upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice; (3) the special circumstances are that the grounds on which an accomplice's evidence has been held to be untrustworthy did not exist either in the case or did not exist in their full strength, that there are countervailing considerations of greater weight which diminish or entirely get rid of the weight due to such presumptions, and (4) in cases tried by a jury, a jury has to be advised by the Judge on the points above referred to'.

42. An improper direction regarding testimony of accomplice is a good ground of appeal.—If a Judge, instead of advising a jury not to convict on the mere uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, were to advise them to convict upon such evidence or were to tell them that the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice given under a tender of pardon was admissible, and that it was for them alone to form their opinion upon it, that a conviction founded upon such evidence would be legal and that such evidence without corroboration might be acted upon with as much safety as that of any other witness, the error in the direction would form a good ground of appeal. Elahce Bukh's case, B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 459 (F.B.) = 5 W. R. 30; 29 C. 782. See also the opinions of ABDUL RAHIM, WALLIS and SUNDARA ACHAR, JJ., in 35 M. 397 (F.B.).

43. English law as to accomplice testimony.—The English law on the subject has been summarised in SUNDARA ACHAR, J.'s judgment in 35 M. 397. The story of the accomplice must be corroborated in some material particular, that is to say in some particular that involves the guilt of the accused. The confirmation of the accomplice must be in some fact which goes to fix the guilt on the person charged; R. v. Wikes and Edwards (1837) 7 C. and P. 272; 'a man who has been guilty of a crime himself will always be able to relate the facts of the case and if the confirmation be only on the truth of that history without identifying the persons, that it is really no corroboration at all, R. v. Farler, (1837) 8 C. and P. 108, R. v. Everest, (1909) 73 J. P. 269. It is the practice of the Court of Criminal Appeal to require corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice on cases when it is not necessary by statute, R. v. Cohen, 111 L. T. 77. As to charge to jury. It is the practice to warn the jury that they ought not to convict unless they think that the evidence of the accomplice is corroborated, In re Hunter (1894) 2 Q. B. 418. Where there is no corroboration of the accomplice's story, the Judge should warn the jury that they ought not to act upon it. If this is not done and the Court of Criminal Appeal consider that there was no evidence of corroboration, they will quash the conviction, R. v. Tate, (1908) 3 K. B. 680 = 72 J. P. 331, R. v. Beauchamp, (1909) 73 J. P. 223. A Judge should direct a jury to acquit if the evidence of the accomplice is not corroborated in material particulars, R. v. Everest (1909) 73 J. P. 269; but the Appeal Court will not interfere with the conviction even if there has been no warning if the evidence of the accomplice has been sufficiently corroborated, R. v. Warren, (1909) 73 J. P. 359; and when it is doubtful whether the witness is or is not an accomplice, it is desirable that the Judge should indicate to the jury that the evidence of such a witness should be carefully scrutinised, R. v. Kirkham, (1909) 73 J. P. 408. Though in strictness if the jury believe the evidence of an accomplice they may legally convict a prisoner upon it though it stands totally uncorroborated in any material particular, whatever be the nature of the crime charged, the practice of requiring some confirmation of the accomplice's evidence has obtained so much sanction from legal authority, that "it deserves all the reverence of law, and a deviation from it in any particular case would be justly considered of questionable propriety Taylor's Evidence (10th edn.) s. 967, 1 Phill. Ed. 32, Archbold, p. 456, Russell on Crimes, 7 edn., pp. 2282-2293, Halsbury, vol. 12, 408.

44. Rules of accomplice testimony not applicable to Police spies.—The law and practice as to the corroboration of accomplices do not extend to the case of Police spy or agent provocateur, R. v. Mullins (1845) 12 J. P. 776 = 3 Cox C. C. 528; R. v. Luckley (1909) 73 J. P. 339; 11 Cr. L. J. 660 (C.) and see also 19 B. 361.

43. Direction in case of confessions.—It is a misdirection to tell the jury that a confession to the Police if followed by the production of stolen property is admissible, whereas he should have pointed out that such confessions are only admissible in so far as they relate to the fact thereby discovered. Evidence of such confessions should not be allowed to be given or recorded to any great extent, nor when such evidence has been properly recorded should the jury be afterwards told generally that the prisoners had confessed, 18 M. L. J. 250 = 3 M. L. T. 263 = 7 Cr. L. J. 339. The Judge should point out the irrelevancy of a confession under s. 24 of the Evidence Act 28 M. 33. It is a misdirection to treat a statement as a confession when it is consistent with innocence. R v Joyce, (1909) 72 J. P. 433. It is a misdirection to tell the jury that a person to whom a confession was made was not a person in authority within the meaning of s. 24 of the Evidence Act when he is one, the Judge should in such a case leave it to the jury to decide whether the confession was caused by an inducement, threat, etc., 20 G. W. N. 612 = 23 G. L. J. 477; 17 Bom. L. R. 1059 = 3 Bom. Cr. C. A. 135 = 40 B. 220. A confession falling within the provisions of s. 24 of the Evidence Act ought not to be placed before the jury without an explanation as to how they should value it having regard to the circumstances under which it was made, 20 G. W. N. 512 = 23 G. L. J. 477 = 17 Cr. L. J. 188. See Note 33 (iii) above.

46. Direction in case of retracted confessions.—In the trial of a murder case a Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury treated the evidence in very general terms and described it as very poor evidence, and also told the jury that in the case of retracted confessions "The law is that you are to look for corroboration in independent evidence, and if that supplies such corroboration that you can confidently say 'the confession must be absolutely true' you can act upon them otherwise not." Held, that the Judge had erred in law in not summing up the evidence to the jury, and then calling their attention to the material parts of it, leaving them to form their own opinion upon it instead of treating the evidence generally and calling it very poor evidence, which evidence standing alone practically amounted to nothing, 23 B. 316. There is no rule that a retracted confession cannot be acted upon against the maker thereof unless corroborated. The jury should be asked to consider not whether it is corroborated by independent evidence but rather having regard to the circumstances under which it was made and retracted, it is more probable that the confession is true or the statement retracting it 21 M. 83; 8 M. L. T. 372 = 11 Cr. L. J. 693. See also 20 A. 133. Where the only evidence against the accused is his retracted confession, and it is clear that it was not corroborated by independent evidence, it was held, that there was misdirection in not pointing out to the jury that it was unsafe to rely on the subsequently withdrawn confession unless corroborated in material respects, Weir II, 507 and 310. He ought to tell the jury that the retracted confession is not to be acted upon unless supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating in material particulars, Weir II, 509; 10 A. 78.

47. Direction in case of confession when there are several accused.—See Notes under Heading VIII.

VIII.—JOINT TRIAL OF SEVERAL ACCUSED.

48. Evidence against each accused should be clearly and carefully placed before the jury.—In cases where several accused persons are being tried together on evidence which is not identical it is of the first importance that the evidence affecting each should be clearly and carefully placed before the jury, and that their attention should be pre-eminently drawn to the considerations by which they may properly be guided in estimating the value of the evidence as against each accused. To tell a jury generally that they have the approver's deposition and the corroborative evidence, without pointing out as regards each person what the corroborative evidence is, is to give them no guidance at all, especially in a case where the principal evidence against most of the accused is that of an approver, 29 G. 782. See also 30 M. 44, where the conviction was set aside and no retrial ordered. See also R v Beauchamp, (1909) 73 J. P. 223, where, in a joint trial of two persons the Court held that the Judge in summing up the case to the jury had not properly distinguished between the evidence against each and set aside the conviction. Where a Judge failed to comply with the requirements of s. 297 in charging the jury, and at the conclusion of the charge directed them to consider the evidence against each prisoner, without at the same time requiring them to consider the evidence in favour of each and also omitted to give them the very necessary directions that if they entertained any reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the accused, they were entitled to have the benefit of the doubt and should be acquitted. Held, that there was grave misdirection by the Judge to the prejudice of the prisoners, Weir II, 500. In charging a jury, the Judge should set out clearly the evidence as against each prisoner separately and should not place before them all the evidence against all the prisoners in a confused mass. Thus where the accused are charged both under s. 393 and 396, I. P. C., the Judge should in the first instance place before the jury the evidence against the accused on the charge of dacoity, and after they have returned their verdict on the charge of dacoity, he should then set before them as assessors the evidence connected with the charge of murder in dacoity, Weir II, 317. See also Weir II, 501.

49. Jury should be warned that statement of one accused is not evidence against his co-accused.—The Judge should warn the jury to take the case of each accused separately and that a confession by one accused involving himself alone could not be used against the other accused, 18 M. L. J. 250 = 3 M. L. T. 263 = 7 Cr. L. J. 358. See also 1 Bom. L. R. 784. Also when statements are made by some of the accused do not amount to confessions so as to incriminate themselves though they purport to incriminate others also under trial, the Judge is bound to tell the jury that they must not consider the statements, except as against those who made them and an omission to do so would be a clear misdirection, 23 C. 711. The omission of a Sessions Judge to tell the jury that the statement of one prisoner was not evidence against his fellow prisoner was held to be a material error and fatal to the trial, notwithstanding that the Judge dealt with the evidence against each prisoner separately, 6 R. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 10; 5 W. R. 80. The jury should be directed that a statement made by one prisoner implicating another and immediately denied although strictly evidence, must not be accepted as evidence of the facts contained in such statement, R v Currock, (1915) G. C. A. III, L. T. 816.

50. Jury should be cautioned not to act upon confession of co-accused corroboration.—A confession of one prisoner can be taken into consideration against another jointly tried with him, if it really amounts to a confession of guilt of the offences charged, 6 C. 379 = 7 C. L. R. 385; 23 C. 711, 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 10, but the Judge ought to explain the duty of the jury and tell them that they must not act upon the confession of a co-accused as corroboration, 33 M. 46; 1 M. 163; 4 C. 483 (F.B.), 5 M. L. T. 355 = 9 Cr. L. J. 308; 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXV; 38 B. 154. Where the only evidence against the accused was the retracted confession of a co-accused and the Judge in his charge to the jury told them that 'it was the only evidence against the accused corroborated, by the evidence of motive.' Held, that the charge was extremely defective and contained a positive misdirection as regards the amount of corroboration required to support the retracted confession. Evidence of motive can never by itself be sufficient to corroborate any statement which requires corroboration in material particulars, 15 C. L. J. 323 = 13 Cr. L. J. 283.

51. Jury must give their verdict against each prisoner.—The jury take oath to well and truly try the case as between the Crown and the prisoner and they are not like the Judge in charge of the whole case. They have to give their verdict as against each accused severally, 16 C. W. N. 909 = 13 Cr. L. J. 715.

IX—CHARGES IN PARTICULAR OFFENCES.

52. Forgery, ss. 474-475, I. P. C.—The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents under ss. 474 and 475, I. P. C. In his summing up, the Sessions Judge, after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused and whether the nature of one, at all events, of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused, being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house, and he alone, and that if they found this issue in the affirmative they must return a verdict of guilty. Held, that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading and insufficiently complied with the provisions of this section, 16 B. 165. The accused were charged under s. 471, I. P. C., with having fraudulently and dishonestly used as genuine a forged document knowing or having reason to believe it to be a forged document in a suit brought against them by the vendee of their sister, the document in question being a deed of gift alleged to have been executed by their deceased father, and purporting to have been registered by the Kazi. It appeared that the accused were in possession of the property covered by the deed. It was proved that the endorsements of registration were forged. The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury, omitted to deal with the fact of possession by the accused, but directed them (1) that if they considered the endorsement to registration to be forged, the onus of proving the genuineness of the document was on the accused, and (2) that if they on them to call the attesting witnesses, who were alive to establish its genuineness, and (3) that if they considered the document to be forged they must then consider the accused knew it to be forged. Held, that there had been a misdirection on all three points for (1) even if the endorsement of registration was forged it lay on the prosecution to prove that the document itself was forged and not on the accused to establish its genuineness (2) it was the duty of the prosecution and not of the accused to call the surviving attesting witnesses (7) it was not sufficient to direct the jury to consider whether supposing the document to be a forgery the accused knew it was a forgery when they used it. It lay on the prosecution to prove that such use was fraudulent or dishonest in the sense in which those terms are used in the Penal Code. In order to prove that fact it lay on the prosecution to prove that the accused had no reasonable ground for asserting their title to the land in dispute. The factum of possession and the date of the death of the accused's father were material points for consideration on this question. If the accused had been in possession for twelve years from their father's death they would have had a good ground for asserting their title to it 6 C. L. R. 542. Where there was a material misdirection to the jury (as, e.g. stating that the onus was on proving a deed the subject of the charge being genuine was on the accused and calling attention to the fact that the accused had not called the attesting witnesses), held such a misdirection was not covered by this section. The conviction was set aside 4 C. W. N. 576. See 23 M. 33.

53. Criminal breach of trust.—It is the duty of Judge to lay down the law as required by s. 297. Where the accused was charged with criminal breach of trust and it was not explained to the jury nor were they affirmatively told what constituted criminal breach of trust nor what would amount to any one of its various ingredients and were not given the definition of dishonestly and in fact were not told what they must first find proved to constitute the offence but were only told that if they found a few facts proved the accused was guilty. Held the trial was bad for misdirection and the conviction was set aside 5 L. B. R. 149 = 11 Cr. L. J. 340. It is the duty of the Judge in laying down the law to explain the meaning of the term dishonestly by expressly telling the jury that the test they were to apply was whether the circumstances showed an intention to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss and what those terms mean. Failure to do so was held to vitiate the verdict 7 Bur. L. T. 20 = 15 Cr. L. J. 257.

54. Robbery s. 393, I P. C.—Under this section the Judge must explain to the jury all the essential elements of the offence with which the prisoner is charged. An omission to do so is not a mere irregularity curable under s. 537 but is a failure to comply with an express provision of the law and will vitiate the conviction. Thus where the Judge in summing up addressed the jury as follows—The accused are charged with dacoity—dacoity is committed when any number of persons not less than five conjointly commit robbery—it was held that the Judge ought to have explained to the jury what is necessary to constitute the offence of robbery as defined in s. 390 I. P. C. and that this is a real and not merely technical defect and the conviction was therefore set aside 30 M. 44, where 29 C. 379 and 25 C. 711 are followed 9 Cr. L. J. 311 (M.) 8 M. L. T. 82 = 11 Cr. L. J. 452, Weir I. 446.

55. Belonging to a gang of thieves s. 401, I P. C.—In the trial of prisoners for the offence under s. 401 belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft the Judge should in his charge put clearly to the jury (1) the necessity of the proof of association (2) the need of proving that that association was for the purpose of habitual theft and that habit is to be proved by an aggregation of facts 8 M. H. C. R. 120.

56. Dacoity s. 397, I P. C.—In a case of dacoity the jury must be distinctly instructed that unless they are satisfied that there were five or more persons committing robbery and that the persons present and aiding in commission of the robbery numbered five or more persons there could be no robbery. Where therefore the jury acquitted two persons out of six alleged to have committed a dacoity and the charge to the jury did not distinctly state that if they found that the robbery was committed by less than five persons the conviction should be not for dacoity but for robbery the conviction was set aside on the ground of misdirection Weir I. 448-447 II. 519. Where on a charge against the accused under ss. 392 and 397 I. P. C. the Sessions Judge while pointing out to the jury that there is no evidence that the accused caused the grievous hurt or used deadly weapons directed the jury that they may convict the appellants of the offence under s. 397 merely because grievous hurt was caused by some of the robbers and that some of the robbers used knives held that this amounted to a misdirection and following Weir I. 450 and 23 A. 404 the conviction under s. 397 was set aside 22 M. L. J. 166 = 11 M. L. T. 20 = (1912) 2 M. W. N. 35 = 13 Cr. L. J. 42. See also 1899 A. W. N. 185, 47 A. 59 (21 A. 263 disputed from it).

57. Murder and culpable homicide ss. 302 and 304 I P. C.—Where the Judge in a case of culpable homicide in his charge to the jury omitted to ask the jury specifically to consider whether in causing the death the accused had the intention to cause death or such injury as was likely to cause death or the knowledge that he was likely to cause death. Held that this was a very material misdirection not cured by the fact that at the commencement the Judge explained the sections of the Penal Code defining murder and culpable homicide and pointed out to them the distinction between the two 35 C. 331. See also 8 C. 739, 14 C. 164,

25 C. 736; 11 Cr. L. J. 295 (G). As there are two parts of s 304 I P C. under one of which only is a sentence of transportation for life legal a Sessions Judge in summing up a case to a jury should draw the attention of a jury to both parts of the section and ask them to say explicitly under which part they find the accused guilty Ratanlal 530 Where in a trial on a charge of murder, the Judge omitted to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide and suggested that a strong inference should be drawn against the accused from his having failed to take steps to bring the real offender to justice the misdirection was held to be grave and material 3 L. B. R. 75 = 3 Cr. L. J. 1. Accused were convicted before a Sessions Judge and a jury of murder and were sentenced No 1 as principal to death, and the others to transportation for life. The evidence showed that there was never any intention to kill the deceased but that there was a quarrel and the accused then proceeded to beat the deceased. Accused Nos 1 and 2 struck the deceased on the head with a kuda (a flat iron bar 2½ feet long with a sharp edge) and thereby fractured his skull and so caused death and did know that the blows would in all probability cause death. No 3 tried to protect the deceased from further injury and himself received a blow which No 2 had aimed at the deceased. The notes of the charge of the Sessions Judge to the jury were as follows —

“ 302. The murder of M—murder defined—punishment—The only question herein as to the statements made by the prisoners is, did the prisoners any or all of them inflict these injuries on the deceased. If they did they are guilty of murder. Held that although death was caused by accused Nos 1 and 2 with a weapon which was likely to cause death still as they did not intend to cause, or know that in all probability they would cause death they were guilty of culpable homicide only and not of murder, while accused Nos 3 and 4 were guilty of causing hurt only. That the Sessions Judge's charge to the jury was, according to the notes recorded, was defective and that he should have left it to the jury to decide whether the offence was one of murder or of culpable homicide, or any offence, after pointing out to them the legal definition of each offence and that infliction of injuries would not necessarily make the offence of all the accused the same, and the jury should have been asked to find as to the intention of the accused persons, and their attention should have been drawn to the provisions of ss 34, 35, 37 and 38 I P C., and they should have been told to return a verdict as to the exact guilt of each of the four accused persons 1 Bom. L. R. 784. In a trial for murder where grave and sudden provocation causing a loss of the power of self control is suggested for the defence it is the duty of the Judge to explain the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and the jury as judges of the facts have to decide the issue about sufficient provocation. A wife's resistance to the act of sexual intercourse or her denial of a charge of adultery is not sufficient to constitute grave provocation Ratanlal 766. See also 3 B. L. R. 125 = 11 Cr. L. J. 15. But in the absence of any direct evidence of grave and sudden provocation or of fact from which this exception could be legitimately inferred it would be an error on the part of a Judge to lay down the law on that subject. Where a trial for culpable homicide is proceeding before a jury it is not an appropriate mode of laying down the law to discourse on all branches and departments of this complicated topic of crime to do so is calculated to confuse the jury and possibly to direct their deliberations into channels that have nothing to do with the case. Per JENKINS J., in 19 C. W. N. 653 = 16 Cr. L. J. 581. If a Judge omits to draw the attention of the jury to any matter a consideration of which might lead them to a verdict of culpable homicide not amounting to murder instead of murder, he commits an error though the defence did not suggest the existence of any such matter. STEPHEN J. ibid. In a similar case the Full Bench of the Burma High Court (ORSONO J., dissenting) held that as the circumstances the existence of which might bring the case under exception 4 to s 300 I P C. could not properly be inferred from the evidence or the accused's statement the effect of that exception did not fall to be considered and the Judge did not err in not putting to the jury that it was open to them to consider the effect of that exception in that case 8 Bar. L. T. 220 (F.B.). See also 8 L. B. R. 123 = 17 Cr. L. J. 154. See also Notes 6—8

55. Duty of Judge where accused charged with culpable homicide—Where a jury returns a verdict find expressly whether or not the has been caused by a blow with a illy injury as would in the ordinary course of nature cause death and it is presumed in favour of the accused that he had no knowledge that the injury which he intended to cause was likely to cause death and the circumstances are such that an intention merely to cause hurt dangerous to life might reasonably be inferred the jury should be directed that it is open to them to find the accused guilty of a lesser offence viz of causing grievous hurt. An omission to do so is a misdirection 8 B. L. R. 116 = 13 Cr. L. J. 750. The omission to put the case of grievous hurt s 320 (8) I P C. was a misdirection. See also 8 L. B. R. 123 = 17 Cr. L. J. 154.

59. Possession of stolen property, s. 411, 1 P. C.—A direction to the jury that they should convict the prisoner, if they believed that he had shown the stolen property to the Police is open to exception. The mere act of knowing where the stolen property is, is not equivalent to possession, Wells 11, 493. Where an accused is charged with an offence under s. 411, 1 P. C., merely directing a jury to find whether the property was stolen and whether it was retained by the accused amounts to misdirection. The proper direction in such a case is to find—(1) whether the property was stolen, (2) whether it was dishonestly retained, and (3) whether the accused knew, or had reason to believe the same to be stolen property. Unless these three questions were found by the jury in the affirmative, the accused could not be convicted of an offence under s. 411, 1 P. C., 15 B. 369 followed in 23 G. 711. On a charge against a person of being in possession of recently stolen property, well knowing it to have been stolen, when the prosecution have proved recent possession of stolen goods, the jury should be directed that in the absence of any explanation which may reasonably be true they may find the prisoner guilty but are not bound to do so. If any explanation is given and the jury think that it may reasonably be true although they are not convinced that it is true, the prisoner is entitled to be acquitted, inasmuch as the onus is on the prosecution to establish the guilt of the prisoner beyond reasonable doubt. R v Schama, (1915) C. C. A. 84; L. J. (K.B.) 396. On a trial of an indictment for receiving stolen goods with guilty knowledge, the jury should be expressly asked to consider whether the accused's explanation of his possession of the goods soon after the theft of them is reasonable or not, R v Hampson, (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 73. See also R v Millington, (1915) Cr. App. R. 88; R v Holmes, (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 130. There is no onus on the accused to prove that he received the property honestly, R v Aubrey, (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 182. See Note 64 below. See also 33 G. 329; 33 G. 457.

60. Rape—not leaving determination of fact to jury.—On a charge of rape the Judge in his charge to the jury said: 'You will observe that this sexual intercourse was against the girl's will and without her consent, etc.' instead of saying, as he ought to have done,—"You will have to determine, upon the evidence in this case, whether the intercourse was against the girl's will, etc." and the charge went on in the same style of stating to the jury what had been proved instead of leaving it to them to decide what in their opinion was proved. In the concluding sentence of the charge the Judge said: 'You have seen the witnesses and I have no doubt that you will return a just verdict.' Held, that such a charge amounted to a clear misdirection, and that the verdict was erroneous owing to such misdirection. Even the concluding sentence did not satisfy the requirements of a proper charge. 23 G. 230. See also Note 63 below.

61. Rioting—ss. 147 and 149, 1 P. C.—generally common object must be stated.—The omission to state correctly to the jury what is alleged to be the common object of an unlawful assembly does not vitiate the verdict, if such omission has not prejudiced the accused, 4 G. W. N. 196. But where persons other than those who actually did the deed are sought to be made liable by virtue of s. 149, 1 P. C., the Judge ought in commenting upon the provisions of s. 149, expressly to draw the attention of the jury to the common object, although the common object of the assembly may be stated in the charge, 23 G. 379; 30 M. 64. In 8 Bom. L. R. 153 = 5 Cr. L. J. 168, ten persons were tried for offences under ss. 148 and 302 1 P. C. In his charge to the jury, the Sessions Judge did not place before the jury the special circumstance which in his view would have brought the offence within the definition of murder in s. 300, 1 P. C. It was not put to the jury in the charge whether any of the intentions mentioned in the section were established as against any of the accused and the exceptions 1, 2 and 4 to that section were not explicitly explained to the jury. The Sessions Judge directed the jury to find that if the offence of rioting were established, all the accused were guilty of murder. Held, that this was a misdirection in the charge to the jury, because before any member of an unlawful assembly could be convicted of murder committed by any other member, it is essential that the murder must have been committed with an intention specified in s. 300 and not falling within any of the exceptions to that section and the act must be act committed in the prosecution of the common object. Again if the accused are charged with an offence under s. 304 or s. 325, 1 P. C., they may be convicted under s. 323, though not charged under that section. But where they are charged with the offences alleged to have been committed by another person in the course of a riot, ss. 147 and 149, 1 P. C., and the commission of the riot is disestablished, they should not be convicted under s. 323 1 P. C. in respect of their individual acts with which they are charged and which are not imputed to them in the Judge's charge to the jury, 24 C. 325. Where a charge under ss. 147, 149/304 149/325 and 149/323 1 P. C., the Judge told the jury that if they found that a riot took place they should, under s. 149, 1 P. C., find every member of the unlawful assembly causing hurt or grievous hurt but he nowhere instructed the jury what their verdict should be if there was no unlawful assembly, but that grievous hurt or hurt was caused by any member of the assembly.

persons held that the omission of the Judge to do so amounted to a serious misdirection, 34 C. 693; 29 C. 379. Fifteen accused were charged with rioting armed with deadly weapons and with murder, and causing grievous hurt during such riot. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife and that they had merely acted in self defence. The case was tried before a jury and on the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution, might be considered not to have been proved amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it, viz., that the object of the assembly was to punish one of the opposite party for enticing away another's wife. There was no evidence on the record to prove the alternative common object, it being based solely on a portion of the statements of some of the accused and the Sessions Judge put it to the jury that it was an inference that could possibly be drawn from the evidence but it was for them to draw that inference or not. The jury convicted all the accused without specifying which common object they relied on and were not asked under s. 303 any questions for the purpose of ascertaining what their verdict was based on. Held, that the Judge had misdirected the jury and that the verdict of the jury leaving it uncertain what was the common object which actuated the accused was bad in law, and that the conviction must be set aside and the case re-tried, 21 C. 955 followed in 25 C. 830 and 19 B. 749, see, however 25 C. 712; 30 C. 822 at p. 830. But the omission of a Judge to state correctly the common object of an unlawful assembly, in a charge to the jury, was said, regard being had to s. 225, not to vitiate the trial if such omission had not prejudiced the accused, 22 C. 276; 4 C. W. N. 198 and 11 C. 108. See also 34 C. 698. In a trial for rioting, where only one common object was alleged in the charge, the Sessions Judge suggested to the jury that the case might not be precisely as the prosecution alleged and, at the same time, might not be what the defence endeavoured to set up, but a third alternative something between the two held, that there was no misdirection as he left it entirely open to the jury as to whether they would accept his suggestion or not and the suggestion was not inconsistent with the prosecution case, 40 C. 387. Both 20 W. R. 5 = 11 B. L. R. (F.B.) 347 and 21 C. 955 were distinguished as in these cases, the charge was altered at the end of the case for the prosecution and a totally different common object was alleged. In cases of riot it is essentially necessary to mention what an unlawful assembly is. The jury might not be able to distinguish between a collection of five or more men without a common object and a collection of the same number of men with a common object, 17 Cr. L. J. 92 (C.) = 33 In. Ca. 884.

FUNCTIONS OF JURY.

62. Jury sole Judge of facts—The jury must take into consideration all the facts alleged for or against the accused, and decide whether the view taken by the prosecution which leads to the conclusion of his guilt or the view which is set up on his behalf and which would make him innocent, commends itself to their judgement. Per COLCOTCH, C.J., 21 W. R. 72 at p. 88. Section 238 leaves it entirely to the jury to decide which view of the facts is true. The Judge should not state his own view of important matters of facts so positively as to leave the jury no loophole for taking any other view, Ratanlal 748. See Notes 14 and 15 above.

63. Question of consent in case of rape must be determined by the jury—In charging a jury in a case of rape the Judge should leave the question of consent to the jury and not direct them to find that the woman's consent after a considerable struggle renders the charge of rape nugatory. 1 W. R. 21. See also 2 W. R. 230 (Clv) and Note 60 above.

64. Whether possession of stolen property is recent enough to convict is for the jury—Where the accused was charged with dacoity and receiving stolen property, the Sessions Judge directed the jury that the finding of the dacoited article with the accused two months after the dacoity was "so short a time as to justify them in convicting the accused of the dacoity itself" and the jury returned a verdict of guilty of both charges. Held that this was a clear misdirection. Whether the possession of the stolen property was recent enough to warrant a conviction for the substantive offence was a matter entirely for the jury and should not have been put to them in the positive way which the Judge adopted. 28 M. 467. Similarly, in a trial for dacoity and receiving stolen property the charge to the jury did not leave it to them to decide whether the prisoners were guilty of one or other of the offences charged and did not contain any direction as to whether they were satisfied that the prisoners knew that the property was stolen in a dacoity nor a reference to the lapse of time between the dacoity and the finding of the property. Held that there was misdirection. Weir 11, 513.

Accuse 1 was in possession of stolen property for five years, and he said he obtained it in a raffle. He was charged with house-breaking with intent to commit theft and theft in a building. I excepting the possession there was virtually no other evidence to connect the accused with the offence. In charging the jury the Judge's direction was: 'Notwithstanding that it is nearly five years since the crime occurred you will decide whether you are satisfied with the prisoner's explanation of his possession of stolen property.' held that the direction to the jury was so defective and misleading as to amount to a misdirection and that the verdict must be set aside and accused altogether acquitted. If the case should have been left to the jury at all they should have been told to consider whether after five years it was reasonable to require the prisoner to prove how he came by the property, or whether his explanation not being in itself improbable ought not to be accepted. Weir II, 439. See Notes 18 and 59 above.

65. Maturity of understanding of an infant accused must be decided by the jury—The question whether an accused person being a child between 7 and 12 years old, has sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct is a question of fact upon which in cases tried by a jury the accused is entitled to the verdict of the jury. The omission of the Sessions Judge to refer the question to the jury is a ground for setting aside the conviction and for ordering a new trial. Saibalal 27.

86 Question of identity of thumb-impression.—The question of the identity of the thumb-impressions on two or more documents for the purpose of establishing whether the thumb-impressions are of one and the same person is eminently a matter for the jury and not for the judge, 1 C. L. J. 335 = 2 Cr. L. J. 311. The jury may decline to rely on the evidence of an expert witness unless their own intelligence corroborates the reasons guiding the witness to his own conclusions, 9 C. W. N. 320.

57 Duty of jury in an alternative charge for perjury -- In an alternative charge for perjury for having made two contradictory statements, the jury need not find which of the two contradictory statements is false but it is sufficient for them to find whether the allegations made in the charge are proved 21 W. R. 72 = 13 B. L. R. 324 (F. B.). See also 16 A. 23

68 Question of grave and sudden provocation must be laid before the jury.—In a case tried by a jury where the plea of grave and sudden provocation causing the loss of the power of self control is raised by the accused, it must be submitted to the jury and their verdict must be taken upon it 11 C. 410 It is the duty of the judge in such circumstances as is clearly set forth in this section to explain the distinction between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder and the jury as the judges of the facts have to decide the issue as to sufficient provocation Ratanlal T86 Where however grave and sudden provocation is no part of the defence case nor is any direct evidence given at the trial of such provocation or of facts from which this exception can be legitimately inferred the judge is quite justified in excluding inquiry into the exception. In fact it would be an error on his part to lay down law as to a matter which is not legally and properly before the jury 19 C. W. N 653 (F.B.) = 16 Cr. L. J 561

89 Jury must decide upon the weight to be given to a confession.—Where a prisoner charged with murder made a statement that he did strike the deceased with a stick, and the Sessions Judge after considering the evidence discredited the statement and all the evidence except that of the medical officer and discharged the prisoner not considering it necessary that the case should go before a jury held that the Judge had no right to pronounce his own judgment on the credibility of the evidence and to withdraw the consideration of the due weight to be given to the evidence from the jury whose peculiar province it is to come to a finding on the evidence after they had been duly assisted by the summing up of the Judge 16 W R 20 But the absence of any evidence to warrant a commitment is a point of law exclusively within the province of the Judge 5 C W N 90

70 Jury must decide upon the character or credibility of a witness—When there is not the slightest

He ought to leave the 71 Jury must decide whether a previous conviction is proved or not.—See s. 319. Where in a Session case the Judge told the jury that certain alleged prior convictions against the accused instead of leaving it to them to decide whether they were proved or not held (1) that it amounted to a misdirection did not affect the conviction of the accused as the question of prior (2) that convictions was not a question of fact but of law and the Judge was not bound to give the jury any direction on that point.

into only after the jury returns their verdict, and (3) that though it affected the question of sentence the Court was not prepared to interfere seeing that the sentences passed were not too severe, 10 Cr. L. J. 11 (N); 21 W. R. 40.

71-A. It is for the jury to decide whether an approver has forfeited his pardon.—Under this Code there is no provision for withdrawing a pardon to an approver and the only question now is whether the pardon has been forfeited. See s. 339 and Notes thereunder. It is for the jury and not for the Judge to decide whether the pardon was forfeited. Cl. (1)(c) of s. 298 refers only to a finding on a question of fact which it is necessary to prove to make other evidence admissible. The question of forfeiting the pardon was important not for the purpose of making other evidence admissible, but for the purpose of determining whether the trial could at all continue as against the approver, 42 C. 856.

XI.—VERDICT SHOULD BE OBTAINED ONCE FOR ALL AT THE END OF THE TRIAL

72. Judge ought not to record a verdict in the middle of a trial.—At a trial before a Sessions Court the Judge after having examined five out of seven witnesses examined by the committing Magistrate and bound over to give their evidence at the trial, asked the jury whether they wished to hear any more evidence and on their stating that they did not believe the evidence and wished to stop the case, recorded a verdict of acquittal. Held, that the procedure of the Judge was illegal and that no final opinion as to the falsehood or insufficiency of the prosecution evidence ought to be arrived at by the Judge or by the jury until the whole of that evidence has been considered, 20 M. 445. It is not open to a Sessions Judge after hearing one witness for the prosecution to tell a jury that it would not be safe to convict and that there is no necessity to hear any further evidence to allow the jury to allow the verdict before the jury at all, 23 W. R. 224. See Weir 11, 498.

73. Verdict should be obtained once for all at the end of the trial and not piecemeal.—There should be but one charge to the jury both on the facts and on the points of law and a Judge acts illegally in dividing the charge into two. Where, therefore, a Judge in his direction to the jury informed them that he would alter commenting on the evidence, ask them whether they considered 'that the prisoner had been guilty of any crime or whether he is the unfortunate victim of a most cruel fabrication of false evidence, and that he would then explain the law and take their verdict as to what offence the prisoner has been guilty of,' Held, the procedure adopted by the Judge was unwarranted and the conviction was accordingly set aside, Weir 11, 493. It is illegal for a Judge to take verdicts in respect of some of the accused and then to hear arguments and charge the jury and take their verdict in respect of other accused, 36 M. 583. See s. 301 as to the delivery of the verdict.

XII.—EFFECT OF MISDIRECTION.

74. See Notes under ss. 423 and 537

75. It is not in all cases of misdirection or prejudice to the accused, the High Court will set aside a verdict.—When the Court is satisfied that there has been misdirection the next question is whether the accused is prejudiced thereby. It is not in all cases of misdirection or prejudice to the accused the High Court will order a new trial. The question to be determined is not whether upon a proper summing up of the whole evidence a jury might possibly give a different verdict, but whether the legitimate effect of the evidence would require a different verdict. If the evidence is such that the High Court would have affirmed the conviction if the trial had been before the Judge and assessors, it ought not to set aside a verdict by a jury, merely because the Judge had not given the proper caution or advice to the jury as to the weight which they might properly give to the evidence. It would be improper to order a new trial if the evidence were wholly insufficient to support any conviction against the prisoner, B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 459 = 7 W. R. 111. See also 74.

76. Court held that ordering a re-trial is the only course open to the High Court where a verdict has been vitiated by misdirection. But this view has been dissented from in 23 C. 712; 19 B. 749 and 26 M. 1, and it has been Held that the High Court could deal with the matter in any of the ways contemplated by s. 423(6). See also 17 C. 442 and 1 C. 207. It after considering the entire evidence, the Court be of opinion that it could not in any view of the case support a conviction, it would be worse than useless to order a re-trial. See 5 W. R. 80 at p. 89; 26 M. 1; 30 C. 822; 29 C. 782; 7 C. 42; 4 C. W. N. 576; 14 C. W. N. 493 = 11 Cr. L. J. 98, and also the case of Arnold v. R., 41 C. 1023 (P.C.). If there was no failure of justice, s. 537 (d) would cover the case, 12 A. L. J. 149 = 14 Cr. L. J. 833. See Notes to s. 423.

76. Effect of improper admission of evidence.—Where in a trial by jury evidence has been improperly admitted, the High Court has a power to inquire into the merits of the case under s. 167 of the Indian Evidence Act independently of s. 423. But the general principle is laid down in 4 C. W. N. 576 and the re-trial by jury will be ordered if the misdirection, that is the wrongful admission of evidence, has occasioned a failure of justice. If the improperly admitted evidence was so trivial that it could not have occasioned a failure of justice, the High Court will not order a re-trial, but proceed under s. 167 of the Evidence Act, 11 C. L. J. 301 = 14 C. W. N. 493 = 11 Cr. L. J. 96. "In England where the trial Judge has warned the jury not to act upon the objectionable evidence, the Court of Criminal Appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, s. 4, may refuse to interfere, if it thinks that the jury giving heed to that warning would have returned the same verdict [R v. Lucas, 1 Cr. Ap. Rep. 234, R v. Stoddart (1909) 73 J. P. 343, R v. Norton, (1910) 2 K. B. 406—501, R v. Loeles, (1910) 8 Cr. Ap. Rep. 193, R v. Wilson, (1911) 8 Cr. Ap. Rep. 207], or when evidence has been admitted inadvertently or erroneously, which is inadmissible but of small importance [R v. Westcott, 1 Cr. Ap. Rep. 243, R v. Mullins (1910) 8 Cr. Ap. Rep. 13] or most unlikely to have affected the verdict [R v. Solomon, (1909) 2 Cr. Ap. Rep. 80]. When the objectionable evidence has been left for the consideration of the jury without any warning to disregard it the Court of Appeal quashed the conviction, if it thinks that the jury may have been influenced by it even though without it there was evidence sufficient to warrant a conviction [R v. Fisher, (1910) 1 K. B. 140]. The rule can hardly be considered to be settled but at any rate it seems to go so far as to substitute 'highly improbable' for 'impossible' in Lord Herschell's reservation in Makin v. Attorney General for N. S. Wales, (1894) A. C. 57 to the effect 'where it is impossible to suppose that the evidence improperly admitted can have had any influence on the verdict of the jury,' Ibrahim v. E., 18 C. W. N. 705 = 15 Cr. L. J. 326. In this case their Lordships of the Court of Appeal said: 'It is not possible to say that the evidence improperly admitted was so trivial that it could not have occasioned a failure of justice.' (1913) where it was laid down that where evidence has been improperly submitted an appeal will not be dismissed [s. 1(1) of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907] on the ground 'that substantial miscarriage of justice has actually occurred, unless the Court feels certain that the jury would have come to the same conclusion' if the evidence had been rejected. See Notes under s. 423 for Indian cases.

77. The whole of the case must be sent back.—Where an accused is tried and convicted at a trial on two connected charges and the High Court finds that the conviction on one charge was obtained by misdirection and is of opinion that the verdict of the jury on the other charge was correct, still the High Court has no jurisdiction to uphold the conviction under one charge and order a re-trial on the other charge. The whole of the case must be sent back to the jury if the verdict was obtained by misdirection, 16 C. W. N. 909 = 13 Cr. L. J. 715. See also 22 C. 377; 13 P. R. 1904.

78. Correctness of procedure in jury trial must be judged by the Code and not by English practice.—When the proceedings upon a trial by jury in the Mofussil are consistent with a reasonable construction of that part of the Procedure Code where such trial is provided for, the proceedings are good in the absence of any distinct ruling to the contrary, and ought not to be examined by the light of English rules of procedure, 14 W. R. 89.

300. In cases tried by jury, after the Judge has finished his charge the jury may retire to consider their verdict.

Except with the leave of the Court, no person other than a juror shall speak to, or hold any communication with, any member of such jury.

Notes.—1. Summing up essential for a valid verdict.—In a case tried by a jury, the Code does not contemplate the reception of a verdict from the jury, without their having had the assistance of a summing up by the Sessions Judge, since a careful summing up may often change the hasty and superficial impressions of a jury and the parties are entitled to this service, Ratanlal 288. See Notes 2 and 3 to ss. 297—299.

2. What papers the jury may take with them.—There is no provision in the Code as to what papers the jury may take with them. The N Y Cr Pro C. (ss. 425 and 426) allows the jury to take with them any paper or article which has been received as evidence in the cause (but only upon the consent of the defendant and the counsel for the people), also the notes of the testimony or other proceedings on the trial, taken by themselves or any of them but none taken by any other person. See also Weir II, 514.

3. No one shall hold communication.—If a juror falls ill while the jury are enclosed, a medical man may by leave of the Court, see and prescribe for him, R v. Newton, 13 Q. B. 716—723. If a juror, after the Judge has summed up separates himself from his colleagues, and not being under the control of the Court converses or is in a position to converse with other person, it is an irregularity which renders the whole proceedings abortive, and it is not necessary to consider whether the irregularities in fact prejudiced the prisoner. The only course open to the Court is to discharge the jury and commence the proceedings afresh. R v. Kellardge, (1915) 1 K. B. 467; 22 C. W. N. 740. On the trial of a prisoner at the assizes, some time after the jury had retired to consider their verdict, the clerk of assizes went to their room and asked if they had agreed or were likely to agree. The jury then put some questions to him and he answered them and a discussion took place. Later on he visited the jury again and a further discussion took place. Eventually the jury found the prisoner guilty. Held, that evidence from the jurymen to prove the above facts was inadmissible, but the Court could act upon a report made by the clerk of assizes and that as it was impossible to say that but for the discussions and the advice given by him the jury would have come to a unanimous conclusion, the conviction must be quashed, R v. Willmott, 78 J. P. 352 = 30 T. L. R. 499. See also Note 8 to s. 301 46 C. 307.

301. When the jury have considered their verdict the foreman shall Delivery of verdict. inform the Judge what is their verdict, or what is the verdict of a majority

Notes.—See s. 303 for power of Judge to question jury, s. 304 for power to amend verdict and ss. 305 and 306 for acting upon verdict.

1. Each juror must form his own opinion.—The law requires a juror to exercise his own discretion and to decide on the evidence and not follow blindly the opinion of his fellows, 23 W. R. 3. A jury cannot return a verdict on the casting of lots, Hale v. Cole, (1725) 1 Str. 662.

2. 'Verdict' means the collective opinion of the jury.—By verdict should be understood the collective opinion of the jury as a body, arrived at after mutual consultation, and ascertained and announced by the foreman. In cases of disagreement among the jury, the individual opinions of members are never intended to be disclosed. When several accused were charged with the offence of rioting, etc., the Judge called on each member of the jury individually to answer a series of questions of which he was furnished with a typed copy, and the individual opinion of each member of the jury on each question was recorded, held, that the divergence from the procedure laid down in the Code was of a serious nature and opposed to the fundamental principle of the scheme of trial by jury, 36 M. 595.

3. Form of verdict.—The law does not prescribe any specific form in which the jury are to return their finding and they are at liberty to deliver it in any form in which they think fit, 14 W. R. 59. In 15 B. 452 and 15 B. 735, JARDINE, J., was of opinion that it was open to a jury under the Code to deliver 'special' verdict which the Judge is bound to accept. In 13 Cr. L. J. 585, the Madras High Court has held that it is not open to a jury under the Code to deliver a special verdict and that they are bound to deliver a verdict of guilty or not guilty and disapproved of the Bombay cases. See Note 7 below.

on the whole charge or more counts are found by the jury, the legal inference to be derived from them being referred to the Court. Hulton v. J.
of England Vol IX, p. 371. Archbold, pp. 226—232.

4. Verdict where there are several accused.—A question may arise as to whether a jury has seisin of the case as a whole or whether they tried each prisoner personally and it appears clear that they take oath to try well and truly the case as between the Crown and the prisoner and they are not like the Judge in charge of the entire case as a whole. They have to give their verdict on the facts as against each man severally, and even when several prisoners are jointly tried it is open to them to convict one and acquit the others, 16 C. W. N. 909 = 13 Cr. L. J. 715.

5. Repugnancy in verdict.—But if several are indicted for a riot and the jury acquit all but two, they must acquit the two also. And if upon an indictment for a conspiracy, the jury acquit all but one, they must acquit the one also unless it is charged in the indictment that he conspired with someone not tried upon that indictment R v Thomson, 18 Q. B. 832; R v Plummer, (1902) 2 K. B. 339. See also 14 A. L. J. 688.

'The principle which underlies R v Plummer is this, that you cannot have contradictory results or decisions on one set of facts as only one decision can be the right one. But the repugnancy in the verdict of a jury in India is not in itself sufficient to justify the quashing of a conviction and the technicalities which are borrowed from the English Law and founded on ideas as to the sacred character of a verdict by a jury whose findings of fact are unknown, cannot be imported so as to give such a character which by the express provisions of law does not attach to jury verdicts in this country, 41 C. 330; 41 C. 754. In 41 C. 330 it was argued on the authority of R v Plummer that where a Judge acquitted the accused under s. 399, I P. C., and convicted them under s. 402, I P. C., the conviction was repugnant and could not stand. It was however, found on the facts that there was no repugnancy and held that such a doctrine could not be applied to the decision of a Judge trying a case with the aid of assessors. In 41 C. 754, it was argued that as the case for the prosecution in the previous trial was one of conspiracy between two youths who were then acquitted and the present accused, and that charge failed, no proceeding ought to be taken against the present accused though he was no party to the previous trial.

6. Jury must be allowed to deliver their verdict in full.—When after returning a verdict of "guilty," or "not guilty," the jury wish to state something in addition, it is wrong to stop the jury at such a stage of the proceedings. It may be the desire of the jury to add a recommendation to mercy or it may so happen that before the verdict is so recorded, the foreman of the jury may make some observations in respect of that verdict which may show the presiding Judge that the jury have not properly understood the case and that it would be the duty of the Judge not to record the verdict, but to re-charge the jury so as to lay the case properly before them. Where on a trial of certain accused on charges of rioting (ss. 147 and 148 I P. C.), in connection with certain lands, the jury after delivering a unanimous verdict of guilty, attempted to add some words to the effect 'that the lands and crop belong to the accused' and they were stopped by the Judge on the ground that the verdict was clear and nothing was left to be ascertained under s. 303, held, that the jury ought not to have been stopped, and as the words which the foreman attempted to add were very material, the accused had been prejudiced and a new trial ordered. The jury having regarded the case set up for the prosecution either as not established or as untrue, it was for them to consider and find whether the persons who were not the aggressors had or had not exceeded the right of private defence of their property, 30 C. 483.

7. Special verdict.—Is it open to a jury to deliver their opinion on the facts only without returning a verdict of guilty or not guilty?—In a trial by jury of an accused for rape the jury having retired to consider their verdict returned to the Court and announced, through their foreman, that the prisoner "did the act with consent." Thereupon the Sessions Judge required the jury to say whether the accused was guilty or not. The jury then retired and apply the law thereto. But that the second verdict could not be sustained, as there was nothing to show that the Judge gave the jury any fresh directions or explained to them that a finding that the woman had consented was tantamount to an acquittal, 19 B. 735. Where, instead of the ordinary verdict in the form of guilty or not guilty, a special verdict stating facts found by them is returned by the jury and this special verdict is ambiguous or defective in regard to matters forming part of the offence, e.g., intention, knowledge, common design or abetment, it is the duty of the Judge to ascertain its meaning by questioning the jury under this section. In dealing with a special verdict, the Judge is confined to the facts positively stated in the verdict, and cannot of himself, supplied by intendment or implication any defect in the statement, Ratanlal 710; see 30 C. 433. It is open to a jury to find a special verdict, a string of facts, as in Reg v. Dudley, 16 Q. B. D. 273, to which the Judge applies the law. The option is theirs, not his, 20 B. 215, where (Ratanlal 710 and 15 B. 452 referred to). Contra.—In a case where the accused were charged with house-breaking by night and with dacoity, the jury were asked to deliver their verdict and then the foreman said "we find that the accused were present at the dacoity, but there is no evidence they shared the common purpose of those engaged in the dacoity, or were assisting in it." The Judge informed the jury that a verdict of guilty or not guilty of the offence charged must be returned and added, "the question for you, gentlemen, is whether you think they were there in pursuance of the common purpose of those who were engaged in the dacoity and whether you think they had that purpose in assisting in it." After some consultation in the box by the jury, the Court said,—"I shall direct you, gentlemen, that on that finding, your verdict should be not guilty." The jury expressed a desire to return again for consultation and, after doing so, the foreman said that their finding was "guilty," as the very presence of the accused at the time was sufficient to justify a finding that they were guilty of dacoity. The Judge accepted the finding and convicted the accused. It was contended that when the foreman said that the accused were present at the dacoity but that there was no evidence of a common purpose, the Judge was bound to have recorded a verdict of not guilty and acquitted the accused, held, that the procedure adopted by the Judge was correct and the conviction was upheld. No doubt according to English Law it is open to the jury to deliver a special verdict ie, deliver their opinion on the facts leaving it to the Judge to draw the legal inference from the facts found but the Code does not recognize any distinction between a "general" verdict and "special" verdict. The jury are bound to deliver a verdict of not guilty, or guilty, 13 Cr. L. J. 586. (M.)

8. Delivery of verdict by the foreman binds rest of the jurors—Evidence of individual jurors as to how the verdict was arrived at inadmissible.—The assent of all the jurors to a verdict pronounced by the foreman in the presence and the hearing of the rest, without their express dissent is to be conclusively presumed Archbold, p 227. After the verdict, however, has once been pronounced by the jury and accepted it is final as regards its meaning and effect, and no statements by the jurors, whether on affidavit or on ex —

th

In this case the Court was satisfied by the evidence of by-standers that certain of the jurors had not heard the verdict announced by the foreman, the Court having declined to receive the affidavits of the jurors, and allowed a re-trial. The Court will not take notice of a letter written by a jurymen after a trial to the trial Judge, R v Mait, 6 C. A.—11 Cr. Ap. Rep. 100. In 8 P. R. 1913 = 2 P. W. R. 1913 = 13 Cr. L. J. 815, a Full Bench of the Punjab Chief Court held that the Courts in British India were bound by s. 304 of the Code and could not disturb a verdict openly given in Court. Per RATTIGAN, J.—In every case, however, that I have consulted, the Judges have been agreed that affidavits by particular jurors that the verdict announced in Court by the foreman did not represent their opinions, or that they were under a misapprehension of law or of fact in not protesting forthwith against such verdict, have invariably been rejected on the ground that it would be against public policy to permit jurors, who have left the Court, and in all probability discussed the case with outsiders, to endeavor subsequently to set aside a verdict, to which, by their silence, they have impliedly given their consent. In my opinion this is a principle which in the true interests of administration of justice ought not to be departed from, save only in the exceptional cases above referred to (See Note 3 under s. 304). In 40 C. 693, the facts were that the jury returned a verdict of guilty on the 7th which the Judge accepted but deferred passing sentence till the 9th. On the 8th, information was given to the Judge that the jury had arrived at their verdict by casting lots and their verdict was vitiated. [Hale v Cove, (1725) 1 Str. 642] The Judge sentenced the accused and examined the individual jurors and referred the matter to the High Court, held that the sworn statements of jurors and evidence of admissions by them, as to the mode in which their verdict was arrived at were inadmissible. But the evidence of other persons is admissible [Owen v Warburton, (1805) 1 B. and P. 326, 1 = 127 Eng. Rep. 439. Strater v Graham, (1839) 4 M. and W. 721; Burgess v Langley, (1843) 5 M. and G 722, 1 = 134 Eng. Rep. 750 and Queen v Murphy, (1869) L. R. 2 P. C. App. Cas. 535 referred to] The evidence in the case was held insufficient to prove that the verdict was arrived at by casting lots. See also Taylor on Evidence, Vol 1 (10 edn), p 670, Russel (7 edn), p 604. If the verdict is pronounced and one of the jury is so drunk or otherwise incapable that he cannot or does not assent a conviction in such a case would, it seems, be bad. See ex-parte Morris (1907) 73 J. P. 5 and Note 3 to s. 300

9. Powers of jury to return a verdict in respect of an offence not charged.—

(1) Jury may ignore graver charges and find accused guilty of lesser one—A jury trying an offence by jury has authority under s. 238, to find as an incident to such trial that certain facts only are proved in the trial which facts constitute a minor offence and return a verdict of guilty of such offence, though such minor offence be not triable by jury. Sessions Judge may thereupon record a judgment, convicting the accused of such minor offence although he is not charged with and tried for it with the aid of the jurors as assessors. Per BHANU IN AYYANGAR J., 26 M. 243. See also 3 W. R. 41; 20 B. 215; 15 C. W. N 344 and 3 C. 189, and Notes to s. 238. It is open to a jury to bring in a verdict of guilty of abetment of robbery when the charge is for dacoity only, 16 Cr. L. J. 678 (Bar.)

the jury brings in, he may direct them to reconsider it. If their verdict is meaningless or inconsistent he may refuse to accept it. If, however, they insist on a general verdict of guilty or not guilty, the Judge must accept it, R v Meany, (1862) L. and C. 213; Halsbury, Vol. IX, p. 373, Archbold, p. 231

3 Where jury are not clear about the law the Judge bound to explain again.—When the jury were apparently not able to follow the summing up of the Judge as regards the law bearing on the charges, held it was clearly the duty of the Judge when he was told that they did not understand the law in the matter to explain to them again, 1911 M. W. N. 190. See also 6 Bom. L. R. 258 and Note 39 at p. 800

Verdict to be given on each charge.

Judge may question jury

Questions and answers to be recorded

303. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the jury shall return a verdict on all the charges on which the accused is tried, and the Judge may ask them such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is

(2) Such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded

Notes.—1. Questions may be put only when verdict is incomplete or ambiguous in order to ascertain what the verdict really is—The law does not prescribe any specific form in which the jury ought to return their finding, and they are at liberty to deliver it in any form which they think fit. And if that finding is not exhaustive as to the facts in issue which go to make the charge or charges, it is competent to the Judge, and is, indeed, his duty, to put such questions to them as shall elicit a complete finding, 14 W. R. 89 = 8 B. L. R. 557. "It is only when it is necessary in order to ascertain what the verdict of the jury really is, that the Judge is justified in putting questions to the jury. Unless a necessity of this kind truly exists the questions are not justified in law. No doubt the Legislature thought that it would be very dangerous to give the Sessions Court the power of cross-examining the jury after they had delivered their final verdict with a view to show that the conclusions at which they had arrived were not logical or were inconsistent, or in order to provide materials upon which the Judge might be enabled afterwards to dispute the finality of the verdict. But in this instance it does appear from the answers which the foreman returned upon being asked to give the verdict of the jury on the first charge, that there was at the time some lurking uncertainty in the minds of the jury themselves as regards their verdict, and we think that this uncertainty in their minds made itself apparent to the Judge, and that therefore, on the whole, the questions which were put by him were rightly put within the discretion vested in him by this section." Per PHEAR, J., in 21 W. R. 1. See 20 W. R. 50. Where the verdict is ambiguous, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to ascertain what the jury meant its verdict to be and this section empowers a Judge to ask such questions as are necessary for such purpose. Thus, where in the trial of three persons, the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty" in respect of two and added that the third accused was 'Kam Doshi' (a little or less guilty) it was held, that the Sessions Judge should have refused to accept such a verdict and should have required the jury to give a proper verdict by means of questions put to them, 7 C. W. N. 135. Where the jury returned a verdict of 'guilty but not voluntarily' on a trial under s. 326 and the Judge without further questioning the jury accepted the verdict as one of guilty and convicted the prisoner under s. 333, held by the Full Bench, that the verdict was in effect one of "not guilty" and the Judge was wrong without further questioning the jury in treating it as a verdict of "guilty," 12 C. W. N. 530 = 7 Cr. L. J. 362. It has been repeatedly laid down that the Judge is only entitled to question the jury as to their verdict when it is ambiguous or incomplete, 36 M. 585.

2. Where verdict clear and full, Judge bound to record without questioning—Where the verdict although perhaps erroneous is not ambiguous, it is the duty of the Judge to record it without further question, 9 C. 53 = 11 C. L. R. 169; 30 M. 469. It is the duty of the Judge simply to accept the verdict without any question, the jury after it has delivered its verdict with a view to bring on record the points on which his opinion is at variance with the jury Ratanlal 442; 15 B. 432; 14 B. 116 and 20 B. 218. See also 8 C. 739; 6 Bom. L. R. 258 and 361; 19 B. 733; 28 B. 412; 29 M. 91; 30 M. 469; 36 M. 583; 22 M. L. J. 358 = 13 Cr. L. J. 285; 7 L. B. R. 140 = 18 Cr. L. J. 678 and Note 1

3. Reasons for verdict cannot be asked—A Judge ought not to put any questions to any of the jury as to his reasons for the verdict he has given 20 W. R. 50; 9 C. 53 = 11 C. L. R. 169 contra see 1 C. L. R. 275, where PRINSEP J., held that the law did not prevent the Judge from questioning the jury as to the grounds on which they based their verdict. A Judge is not entitled to ask the jury their reasons for the verdict. He is not entitled to put questions to them to show that the conclusions at which they arrived were not logical or consistent. Though he is entitled under certain circumstances to refer the case to the High Court for decision he cannot put any question to the jury or come to a conclusion upon the case himself. Any ambiguity in the verdict is the only justification for any question by the Judge. It is true that it may be of very great assistance to a Judge to know the reasons for the verdict of the jury to make up his own mind whether it is necessary to differ from the jury or not. But the jurors would not generally be able to state their reasons very clearly 30 M. 469, followed 13 Cr. L. J. 586 (M.). The Code does not empower a Judge to question the jury as to their reasons for an unanimous verdict where there is nothing ambiguous in the verdict itself 22 M. L. J. 355 = 13 Cr. L. J. 285. It is a serious irregularity opposed to the fundamental principle and scheme of trial by jury if a Judge puts questions to each of the jurors and records their opinions 36 M. 585. A Judge ought not to treat them as assessors. See Note 1 to s. 302 and 20 W. R. 73. See however 35 C. 639, 29 M. 91 and 18 C. L. J. 522, 11 L. W. 561; 43 M. 744.

3 A Judge not to make minute inquiries to learn the nature of the majority of jury—Although this section empowers a Judge to ask the jury such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is it was never contemplated that on ascertaining that the jury are not unanimous the Judge should make minute inquiries to learn the nature of the majority and its opinion so that he should have the opportunity of accepting or refusing that opinion as a verdict according as it coincides with his own opinion or not. Whatever may be the opinion of the Judge if he goes so far as to ask the jury what the exact majority is and what the opinion of that majority is he ought to receive that verdict without hesitation 10 C. 140 = 13 C. L. R. 338.

4. Where verdict is vague or ambiguous, proper course is to question the jury and not to ask them to retire for further consideration.—In 3 L. B. R. 75 = 3 Cr. L. J. 1, the jury returned an ambiguous verdict and the Judge instead of proceeding under this section by questioning asked them to retire for further consideration. The conviction and sentence based on the second verdict was held altogether illegal. See also 2 L. L. J. 575 = 2 Cr. L. J. 357 and Note 4 to s. 302. But where the verdict is vague or uncertain in its meaning or effect, the proper course is for the Judge to ask the jury such questions as may be necessary to ascertain what their verdict really means. Thus e.g., where the verdict is guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder as the punishment for that offence varies with regard to the intention or knowledge with which the act of causing death was committed the Judge should ask such questions as would enable him to ascertain the exact nature of that offence found to have been committed. If he does not do so the verdict of the jury must be taken to have found that the lesser form of the offence has been committed 6 B. L. R. Appz. LXXXVI = 12 W. R. 35, 20 B. 215. The jury when questioned for this purpose can no longer return a verdict of guilty of murder. If they return such a verdict the Judge must simply treat it as a verdict under the first part of s. 304 I. P. C. Ratanlal 982.

5 Jury should be asked to return verdict on each one of the heads of charge.—In a trial by jury the Sessions Judge ought to call on the jury to return a verdict on each one of the heads of charge. If the trial is for murder of two persons and the jury return a verdict of guilty the Sessions Judge ought to ascertain whether the verdict relates to the killing of one or the other or both Ratanlal 746. It is inexpedient to put a series of questions to the jury unless when called on for their verdict on different heads of charge they find themselves in difficulties which have to be resolved in that way Ratanlal 289. Where the jury convicted an accused on the second head of the charge and acquitted him on the first and the Judge required them to re-consider the verdict it was held he was bound to receive the verdict 7 W. R. 22.

6 When charges are in the alternative the jury may be asked to ascertain the exact nature of the verdict.—Where a case depends on inferences to be drawn from two or three facts neither principle nor statute forbids the Sessions Judge from asking the jury to state a plain concise finding on those facts 15 B. 432. But where the Sessions Judge in a case of rioting with deadly weapons considered that probably the common object section any question for the purpose of ascertaining what their verdict was based upon it was held that the Judge misdirected the jury and the verdict leaving it uncertain what was the common object of the accused was bad and that the conviction must be set aside 21 C. 955.

7. When jury finds provocation, Judge should ascertain its nature—In a trial for murder, the first verdict returned by the jury was "guilty of murder under grave and sudden provocation." On being told by the Judge that their duty, after considering the question of provocation, was to acquit or convict of the charge of murder alone, the jury retired and brought in a verdict of "not guilty," held, that the first verdict was a verdict of murder, as the provocation does not reduce the offence to culpable homicide unless it destroys the power of self control, a fact which the verdict did not find. Whether in the opinion of the jury there was, by reason of provocation destruction of the power of self-control, could have been ascertained by the Judge by questioning them under this section, 20 B. 215. Also the direction given to the jury after the first verdict to return a verdict of "guilty" or "not guilty" was clearly wrong as the case fell under s 238 and although the charge was one under s 302, I P C., the jury had a right to bring in a verdict under s 304, I P C., if there was grave and sudden provocation, so as to deprive the prisoner of the power of self-control, 5 C. 871 = 6 C. L. R. 349; 20 C. 493. See also the remarks of SARGENT, C J, in 8 B. 200 and 3 C. 189.

8. Questions put and answers elicited to be recorded in exact words—The questions put to the jury and the answers given must be recorded in exact language used and not merely their substance, 8 C. 739. See also 1911 M. W. N. 190 = 9 M. L. T. 345 = 12 Cr. L. J. 140

9. Effect of not noticing verdict on some of the charges—Where an indictment contains two counts for misdemeanour to which the defendant pleads "not guilty," and the finding of the jury is guilty on the second count (without noticing the first) whereupon judgment is passed, such judgment is not affected by reason of no finding being entered on the first count, for each count is a separate indictment on which a separate judgment can be entered. Archbold, pp 234 and 235 where Rotham v R, 5 B. and 5 635 = 33 L. J. (M.C.) 197 is referred to. See s 403 and cf 41 C. 1072.

10 When verdict is given on the major charge with which the Judge agrees, verdict on the lesser charge ought not to be taken—Where the charges were under ss 302 304 and 328, I P C., and on the jury bringing in a verdict of guilty under s. 302 by a majority of 8 to 1, the Judge accepted the same, sentenced the accused and did not take the verdict of the jury on the other counts. It was contended that as the jury returned a majority verdict only on the charge under s 302, it was incumbent on the Judge to take their verdict on the charge under s 304. Held, that there was no error. If the Judge agrees with the opinion of the majority of the jury, he must give judgment in accordance with such opinion. On a verdict of murder being given it is certainly not competent to the Court to take any verdict on the lesser charge of culpable homicide. It would not only be superfluous, but impossible, 19 C. W. N. 653 = 16 Cr. L. J. 561.

304. When, by accident or mistake, a wrong verdict is delivered, the

Amending verdict. jury may, before or immediately after it is recorded, amend the verdict, and it shall stand as ultimately amended

Notes.—1. When verdict is not delivered by accident or mistake, jury not entitled to amend it.—A Judge asked a jury as to their reasons for a verdict which was unanimous and unambiguous and in consequence two of the jury were led to say that they had been misled by the notes of the foreman as to some of the evidence and that they would like to reconsider the case with the result that the jury unanimously brought a verdict exactly opposite to the first, held that this was not a case in which it could be said that a verdict was delivered by accident or mistake and the High Court set aside all the proceedings taken on delivery of the jury's first verdict and directed the Sessions Judge to try that case from that point in accordance with law, 22 M. L. J. 355 = 13 Cr. L. J. 255. Accused was tried by jury before a Court of Session for murder under s 302, I P C. The jury by a majority returned a verdict of guilty under s. 304, I P C. The Sessions Judge thereupon asked the jury to consider for the purposes of the latter section whether they found that accused had intended to cause the death of the deceased. The jury retired, and on returning informed the Judge that they wished to alter their verdict as they were unanimously of opinion that accused was guilty of murder. The Judge recorded this verdict and sentenced accused to transportation for life, held, treating the second verdict merely as a reply to the point which the jury had been asked to reconsider, viz, that there was an intention to cause death (1) that the offence proved fell under the first clause of s. 304 and not under s. 302, I P C., and the sentence was altered to one of transportation for ten years, held, further (2) that the second verdict could not stand, as all that the Judge had wished the jury to consider was, which of the two classes of offences under s. 304 I P C., the majority of the jury had found the accused guilty of and they had, therefore no power to reconsider the whole case, and bring in an unanimous verdict of guilty of murder, an erroneous verdict not having been delivered by accident or mistake such as will entitle them to amend it under this section and the Judge not having asked them to reconsider their first verdict under s 1702 Ratahal 337 See 30 G. 435

2. Section does not apply where jury deliver wrong verdict owing to a misunderstanding of law— This section obviously contemplates cases where the verdict delivered is not in accordance with what was really intended by the jury and does not apply to a case where the jury owing to a misunderstanding of the law arrive at a wrong conclusion, but there is no accident or mistake in the delivery of the verdict. The accused were tried before a jury on a charge under s. 232 I P C. the jury returned an unanimous verdict of not guilty. The Judge thereupon questioned the jury as to their reasons and the jury answered that the accused had not actually been caught in the act of coining. The Judge then explained the law under s. 232 I P C. and asked them to reconsider their verdict. Upon this, the jury returned an unanimous verdict guilty and the Judge accepting the verdict, sentenced the accused held that this section did not apply and s 303 limited the powers of the Judge to ask questions and hence the procedure adopted was irregular. If the jury returned a verdict owing to a misapprehension of law it can be corrected only by the Judge disagreeing with the jury and referring the case to the High Court under s. 307 23 B 412, where 8 Bom L R 258, 19 B 735, 21 W R 1 are followed.

3. The power of amendment must be exercised before or immediately after verdict is recorded.— According to English practice the jury may before the verdict is recorded (or even promptly after the verdict is recorded R v Purkin 1 Mood 45) rectify their verdict and it will stand ultimately as amended. This may be done even after the defendant has been discharged out of the dock (in pursuance of a supposed verdict of acquittal) if it is done before the jury have left the box R v Vodden 23 L J (M G) 7 = 6 Cox C. C. 226 Archbold, p 224. In R v Wooller, 18 B. R. 402 = 2 Stark 111, it was proved to the satisfaction of the Court by extrinsic evidence, viz affidavits of bystanders that all the jurors had not heard the announcement of the verdict by the foreman and that some of the jurors did not concur in the verdict and the Court thereupon ordered a re-trial by a different jury. On the Judge being informed by the foreman that the jury were agreed upon their verdict which was one of acquittal on both the charges and thereupon verdict was recorded and the accused was discharged from custody. From information received some days afterwards the trying Judge was led to believe that as a matter of fact, the jurors were not agreed as regards the verdict. The Judge sent for the foreman, examined him on oath and discovered that the verdict on the second count was really a verdict of the majority of jurors and was there in R v Wooller. Jurisdiction in criminal cases is not to be assumed and in regard to matter for which Legislature has made express provision it certainly must not be assumed in excess of the jurisdiction so conferred 6 P R. 1913 (F B.) = 9 P W R. 13 = 15 Cr L J 815. The section provides for an amendment of a wrong verdict delivered by accident or mistake but clearly contemplates that such a verdict is amended only before or immediately after it is recorded in other words before the jurors have left the Court and while they are still under the observance of the presiding Judge. And the reason for this restriction is obvious for once the jurors have left the Court they are liable to outside influences and it would be in the highest degree dangerous thereafter to accept statements to modify the verdict.

Section 304 does not apply to a second verdict after hearing further evidence.—In a jury trial all the evidence on both the sides must be considered before the case can be submitted to the jury and once a verdict has been delivered there is no power in the trial Court or in the jury to reconsider that verdict except under s. 304. The second verdict is therefore a nullity and the judgment based upon it is without jurisdiction and void verdict of jury once given is final 4 Lah. 332

Verdict in High Court when to prevail

305. (1) When in a case tried before a High Court the jury are unanimous in their opinion or when as many as six are of one opinion and the Judge agrees with them the Judge shall give judgment in accordance with such opinion

(2) When in any such case the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six of them are of one opinion the foreman shall so inform the Judge

Discharge of jury in their cases.

(3) If the Judge disagrees with the majority he shall at once discharge the jury

(4) If there are not so many as six who agree in opinion the Judge shall after the lapse of such time as he thinks reasonable discharge the jury

Notes.—1. Verdict obtained by duress—In Pierce v Pierce, 38 Mich 412, the jury after being out for one day sent word to the Judge that they could not agree. The Judge sent back word that he did not believe it yet and added the suggestion that they had better agree that night as he was going away and should not be back until the second day after and they might not get discharged until he returned. The verdict was returned within an hour afterwards held that it must be set aside as obtained by duress. The Court said Jury trials can never be safe unless the verdict is made as far as possible on the unbiased and free conclusion of every juror Every attempt to drive men into an agreement which they would not have reached freely is a perversion of justice It may be discretionary with the trial Judge to keep a jury out until he is satisfied an honest and free agreement is not to be expected. But there is no legal propriety in keeping the jury confined unreasonably after they have come to an agreement and a verdict obtained by the suggestion of such an alternative is a verdict obtained by what it would be hard to distinguish from duress. It may be that the Court is not bound to be present continually on the chance of an agreement but any unusual and prolonged delay is not to be favoured without giving an opportunity to find a sealed verdict. This error however innocently committed as we are bound to suppose it was must nevertheless in our opinion be held fatal to the verdict.

2. When jury divided in the proportion of six to three, Judge bound to ascertain verdict before discharging them—Where in a trial at the High Court Sessions the jury were divided in the proportion of six to three and the presiding Judge without ascertaining what the verdict of the majority was discharged the jury and ordered a re-trial and on the re-trial coming on before a different Judge and jury, objection was taken to the competency of the tribunal to re-try the case on the ground that the jury in the first trial were improperly discharged and it could not be said the presiding Judge at the first trial agreed or disagreed with the verdict of the majority he not having ascertained what that verdict was held the Court as composed of the Judge and jury at the first trial has legal seisin of the case and no other Court could try the case. The point had not to be decided expressly as the Advocate General entered a Nolle prosequi 8 C. W. N. 48. See also 2 C. W. N. 481 and 7 C. W. N. 31

3. Recording evidence after verdict illegal—Feeling doubt as to the correctness of a jury's verdict of guilty the Sessions Judge postponed passing sentence and thereafter examined certain witnesses in the absence of the jury and the prisoner and then agreeing with the verdict convicted and sentenced the accused. Held that in a jury trial the Judge had no jurisdiction to examine witnesses after the jury had been discharged and in the absence of the accused 7 Bom. L. R. 979—3 Cr. L. J. 42.

4. It is improper for a Judge to obtain verdict prematurely and discharge the jury because he disagrees with the verdict—After the evidence for the prosecution had been given and the accused's statements read the Judge thinking the jury would not be likely to convict upon the evidence already given asked the jury if they wished to hear the defence evidence. The jury misunderstanding the question replied that they found certain accused guilty and the others not guilty and the Judge thereupon dismissed the jury and tried the case again with a fresh jury. Held that the action of the Judge in re-commencing the trial with the aid of a fresh jury was not authorized by law and that the proper course was for the Judge to have explained to the jury that they misunderstood the purport of the question and to have directed them that it was their duty to hear the defence before making up their minds that the accused was guilty. Weir II, 497.

306. (1) When in a case tried before the Court of Session the Judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors he shall give judgment accordingly

(2) If the accused is acquitted the Judge shall record judgment of acquittal. If the accused is convicted the Judge shall* unless he proceeds in accordance with the provisions of section 562 pass sentence on him according to law

Notes.—1. Upon verdict of guilty, adequate sentence must be passed—Upon a verdict of guilty it is the duty of the Judge to pass a sentence adequate to the offence of which the prisoners stand convicted. Passing a nominal sentence on account of his disagreement with the verdict would amount to usurpation of the functions of the jury—Mad. H. C. Pro. 8th November 1866 (3 W. R. Cr. Let. 16).

2. The Sessions Judge should state whether he agrees or disagrees with the verdict of the jury 15 W

3. Sessions Judge not competent to refer to High Court after once accepting the verdict.—Where the verdict of the jury is once accepted and the case is postponed it is not open to the Sessions Judge to reconsider his order and refer the case to the High Court under s. 307. He is bound to pass sentence 4 C. W. N. 853.

4. On acquittal, accused to be released immediately.—If the prisoner is acquitted, no warrant or release or intimation to the jail authority is necessary. The prisoner is entitled to be discharged from custody immediately on judgment of acquittal being pronounced and if there is no further charge pending against him his further detention is illegal. It is for the jail authorities in whose custody the prisoner was until the trial was concluded to satisfy themselves of the result of the trial and no formal warrant of release need be sent by the Court to the Superintendent of jail 5 M. H. C. R. Appx XI

307. (1) If in any such case the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors on all or any of the charges on which * any accused person has been tried and is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case in respect of such accused person to the High Court he shall submit the case accordingly recording the grounds of his opinion and when the verdict is one of acquittal stating the offence which he considers to have been committed † and in such case if the accused is further charged under the provisions of s. 310 shall proceed to try him on such charge as if such verdict had been one of conviction.

(2) Whenever the Judge submits a case under this section he shall not record judgment of acquittal or of conviction on any of the charges on which § such accused has been tried but he may either remand § such accused to custody or admit him to bail.

(3) In dealing with the case so submitted the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal and subject thereto it shall after considering the entire evidence and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury acquit or convict § such accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it, and if it convicts him may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session.

Notes.—1. The words any accused person have been substituted for the words 'the accused' and the words in respect of such accused person have been added. The reasons given for this amendment are 'this amendment prescribes that when a Judge accepts the verdict of the jury in respect of some of the accused but not of others he need only refer the case of the latter to the High Court. Statement of Objects and Reasons 1914

The words beginning with and in such case had been one of conviction have been newly added.

We think however that a further amendment is required in s. 307 to provide for the case of a person who is also charged with a previous conviction under s. 310. It seems obvious that if the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jury and submits the case to the High Court it is desirable that the record should be complete. We propose therefore to insert at the end of s. 307 (1) a provision for the trial of the further charge under section 310 Report Sel. Com. 1916

POWERS OF SESSIONS JUDGE

2. When reference may be made.—When a Judge differs from the unanimous verdict of a jury given in accordance with law the only procedure open to him to follow is that laid down by this section 5 C. 871 = 5 C. L. R. 349. The disagreement may be on matters of fact as well as on matters of law, 11 B. L. R. 14

(i) When the Judge thinks that the verdict is not supported by evidence.—The discretionary power to refer cases conferred on Session Judges by this section should always be exercised when the Judge thinks that the verdict is not supported by the evidence. It is the only way in which the miscarriage of justice by a perverse verdict of a jury can be remedied by the High Court. It should be borne in mind that there is no appeal (10 C. 1029) on the facts not even in cases of acquittal and the result of his failing to refer the case is that prisoners are convicted on evidence as to the sufficiency of which he is doubtful 13 M. 343.

* The words in inverted commas substituted for the words 'the accused' by Act VIII of 1913

† The words in inverted commas inserted by Act XVIII of 1913

‡ The words in inverted commas were added by Act.

§ The words such accused were inserted for the words the accused by Act.

(ii) When the verdict is erroneous owing to misapprehension of law—If the Judge believes that the jury has returned an erroneous verdict owing to misapprehension of law, the mistake can be corrected only by the Judge disagreeing with the jury and referring the case to the High Court under this section, 23 B. 512; 23 M. L. J. 355 = 13 Cr. L. J. 283.

(iii) When the Judge is 'clearly of opinion' that he should refer for the ends of justice—Where a Sessions Judge made a reference on the ground that the question involved was one of

And a reference under this section should be made only when the Judge is clearly of opinion that he should do so for ends of justice, 23 C. 535. The disagreement referred to in this section must be such a complete dissent as to lead the Judge to consider it necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, 2 B. 523, followed in 20 B. 215; 23 C. W. N. 747.

3. Reference should be made only when the verdict of the jury is manifestly wrong and not in every case of doubt nor in every case in which a view different from that of the jury can be entertained—In a case where the evidence against the accused was mainly of a circumstantial character, the jury acquitted the accused but the Sessions Judge disagreeing with the verdict referred the case to the High Court. The High Court in rejecting the reference remarked that not in every case of doubt, nor in every case in which a view different from that of a jury can be entertained on the evidence, that a reference under this section is to be made to the High Court, but the verdict of the jury should be manifestly wrong before such reference is made. The rule in cases where evidence is circumstantial is, that the facts found should be inconsistent on a reasonable hypothesis with the innocence of the accused before a conviction is pronounced, 41 C. 621; 26 Bom. L. R. 610.

3-A. When reference ought not to be made.—(i) After accepting verdict—Where, after the delivery of the verdict by the jury, the Sessions Judge recorded, "I see no reason for not accepting the verdict," but subsequently on reconsideration, he referred the case to the High Court, held, that it is not open to him to reconsider his order any more than it would be for the jury to reconsider their verdict once given and recorded. The terms of s. 369 preclude him from reconsidering his judgment, which was that he accepted the verdict, 4 C. W. N. 683. When a Sessions Judge thus acts under this section without jurisdiction the High Court has no power to act and consider the merits of the case on the evidence. Ibid cf. 41 C. 662.

(ii) Where on his own showing in his charge to the jury, the prosecution evidence is open to doubt—Where on his own showing in his charge to the jury the evidence is so open to hostile criticism as to justify the jury in regarding it with suspicion the Sessions Judge does not exercise a proper discretion in referring the case under this section 7 C. W. N. 135, but see 9 C. L. J. 432. In the latter case it was, however, held that it is not improper for a Judge to refer a case to the High Court merely because there is a weak link in the evidence or the prosecution to which he drew the attention of the jury and asked them to favour and consider before returning their verdict.

(iii) Because the High Court had upon the same evidence convicted certain other persons in another case—Again, where a Sessions Judge not accepting a verdict of "not guilty" referred the case to the High Court, because the High Court had upon the same evidence convicted certain other persons tried in another case. Held, that that fact was no justification for referring this case to the High Court, unless the Judge himself considered the evidence against present accused reliable, independently of the result of the other trial. The reference was accordingly returned with the direction "that he must appreciate the evidence and arrive at his own conclusions and it is only if he disagrees with the verdict of the jury that a reference should be made to the High Court," 6 Bom. L. R. 599.

4. The Judge who makes the reference must be the one who held the trial and not his successor.—A reference under this section is not invalid in consequence of its having been made by an officer who had held the trial, but who at the time of the reference had ceased to be a Judge. In fact the Judge who may make a reference under this section must be one who held the trial and heard the evidence and not the officer who succeeds him as Judge, 2 C. L. J. 43 = 2 Cr. L. J. 335.

5. Points to be noted when making reference.—A Sessions Judge ought to record distinctly whether he agrees with the jury or not, 7 W. R. 8.

(i) The Judge should ask the jury for specific findings on the particular facts on which he himself relies—Where the jury are unanimous in their verdict of not guilty, the Judge should ask for specific findings on the particular facts on which he himself relies. This would enable the High Court to understand the particular grounds on which the jury proceeded, and it will then only be necessary to consider the propriety of those grounds Weir 11, 335. A bare verdict of 'not guilty' may be as consistent with a belief of great part of the evidence for the prosecution as with a total disbelief of every part of it 41 C. 621; 16 Cr. L. J. 557 (Bar) and see Notes to s. 303 as to the power of questioning the jury.

(si) There should be no delay—In cases in which the Sessions Judge has disagreed with the verdict of the jury no delay should be permitted to occur in the submission of the records with the Sessions Judge's letter of reference. It is open to the Government Pleader and to the pleader for the accused to make notes of the evidence as the case proceeds Wilkins 115.

(iii) Judge should state his opinion on the evidence with his reasons—It should clearly be stated in the letter of reference what material portions of the evidence the Sessions Judge believes to be true and what his reasons are for arriving at his conclusions: he should not content himself with his remarks to the jury and merely adding vaguely the remark for these and other reasons I submit the case for the orders of the High Court. 6 Bom. L. R. 519. DAVIES, J. in 29 M. 91, CASPERZ J. in 36 C. 629 and PRINSEY J. 1 C. L. R. 275 are of opinion that when a Judge makes up his mind to refer case he should proceed to question the jury and record their opinions and see also 20 W. R. 73. In 9 C. 53 and 30 M. 459, it was held that the Judge cannot ask the jury for their reasons. Where the Judge's charge to the jury is meagre it is necessary that the Judge should state in his reference the evidence for the prosecution and the defence. He ought also to state what facts in his opinion were proved upon the evidence recorded in the case and the conclusions to which those facts lead him. The witnesses were examined before the Judge and the law contemplates that the High Court should have his opinion upon the evidence before it can deal with the case. 6 Bom. L. R. 599. In a reference therefore where the Judge merely said that the verdict was against the weight of evidence and expressed no other opinion it was observed that it was his duty to set out on what portions of the evidence or on what fact disclosed by the evidence the accused should have been convicted 7 C. W. N. 343, 6 Pat. L. J. 264.

(iv) He should state what offence the accused has committed and his reasons for differing from the jury—In his letter of reference the Sessions Judge should also state what offence the accused has in his opinion committed and on what grounds in that respect he differs from the jury. He should state with some fulness his view of the evidence and the credibility of the more important witnesses, because the High Court has to att.

reference under this section should not ask the High Court to consider and determine the case on matters not placed before the jury. He should recollect that in a trial held by him he is exactly in the same position as the jury in dealing with the evidence properly given before him and that he is bound to confine his attention solely to that evidence 27 C. 295.

(vi) Judge ought not to call upon the accused to plead to previous convictions pending a reference—The Sessions Judge ought not to call upon the accused to plead to previous convictions pending a reference to the High Court but he might be asked to record the plea after the Court has considered the reference 30 M. 134. See Note 3 to s. 310.

(vii) Unfair imputations to the jury ought not to find a place in the reference—Where a Sessions Judge disagreed with the majority verdict and observed "four of the members of the jury were Hindus and one a Mussalman. One of the accused is an educated Hindu. I cannot but think that the majority of the jury returned a deliberately perverse verdict in order to secure the acquittal of this man. Held that such an imputation is unfair to the jury, to the Sessions Judge to the accused and to the High Court. 51 C. 418.

3 A. Judge cannot refer whole case when he disagrees with the verdict in respect of some of several accused only—Sub-sec. (2) does not intend that when the Judge is not prepared to accept the verdict of the jury in its entirety the whole case is to be referred to the High Court. It only contemplates a reference to the case of those persons in respect of whom the Judge declines to accept the verdict. When the Judge agrees with the jury in respect of any particular accused the Judge ought to convict and sentence or acquit that accused as the case may be 42 C. 789.

3-B. Copies of all essential documents should be sent—When cases are submitted to the High Court under this section, fair copies should be made and transmitted of all essential documents in the record.—Fon. H. C. Cr. Cir. pp. 46 and 47.

REFERENCE IN CASES TRIABLE WITH ASSESSORS WHEN TRIED BY JURY

a. Joint trial of offences some triable by jury and some with the aid of assessors.—The proper procedure is laid down by s. 269 (3), see Notes at p. 649 under s. 746 (3) and see s. 536 and Notes thereto.—S. 269

(11) When the verdict is erroneous owing to misapprehension of law—If the Judge believes that the jury has returned an erroneous verdict owing to misapprehension of law, the mistake can be corrected only by the Judge disagreeing with the jury and referring the case to the High Court under this section, 28 B. 412, 23 M. L. J. 355 = 13 Cr. L. J. 285.

(11a) When the Judge is clearly of opinion that he should refer for the ends of justice—Where a Sessions Judge made a reference on the ground that the question involved was one of importance but it was not stated that he was clearly of opinion that it was necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court and that he disagreed with the verdict of jury, the case was sent back directing the Judge to make a proper reference should he think it necessary to do so 9 C. W. N. 66. And a reference under this section should be made only when the Judge is clearly of opinion that he should do so for ends of justice, 23 C. 535. The disagreement referred to in this section must be such a complete dissent as to lead the Judge to consider it necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, 2 B. 525, followed in 20 B. 215; 23 C. W. N. 747.

3. Reference should be made only when the verdict of the jury is manifestly wrong and not in every case of doubt nor in every case in which a view different from that of the jury can be entertained—In a case where the evidence against the accused was mainly of a circumstantial character, the jury acquitted the accused but the Sessions Judge disagreeing with the verdict referred the case to the High Court. The High Court in rejecting the reference remarked that not in every case of doubt nor in every case in which a view different from that of a jury can be entertained on the evidence, that a reference under this section is to be made to the High Court, but the verdict of the jury should be manifestly wrong before such reference is made. The rule in cases where evidence is circumstantial is that the facts found should be inconsistent on a reasonable hypothesis with the innocence of the accused before a conviction is pronounced 41 C. 621, 28 Bom. L. R. 610.

3-A. When reference ought not to be made.—(i) After accepting verdict—Where, after the delivery of the verdict by the jury, the Sessions Judge recorded, "I see no reason for not accepting the verdict, but subsequently on reconsideration, he referred the case to the High Court, held that it is not open to him to reconsider his order any more than it would be for the jury to reconsider their verdict once given and recorded. The terms of a. 369 preclude him from reconsidering his judgment, which was that he accepted the verdict, 4 C. W. N. 683. When a Sessions Judge thus acts under this section without jurisdiction the High Court has no power to act and consider the merits of the case on the evidence. Ibid cf. 41 C. 662.

(ii) Where on his own showing in his charge to the jury, the prosecution evidence is open to doubt—Where on his own showing in his charge to the jury the evidence is so open to hostile criticism as to justify the jury in regarding it with suspicion the Sessions Judge does not exercise a proper discretion in referring the case under this section 7 C. W. N. 133, but see 9 C. L. J. 432. In the latter case it was however, held that it is not improper for a Judge to refer a case to the High Court merely because there is a weak link in the evidence for the prosecution to which he drew the attention of the jury and asked them to favour and consider before returning their verdict.

(iii) Because the High Court had upon the same evidence convicted certain other persons in another case—Again where a Sessions Judge not accepting a verdict of 'not guilty' referred the case to the High Court, because the High Court had upon the same evidence convicted certain other persons tried in another case. Held that that fact was no justification for referring this case to the High Court, unless the Judge himself considered the evidence against present accused reliable independently of the result of the other trial. The reference was accordingly returned with the direction that he must appreciate the evidence and arrive at his own conclusions and it is only if he disagrees with the verdict of the jury that a reference should be made to the High Court, 6 Bom. L. R. 599.

4. The Judge who makes the reference must be the one who held the trial and not his successor—A reference under this section is not invalid in consequence of its having been made by an officer who had held the trial, but who at the time of the reference had ceased to be a Judge. In fact, the Judge who may make a reference under this section must be one who held the trial and heard the evidence and not the officer who succeeds him as Judge, 2 C. L. J. 48 = 2 Cr. L. J. 336.

5. Points to be noted when making reference.—A Sessions Judge ought to record distinctly whether he agrees with the jury or not 7 W. R. 8.

(i) The Judge should ask the jury for specific findings on the particular facts on which he himself relies—Where the jury are unanimous in their verdict of not guilty the Judge should ask for specific findings on the particular facts on which he himself relies. This would enable the High Court to understand the particular grounds on which the jury proceeded, and it will then only be necessary to consider the propriety of those grounds, Wells 11, 322. A bare verdict of 'not guilty' may be as consistent with a belief of great part of the evidence for the prosecution, as with a total disbelief of every part of it, 41 C. 621; 16 Cr. L. J. 587 (Bur) and see Notes to s. 303 as to the power of questioning the jury.

(ii) There should be no delay—In cases in which the Sessions Judge has disagreed with the verdict of the jury, no delay should be permitted to occur in the submission of the records with the Sessions Judge's letter of reference. It is open to the Government Pleader, and to the pleader for the accused, to make notes of the evidence as the case proceeds, Wilkens 115.

merely adding vaguely the remark 'for these and other reasons' I submit the case for the orders of the High Court." 6 Bom. L. R. 319. DAVIES, J., in 29 M. 91, CASPERZ, J., in 36 C. 629 and PRINSEP, J., 1 C. L. R. 275 are of opinion that when a Judge makes up his mind to refer case he should proceed to question the jury and record their opinions and see also 20 W. R. 73. In 9 C. 53 and 30 M. 439, it was held that the Judge cannot ask the jury for their reasons. Where the Judge's charge to the jury is meagre, it is necessary that the Judge should state in his reference the evidence for the prosecution and the defence. He ought also to state what facts in his opinion were proved upon the evidence recorded in the case and the conclusions to which those facts lead him. The witnesses were examined before the Judge and the law contemplates that the High Court should have his opinion upon the evidence before it can deal with the case. 6 Bom. L. R. 599. In a reference, therefore, where the Judge merely said that the verdict was against the weight of evidence and expressed no other opinion, it was observed that it was his duty to set out on what portions of the evidence, or on what facts disclosed by the evidence the accused should have been convicted, 7 C. W. N. 345; 6 Pat. L. J. 264.

(iv) He should state what offence the accused has committed and his reasons for differing from the jury—In his letter of reference the Sessions Judge should also state what offence the accused has, in his opinion, committed and on what grounds, in that respect, he differs from the jury. He should state with some fulness his view of the evidence and the credibility of the more important witnesses, because the High Court has to attach more or less weight to the opinion of the Judge who saw and heard the witnesses, 40 Bom. L. R. 178 = 7 Cr. L. J. 192. See also 3 C. 623 = 2 C. L. R. 304; 2 C. L. R. 1 and 20 W. R. 70. See Note 7.

(v) He should not refer to matters not placed before the jury—A Sessions Judge in making a reference under this section should not ask the High Court to consider and determine the case on matters not placed before the jury. He should recollect, that in a trial held by him, he is exactly in the same position as the jury in dealing with the evidence properly given before him, and that he is bound to confine his attention solely to that evidence, 27 C. 295.

(vi) Judge ought not to call upon the accused to plead to previous conviction pending a reference—The Sessions Judge ought not to call upon the accused to plead to previous convictions pending a reference to the High Court, but he might be asked to record the plea after the Court has considered the reference, 30 M. 134. See Note 3 to s. 310.

(vii) Unfair imputations to the jury ought not to find a place in the reference—Where a Sessions Judge disagreed with the majority verdict and observed "four of the members of the jury were Hindus and one a Mussalman. One of the accused is an educated Hindu. I cannot but think that the majority of the jury returned a deliberately perverse verdict in order to secure the acquittal of this man." Held that such an imputation is unfair to the jury, to the Sessions Judge, to the accused and to the High Court. 51 C. 418.

5-A. Judge cannot refer whole case when he disagrees with the verdict in respect of some of several accused only.—Subsec. (2) does not intend that when the Judge is not prepared to accept the verdict of the jury in its entirety, the whole case is to be referred to the High Court. It only contemplates a reference to the case of those persons in respect of whom the Judge declines to accept the verdict. When the Judge agrees with the jury in respect of any particular accused, the Judge ought to convict and sentence or acquit that accused as the case may be, 42 C. 789.

5-B. Copies of all essential documents should be sent—When cases are submitted to the High Court under this section, fair copies should be made and transmitted of all essential documents in the record.—Form. H C Cr. Cir., pp. 46 and 47.

REFERENCE IN CASES TRIABLE WITH ASSESSORS WHEN TRIED BY JURY.

6. Joint trial of offences some triable by jury and some with the aid of assessors.—The proper procedure is laid down by s. 269 (3), see Notes at p. 649 under s. 746 (3) and see s. 536 and Notes thereto.—S. 269

(3) applies only to cases where the accused is charged with distinct offences some of which are triable by jury and some with the aid of assessors. In such cases if all the charges are tried by jury and their verdict taken, the Judge disagreeing with the verdict refers the whole case to the High Court under this section. In 8 Bom. L. R. 559 = 4 Cr. L. J. 192; 9 Bom. L. R. 1057 = 7 Cr. L. J. 235 and Madras Referred Case 9 of 1906, the High Court dealt with the verdict on the offences triable by a jury and returned the records to the Sessions Judge so that he might deal with the offence triable with the aid of assessors remarking that the Judge should not have joined these latter offences in the reference while in 23 B. 696 it was held following 4 C. L. R. 405, 25 C. 555 and Ratanlal 600, that although the procedure of the Sessions Judge was irregular, the trial by jury must be accepted as legal and the case held to be one that can be submitted under s. 307. On the reasoning adopted in 25 B. 680 (F.B.) and 33 B. 423, the latter view seems to be preferable, but see 36 M. L. J. 452 (contra).

7. Single offence triable with aid of assessors tried by jury.—An accused was tried by a jury for having delivered a counterfeit coin, s. 240, I P C., and jury returned a verdict of not guilty. The Sessions Judge disagreeing with the jury was about to refer the case under s. 307, when it was brought to his notice that the offence had not been declared triable by a jury and ought to have been tried with assessors and the Judge thereupon treating the verdict of the jury as the opinion of the assessors convicted the accused, held, that the conviction was bad, inasmuch as the case was validly tried by a jury within the meaning of s. 538 and the trial was complete when the verdict was delivered and the Judge was bound either to give judgment in accordance with it or refer the case under s. 307. 25 C. 555.

8. Where in trial of offence triable by jury, verdict of offence triable with aid of assessors is delivered.—When in a case the jury in trying a compound case incidentally (without any separate charge) find the accused guilty of a minor offence triable with the aid of assessors, it is submitted that it is competent to the Judge and he is bound if he disagrees with the verdict of the jury on the minor offence while accepting their verdict on the compound offence, to make a reference under this section. See the judgment of BHASHYAM IYENGAR, J. in 26 M. 243.

PROCEDURE AND POWERS OF HIGH COURT.

9. It is for the High Court to refer a case to the High Court when the Sessions Judge is of the opinion that the case is not fit to be tried by a jury.—If the Sessions Judge is of the opinion that the case is not fit to be tried by a jury and he refers the case to the High Court, the High Court may proceed with the case or may have to the Sessions Judge's recommendation, 19 W. R. 38.

10. Government as appellants to begin.—In a case referred to the High Court under this section, it is for the Government, the appellants, who ask for conviction, to begin and satisfy the Court that there is a case calling upon the prisoner for an answer, 20 W. R. 33.

11. Where Judge and jury agree, is High Court bound to accept their opinion?—In a reference under this section the High Court is bound to accept the opinions of the Judge and the jury where they agree, and it is not open to it to believe evidence which both have disbelieved, Ratanlal 924. But under the present Code, the High Court can act on its own view, 29 C. 128; 9 C. L. J. 432.

11-A. High Court cannot interfere with verdict, if Judge does not refer.—The High Court cannot interfere with the verdict of a jury when the Sessions Judge has refused to refer the case and there has been no material misdirection in the case, and no failure of justice has been caused, 4 M. L. T. 433; see also 14 M. 26, where although the Judge did not agree with the verdict he did not refer the case to the High Court as there was evidence against the accused which it was open to the jury to believe. On appeal by Government on the ground that the Sessions Judge ought to have referred the case to the High Court, held, that since there has been no misdirection by the Judge and there was some evidence to support the verdict, the High Court had no power to interfere. However absurd the verdict might be considered. See also 13 B. L. R. Appx. XIX; 13 M. 343.

12. When Judge has accepted verdict on certain charges, High Court cannot vary.—Where a Sessions Judge has approved of a verdict on certain charges and finally acquitted and discharged the prisoner as to those charges, the High Court, it is held, cannot under this section, convict under those very charges. This section contemplates only cases in which without recording any order of acquittal or conviction, the Sessions Judge refers the whole case, 20 W. R. 73. The High Court has no power to interfere with the unanimous verdict of the jury with which the Judge agrees. 41 C. 662. See also 29 C. 128; 21 C. W. N. 435.

unless it was shown to be perverse or clearly or manifestly wrong. Held, that it was not necessary for the prosecution to show that opinions of the jury are perverse or clearly and manifestly wrong. Since the alteration of the language of this section by the Act of 1896 which expressed the law as it now stands, the High Court is bound to consider the entire evidence in the case and then give due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury and not to rely solely on the verdict of the jury, 29 C. 128; in a reference under this section, although the High Court is bound, in dealing with it, to give due weight to the opinion of the Sessions Judge and to the verdict of the jury, still it can decide for itself the question of guilt or otherwise of the accused, 11 C. W. N. 715; 15 B. 452; 9 C. L. J. 432 = 10 Cr. L. J. 57. The High Court cannot throw out a reference under this section merely because it might be argued, upon the face of the charge to the jury, that the verdict was not altogether an unreasonable one, but it must consider the entire evidence and arrive at its own judgment after giving due weight to the opinions of the Judge and jury, 36 C. 629 (29 C. 128 and 9 C. L. J. 433 followed 7 C. W. N. 135, explained 2 A. L. J. 475 = 2 Cr. L. J. 357 dissented from). See also 10 Bom. L. R. 632 = 8 Cr. L. J. 143; 10 Bom. L. R. 173 = 7 Cr. L. J. 192; 17 C. W. N. 1077 = 14 Cr. L. J. 556; 15 Cr. L. J. 513 (Bar.), 18 Cr. L. J. 440 (M.).

13-A. High Court must consider the opinions of the referring Judge as well as of the Jury.—In case of a reference under this section the High Court is to give due weight not to the opinion of the jury alone but to that of the Sessions Judge as well, 17 C. W. N. 1077 = 14 Cr. L. J. 556. 'In this country the opinion of the Judge is to be weighed by the High Court in exactly the same balance as the opinion of the jury,' 41 C. 784.

14 No analogy between powers exercised by High Court and those exercised by English Court in civil cases.—'The finality of the verdict of the jury is by this section made subject to the power of the Sessions Judge who presides at the trial (when he disagrees with the verdict of the jury so completely that he considers it necessary for the ends of justice) to submit the case to the High Court, which is, in dealing with the case has to exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal. This is a most important departure from English law and practice and was undoubtedly dictated by the circumstances that the trial by jury in this country was an experiment which it was necessary to safeguard against a miscarriage of justice by allowing the case to be referred under certain circumstances to the highest judicial authority. There is, therefore, no true analogy between the discretionary powers thus conferred upon the High Court under the above section and that which the Courts of Law in England have sparingly exercised in interfering with the finding of a jury in civil action by directing a new trial on the ground of the verdict being against the evidence and the practice, therefore, of the latter Court cannot be resorted to as affording a rule in the exercise of the powers conferred on the High Court. This is I believe, the gist of Mr Justice West's remarks in 1 B. 10. However I entirely agree with Mr Justice NARAYAN, whose long experience is entitled to great weight, that it has been the uniform practice of this Court not to interfere with the verdict of a jury except, when it is shown to be clearly and manifestly wrong (10 B. 497), and such practice ought, in my opinion, to be followed.—Per SARCENT, C. J., 15 B. 452 at p. 456. But now see 29 C. 128, in Note 15 above 46 A. 255.

17. Power of the High Court to convict the accused of offences not charged.—Where the jury acquitted the prisoners on the charges framed, but found certain facts which amounted to another offence and omitted to convict the prisoners of that offence, the High Court could convict for such minor offence, 3 C. 189. See also 5 C. 871 = 6 C. L. R. 349; 20 B. 215, 20 C. 483, 23 C. 1006. The accused were tried for charges under ss. 148, 304/149 and 326/149 I P C. The jurors acquitted them of the offence under s. 148, I P C., but found them guilty under s. 226, I P C., without the aid of s. 149 for which there was no charge. The Judge accepting the finding of the jury in respect of s. 148 but referring the verdict of the jury convicting the accused under s. 326 I P C., disagreeing with the verdict and recommending that the finding should be altered into one under s. 326/149 Held, that the High Court could not interfere under s. 307 as the verdict under s. 326 was practically a judgment of acquittal, inasmuch as there being no charge under that section independently there can be no verdict given upon it (see 34 C. 698 and 16 C. W. N. 1077 = 13 Cr. L. J. 502).—'On a reference under s. 307 we are bound to weigh the opinion of the Judge and the jury, and we have no power to interfere with the unanimous verdict of the jury with which the Judge agrees, and the only verdict with which the Judge disagrees is the verdict which on the face of it is illegal and void and must be set aside. We are unable to see our way to substitute anything for this offence, because we are precluded from considering the question of noting or the question of any separate act of causing hurt with which the accused were never charged.' 41 C. 882. See Notes to s. 238.

18. Non-direction.—Interference on account of.—The High Court will not interfere with the verdict of a jury because there was non-direction, unless the circumstances were such as to make the non-direction amount to a misdirection. Ratanlal 644; 23 C. 252.

19. Appeal—High Court dealing with a reference does not act in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.—No appeal lies to High Court from its own judgment passed under this section, Ratanlal 691. A High Court, disposing of a reference under this section is not acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, but only as a Court of reference in a criminal matter under cl 28 of its Charter. The hearing under this section is not in any sense an original trial 29 C. 288

19-A. Whether s. 537 applies to a reference under s. 307.—S. 537 of the Code does not in terms apply to a reference under s. 307, but the limitation contained therein applies to such a reference. Therefore on reference under s. 307 it is not competent to the High Court to pass an order quashing proceedings for want of sanction under the old s. 175 if such want of sanction has in fact not occasioned a failure of justice 47 B 31

20 Procedure where Judges disagree on hearing a reference—Where the Judges of the High Court hearing a case referred under this section differ in opinion the procedure laid down in s. 429 should be followed and the case referred to a third Judge 2 C. L. J. 77 N. See also 15 B. 432 and 1 C. L. R. 275.

(c) — Re-trial of Accused after Discharge of Jury

308. Whenever the jury is discharged the accused shall be detained in custody or on bail (as the case may be) and shall be tried by another jury unless the Judge considers that he should not be re-tried, in which case the Judge shall make an entry to that effect on the charge and such entry shall operate as an acquittal

Re-trial of accused after discharge of jury

Notes —1. Discharge of a jury.—The discharge may be for any of the reasons set forth in s. 282 283

The Sessions Judge has inherent power to discharge the jury before the verdict for misconduct etc. and to empanel another s. 308 applies where a jury is discharged for misconduct 50 C 872

2. B. 403 no bar to re-trial.—When the accused is 're-tried' under this section, he cannot be re-tried a second time on the same charge See also 403, 41 C 1072

H—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried with Assessors

309. (1) When in a case tried with the aid of assessors the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded the Court may sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence and shall then require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally, * on all the charges on which the accused has been tried and shall record such opinion * and for that purpose may ask the assessors such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their opinions are. All such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded "

Delivery of opinions of assessors.

Judgment (2) The Judge shall then give judgment, but in doing so shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors

(3) If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall * unless he proceeds in accordance with the provisions of section 562 pass sentence on him according to law

Note.—1. Summing up optional with Judge.—The provision as to summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence in cases tried with assessors seems to have been suggested by the observations of NORMAN, J., in 15 W. R. 35 = 7 B. L. R. 63. Heads of summing up need not be recorded as in the trials by jury. See also 30 C. 163.

2. Object of summing up evidence is to assist the assessors in their conclusions.—The provision as to summing up evidence is new and its object is to enable the Sessions Judge, in long and intricate cases, to place the evidence in an intelligible form so as to assist the assessors in arriving at a reasonable conclusion and not to give the Judge an opportunity of expressing his opinion in emphatic terms on the evidence. Such a course is very likely to be embarrassing to assessors in coming to an independent opinion in the face of the very decided opinion expressed by the Judge 9 C. 575 = 12 C. L. R. 506. He should not express his opinion upon any question of fact arising in such cases nor rely upon the views put forth by the committing Magistrate 22 C. 803. This provision should be availed of by the Judges only in cases where the facts are intricate or complicated and may therefore be expedient to explain or marshal the same. Even in those cases, the Judge should not as he may do in charging a jury express any opinion upon any question of fact arising in the case BHASHIAM ALVARA J., in 24 M. 523 at p. 536.

3 Assessors not to be asked to reconsider their opinion.—When once the Judge has summed up the case to the assessors and taken their opinion he should not re-open the matter and press upon their attention a part of the accused's admission which appears damaging in order to induce them to alter their opinion. It is important that the opinion of the assessors whether good, bad or indifferent, wise or foolish should be recorded as they are expressed without any influence from the Judge, except such as may be reasonably exercised in the course of his summing up, 1886 A. W. N. 22. Otherwise a private assessor is likely to be unduly biased by the attitude of the presiding Judge.

4. When opinion of assessors may be dispensed with?—(i) When there is no evidence.—It is only when there is no evidence that a Judge can withdraw a case from a jury or abstain from taking the opinion of the assessor Weir II, 391, 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 83. In the last mentioned case it was said that when a judgment of acquittal is recorded it is not necessary to record the opinion of assessors but it has since been held that the omission would be a serious irregularity 26 M. 598 (ii) When the Public Prosecutor withdraws case.—When the Public Prosecutor has withdrawn the case with the consent of the Court an acquittal should have been recorded without taking the opinion of the assessors. An acquittal was a matter of right whatever the opinion of the assessors might be Ratanlal 307.

Where in a trial for the abetment of murder opinion of the assessors was taken and the Judge acquitted the accused accepting that opinion but convicted the accused of causing the disappearance of evidence under s. 301 I. P. C., held that it was imperative for the Judge to take the opinion of the assessors on the charge relating to s. 201 I. P. C. 25 Bom. L. R. 1318.

5 In other cases recording the opinion of assessors imperative.—In 24 M. 523 at p. 535 it was laid down dissenting from 1 A. 510 and following 10 A. 414 and 22 W. R. 34, that if a Judge should decide a case without inviting the opinion of the assessors he virtually holds the trial without the aid of the assessors and his finding of sentence cannot be regarded as one passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction. Thus where in a Sessions trial the accused first pleaded not guilty but in the course of the examination of the accused after the completion of the prosecution evidence she pleaded guilty and thereupon the Judge without taking the opinion of the assessors found her guilty and sentenced her, it was held that it was the duty of the Judge to proceed with the trial as provided by this section and hear the defence and then take the opinion of the assessors 7 Bom. L. R. 731. A trial is altogether bad if the assessors are not asked and are apparently not allowed to give an independent opinion in the case 40 C. 163. Again where a person was tried for offences under ss. 397 and 307 I. P. C. and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty but the Sessions Judge convicted the accused of an offence under s. 324 I. P. C. without reference thereto and recording such opinion as required.

334. A person cannot be convicted of an offence with shows he has committed in a case tried with the aid of assessors when the opinion of the assessors has not been taken with regard to such charge Weir II, 391. Where the accused was tried at one trial for two offences one of which was a jury case and the other an assessor case and the Judge after taking the verdict of the jury on the former charge took the opinion of two of the jurors only on the latter charge and convicted the accused on both the charges the conviction on the latter charge was set aside for non-compliance with the provisions of s. 269 (3) read with this section. The failure to take the opinion of all the jurors as assessors cannot be treated as a mere omission or irregularity curable under s. 337 26 M. 598; 21 M. L. J. 520 = 10 M. L. R. 22 = 12 Cr. L. J. 239.

The conclusion arrived at by each assessor but also the grounds of his opinion. Sessions Judges should be enabled to make it intelligible and precise Oodh Cr. Dig. at p. 13.

7 Each assessor should be encouraged to state grounds of his opinion.—In 2 Bom. L. R. 322, JENKINS C.J., remarked: We are led by the master record of the assessors' opinion in this case to point out how desirable it is that assessors should be invited and encouraged by Sessions Judge to state briefly the grounds of their opinion as well as the result, see also 2 Bom. L. R. 323. Assessors are appointed to aid the Judge in the trial and are to give their opinion and when that opinion differs from that formed by the Judge, he should always ascertain the grounds of the assessors' opinions, 3 W. R. 31. Where, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, the Sessions Judge's views differ from the opinions of the assessors and he gives judgment without conforming to their opinions it is his duty to record in his judgment the opinions of the assessors with the reasons given by them for their opinions, 43 P. R. 1905 = 102 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 132. See also 8 C. L. J. 59 = 5 Cr. L. J. 121 and 24 M. 523 as to the value to be attached to the opinion of assessors. Each assessor should be called upon to state his opinion orally, 9 C. 873. It is irregular to take a joint opinion, 41 P. R. 1887. When a Judge differs from assessors, the grounds of each assessor's opinion should be distinctly recorded by him. As it is not a verdict but an opinion and not having any legal validity its weight depends solely on the reason and sense by which it is supported, 3 W. R. 5 and 21.

Form of record—ground of each assessor's opinion must be recorded.—When a Sessions Judge differs from the assessors or any of them, it is desirable to have a record not merely of the opinion of each assessor but

Such a record will be of use to the Court Sessions Judge should therefore record also assessor bases his opinion. Such grounds should be elicited by putting specific and pointed questions to the assessors on the important and salient points on which the decision of the case really depends and writing their opinions thereon—Madras Criminal Rules of Practice ss 243—245. The record of the opinion of each assessor should appear at the commencement of the opinion. While avoiding prolixity a Sessions Judge should be careful to be intelligible and precise in recording such opinions.—Wilkins, 116, Pun Cr Chap XI IV, p. 239, Oudh Cr Dig, p. 13

8. Distinct opinion on each charge should be taken.—Where an accused is tried on two charges, it is necessary that the assessors should give a definite opinion whether the prisoner is guilty of either, and, if so, of which of the charges preferred against him, and that the Judge in delivering his judgment should give it with adherence to the opinions of the assessors, 22 W. R. 34. Where he fails to do so, the conviction is liable to be set aside and a fresh trial ordered, 15 W. R. 3. See also 10 A. 414 dissenting from 1 A. 810; 16 B. 414 and 26 M. 598. See Note below.

9. Is a consultation between the assessors allowable?—We cannot find in the Code any provision authorizing or forbidding the Judge to allow consultation between the assessors and although we are not prepared to decide that the Judge may not in his discretion do so, we follow the opinion of BHASHIAM AVIANGAR, J., expressed in 24 M. 523 to the extent of holding that he is entitled to have before him each assessor's individual and independent opinion 15 Cr. L. J. 717 (M).

10. Questions must be put only after delivery of opinion.—S 309 gives the Judge a discretion to sum up the evidence for the benefit of the assessors if he thinks necessary, but it gives no power to question them until they have delivered their opinion orally and he has recorded such opinions. If there is anything obscure in their allow them to interferi
A Judge should allow the assessors in the first instance to give their opinion in their own language and way and then when they had completed what they had to say, it would be open to the Judge to put to them such questions as are necessary to elucidate or supplement their opinion, 41 C. 350.

11. Duty of Judge to pronounce judgment.—Failure on the part of a Judge to record a judgment on a charge tried with the aid of assessors, is irregular, but having regard to s. 517 might not invalidate the trial, Weir 11, 292. See also 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 55; 9 W. R. 51 and 10 W. R. 7.

12. Duty of Judge in dealing with opinions of assessors.—The opinions of assessors must have no doubt regard paid to them but after all it is the Judge who has to decide the case on the facts as well as law assessor derived from personal knowledge and unsupported by evidence on record 24 W. R. 28.

13. Reference to heads of charges to the jury is not sufficient where the jury are treated as assessors.—When an accused person is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by a jury and with respect to the heads of charges on which the Sessions Judge convicts the jury become assessors it is the duty of the Sessions Judge under s 309 to pronounce a judgment containing the particulars specified in s 367. A reference to the heads of charge to the jury is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the section. Ratanlal 426

14. Practice—Prosecuting pleader not to be employed in recording summing up.—A Sessions Judge should not utilize the services of the pleader for the prosecution for the purpose of recording his summing up to the assessors. If he is not capable of recording the substance of it himself he should employ an independent person for that purpose. 9 C. 875

15. Practice—Record of previous conviction when to be referred.—In trials before a jury or assessors, the record should invariably show that reference to the previous conviction has not been made until the subsequent offence has been found proved against the accused. 12 C. L. R. 535

16. Fresh evidence cannot be taken after assessors have given opinion.—When a Sessions Judge has taken the opinion of the assessors the trial is at an end except for the purpose of giving judgment and if there is a case for fresh evidence. P. I. 1 In a trial for a crime after the assessors have given their opinion that the accused is not guilty the Judge may order a retrial. 1889 A. W. N. 181 Similarly where after the assessors had been discharged the Judge took some evidence to prove that a statement had been made by a person who was dead at the time of trial a retrial was ordered as the evidence was not admissible. 15 A. 136

17. Judgment and sentence by successor of trial Judge illegal.—Where after the assessors had given their opinion the Judge left the district without recording his finding or judgment and his successor after considering the evidence recorded at the trial convicted and passed sentence on the prisoners the conviction was quashed and a retrial ordered. 21 W. R. 47, 8 C. L. J. 59 = 8 Cr. L. J. 121

18. Recalling assessors after their discharge.—When assessors have given their opinions and they are discharged the Sessions Judge cannot recall them and amend the charge and convict the prisoner on such amended charge. 1 W. R. 40

19. Judge cannot cancel trial after delivery of opinion by assessors, judgment must be given.—The assessors' opinions having been recorded the Judge has no option but to give his judgment in accordance with the section. He cannot cancel or set aside the trial because when writing his judgment he finds there has been a misjoinder of charges and is of opinion that the trial is illegal. s. 537 (a) does not invest the Judge with authority to cancel his own completed trial. 16 Cr. L. J. 824 (B.)

1—Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction

310. In the case of a trial by a jury or with the aid of assessors when the accused is charged with an offence and further charged that he is by reason of a previous conviction liable to enhanced punishment or to punishment of a different kind for such subsequent offence the procedure prescribed by the foregoing provisions of this Chapter shall be modified as follows viz—

(a) Such further charge shall not be read out in Court and the accused shall not be asked to plead thereto nor shall the same be referred to by the prosecution or any evidence adduced thereon unless and until

(i) he has been convicted of the subsequent offence, or

(ii) the jury have delivered their verdict or the opinions of the assessors have been recorded on the charge of the subsequent offence.

(b) In the case of a trial held with the aid of assessors, the Court may, in its discretion proceed or refrain from proceeding with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous convictions.

1. Scope of the section.—The whole section has been redrafted by Act XVIII of 1923¹ Cl. (b) of the present section is entirely new under which the Court is given a discretion to proceed or not with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous conviction in case of a trial with the aid of assessors. (See Statements of Objects and Reasons, 1914.) The main object of this section is to prevent the interests of the accused from being prejudiced by the production of the proof of previous conviction before jury or assessors before the accused is convicted of the subsequent offence charged.

2. When to put in proof of previous conviction?—Records of previous conviction should not be put in until the trial is concluded. They can only be used after conviction in determining the measure of punishment, 3 W. R. 33. In cases tried by jury, if the accused is charged with previous conviction, the judge should say "that he had heard that the accused was convicted of a previous offence on the ground that this improper statement of the witness might have probably influenced the verdict of the jury, 1890 A. W. N. 12. Reading a charge relating to previous conviction during trial, will amount to a positive misdirection, 5 Q. 763; 10 W. R. 39; and it is most essential that the procedure in jury trials in the Sessions Court should be conducted with precision, regularity and close attention to the rules laid down in this section, 1890 A. W. N. 12. In jury trials therefore the record should invariably show that reference to previous conviction had not been made until the accused was convicted of the subsequent offence, 12 C. L. R. 535. But where this rule was contravened in a clear case of theft, the High Court refused to interfere with the conviction, as the accused had not been prejudiced, 13 C. L. R. 110. See Note 33(v) at p. 789.

3. Procedure in respect of previous conviction in case referred to High Court.—Section 307 and this section provide that accused is not to be asked to plead to prior convictions until he has been convicted on the charge under trial. Where a Court of Session makes a reference to the High Court under this section, there is no conviction or acquittal in the Sessions Court and it is only after conviction by the High Court that the accused can be asked to plead to previous convictions, 30 W. 134. The Sessions Judge ought not to call gently to previous convictions, after the jury had given its verdict, but before reporting the case under this section for the orders of the High Court. In 2 Bom. L. R. 336, the High Court after convicting the accused remanded the case to the Court of Session in order that it may proceed to finish the trial by applying the procedure of s. 310 and passing sentence. The correctness of this procedure is doubtful.

4. Nature of previous conviction to appear on the face of the record.—Where an enhanced sentence is passed in consequence of previous conviction, the Sessions Judge or Magistrate shall state in his judgment, the date of such previous conviction and the sentence passed as well as the particular offence charged. Rule 39(d) Crit. G. R. and Cr. O. p. 29, amended. But the part of the charge stating the previous conviction need not show the extent of the former punishment, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XI.

5. How previous conviction proved.—See s. 511. An extract from a record of the previous conviction is not evidence of the conviction without proof of identity. Where such an extract was admitted as evidence of the conviction on the accused's denial, it was held that the procedure was more than a mere irregularity, 11 P. I. P. R. 187; 11 P. I. P. R. 188. A. W. N. 184. The question which might be put to the accused in respect of the previous conviction is, "Did you commit the offence of which you were convicted on the 1st day of January 1911?" 11 P. I. P. R. 233. But a Sessions Judge is not bound to state the facts of the previous conviction in his judgment, but only the fact of conviction, as to previous conviction.

6. Previous conviction outside British India cannot be taken into account.—Berar forms no part of British India. Hence a conviction in Berar purporting to be under the Indian Penal Code is not a conviction under that Code, consequently previous convictions had in Berar cannot be considered for the purpose of effecting the punishment on the second conviction in British India under the Penal Code. But it is not improper to take such convictions into consideration in measuring the punishment which the Court is competent to award irrespective of those special provisions of law, 7 C. P. Cr. 24.

13. Reference to heads of charges to the jury is not sufficient where the jury are treated as assessors.—When an accused person is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by a jury and with respect to the heads of charges on which the Sessions Judge convicts the jury become assessors it is the duty of the Sessions Judge under s. 309 to pronounce a judgment containing the particulars specified in s. 367. A reference to the heads of charge to the jury is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the section. Ratanlal 425

14. Practice—Prosecuting pleader not to be employed in recording summing up.—A Sessions Judge should not utilize the services of the pleader for the prosecution for the purpose of recording his summing up to the assessors. If he is not capable of recording the substance of it himself he should employ an independent person for that purpose. 9 C. 875

15. Practice—Record of previous conviction when to be referred.—In trials before a jury or assessors the record should invariably show that reference to the previous conviction has not been made until the subsequent offence has been found proved against the accused. 12 C. L. R. 555

16. Fresh evidence cannot be taken after assessors have given opinion.—When a Sessions Judge has taken the opinion of the assessors the trial is at an end except for the purpose of giving judgment and if there closing the case and recording the opinion of the assessors reserved judgment. Then he had private communications and interviews with the Civil Surgeon regarding the mental condition of the accused. Held the action of the Judge, in discussing the condition of the accused's mind with the Civil Surgeon out of Court and after taking the opinion of the assessors was illegal. 14 C. L. R. 1488. In a case where the Judge ought to have adjourned the trial and procured a medical examination of the accused, 1889 A. W. N. 181. Similarly where after the assessor has given his opinion the Judge has to prove that a statement had been made by a person who was dead at the time of trial a retrial was ordered as the evidence was not admissible. 15 A. 136

17. Judgment and sentence by successor of trial Judge illegal.—Where after the assessors had given their opinion the Judge left the district without recording his finding or judgment and his successor after considering the evidence recorded at the trial convicted and passed sentence on the prisoners the conviction was quashed and a retrial ordered. 21 W. R. 47, 8 C. L. J. 59 = 8 Cr. L. J. 121

18. Recalling assessors after their discharge.—When assessors have given their opinions and they are discharged a Sessions Judge cannot recall them and amend the charge and convict the prisoner on such amended charge. 1 W. R. 40

19. Judge cannot cancel trial after delivery of opinion by assessors, judgment must be given.—The assessors' opinions having been recorded the Judge has no option but to give his judgment in accordance with the section. He cannot cancel or set aside the trial because when writing his judgment he finds there has been a misjoinder of charges and is of opinion that the trial is illegal. s. 337 (a) does not invest the Judge with authority to cancel his own completed trial. 16 Cr. L. J. 824 (B.)

1—Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction

 310. In the case of a trial by a jury or with the aid of assessors when the accused is charged with an offence and further charged that he is by reason of a previous conviction liable to enhanced punishment or to punishment of a different kind for such subsequent offence the procedure prescribed by the foregoing provisions of this Chapter shall be modified as follows viz.—

(a) Such further charge shall not be read out in Court and the accused shall not be asked to plead thereto nor shall the same be referred to by the prosecution or any evidence adduced thereon unless and until

(1) he has been convicted of the subsequent offence or

(2) the jury have delivered their verdict or the opinions of the assessors have been recorded on the charge of the subsequent offence.

(b) In the case of a trial held with the aid of assessors, the Court may, in its discretion proceed or refrain from proceeding with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous convictions.

1. Scope of the section.—The whole section has been re-drafted by Act XVIII of 1923¹ Cl. (b) of the present section is entirely new under which the Court is given a discretion to proceed or not with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous conviction in case of a trial with the aid of assessors. (See Statements of Objects and Reasons, 1914.) The main object of this section is to prevent the interests of the accused from being prejudiced by the production of the proof of previous conviction before jury or assessors before the accused is convicted of the subsequent offence charged.

2. When to put in proof of previous conviction?—Records of previous conviction should not be put in until the trial is concluded. They can only be used after conviction in determining the measure of punishment.

on the ground that this improper statement of the witness might have probably influenced the verdict of the jury, 1890 A. W. N. 12. Reading a charge relating to previous conviction during trial, will amount to a positive misdirection, 5 C. 763; 10 W. R. 39; and it is most essential that the procedure in jury trials in the Sessions Court should be conducted with precision, regularity and close attention to the rules laid down in this section, 1890 A. W. N. 12. In jury trials therefore the record should invariably show that reference to previous conviction

3. Procedure in respect of previous conviction in case referred to High Court.—Section 307 and this section provide that accused is not to be asked to plead to prior convictions until he has been convicted on the charge under trial. Where a Court of Session makes a reference to the High Court under this section, there is no conviction or acquittal in the Sessions Court and it is only after conviction by the High Court that the accused can be asked to plead to previous convictions 30 W. 131. The Sessions Judge ought not to call upon the accused to plead to previous convictions pending a reference to the High Court, but he might be asked to record the plea after the High Court had considered the reference. This procedure no doubt is cumbersome and s. 310 might be so modified with advantage, as to enable the Sessions Judge to record the plea of guilty or not guilty to previous convictions, after the jury had given its verdict, but before reporting the case under this section for the orders of the High Court. In 2 Bom. L. R. 336, the High Court after convicting the accused remanded the case to the Court of Session in order that it may proceed to finish the trial by applying the procedure of s. 310 and passing sentence. The correctness of this procedure is doubtful.

4. Nature of previous conviction to appear on the face of the record.—Where an enhanced sentence is passed in consequence of previous conviction, the Sessions Judge or Magistrate shall state in his judgment, the date of such previous conviction and the sentence passed as well as the particular offence charged. Rule 39 (d) Civil G. R. and Cr. O. p. 29, amended. But the part of the charge stating the previous conviction need not show the extent of the former punishment, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XI.

5. How previous conviction proved.—See s. 511. An extract from a record of the previous conviction is not evidence of the conviction without proof of identity. Where such an extract was admitted as evidence of the conviction on the accused's denial, it was held that the procedure was more than a mere irregularity, Weir II, 393, 6 B. L. R. Appx. CL1 and 1831 A. W. N. 144. The examination of the accused in respect of the previous conviction is without legal warrant or justification, the nature of the question which might be put to an accused person being clearly indicated in s. 342, 23 B. 123; 27 M. 233. But a Sessions Judge is justified under this section in passing sentence on the accused on an admission by him of previous convictions and such sentences will not be interfered with, unless the irregularity in the inquiry as to previous conviction has prejudiced the accused, 23 C. 639. See also 26 C. 49.

6. Previous conviction outside British India cannot be taken into account.—Berar forms no part of British India. Hence a conviction in Berar purporting to be under the Indian Penal Code is not a conviction under that Code, consequently previous convictions had in Berar cannot be considered for the purpose of effecting the punishment on the second conviction in British India under the Penal Code. But it is not improper to take such convictions into consideration in measuring the punishment which the Court is competent to award irrespective of those special provisions of law, 7 C. P. Cr. 24.

7 Previous conviction under local laws.—It has been held that a conviction under a local law like the Frontier Crimes Regulation does not come under the purview of s. 75 I P C. and the provisions of that section cannot be applied with reference to such a conviction. 1 Cr. L. J. 1061

8. Applicability of this section to trials before Magistrate.—Though this section does not in terms apply to trials before Magistrates still clauses (b) and (c) indicate in general terms the preciseness with which charges relating to such convictions should be tried. 11 Bur. L. R. 33.

Section 310 of the Code does not apply to trials before Magistrates. 50 C. 387

311. Notwithstanding anything in the last foregoing section evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act 1872

Note.—Relevant under the Evidence Act.—See s. 14 43 and 64 of the Evidence Act as to circumstances under which previous convictions would be relevant. See 1 C. W. N. 146, 27 C. 159 and 4 C. W. N. 97. As a result of the Full Bench Ruling in 14 C. 721, s. 54 of the Evidence Act was amended by Act III of 1891 with a view to prevent a previous conviction being proved in order merely to prejudice an accused person.

1.—List of Jurors for High Court and summoning Jurors for that Court

 312. The High Court may prescribe the number of persons whose names shall be entered at any one time in the special jurors list

Number of special jurors
 Provided that no definite number of Europeans or of Americans or of Indians shall be so prescribed

Note.—The section has been amended by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act of 1923. The High Court special jury list should in our opinion be revised and it should no longer be limited to 200 Europeans and 200 non Europeans. It should include all who are qualified to whatever nationality they may belong. This revision will probably increase the proportion of non Europeans in the list. Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee

313. (1) The Clerk of the Crown shall before the first day of April in each year, and subject to such rules as the High Court from time to time prescribes prepare—

(a) a list of all persons liable to serve as common jurors and

(b) a list of persons liable to serve as special jurors only

(2) Regard shall be had in the preparation of the latter list to the property character and education of the persons whose names are entered therein

(3) No person shall be entitled to have his name entered in the special jurors list merely because he may have been entered in the special jurors list for a previous year

(4) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government in the case of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal and, in the case of other High Courts the Local Government may exempt any salaried officer of Government from serving as a juror

(5) The Clerk of the Crown shall subject to such rules as aforesaid have full discretion to prepare the said list as seems to him to be proper and there shall be no appeal from or review of his decision

Discretion of officer preparing lists

314. (1) Preliminary lists of persons liable to serve as common jurors and as special jurors respectively signed by the Clerk of the Crown shall be published once in the Local Official Gazette before the fifteenth day of April next after their preparation

317. (1) In addition to the persons so summoned as jurors the said Court of Session shall if it thinks needful after communication with the commanding officer cause to be summoned such number of commissioned and non-commissioned officers in Her Majesty's Army resident within ten miles of its place of sitting as the Court considers to be necessary to make up the juries for the trial of persons charged with offences before the High Court as aforesaid

(2) All officers so summoned shall be liable to serve on such juries notwithstanding anything contained in this Code but no such officer shall be summoned whom his commanding officer desires to have excused on the ground of urgent military duty or for any other special military reason

318. Any person summoned under sections 315 316 or 317 who without lawful excuse fails to attend as required by the summons or who having attended departs without having obtained the permission of the Judge or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend shall be deemed guilty of a contempt and be liable by order of the Judge to such fine as he thinks fit and in default of payment of such fine, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months in the civil jail until the fine is paid

Provided that the Court may in its discretion remit any fine or imprisonment so imposed

K — List of Jurors and Assessors for Court of Session and summoning Jurors and Assessors for that Court

319. All male persons between the ages of twenty-one and sixty shall except as next hereinafter mentioned be liable to serve as jurors or assessors at any trial held within the district in which they reside or if the Local Government on consideration of local circumstances has fixed any smaller area in this behalf within the area so fixed

Notes.—1 In Madras all persons who reside outside the radius of 20 miles where there is no railway communication outside 50 miles when there is rail way communication and in Kistna Godavari and Malabar outside 40 miles when canal communication exists are exempt. See C O No 1734 dated 10th December 1904 Madras Rules para 46 (g)

2 Remuneration to be paid—Jurors and assessors should not be paid allowances of any kind except in cases in which at the request of the Sessions Judge they had to come more than five miles from the Court house to visit the scene of the offence when they may be paid actual out-of-pocket expenses. Madras G O 1802 dated 26th October 1904 and G O No 234 dated 10th February 1910 In Punjab if the jurors and assessors residence be more than five miles from the Court each juror or assessor is entitled to his bona fide travelling expenses and if he is detained for more than a day he is entitled to subsistence allowance at a rate not exceeding five rupees. Punjab Book Cir 244 In Bengal if the usual residence of the juror or assessor is more than five miles from the Court house he is entitled to a daily allowance for attendance at Court only not less than one rupee and not more than five rupees. Cal Gazette April 1904

320. The following persons are exempt from liability to serve as jurors or assessors namely—

- (a) officers in civil employ superior in rank to a District Magistrate
- (b) salaried Judges
- (c) Commissioners and Collectors of Revenue or Customs
- (d) Police-officers and persons engaged in the Preventive Service in the Customs Department
- (e) persons engaged in the collection of the revenue whom the Collector thinks fit to exempt on the ground of official duty
- (f) persons actually officiating as priests or ministers of their respective religions
- (g) persons in Her Majesty's Army except when by any law in force for the time being they are specially made liable to serve as jurors or assessors
- (h) surgeons and others who openly and constantly practise the medical profession
- (i) legal practitioners (as defined by the Legal Practitioners Act 1879) in actual practice
- (j) persons employed in the Post Office and Telegraph Department
- (k) persons exempted from personal appearance in Court under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure sections 640 and 641
- (l) other persons exempted by the Local Government from liability to serve as jurors or assessors

Notes.—S. 640 of the Code of Civil Procedure relates to exemption of certain women from personal appearance in Court. S. 641 relates to exemption of certain persons by the Local Government from personal appearance in Court. Now see ss. 137 and 173 of the 1903 Code see s. 78 as to grounds of objection to persons summoned

1. Exemptions by Local Government.—For Madras see G O No. 1734 judicial dated 10th December 1904. In Punjab military men are not exempt unless the commanding officer requires them to be excused

2 Exemption not a disqualification—Persons who are exempt from service as jurors are not incapable of serving as exemptions cannot be treated as a disqualification under s. 278

3. Persons exempted may be summoned to try Europeans.—See s. 462

321. (1) The Sessions Judges and the Collector of the district or such other officer as the Local Government appoints in this behalf, shall prepare and make out a list of jurors and assessors, in alphabetical order a list of persons liable to serve as jurors or assessors and qualified in the judgment of the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid to serve as such, and not likely to be successfully objected to under section 78, clauses (b) to (h) both inclusive

(2) The list shall contain the name, place of abode and quality or business of every such person, and if the person is an European or an American, the list shall mention the race to which he belongs

Notes.—1 What class of persons are eligible as jurors.—In selecting persons to serve as jurors and assessors, a Sessions Judge should choose persons of an independent condition in life, men of judgment and of experience 23 W. R. 35. Persons of high social position should not be placed on the list of assessors as native sentiment upon this point is rightly or wrongly not in favour of such nomination, 1897 A. W. N 187. Even in a district in which there may be no Sessions Court a jury list should be prepared for use should a trial be held by the District Magistrate under s. 451

2. Qualified persons not to be arbitrarily excluded—It is not open to the Sessions Judge or Deputy Commissioner to arbitrarily exclude from the list any person who is liable and qualified to serve as a juror or assessor and who is not likely to be successfully objected to under s 278, cls. (b) to (h), both inclusive. Special exemption from liability to serve can be granted only by the Local Government under cl (j) of s 320 C P Cr Cir, Part II No 33

3. What the list should contain in addition to particulars specified in cl. (2).—The list should also show against each person included in it the language or languages understood by him. C P Cr Cir, Part II No 33

4 Holding Sessions anywhere within the Sessions division may not be permitted by Assessor List.—Where the Sessions Judge of Canara asked the High Court for special permission to hold his Court at Sirsi instead of at Karwar for the September Sessions of 1886 held, assessors can only be chosen from the list prepared under this section which can only be revised once a year [s. 324 (6)] The Court, therefore declined to grant the permission asked for there being no assessors available for Sessions at Sirsi, Ratnial 304

5 Jury list to be carefully revised.—All Collectors should exercise great care in the revision of the jurors list so as to serve the inclusion of all qualified persons of intelligence who are liable to serve and the exclusion of those who are not fit to sit as jurors Madras G O No 474 dated 16th March 1889

322. Copies of such list shall be stuck up in the office of the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, and in the Court houses of the District Magistrate and of the District Court and extracts therefrom in some conspicuous place in the towns or towns in or near which the persons named in the extract reside

323. To every such copy or extract shall be subjoined a notice stating that objections to list mentioned in the notice to the list will be heard and determined by the Sessions Judge or other officer as aforesaid, at the Sessions Court house

324. (1) For the hearing of such objections the Sessions Judge or Collector or other officer as aforesaid, and shall, at the time mentioned in the notice, revise the list and hear the persons interested in the amendment thereof and shall strike out the suitable in their judgment to serve as a juror or as an assessor, or who may establish his right to any exemption from service given by section 320 and insert the name of any person omitted from the list whom they deem qualified for such service

(2) In the event of a difference of opinion between the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid the name of the proposed juror or assessor shall be omitted from the list.

(3) A copy of the revised list shall be signed by the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid and sent to the Court of Session

(4) Any order of the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid in preparing and revising the list shall be final

(5) Any exemption not claimed under this section shall be deemed to be waived until the list is next revised

(6) The list so prepared and revised shall be again revised once in every year

(7) The list so revised shall be deemed a new list and shall be subject to all the rules hereinbefore contained as to the list originally prepared

325. In the case of any district for which the Local Government has declared that the Preparation of list of special jurors trial of certain offence shall, if the Judge so direct, be by special jury, the Sessions Judge and the Collector of such district or other officer as aforesaid shall prepare in addition to the revised list hereinbefore prescribed a special list containing the names of such jurors as are borne on the revised list and are in the opinion of such Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid, by reason of their possessing superior qualifications in respect of property, character or education, fit persons to serve as special jurors provided always that the inclusion of the name of any person in such special list shall not involve the removal of his name from the revised list nor relieve him of his liability to serve as an ordinary juror in cases not tried by special jury

326. (1) The Sessions Judge shall ordinarily, seven days at least before the day which

District Magistrate to summon jurors and assessors. he may from time to time fix for holding the Sessions, send a letter to the District Magistrate requesting him to summon as many persons named in the said revised list or the said special list as seem to the Sessions Judge to be needed for trials by jury and trials with the aid of assessors at the said Sessions, the number to be summoned not being less than double the number required for any such trial *† and including where any accused person is an European or an American as many Europeans or Americans as may be required for the purpose of choosing jurors or assessors for the trial

(2) The names of the persons to be summoned shall be drawn by lot in open Court excluding those who have served within six months unless the number cannot be made up without them, and the names so drawn shall be specified in the said letter

(3) † Where the accused requires and is entitled to be tried under the provisions of section 275 there shall be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed by or under section 276 from the whole number of persons returned the jurors who are to constitute the jury until a jury containing the proper number of Europeans or Europeans and Americans or of Indians as the case may be has been obtained

Provided that in any case in which the proper number¹ of Europeans or Americans cannot otherwise be obtained the Court may in its discretion for the purpose of constituting the jury summon any person excluded from the list on the ground of his being exempted under section 320

(4) Where, under the provision to sub-section (3) the Court proposes to summon as a juror any person in His Majesty's Army, the provisions of section 317 shall apply in like manner as they apply for the purpose of the summoning of military jurors for a trial under section 316

Notes.—1 Form of precept to District Magistrate to summon jurors and assessors is given in Sch. V, Form No 32. The duty of issuing a precept which is imposed on the Court of Session by this section cannot legally be performed by a Subordinate Judge in temporary charge of the current duties of the Court of Sessions, Ratanlal 143

2 Object of section—Trial by jurors not summoned—The object of the provisions in this section and ss. 276—279 is to secure an impartial trial by rendering impossible any intentional selection of jurors to try a particular case and an accused person has a right to claim to be tried by a jury chosen with strict regard to all the safeguards provided therein to secure perfect impartiality. Where on the day fixed for the trial of a jury case only three jurors were present in Court and the Sessions Judge summoned the other jurors necessary, from among the residents of the town held that the facts that the jurors were summoned from among the residents of the town were specially selected and were not summoned after being chosen by lot, as the law requires from the whole of the persons liable to serve on the jury were very serious matters inasmuch as they affected the constitution of the Court and the irregularity, therefore was not cured by s 537 7 G. W. N 188 If the Judge was unable to obtain a panel in the manner provided by this section it was his duty to postpone the trial and to proceed under this section to obtain a sufficient number of jurors. See Notes to s 276 at p. 657

3. Trial with the aid of assessor not summoned—The trial held with the aid of an assessor who has not been duly summoned (it being not proved that his name was in the list of assessors and he could be summoned) is illegal and the defect cannot be cured by s. 537. The fact that the accused did not object is immaterial 130 C 337—11 Cr. L. J. 724; 1894 A. W. N 207. But it is not illegal to select as an assessor one whose name was in the list and was summoned to attend on a particular day, but who attended on another day of the same sessions, 17 Cr. L. J. 17 (A). See Notes under s. 284

327. The Court of Session may direct jurors or assessors to be summoned at other periods than the periods specified in section 326 when the number of trials before the Court renders the attendance of one set of jurors or assessors for a whole session oppressive or whenever for other reasons such direction is found to be necessary

Power to summon another set of jurors or assessors.

Form and contents of summons.

328. Every summons to a juror or assessor shall be in writing and shall require his attendance as a juror or assessor, as the case may be at a time and place to be therein specified

For Forms of summons to assessors or jurors see Sch. V Nos 32 and 33

329. When any person summoned to serve as a juror or assessor is in the service of Government or of a Railway Company, the Court to serve in which he is so summoned may excuse his attendance if it appears on the representation of the head of the office in which he is employed that he cannot serve as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, without inconvenience to the public.

When Government or Railway servant may be excused.

Court may excuse attendance of juror or assessor

Court may relieve special jurors from liability to serve again as jurors for twelve months.

330. (1) The Court of Session may, for reasonable cause excuse any juror or assessor from attendance at any particular session. C. I.

(2) The Court of Session may if it shall think fit at the conclusion of any trial by special jury, direct that the jurors who have served on such jury shall not be summoned to serve again as period of twelve months.

¹ Sub-section (4) has been added by Act XII of 1933

List of jurors and assessors attending

331. (1) At each Session the said Court shall cause to be made a list of the names of those who have attended as jurors and assessors at such session

(2) Such list shall be kept with the list of the jurors and assessors as revised under section 324

(3) A reference shall be made in the margin of the said revised list to each of the names which are mentioned in the list prepared under this section

332. (1) Any person summoned to attend as a juror or as an assessor who without lawful excuse fails to attend as required by the summons or who having attended departs without having obtained the permission of the Court or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend shall be liable by order of the Court of Session to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees

(2) Such fine shall be levied by the District Magistrate by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such juror or assessor within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court making the order

(3) For good cause shown the Court may remit or reduce any fine so imposed

(4) In default of recovery of the fine by attachment and sale, such juror or assessor may by order of the Court of Session be imprisoned in the Civil Jail for the term of fifteen days unless such fine is paid before the end of the said term

Notes—1 Serving of summons by registered letter is illegal—The issue of a summons by registered letter is illegal and not being authorized by law conviction based upon such service is illegal and will be set aside 1 C W N 116

2 Legality of service by affixture—obligation to report change of address—Where a jurymen had been fined for non attendance and it was shown he was not living at the house when the summons was served by fixing the duplicate to the door of his dwelling house and that he had no knowledge of the service of the summons it was held that the law does not contemplate the imposition of an obligation on persons on the jury list to notify their change of address to the Court before leaving their usual place of residence or to make arrangement for acceptance of service of summons or for intimating to the Court their inability to attend 6 C W N 887

3 No appeal from an order imposing a fine—No appeal lies from a order fining an assessor or juror for non-attendance. But if a juror or assessor has been fined and he subsequently gives good ground such as illness for his non attendance the Judge should reconsider his order 6 W R 83

4 Gentlemen of high rank should not be put on assessors list.—A gentleman of high rank and status was summoned to attend as an assessor and he put forward a plea of sickness which was disbelieved by the Sessions Judge who fined him Rs 100 In an application for revision it was held that such persons of high position should not be placed on the list of assessors as native sentiment upon this point is rightly or wrongly not in favour of such nomination 1897 A W N 167

L—Special provisions for High Courts

333. At any stage of any trial before a High Court under this Code before the return of the verdict the Advocate-General may if he thinks fit inform the Court on behalf of His Majesty that he will not further prosecute the defendant upon the charge and thereupon all proceedings on such charge against the defendant shall be stayed and he shall be discharged of and from the same But such discharge shall not amount to an acquittal unless the presiding Judge otherwise directs Notes.—1. Cases where Nolle prosequi was entered.—At the Criminal Sessions of Calcutta High Court the trial of the accused had commenced before Mr Justice R and evidence partly had been gone into when the Judge retired from the case under s. 558 as he was a shareholder of the prosecuting bank, and the case was adjourned without the jury being discharged. The Chief Justice purporting to act under cl. 13 of the Charter appointed another Judge to preside at the trial of the accused. In answer to a question by the Judge, the Standing Counsel intimated that he intended proceeding with the trial from the point where it had been left, where upon it was contended on behalf of the accused that the presiding Judge could not proceed with the trial as Mr Justice R and the jury empanelled before him had still the sessin of the case. The Advocate-General entered a Nolle prosequi and the accused was discharged, 2 C. W. N. 581. See also 8 C. W. N. 43 noted under s. 305, 7 C. W. N. 31, noted under s. 282 and see Nirmal Kanta Roy's Case 41 C. 1072 for other instances.

2 English practice—when a Nolle prosequi is entered.—A Nolle prosequi to stay proceedings upon an indictment or information pending in any Court may be entered by leave of the Attorney General at the instance of either the prosecutor or the defendant at any time after the bill of indictment is found and before judgment R v Dunn, 1 C. and K. 730. This power of the Attorney General is not subject to any control by the Courts, but does not interfere with the right of a Judge to allow a case to be withdrawn on the application of a private prosecutor R v Comptroller of Patents (1899) 1 Q. B. 909–916. A Nolle prosequi is distinct from, and has not the same effect as offering no evidence and submitting to acquittal. Elworthy v Bird 2 Blig. 258. It appears to be preferable to an application to discharge the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses. This usual occasion of granting a Nolle prosequi is either where in cases of misdemeanour a civil action is depending for the same cause, R v Fielding, 2 Bar. 719; or where any improper and vexatious attempts are made to oppress the defendants as by repeatedly preferring defective indictments for the same supposed offence, R v Guarchy, 1 W. Bl. 545; or if it is clear that an indictment is not sustainable against the defendant. A Nolle prosequi may be entered as against one of two or more defendants who are jointly indicted to enable one such defendant to give evidence for the Crown against his co-defendants. Archbold, pp. 143–146, Halsbury, Vol. V, pp. 259–351.

Effect of a Nolle prosequi.—A Nolle prosequi puts an end to the prosecution but does not operate as a bar, or discharge, or an acquittal on the merits, Goddard v Smith 6 Mod. 261, and the party remains liable to be re-indicted. Fresh process may not, however, be awarded on the same indictment, R v Allen, 1 B and S. 850; R v Mitchell, 3 Cox 92. Archbold, p. 146. See Notes under s. 403. Where an accused person was discharged before the Calcutta High Court under ss. 383 and 266 I P C. and an order of discharge passed on the Advocate-General entering a Nolle prosequi, the accused was subsequently put up before a Deputy Magistrate who held that he could not be tried held that the Magistrate could take cognizance of the case. The order of discharge could not be set by any tribunal and it did not require to be set aside for fresh proceedings on the same charge (28 C. 726 referred to) 40 C. 91, 52 C. 890.

334. For the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, every High Court shall hold sittings on such days and at such convenient intervals as the Chief Justice of such Court from time to time appoints.

335. (1) The High Court shall hold its sittings as the place at which it now holds them, or at such other place (if any) as the Governor General in Council in the case of the High Court at Fort William, or the Local Government in the case of the other High Courts may direct.

(2) But it may, from time to time in the case of the High Court at Fort William with the consent of the Governor General in Council and in all other cases with the consent of the Local Government, hold sittings at such other places within the local limits of its appellate jurisdiction as the High Court appoints.

(3) Such officer as the Chief Justice directs shall give notice beforehand in the Local Official Gazette of all sittings intended to be held for the exercise of the original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court.

336. [Place of trial of European British subjects] Omitted by section 20 of Act XII of 1923

CHAPTER XXIV

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO INQUIRIES AND TRIALS

337. (1) 'In the case of any offence triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session or any offence punishable with imprisonment which may extend to ten years or any offence punishable under section 211 of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or any offence

Tender of pardon to accomplice

under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, sections 216-A, 369, 401 435 and 477 A the District Magistrate a Presidency Magistrate, a Sub-Divisional Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class may at any stage of the investigation or inquiry into or the trial of the offence with a view to obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to the offence, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offence and to every other person concerned, whether as principal or abettor, in the commission thereof

Provided that where the offence is under inquiry or trial no Magistrate of the first class other than the District Magistrate shall exercise the power hereby conferred unless he is the Magistrate making the inquiry or holding the trial and, where the offence is under investigation, no such Magistrate shall exercise the said power unless he is a Magistrate having jurisdiction in a place where the offence might be inquired into or tried and the sanction of the District Magistrate has been obtained to the exercise thereof

(1A) Every Magistrate who tenders a pardon under sub-section (1) shall record his reasons for so doing, and shall, on application made by the accused, furnish him with a copy of such record

Provided that the accused shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost

(2) Every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the Court of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence and in the subsequent trial if any

(2A) In every case where a person has accepted a tender of pardon and has been examined under sub-section (2) the Magistrate before whom the proceedings are pending shall if he is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is guilty of an offence commit him for trial to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be

(3) Such person unless he is already on bail shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section the Sel Com. say—

After considerable discussion of the provisions of s. 337 and examination of the large body of opinion on this clause we have unanimously come to the following decisions—

(a) Instead of including all offences punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years we have made the limit ten years and have added as special cases ss 211 216-A 369 401 435 and 477 A, of the Indian Penal Code

* Sections 1 and 1A were substituted for sub-section (1) by Act XVIII of 1923

+ These were substituted for the words the case by Act XVIII of 1921

† This sub-section was added by Act XVIII of 1923

§ These words were substituted for the words If not on bail

The words by the Court of Session or High Court as the case may be were omitted by Act XVIII of 1923

(d) The Magistrate who should be allowed to tender a pardon should, in our opinion, be Magistrates of the first class who are inquiring into the offence and any District Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or with the sanction of the District Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, having jurisdiction in that place where the offence might be inquired into or tried.

(e) The power to tender a pardon should be exercisable during an investigation as well as after a magisterial inquiry has begun.

(f) We have deleted the words "other than a Presidency Magistrate." We see no reason why Presidency Magistrates should not record their reasons for tendering a pardon.

(g) We do not agree with the Committee of 1916 that it should not be necessary to produce as a witness in the Sessions Court an accused person who has accepted a pardon.

(h) We think all cases in which there is an approver should be committed for trial, and we have deleted the provision which enabled cases to be transferred to s. 30, "Magistrates."

The charges between the old and the new section are clearly brought out in the Sel. Com. Report quoted above.

Notes—1. Scope of the section.—The procedure laid down in this section is an important exception to the general rule that the statement of an offender is not to be taken as evidence against his co-accused unless he incurs the same risk as those jointly accused with him, by inculcating himself. With a view to see that grave offences do not go unpunished, the Legislature has introduced this exception, but confined its operation to cases mentioned in the section. In rendering a pardon, the Magistrate should make an offer to the one least guilty among the several accused. See the observations of TURNER, OFFG C J, in 1 A. 664 as to the necessity of tendering pardon to an accomplice in certain cases.

2. For the History of the section, see Note (1) to s. 339.

IN RESPECT OF WHAT OFFENCES PARDON MAY BE TENDERED.

3. 'Offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session.'—The words mean an offence shown in the Schedule so triable, and an offence is none the less so because an accused person charged under s. 395, I P C, has a pardon granted to him under the orders of a District Judge empowered under s. 30 and is subsequently tried and convicted by the District Magistrate so empowered, 3 P. R. 1897. See also 10 C. W. N. 847 = 4 Cr. L. J. 44; 25 M. 61.

4. That other offences triable by Magistrates are jointly charged, will not invalidate a pardon when the case as a whole is a sessions case.—All that ss. 337 and 338 require is that there should be an offence that is triable exclusively by the Sessions Court, under inquiry or trial, and the fact that there may be other offences alleged or charged, which are not so triable is immaterial and will not invalidate a pardon granted in respect of the offence exclusively triable by the Sessions Court, 9 S. L. R. 43 = 16 Cr. L. J. 832. Where a Magistrate is inquiring into an offence exclusively triable by a Court of Session along with one not so triable, pardon can be granted under s. 337, 11 P. W. R. 1915 = 17 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 334.

5. Under the old section pardon can only be granted in an inquiry, but under the new amendment the power to tender a pardon is exercisable during an investigation as well as after the magisterial inquiry has begun. So that the difference in the meaning of an investigation and inquiry under the Code is no longer important. The ruling in 49 B. 61, has become obsolete under the present section. See also 3 Lah. 431.

WHO MAY TENDER PARDON.

6. Tender of pardon by Magistrate of another district.—It is essential that the Magistrate tendering pardon, must be one before whom the inquiry is held. Tender of pardon by the District Magistrate of E in respect of offences regarding which inquiry was being held in the district of A before another Magistrate is illegal, consequently such tender cannot be pleaded in bar of trial, and sentence passed against the person to whom tender was so made is good, 20 A. 40. Section 529 cannot cure such excess of jurisdiction.

7. Tender of pardon by unauthorized Magistrate and its acceptance in good faith.—When a pardon has been tendered and accepted in good faith, the fact that the Magistrate had no power to tender such pardon is a defect expressly cured by s. 529 (c), 1 P. R. 1898; 20 A. 40. So also where a pardon is granted with the oral sanction of a District Magistrate, the tender of pardon though irregular is legal, 5 A. L. J. 691 = 1908 A. W. N. 259 = 8 Cr. L. J. 443. See also 10 C. 936.

8. Government not competent to tender a conditional pardon under this section.—The Local Government has no power to tender a conditional pardon to an accused person within the meaning of this and the next section, and the evidence of an accused taken under a conditional pardon so offered, is wholly inadmissible, 10 C. W. N. 847 = 4 Cr. L. J. 44; 33 C. 1353. In 9 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 282, it was held that an accused person whom the Local Government had promised not to prosecute in respect of an offence to which this section does not apply is a competent witness against his accomplices provided the promise not to prosecute was given and accepted before commencement of trial. An accomplice to whom the Local Government has made a promise not to prosecute and by whom the promise had been accepted after the commencement of the trial, is not a competent witness. Such a grant of pardon does not alter the position of the accomplice as an accused person or make him cease to be an accused person so as to enable him to depose on oath.

TO WHOM PARDON MAY BE TENDERED.

9. Persons supposed to have been concerned.—The word 'supposed' in this section and the next, must be taken merely as intended to exclude the case of a man who has actually been convicted of the crime, and not the case of a man who, although admitted to be a party to the crime, is unconvicted, 7 A. 160 at p. 163. A tender of pardon to a person who had already pleaded guilty but who had not been sentenced on his plea is not illegal though he may no longer be regarded as a suspected offender, see 25 M. 81 (P.C.)

PROCEDURE.

10. Magistrate to explain that pardon is conditional.—The Court should, when it tenders a pardon to a person, explain to him the conditions which accompany the tender. If he refuses, the trial will proceed as if no such tender had been made. If he accepts it is the duty of the Court to examine him as a witness in the case and then, if the Court be of opinion that he had not complied with the conditions the Court may commit him or direct him to be committed for trial upon the charge in respect of which the pardon was tendered 4 B. L. R. Appx L = 12 W. R. 80.

11. Improper condition attached to pardon—temptation to strain the truth.—Pardon was tendered to one of three persons accused of murder coupled with the condition that he should profess to have been present when the death occurred and to have personal knowledge of the circumstances under which the alleged offence occurred, held, such a condition could not be attached to a tender of pardon, as the only condition which the law allows is that stated in this section. The law should be so worked that the temptation to the accomplice to strain the truth should be as slight as possible, Ratanlal 612. See 12 C. L. R. 226, as to breach of condition.

12. Sub-section (2)—Approver shall be examined as a witness in the case (old Section).—The words "in the case" in sub-sec. (2) include a preliminary inquiry and do not refer to the trial alone. Where, therefore, a person to whom a conditional pardon had been tendered gave false evidence at the preliminary inquiry and was therefore not called as a witness by the prosecution at the Sessions trial and subsequently the pardon having been withdrawn he was charged and stood committed, held that the commitment was legal as the prosecution was not bound to put him forward as a witness at the Sessions trial if they believed that he would give false evidence, 24 M. 321 which approves of 20 A. 529; 42 C. 836. Even where the approver before the committing Magistrate first makes a full and true disclosure and subsequently resiles from his statements he need not be examined in the Sessions Court, 33 M. 514; 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33; 41 P. R. 1905 = 153 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 55 (F.B.) overruling 4 P. R. 1903; 4 U. B. R. Cr. P. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 245; 17 F. W. R. 10; 16 C. L. examined in the Sessions Court on the ground that he may prove an untrustworthy witness.

The approver must, however, be examined as under sub-sec. (2) and then dealt with under s. 339 if necessary, after the trial of the other accused is over, 31 M. 272.

13. Sub-section (3)—Approver to be detained in custody till termination of trial and no longer.—(a) Approver must be discharged after trial.—In 30 B. 611, BRAMAN, J., was of opinion, that the approver must be discharged immediately the trial is over. It is not for the Judges of the Sessions or the High Court to exercise a discretion in the matter, and to say that they will detain him in order that the further proceedings may be taken against him. But ANTON, J., was of opinion that if a Sessions Judge was of opinion that the pardon had become forfeited he may also have authority to order the pardoned accomplice to be remanded in custody until the proper authority has had reasonable time to decide whether further proceedings are to be taken against him. Opinion of BEAMAN, J., was followed in 11 M. L. R. 59 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417. See also 37 A. 331.

(b) Does this sub-section imply that the approver cannot be committed along with the others?—Every person accepting pardon under this section must be examined as a witness in the case and if not on bail, should be detained in custody until the termination of trial by the Court of Session of the other accused. Therefore nothing should be done against such person, i.e., the approver, till after the case in the Court of Session has been finished, and his trial should commence de novo if it be deemed necessary to take proceedings against him, 23 B. 493 approved in 24 M. 321; 31 M. 273; 14 A. 502; 4 U. B. R. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 243. But see Notes 8 and 9 under s. 339 and also 4 U. B. R. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 345.

14. Sub-section (4) old section—Magistrates bound to state reasons for grant of pardon. This is now included in the new sub-section (1-A).—This section requires a Magistrate who tenders a conditional pardon to record his reasons for so doing. Where, however, the facts which led up to the tender appear on the record, the omission to state reasons is, not only not an illegality but not even an irregularity which vitiates the proceedings, 5 C. L. J. 224 = 5 Cr. L. J. 162 followed in 35 G. 629. The recording of his reason is not a condition precedent to the tender of the pardon and its acceptance by the approver and the pardon cannot be set aside because the reasons are not recorded, 13 Cr. L. J. 583 (A.).

15. Scope of sub-section (4) old section—Pardon-tendering Magistrate not competent to try the case—i.e., as falling under a section other than that under which he originally supposed it to fall, before he tendered the pardon. Sub-section (4) refers to a stage after inquiry, while sub-sec. (1) contemplates the case as it stood before the commencement of the inquiry, viz., an offence exclusively triable by the Court of Session or the High Court. The provisions of this section must be construed strictly, and disqualification created by the last paragraph applies only to that Magistrate before whom the suspected person is brought face to face, and who attempts to induce him by promise of pardon to make a full and true disclosure. Such Magistrate to a certain extent assumes the functions of a Police-officer and identifies himself with the prosecution, and it was doubtless on that account that it was considered proper to disqualify him from trying the case. As regards the examination, there is a distinction between the examination of approver made by a pardon-tendering Magistrate and that made by another Magistrate.

which the disclosure made by the approver shows that only a minor offence had been committed, 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33. When a Deputy Commissioner tries a case exclusively triable by the Court of the Sessions under powers conferred by s. 30 he does so as a Magistrate and if he tenders a pardon he is precluded from trying the case, 10 C. W. N. 847 = 4 Cr. L. J. 44. But the latter part of old sub-section (4) imposing a restriction on the competency of a pardon-tendering Magistrate is omitted now.

16. English practice—tendering pardon.—The evidence of an accomplice is now secured by one of the following methods—(1) By special proclamation pardon is sometimes promised upon certain conditions. Accomplices within this class have a right of pardon. (2) By admitting accomplices to give evidence for the Crown, under an implied promise of pardon, on condition of their making a full and fair confession of the truth. On a strict and ample performance of this condition to the satisfaction of Judge presiding at the trial they have an equitable title to a recommendation for the King's mercy. They cannot plead this in bar to an indictment against them, nor can they avail themselves of it as a defence on their trial though it may be made the ground of a motion for postponing the trial, to give the prisoner time for an application in another quarter, and if an accomplice after being received as a witness against his companions breaks the conditions on which he is admitted, and refuses to give full and fair information he will be sent to trial to answer for his share of guilt in the transaction. Russell on Crimes, pp. 2283 and 2284. See also 32 M. 173 at p. 175.

ACCOMPLICES AND THEIR EVIDENCE.

17. Who is an accomplice?—An accomplice is one who confesses himself a criminal. No man ought to be treated as an accomplice on mere suspicion unless he confesses that he had a conscious hand in the crime or he makes admission of such facts which show that he had such a hand, 11 Bom. L. R. 1153 = 10 Cr. L. J. 530; 27 M. 271. A prosecution witness, against whom there is apart from his own statement, ground for suspicion that he was himself a participator in the very crime for which the accused are on their trial, though strictly speaking not an accomplice, stands practically on the same basis as an accomplice, 15 Cr. L. J. 410 (A.). Spies and informers, who, with a view of laying a trap for a suspected person, suggest to him the commission of an

8. Government not competent to tender a conditional pardon under this section.—The Local Government has no power to tender a conditional pardon to an accused person within the meaning of this and the next section, and the evidence of an accused taken under a conditional pardon so offered, is wholly inadmissible. 10 C. W. N. 847 = 4 Cr. L. J. 44; 33 C. 1353 In 9 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 282, it was held that an accused person whom the Local Government had promised not to prosecute in respect of an offence to which this section does not apply is a competent witness against his accomplices provided the promise not to prosecute was given and accepted before commencement of trial. An accomplice to whom the Local Government has made a promise not to prosecute and by whom the promise had been accepted after the commencement of the trial, is not a competent witness. Such a grant of pardon does not alter the position of the accomplice as an accused person, or make him cease to be an accused person so as to enable him to depose on oath.

TO WHOM PARDON MAY BE TENDERED.

9. Persons supposed to have been concerned.—The word 'supposed' in this section and the next, must be taken merely as intended to exclude the case of a man who has actually been convicted of the crime and not the case of a man who, although admitted to be a party to the crime, is unconvicted. 7 A. 160 at p. 183. A tender of pardon to a person who had already pleaded guilty but who had not been sentenced on his plea is not illegal though he may no longer be regarded as a suspected offender, see 25 M. 61 (P.C.)

PROCEDURE.

10. Magistrate to explain that pardon is conditional.—The Court should, when it tenders a pardon to a person, explain to him the conditions which accompany the tender. If he refuses, the trial will proceed as if no such tender had been made. If he accepts it is the duty of the Court to examine him as a witness in the case and then, if the Court be of opinion that he had not complied with the conditions the Court may commit him or direct him to be committed for trial upon the charge in respect of which the pardon was tendered. 5 B. L. R. Appx. L = 12 W. R. 80

11. Improper condition attached to pardon—temptation to strain the truth.—Pardon was tendered to one of three persons accused of murder coupled with the condition that he should 'profess' to have been present when the death occurred and to have personal knowledge of the circumstances under which the alleged offence occurred, held, such a condition could not be attached to a tender of pardon, as the only condition which the law allows is that stated in this section. The law should be so worked that the temptation to the accomplice to strain the truth should be as slight as possible, Ratanlal 612. See 12 C. L. R. 226, as to breach of condition.

12. Sub-section (2)—Approver shall be examined as a witness in the case (old Section).—The words 'in the case' in sub-sec. (2) include a preliminary inquiry and do not refer to the trial alone. Where, therefore a person to whom a conditional pardon had been tendered gave false evidence at the preliminary inquiry and was therefore not called as a witness by the prosecution at the Sessions trial and subsequently the pardon having been withdrawn he was charged and stood committed, held, that the commitment was legal as the prosecution was not bound to put him forward as a witness at the Sessions trial if they believed that he would give false evidence, 24 M. 321 which approves 20 A. 629; 42 C. 856. Even where the approver before the committing Magistrate first makes a full and true disclosure and subsequently resiles from his statements he need not be examined in the Sessions Court, 33 M. 514; 58 L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33; 41 P. R. 1905 = 153 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 85 (F.B.) overruling 4 P. R. 1903; 4 U. B. R. Cr. P. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 245, 17 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 64; 25 B. 675; 11 A. 79, 42 C. 685; 11 N. L. R. 59 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417, and see Note 8 under s. 339. But see the new amendment of sub-section (2) under which the approver must be examined as a witness in the subsequent trial and it is not left now to the discretion of the Magistrate to withhold him from being examined in the Sessions Court on the ground that he may prove an untrustworthy witness.

The approver must, however, be examined as under sub-sec. (2) and then dealt with under s. 339 if necessary, after the trial of the other accused is over, 31 M. 272.

13. Sub-section (3)—Approver to be detained in custody till termination of trial and no longer—(a) Approver must be discharged after trial.—In 30 B. 611, BEAMAN, J., was of opinion, that the approver must be discharged immediately the trial is over. 'It is not for the Judges of the Sessions or the High Court to exercise a discretion in the matter, and to say that they will detain him in order that the further proceedings may be taken against him.' But ASTON, J., was of opinion that if a Sessions Judge was of opinion that the pardon had become forfeited he may also have authority to order the pardoned accomplice to be remanded in custody until the proper authority has had reasonable time to decide whether further proceedings are to be taken against him. Opinion of BEAMAN, J., was followed in 11 N. L. R. 69 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417. See also 37 A. 331.

(b) Does this sub-section imply that the approver cannot be committed along with the others?—Every person accepting pardon under this section must be examined as a witness in the case and if not on bail, should be detained in custody until the termination of trial by the Court of Session of the other accused. Therefore nothing should be done against such person, i.e., the approver, till after the case in the Court of Session has been finished, and his trial should commence de novo if it be deemed necessary to take proceedings against him, 23 B. 493 approved in 24 M. 321; 31 M. 272, 14 A. 502; 4 U. B. R. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 243. But see Notes 8 and 9 under s. 339 and also 4 U. B. R. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 245.

14. Sub-section (4) old section—Magistrates bound to state reasons for grant of pardon. This is now included in the new sub-section (1-A).—This section requires a Magistrate who tenders a conditional pardon to record his reasons for so doing. Where, however, the facts which led up to the tender appear on the record, the omission to state reasons is, not only not an illegality but not even an irregularity which vitiates the proceedings, 5 C. L. J. 224 = 5 Cr. L. J. 142 followed in 38 C. 629. The recording of his reason is not a condition precedent to the tender of the pardon and its acceptance by the approver and the pardon cannot be set aside because the reasons are not recorded, 13 Cr. L. J. 888 (A.).

15. Scope of sub-section (5) old section—Pardon-tendering Magistrate not competent to try the case.—Id., as falling under a section other than that under which he originally supposed it to fall, before he tendered the pardon. Sub-section (4) refers to a stage after inquiry, while sub-sec. (1) contemplates the case as it stood before the commencement of the inquiry, viz., an offence exclusively triable by the Court of Session or the High Court. The provisions of this section must be construed strictly, and disqualification created by the last paragraph applies only to that Magistrate before whom the suspected person is brought face to face, and who attempts to induce him by promise of pardon to make a full and true disclosure. Such Magistrate to a certain extent assumes the functions of a Police-officer and identifies himself with the prosecution, and it was doubtless on that account that it was considered proper to disqualify him from trying the case. As regards the examination, there is a distinction between the examination of approver made by a pardon-tendering Magistrate and that made by another Magistrate in the course of a trial, and the restriction in the last paragraph does not apply to the latter Magistrate. The examination referred to in the last paragraph appears to be one made on the tender of pardon and directly resulting from it, 8 P. R. 1898. Sub-section (4) refers only to those cases in which the disclosure made by the approver shows that only a minor offence had been committed, 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33. When a Deputy Commissioner tries a case exclusively triable by the Court of the Sessions under powers conferred by s. 30 he does so as a Magistrate and if he tenders a pardon he is precluded from trying the case, 10 C. W. N. 867 = 4 Cr. L. J. 41. But the latter part of old sub-section (4) imposing a restriction on the competency of a pardon tendering Magistrate is omitted now.

(2) By admitting accomplices to give evidence for the Crown, under an implied promise of pardon, on condition of their making a full and fair confession of the truth. On a strict and ample performance of this condition to the satisfaction of Judge presiding at the trial they have an equitable title to a recommendation for the King's mercy. They cannot plead this in bar to an indictment against them, nor can they avail themselves of it as a defence on their trial though it may be made the ground of a motion for postponing the trial, to give the prisoner time for an application in another quarter, and if an accomplice after being received as a witness against his companions breaks the conditions on which he is admitted, and refuses to give full and fair information he will be sent to trial to answer for his share of guilt in the transaction. Russell on Crimes, pp. 2283 and 2284. See also 32 M. 173 at p. 175.

ACCOMPLICES AND THEIR EVIDENCE.

17. Who is an accomplice?—An accomplice is one who confesses himself a criminal. No man ought to be treated as an accomplice on mere suspicion unless he confesses that he had a conscious hand in the crime or he makes admission of such facts which show that he had such a hand, 11 Bom. L. R. 1153 = 10 Cr. L. J. 530; 37 M. 271. A prosecution witness, against whom there is, apart from his own statement, ground for suspicion that he was himself a participator in the very crime for which the accused are on their trial, though strictly speaking not an accomplice, stands practically on the same basis as an accomplice, 15 Cr. L. J. 410 (A.). Spies and informers, who, with a view of laying a trap for a suspected person, suggest to him the commission of an offence and supply him with the means for committing it are themselves abettors of the offence and accomplices. Persons who believing that an offence is about to be committed, lie in wait till it has been committed for the purpose of apprehending the prisoner or who supply marked money for the purpose of furnishing evidence against him are not accomplices, 19 B 363. Witnesses who admit that they were cognizant of the crime that they made no attempt to prevent it, that they did not disclose its commission are not necessarily accomplices, but their evidence ought to be treated with suspicion and only relied on to the same extent as that of accomplices 24 W. R. 55; 21 C. 328, 23 C. 361, 27 C. 144 and 20 W. R. 19. Persons who assist in concealing a crime already committed e.g. removing and concealing the dead body of a murdered person are not accomplices in the offence of murder, 27 M. 271, but see 23 C. 361. A mere detective or decoy is not therefore an accomplice nor an original confederate who betrays before the crime was committed, 16 C. W. N. 1105 = 15 C. L. J. 517. Nor does it include persons who have acted with the accused with a view to aid justice by detecting crime. R v Mullins 3 Cox 526 followed R v Bickley, 2 Cr. App. R. 53 = 73 J. P. 239.

18. Every accomplice a competent witness, if not on his trial.—See s. 133 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. There is no law or principle which prevents a person who has been suspected and discharged for want of evidence, being afterwards admitted as a witness for the prosecution without a pardon which, if offered, he would probably have rejected, for it would have ruined him, nor is it necessary that he should have been acquitted for on the evidence against him he could not have been properly committed for trial, 7 W. R. 44. See also 4 L. B. R. 362 = 9 C. L. J. 370, where it was held that the evidence of a person discharged under s. 209 (2) is admissible whether his discharge was legal or not. Also abettors of a crime are accomplices and must be looked upon as such, if they are produced as witnesses against the principal offenders. If they are not themselves under criminal charge, their evidence is admissible. See 14 P. 112 = 1 L. 120. If a person has been merely accused, he is a competent witness, 10 C. L. R. 553. In 10 C. 936, the evidence of a person to whom pardon was illegally tendered was admitted. See also 16 B. 661. Where persons accused of the same offence were being separately tried, each is a competent witness in the trial of the other, without resort being had to this section, 23 B. 213; U. B. B. (1906) Ev. 3 = 5 Cr. L. J. 200, 21 A. L. J. 42.

19. Evidence of accused illegally pardoned is not relevant.—It is not competent to a Magistrate to convert an accused person into a witness except when a pardon has been lawfully granted under this section. Evidence given by such a person who had received a pardon in the case of an offence not exclusively triable by the Court or Session, is not relevant, that person not having been acquitted, or discharged, or convicted, 1 B. 610 followed in 10 B. 190; 2 A. 260; 1882 A. W. N. 240; Ratanlal 461 and 224, 3 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 59; 3 P. R. 1897; 10 C. 936, 6 W. R. 94; 10 C. L. R. 553, 12 P. R. 1902, 21 P. R. 1904; 9 P. R. 1906. In 25 M 61, two persons were jointly committed to the High Court on charges for offences not triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court, one of them pleaded guilty and his plea was recorded and the Judge purporting to act under this section, tendered him a pardon. He was then removed from the dock and examined as a witness for the prosecution in the trial against the other accused. At the end of the trial, the conditional pardon was declared forfeited and the approver was convicted and sentenced on his previous plea of 'guilty', held (DAVIES J., dissenting) that though the tender of pardon was illegal, the approver was a competent witness to whom an oath could be lawfully administered, as when he gave evidence he was not in charge of the jury and no issue remained to be tried as between him and the Crown. Cf 18 C. W. N. 1213 = 15 Cr. L. J. 893. But see 15 C. W. N. 552 = 10 Cr. L. J. 434.

20. Effect of tender of pardon or promise of non-prosecution by Government.—A person who has accepted a pardon from Government can be examined as a witness, provided that no proceedings are being taken against him, or, if any have been taken, he has been convicted, acquitted or discharged, but then his evidence may be no better than that of an accomplice and as such will require to be corroborated. If he has been discharged he cannot be kept in 'confinement' while his evidence may be necessary in the trial against the others. He may be examined on oath like any other accomplice who is not accused in the case under trial, but great caution is necessary in admitting and using the evidence of an approver. It not only requires corroboration in material particulars for its use but its evidentiary value depends considerably upon the circumstances under which his evidence was tendered 33 C. 1333. The tender of pardon by the Local Government although of doubtful validity in law can in no way be regarded as an inducement or threat illegally held out to an accused person to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge 5 C. L. J. 224 = 5 Cr. L. J. 142.

21. Difference between tender of conditional pardon and withdrawal under s. 494.—There is a material difference between the position of an accused who has accepted a conditional pardon tendered under this section and that of one the charge against whom has been withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor under s. 494. If the withdrawal is before charge, the accused is discharged, and if after, acquitted, both the discharge and acquittal being unconditional while if the conditional pardon is forfeited he can be tried for the same offence. In 25 B. 422 it was held (WHITWORTH, J. dissenting) that persons discharged under s. 494 were competent witnesses for the prosecution in the very case in which they had been accused. But when the Court purporting to act under s. 494 permitted the withdrawal of the case against an accused, but omitted to record an order of discharge and the accused continued in custody, it was held his position was in no way changed from that of an accused, 33 C. 1333. In 5 C. L. J. 224 = 5 Cr. L. J. 142, however, it was held the evidence of such a person though not formally discharged was admissible. See Notes under s. 494.

22. English practice where it is intended to obtain the evidence of an accomplice in custody and jointly charged.—In all such cases where two persons are joined in the same indictment and it is thought desirable to separate them in their trials in order that the evidence of one may be taken against the other, in order to ensure the greatest possible amount of truthfulness on the part of the person who is giving evidence under such remarkable circumstances, it would be far better that a verdict of not guilty should be taken first, or if the plea of not guilty be withdrawn and a plea of guilty received, that sentence should be passed, in order that the mind of the witness may be free from all corrupt influences which the fear of impending punishment and the desire to obtain immunity at the expense of the prisoner might be otherwise liable to produce. Winser v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 239, 390; R v. Bradlaugh 15 Cox 217. It is a common practice after the indictment has been found and the accused arranged to offer no evidence against the accomplice and on his acquittal to call him for the Crown. Occasionally a Nolle prosequi is entered against the accomplice during the trial and before verdict. If this is done the accomplice becomes a competent witness for the Crown. After the indictment has been found and the accomplice has pleaded guilty he may be called for the prosecution. Russell on Crimes, pp. 223-2285, Archbold, p. 458.

23. Accomplice evidence.—The general rule is that accomplice evidence must be corroborated, 17 Cr. L. J. 220 = 34 In. Ca. 332 (Per) It there are more than one accused, there must be corroboration against each of the accused showing his connection with the offence, 19 P. W. R. 1916, see also 2 P. W. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 107 and 7 P. W. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 97. The question of value to be attached to the statements of approvers must be decided upon the particular and peculiar circumstances of each case, 7 P. W. R. 1916, see also 18 Bom. L. R. 266 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 271. See s. 133 and illustration (b) to s. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. Though there is nothing illegal in a conviction based solely on the evidence of an accomplice, 19 W. R. 43, 1 M. 394, 27 M. 271; 8 A. 306; 9 A. 528; 14 B. 115 and 331; 5 P. R. 1902; 12 O. C. 418 = 11 Cr. L. J. 71; U. B. R. (1914) 3 Qr. 96 = 13 Cr. L. J. 424, 6 S. L. R. 106 = 13 Cr. L. J. 767; 6 S. L. R. 193; 14 Cr. L. J. 179 (Burma), yet it has now become a universal rule of practice not to convict on the uncorroborated testimony of accomplices and it would be an error of law to disregard it, 27 M. 271; 10 B. 319, 9 W. R. 23; 7 Bom. L. R. 969 = 3 Cr. L. J. 33; 12 O. C. 418 = 11 Cr. L. J. 71; 9 M. L. T. 406 = 12 Cr. L. J. 240; 19 P. L. R. 1911; 9 M. L. T. 503 = 12 Cr. L. J. 170; 19 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 182. There is an established practice, founded on the judicial experience of generations which requires corroboration by some untainted evidence and that in a material particular pointing not only to the crime but to the participation of the accused in the crime, 18 C. W. N. 530 = 15 Cr. L. J. 438, 1916 M. W. N. 303 = 15 Cr. L. J. 417. But no rule can be laid down as to the amount of corroboration necessary. It depends upon the nature of the crime, on the extent of the complicity of the accomplice and the nature of the corroborative facts. 25 C. 339; 26 B. 193; 2 Bom. L. R. 611; 23 C. 649; 27 M. 271; 7 Bom. L. R. 969 = 3 Cr. L. J. 33, 35 M. 247. Corroborative evidence must establish the existence of the crime, 1 B. 475 at p. 476 (Note), the identity of each of the accused whom the approver impeaches. 3 Bom. H. C. R. 57, 1 B. 475; 10 B. 319; 1 A. L. J. 110; 8 A. 306 and 509; 10 C. 970; 29 C. 782 and must also establish something that would bring the case home to each prisoner, 25 M. 143; 27 M. 271; 5 W. R. 18; 12 Cr. L. J. 337 (Odhb). 18 C. W. N. 530 = 15 Cr. L. J. 439. Corroboration must proceed from an independent and reliable source, 10 Bom. 319; 21 E. H. C. R. 196; 25 W. R. 43; 10 W. R. 17. Neither evidence of other accomplices, 8 A. 306; 5 W. R. 18, nor the confession of a co-accused, 11 B. H. C. R. 196; 25 W. R. 43, 12 O. C. 418 = 11 Cr. L. J. 71, nor the exact communication in detail of the several statements of the accomplice in the course of a trial, 10 C. 970 is sufficient corroboration. The previous statements of an accomplice can be regarded as corroborative, 35 M. 247, see also 25 B. 357.

As to the duty of the Judge in dealing with accomplice testimony in jury trials, see Notes on 24 Subsequent trial of accomplice for connected offences barred.—A person to whom pardon has been granted by a competent Magistrate may plead that pardon as a bar for the offence or offences under inquiry or for any other offence or which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter. This plea is available in any part of British India irrespective of territorial limits, 11 A. 79. See B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 439 = 5 W. R. 80. A person to whom pardon is tendered and by whom it is accepted, should be examined as a witness in any case arising out of the same circumstance and should not be committed for trial for any other offence arising out of the same circumstances, unless he is found guilty of forfeiture of the pardon tendered. Weir II, 394. See Notes 11 and 13 above.

But where one S made a confession of his complicity in certain dacoities committed in the Etah District and also in a dacoity committed some time previously at Majhauiah. In connection with the Etah dacoities S was tendered pardon, S was subsequently tried and convicted in respect of the Majhauiah dacoity. Held on appeal that there was no reason why the confession made by S in respect of the Majhauiah dacoity should not be put in evidence against him and that apart from the fact that it was not pleaded at the trial, the pardon tendered to S in a totally different case was no bar to his present conviction, 46 A. 236 (11 A. 79 distinguished).

25. Value of retracted statements and confessions.—See 11 O. C. 328 = 8 Cr. L. J. 393, 12 O. C. 418 = 11 Cr. L. J. 71; 5 P. R. 1911 = 91 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 276; 16 C. W. N. 669 = 13 Cr. L. J. 871. Where a retracted statement is uncorroborated by any other evidence whatsoever it is unsafe to act upon it, 16 Cr. L. J. 818 (P.), 30 P. R. 1914 = 50 P. W. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 326; s. 286 and Notes 8, 9 and 18 thereunder. See Notes under Heading VIII to s. 164 at p. 373 and as to the duty of the Judge in injury trials, see Note 46 at p. 805 and Note 61 at p. 810. Evidence given before Magistrate but afterwards retracted should not be accepted in preference to the statement made to the Sessions Court unless there is something to show the truth of the first statement, 27 C. 295. See Notes to s. 286 and 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 103; 21 A. 173; 22 A. 443; 15 M. 352, 22 C. 50; 7 C. L. R. 66, 13 C. L. R. 326, 14 P. R. 1894.

26 Value of statements of approver whose pardon has been forfeited —

(i) For the offence in respect of which he was tendered a pardon —

(a) As against him.—Where the pardon tendered to an approver has been forfeited on the ground that he has committed a breach of the conditions on which it was tendered, a statement made by him to the Magistrate is admissible against him under s. 339 (2) on a subsequent trial for the offence in respect of which the tender was made notwithstanding the fact that he was not examined as a witness in any Court under s. 337 (2), 41 P. R. 1905 (F.B.) overruling 4 P. R. 1903; 14 Bar. L. R. 306 = 7 Cr. L. J. 245. 'It is clear to us that the argument based upon the provisions of s. 24 of Act I of 1872 is not entitled to weight in the present case, cl. (2) of s. 339 was introduced to make it clear that a statement made by a person who accepted an offer of pardon is not governed by s. 24 of the Evidence Act and can be used in evidence against him when that pardon has been forfeited,' 1908 A. W. N. 259 = 8 Cr. L. J. 443, 11 N. L. E. 89 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417. The statement made by an approver under conditional pardon can if that pardon has been forfeited, be used against him for the offence under inquiry or trial when it was tendered or forfeited, or for any other offence connected with the same matter. But it should be proved that he was the person who made the statement, 11 C. 880, but statements made under the promise of pardon are not evidence against the person making them 5 W. R. 83, 1 A. L. J. 110, 1 P. R. 1899. There is no rule of law or practice that the self-incriminating portion of the evidence of an accomplice is unworthy or belief unless corroborated, 6 Bom. L. R. 443, 15 M. 63, but see 27 C. 295; 22 A. 443.

(b) As against the other accused.—In 7 C. L. R. 66, FIELD, J., has expressed a grave doubt whether the deposition of an approver taken before the committing Magistrate might be used as evidence against his accomplices on their trial before the Sessions Court, the condition of the pardon of the approver having been withdrawn, and so also in 13 C. L. R. 326. In 5 M. W. P. H. C. R. 217, it has, however, been held that the evidence is not admissible. In 22 C. 50 it was held that the deposition before the committing Magistrate of the approver who resiled from his statements in the Sessions trial and was then and there put in the dock and tried along with the other accused was inadmissible in evidence, because the co-accused had no opportunity to cross-examine.

PUN JAIL.—The deposition of the approver at the preliminary inquiry is under s. 283, capable of being treated as evidence at the Sessions trial, if the approver is produced and examined as a witness, 14 P. R. 1894. See also 26 P. R. 1902; but a statement made by the approver before commitment in the absence of the accused is not admissible, 3 P. R. 1904, see also 9 P. R. 1905.

ALLAHABAD—The deposition of a pardoned approver before the committing Magistrate is admissible in evidence under s. 288 at the Sessions trial if he is examined as witness even though he should retract his previous statements, 21 A. 175. But the use of such a deposition as substantial evidence of the facts therein stated is fraught with the gravest peril and could never have been the intention of the Legislature, 22 A. 445.

MADRAS—The previous deposition is admissible under s. 288 15 M. 352.

(ii) For the offence of perjury—Section 339 (2) does not by implication forbid the use of the statements against the approver when he is tried for perjury, 5 B. L. R. 174 = 13 Cr. L. J. 33. Such a statement may be used as the basis of a charge for perjury 1 B. 510 and 2 A. 260 refer only to the evidence of an approver illegally pardoned.

27 Approver's evidence admissible in civil case against him.—The confession and sworn evidence of an approver in a criminal trial for dacoity are admissible in evidence against him in a suit for damages brought against him by the complainant for having instigated the dacoity. The Civil Courts can act on such statements even though the Sessions Judge did not think it safe to convict the accused upon such statements, 13 C. W. N. 501.

28 Accomplice evidence is admissible though the accomplice is not pardoned under s. 337 of the Code.—It is not necessary, in order to make an accomplice a competent witness that the procedure prescribed by s. 337 of the Code should be invariably made use of, 45 A. 226.

338. At any time after commitment, but before judgment is passed, the Court to which the commitment is made may, with the view of obtaining on the trial the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, any such offence, tender, or order the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender, a pardon on the same condition to such person

Notes.—1. When pardon under this section may be tendered?—7 W. R. 78 (114) being superseded a Sessions Judge is now competent, before trial, to direct a Magistrate to tender pardon under this section.

The words 'after commitment' and 'before judgment' show that pardon under this section may be tendered not only during trial, but also before trial. But in an assessor case after the case for the prosecution was closed, the defence heard and the opinion of the assessors given, the tender of pardon was held to be irregular though not positively illegal, 1884 A. W. N. 167.

will be disposed to allow him to be admitted as a witness. Where there were several persons committed as principals, and several as receivers, but no corroboration could be given as to the receivers, against whom the evidence of the accomplice was required, permission was refused to allow one of the principals to become a witness, Russell on Crimes, p. 2284.

committed is "not triable exclusively by the Court of Session 10 G. 936; 25 M. 61 (P.C.). But the fact that he is charged with other offences not exclusively triable by the Court of Session is immaterial, 9 B. L. R. 43 = 16 Cr. L. J. 632.

4 Tender of pardon to accused person who has pleaded guilty.—A Court of Session, under this section, tendered a pardon to an accused person, charged jointly with two others for the same offence, who had pleaded guilty. The tender was accepted and such person was examined as a witness against the other accused. Held that the tender of pardon was not improperly made, and the evidence of the approver was admissible though the evidence of the pardoned accomplice, taken with the statements of unpardoned co-prisoners is not sufficient by itself to warrant the conviction of those who never confessed 7 A. 180 followed in Ratanlal 750; 25 M. 61. There is no ground for the suggestion that the words 'any person' in this section do not cover an accused person before the Sessions Judge, 9 B. L. R. 43 = 16 Cr. L. J. 632.

5. "Supposed."—This word must be taken merely as indicating to conclude the case of a man who has actually been convicted of the crime, and not the case of a man, ~~who~~ although admitted to be a party to the crime is unconvicted, 7 A. 180; Ratanlal 750. See 2

6 Magistrate bound to obey the direction of the Sessions Judge—The Magistrate ordered must obey the direction and tender pardon to the approver though he may be of opinion that the evidence already on record may be sufficient for conviction. He need not apply for the sanction of the District Magistrate. Under this section only a Magistrate can be so ordered and not a Police-officer, 6 W R. (Cr. Let.) 5

7 Local Government cannot tender pardon—A Local Government cannot tender a pardon either under this section or s 337 but it is open to the Local Government to withdraw the prosecution under s. 494 33 C. 1353, 10 C W N 847 = 4 Cr. L J 44 and see Notes 8 and 21 to s 337 and Notes to s. 494

8 Power of Magistrate acting under s. 30—If a Deputy Commissioner acting under powers conferred upon him by s 30 tenders a conditional pardon in a case exclusively triable by the Court of Session he is precluded from trying the case himself 10 C W N, 847 = 4 Cr. L J 44 See Notes 15 to s 337

9 Procedure when the pardoned approver forfeits his pardon—See Notes 8 and 9 under s 339 and see also Note 13 under s 337

339. (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under section 337 or section 338 and the Public Prosecutor certifies that in his opinion

any person who has accepted such tender has either by wilfully concealing anything essential or by giving false evidence not complied with the condition on which the tender was made and such person may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter

Provided that such person shall not be tried jointly with any of the other accused and that he shall be entitled to plead at such trial that he has complied with the conditions upon which such tender was made in which case it shall be for the prosecution to prove that such conditions have not been complied with

(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him § at such trial

(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section the Select Committee say—

We accept clause 86 so far as it goes except that we would substitute a certificate by the Public Prosecutor for an allegation by the prosecution as the basis of the prosecution of a person who has accepted a tender of pardon. We consider however that it is desirable to lay down some procedure with regard to the plea contemplated by the proviso to sub-section (1). The Bill contains no indication as to when this plea is to be raised and what is to be the effect of it and difficulties of procedure may obviously arise with reference to sections 255 271 (2) and 272. We therefore propose a new section to be added after section 339 which lays down that when a person to whom a pardon is tendered is being tried under that section, he shall at the commencement of the proceedings be asked whether he raises the plea that he has complied with the conditions on which the pardon was granted and if he does so plead the Court shall record a finding on the point and if it finds that the conditions have been complied with shall acquit the accused. This provision we have inserted as a new clause 86 A in the Bill (s 339-A).

Notes—1. History of the section.—Tender of pardon was dealt with by ss. 209 and 211 of the Code of 1861 s. 211 empowered the Court of Session at the time of trial and also the Sudder Court as a Court of reference if of opinion that a person who had accepted an offer of pardon had not conformed to the conditions under which it was tendered to order his commitment. Amending Act VIII of 1869 substituted a new section 211 empowering the Magistrate before the committal the Court of Session during trial or the High Court as a Court of reference to order the committal. The next Code Act X of 1872 s. 349 conferred the like power and

* These words in inverted commas inserted by Act XVIII of 1923

† These words in inverted commas were substituted for the words he may be by Act XVIII of 1923

‡ The proviso (1) was added by Act XVIII of 1923

§ These words in inverted commas were substituted for the words when the pardon has been forfeited under this section by Act XVIII of 1923 contained this further provision "the statement made by a person under pardon which has been withdrawn under this section may be put in evidence against him"

The next Code, Act X of 1882, no longer empowered Magistrates Sessions Judges and High Courts to commit if it appeared to them that the conditions of the pardon had not been kept and enacted the section 339 with the word withdrawn instead of the word forfeited in sub-sec. (2). The Code of 1898 amended the section by substituting the word "forfeited" for the word "withdrawn," 32 M. 173; 15 M. 352.

No limitation was fixed by the section in the Code of 1898, unlike s. 249 of the 1872 Code as to the time when a pardon may be withdrawn 8 C. 560 = 10 C. L. R. 369.

Now the changes introduced under the new amendment are the following —

1 Under the present section a certificate by the Public Prosecutor to the effect that the person accepting tender of pardon has in his opinion committed a breach of the condition of the tender or pardon is made the sole basis of a prosecution of the approver

2 From the above change it follows as a corollary that no formal determination as to a withdrawal or forfeiture of pardon by the trying Court is now necessary for the approver's prosecution; but the certificate of the Public Prosecutor is enough

3 In consonance with the above change it may be noted that the words "when the pardon has been forfeited under this section" have been omitted from cl (2) of the present section

4 It is now expressly provided by the proviso to cl (1) that an approver cannot be jointly tried along with any of the other accused.

1-A. The necessity of the certificate of Public Prosecutor for the prosecution of an approver.—Under s. 339 of the Code, the certificate of the Public Prosecutor is a condition precedent to the prosecution of an approver to whom a tender of pardon has been made but who has failed to comply with the condition of the tender 26 Bom. L. R. 1240, 5 Lah. 379

2. Formal withdrawal or forfeiture of pardon.—Under the present section for the reasons above noted, in Note 1, supra, no question can now arise as to a formal withdrawal of the tender of pardon before an approver can be prosecuted. So the cases holding that a formal withdrawal is unnecessary are of pure academic interest (See 25 B. 675; 42 C. 826, 786; 30 B. 611; 32 M. 173; 39 A. 305)

3. What Court to decide whether pardon has been forfeited.—Under the new amendment a formal withdrawal or forfeiture of pardon is dispensed with, the Court that tries the approver upon the certificate of the Public Prosecutor has to try the issue whether the pardon is forfeited or not on the accused raising the plea that he has complied with the conditions of the pardon. The procedure to be followed in such cases is described in the new section 339-A.

4 Approver must make full disclosure throughout—utmost good faith must be observed by both sides.—The transaction is one of the utmost good faith and the approver commits a breach of the condition if he fails to make a full and true disclosure throughout. It is not enough for him to make such disclosure before the committing Magistrate if he withdraws it in the Sessions Court, or to make it when examined in chief, if he withdraws it in cross-examination 24 M. 321, approved in 32 M. 173. It has nowhere been laid down that if a witness first makes a full and true disclosure, he is then at liberty to contradict his statement or deny its truth without any fear of forfeiting his pardon, 33 M. 814; 11 N. L. R. 59 = 15 Cr. L. J. 417; 42 C. 856. When a pardon has been tendered and accepted, the fullest faith must be kept by both sides. No matter what degree of guilt might be admitted by the pardoned criminal he must go free provided he makes a full, fair and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances, within his knowledge relative to the commission of the crime, 13 C. L. R. 228. Where a pardon granted under s. 337 to an approver witness, was declared forfeited by the Sessions Judge before the hearing of the whole of the evidence, without proof that the statement made by the person pardoned was inconsistent, except upon most immaterial points, with previous statement made by him, or contradicted by the evidence and before any evidence affecting his veracity had been given and where it was found by the High Court that the whole of the evidence showed that the crimes were committed in all probability exactly as he said they were, that there was absolutely no evidence that his part in the crime was either greater or less than what he had stated it to have been and that there were the Local Government with a recommendation that the appellant should be pardoned on the ground that he had conformed to the conditions on which the original pardon was granted to him, 12 C. L. R. 226; 29 A. 11. Approver forfeits his pardon if while giving evidence against some accused he screens one, 24 P. R. 1918 (Cr. 1).

5. Mere failure of approver's evidence to convict co-accused is not sufficient to forfeit pardon.—The words "a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences directly under inquiry" refer to the importance when a pardon is tendered, of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how pardon protects him and what portion of it should not protect him ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit, 11 A. 79. It is a matter of great importance, which cannot be too emphatically insisted upon, that the strictest faith should be kept with a person to whom an offer of pardon has been made and by whom it has been accepted under the Code, even though the statement made by him under the pardon tendered may reveal himself to be one of the vilest of criminals. The mere failure of his evidence to procure conviction of his alleged associates in crime is plainly insufficient in itself to justify a summary order for the withdrawal of the pardon and trial of the deponent. Where the same story is consistently adhered to in both the Courts, and only fails to procure a conviction for want of corroboration, the mere suspicion that the approver has given false evidence is plainly insufficient to justify the enforcement of the provisions of this section, and some definite evidence to show wilful concealment or the giving of false evidence should be required before the commitment of the approver for trial is considered justifiable, 15 P. R. 1895, 7 L. B. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 401. Absconding before conclusion of cross-examination does not amount to wilful concealment, 17 Cr. L. J. 391.

6. Opinion of Court directing prosecution as to non-compliance with the condition of tender is not conclusive of the fact.—A mere order by the Court before which an accomplice gives evidence that he be prosecuted for not complying with the condition of his tender does not preclude the trying Court inquiring into the question of fact involved in his plea of not guilty. The opinion of the Court directing the prosecution that the person has not complied with the condition of the tender even if relevant, cannot be conclusive especially when the order is made, as in practice may occur, without the accused having any opportunity of showing cause against the order, 8 P. R. 1889 followed in 15 P. R. 1895. The mere expression of opinion by the Sessions Judge is not enough. The approver should be given an opportunity of meeting the allegation that he has failed to make the full and true disclosure required by s. 337. The proper course is to draw up an order setting forth specifically the alleged breach and to call upon the approver to show cause why he should not be tried for the main offence as provided in s. 339. On the date fixed for the hearing unless the approver admits the alleged breach of the condition, the Magistrate or Judge should hear the evidence relied upon as establishing the breach and any rebutting evidence which the approver may offer, and should then record a definite finding as to whether there has been a breach or not. A definite finding arrived at in this manner is essential before the approver can be placed on his trial for the original offence, 7 L. B. R. 1 = 16 Cr. L. J. 401. See also 11 N. L. R. 95 = 16 Cr. L. J. 411. It should be noted that under the present section the certificate of the Public Prosecutor has been made the sole basis for the prosecution of an approver. And under s. 339-A it is provided that the trying Court must ask the approver whether he pleads that he has complied with the conditions on which the tender of pardon was made. And if the approver does so plead the Court is bound to record the plea and proceed with the trial and before judgment the Court must give a specific finding whether the approver has complied with the conditions of pardon or not. So it is clear that the opinion of the Court directing prosecution as to non-compliance with the conditions of the tender is of no value at all legally.

PROSECUTION OF APPROVER

7. Approver forfeiting his pardon during preliminary inquiry—how dealt with.—See sub-sec. (3) to s. 337 and Note 13 thereto. If it turns out that the approver has committed an offence triable by a Magistrate either exclusively by himself or concurrently with the Court of Sessions, the approver may according to circumstances be either tried by the Magistrate himself or committed to the Court of Session or High Court for trial. But if it is an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session, s. 193 provides that there ought to be a commitment and commitment is absolutely necessary in such a case—B H C R. Rul., 17th Feb., 1899. It is only by such commitment that the Sessions Judge or High Court has jurisdiction to hold the trial, 15 M. 352; 22 C. 50; Ratanlal 119.

(a) Generally, nothing should be done against him until after the trial of the other accused is over—MADRAS, BOMBAY AND BURMA. If an approver is considered to have forfeited his pardon during the preliminary investigation nothing should be done against him till after the case against the principal accused in the Court of Session has been finished; and his trial should commence de novo, if it be deemed necessary to take proceedings against him. He should be detained in custody if not on bail till the trial of the other accused in the Sessions Court is over, 23 B. 493; 4 Bom. L. R. 826, 24 M. 321; 4 U. B. R. 7 = 7 Cr. L. J. 245; 5 N. L. R. 134 = 10 Cr. L. J. 418; and it is not desirable that the Magistrate should commit the approver along with the principal accused, 31 M. 272. In 25 B. 675, however, it is stated, that it cannot be laid down as a general rule that a Magistrate who tenders a pardon to an accused has no jurisdiction to commit him before the close of the trial of other accused, since the Legislature by using a general term like 'case' in sub-sec (2) instead of the word 'trial' must have meant to abstain from laying down any such rule. A person examined at the preliminary inquiry may well be said to be examined in the case. It is therefore impossible to lay down any rule applicable to all cases, to determine at what stage it is expedient to commit an accused who has in the opinion of the Magistrate forfeited his pardon. It should be noted that under the present section an approver can be prosecuted only upon the certificate of the Public Prosecutor and it is also provided by the new proviso to sub-sec (1) that he shall not be tried jointly with any of the other accused against whom he has given evidence and the cases cited above are good law only in so far as they decide that as a general rule nothing should be done against him until after the trial of the other accused is over. And so in light of the new amendment the rulings, in 20 A. 329, 29 A. 24; 42 C. 856 are, it is submitted, no longer good law.

8. Approver even if he has given false evidence should be discharged. He cannot be detained in custody after trial.—See 30 B. 611, which was followed in 11 N. L. R. 59 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417, where the impropriety of the Sessions Judge having kept the approver in custody after the termination of the trial was pointed out. See also 37 C. 845.

It is for the Crown to decide whether the approver should be proceeded with for the offence.—At the termination of the trial in which a pardon is given the accomplice may be discharged by the Court. Then, if so advised, the Crown may re-arrest and proceed against him for the offence in respect of which he has been given conditional pardon, 30 B. 611 followed in 37 C. 845.

9. Duty of Court trying an approver who forfeited his pardon.—NB—It should be noted that under the present Code the procedure to be followed in cases, when the tender of pardon is forfeited by an approver, is expressly regulated by section 339-A. And the cases referred to in the following Notes 10 and 11, though prior to the enactment of s. 339-A, embody the same general principles that are laid down in that section. When put on his trial for the offence for which a pardon is granted he may plead to a competent Court his pardon in bar. And that is a plea that the Court would be bound to hear and decide upon before going further and putting him on his defence. In deciding it the Court would raise an issue whether he had or had not made a full and true disclosure of the whole facts and whether after having admittedly done that, he has at a later stage recanted, whether that recantation amounted to giving false evidence within the meaning of this section and worked a forfeiture of pardon, 30 B. 611. It is now held by all the High Courts that it is the first duty of the Court before whom an approver is put up for his trial to decide whether the pardon has been forfeited. See 32 M. 173; 30 B. 611, 42 C. 856; 34 P. R. 1902; 31 P. R. 1904; 11 N. L. R. 59 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417; 7 L. B. R. 1. The contrary view in 37 C. 845, where it was held that in such a case it was for the committing Magistrate to decide that the pardon had been forfeited and if such an opportunity was given to the accused the Court to which he is committed would not have jurisdiction to determine whether pardon was forfeited is no longer correct. The approver is entitled to plead the pardon before the Sessions Judge although he has not done so before the committing Magistrate, 37 A. 331; even when the committing Magistrate decides against the approver, it is open to the approver to raise it at the trial, 42 C. 856 where 37 C. 849 is not followed.

(a) The forfeiture of pardon and the offence of which he is charged may be tried jointly.—The two questions whether he has forfeited the pardon and whether he is or is not guilty of the offence of which he is charged may be heard and tried together. 42 C. 756 where 30 B. 611; 32 M. 173 and 37 C. 845 are followed. It is possible that the evidence on the two issues may overlap and in some cases be practically identical and that seems to be the only argument against trying the question of forfeiture of pardon before calling on the accused to plead to the charge of the offence and where such is the case it might be a reason for the Judge to use his discretion and order the approver to be tried separately from the other accused. See L. LETCHER, J., in 42 C. 856.

(b) The Judge must ask the prisoner whether he relies on the pardon.—Where a pardoned approver is put on his trial, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to ask the prisoner whether he relies on the pardon granted to him and to try the issue whether the pardon has been forfeited. It is not enough that the committing Magistrate has found that the pardon has been forfeited, 16 Cr. L. J. 234 (M.), where 32 M. 173 is followed. See also 7 N. L. R. 65 = 12 Cr. L. J. 326 and 11 N. L. R. 59 = 16 Cr. L. J. 417.

(c) Issue whether pardon has been forfeited should be tried first.—Where a pardon has been tendered and the approver is afterwards put on trial he should be asked if he relies on the pardon and if he says 'yes' which is a plea of pardon. This being done the case is placed on his trial he to an acquittal unless the prosecution proves that he has wilfully concealed material facts or has given false evidence, 1 P. R. 1893; 34 P. R. 1902. See also 7 L. B. R. 1, 19 C. W. N. 179 = 16 Cr. L. J. 120. When an approver has been committed to the Court of Session as an accused he may plead his pardon in bar at the trial, and the Judge must first try the issue of forfeiture and take the verdict of the jury thereon, and then proceed with the trial of the accused for the offences charged, 42 C. 856 where 37 C. 845 is discussed, 32 M. 173; 33 M. 514, 25 B. 675, 30 B. 611 and 31 P. R. 1904 are followed. Where, however, the Judge tried the question of forfeiture with the jury after some evidence on the general issue had been recorded. Held that the irregularity had not prejudiced the approver or the other accused, 42 C. 856.

(d) The Judge must take the verdict of the jury on the issue of forfeiture and not decide it himself.—Where this procedure was not followed and the Judge did not leave it to the jury to say whether the accused had given false evidence and thereby forfeited his pardon, but himself decided that the withdrawal of the pardon was conclusive that it had been forfeited and convicted the accused the conviction is illegal, 33 M. 514. The Judge ought to try the question of forfeiture, as a preliminary issue, on evidence limited to the point, and take the verdict of the jury on it before proceeding to try the general issue of the guilt of the accused 42 C. 856.

10. Duty of prosecution in trial of approver who forfeited his pardon.—(a) Onus is on the Crown.—In a trial of the approver after breach of the conditions on which the pardon was tendered for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered, it is for the prosecution to prove that the pardon has been forfeited. The making of a full and true disclosure by the approver is not a condition precedent which the approver has to prove to establish his right to pardon according to the view taken in 11 A. 79, under the Code of 1882, but his failure to make such full and true disclosure is a condition subsequent determining or forfeiting the pardon 27 C. 157; 25 B. 675, 30 B. 611, approved and followed 32 M. 173. The onus of proof of forfeiture is on the Crown, 42 C. 856. It must be first proved and decided by the Court before which the approver is put on his trial that he by either wilfully concealing something essential or by giving false evidence has not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was offered, 59 P. R. 1905 = 40 F. L. R. 1906 = 3 Cr. L. J. 342, where 31 P. R. 1904, was followed and see Note 7.

(b) Procedure.—Ordinarily the proper course to follow in such a case would be to put in evidence the record of the statement made by the approver as a witness at the former trial, together if necessary with evidence as to the identity of the person making that statement. In order to form an opinion whether in the course of that statement the approver had given false evidence or had wilfully concealed anything essential it may become necessary to record evidence bearing on the question 37 A. 331.

11 Trial of approver along with other prisoners illegal.—See proviso to sub-sec. (1) and Note 7, supra.

12 Sanction for prosecution of pardoned persons for perjury.—When the person to whom pardon has been legally tendered makes a statement on oath which he retracts in a subsequent judicial proceeding a proper sanction is necessary for a prosecution for giving false evidence on each branch of the alternative charge. The sanction of the High Court would be necessary in regard to the statement made under conditional pardon as well as a formal complaint of the Court before which the other statement was made (see section 478). Such sanction can only be granted before, not after, the commencement of the prosecution, 10 B. 190; 11 B. H. C. R. 44. A witness who is in any way induced to make a false statement in connection with a capital charge should be allowed every possible locus penitentiae, 11 A. L. J. 954 = 15 Cr. L. J. 76. The want of sanction is not a mere irregularity curable under s. 537, but is a fatal defect, 27 C. 137, 43 P. R. 1834.

13. Practice.—Application for sanction to be made in open Court.—An application to the High Court for sanction to prosecute an approver for giving false evidence should be made by motion on behalf of the Crown in open Court, 24 C. 492; 32 M. 47; 10 P. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 793, and not by letter 1893 A. W. N. 12, 30 P. W. R. 1912 = 175 P. L. R. 1912 = 43 Cr. L. J. 431. The person moving the High Court must be in a position to place before it the tender of pardon and the evidence given in consequence of such tender and to satisfy the High Court that there is prima facie reason to suppose that the persons who accepted the tender of pardon have wilfully concealed an essential thing or given false evidence. A person tried under s. 471 by a Sessions Court is prosecuted within the meaning of this section, 42 P. R. 1884.

14. Committal proceedings whether void for want of Public Prosecutor's certificate.—Where in a case the Magistrate enquired into proceedings without the Public Prosecutor's certificate required under s. 339 and the accused was committed to the Sessions and before the trial in the Sessions the necessary certificate was produced in the Sessions Court, held, that the irregularity in the non production of the certificate before the Magistrate was condoned by the provisions of s. 532. 3 R. 55

Procedure in trial of person under sec. 339

“ 339-A. (1) The Court trying under section 339 a person who has accepted a tender of pardon shall—

(a) if the Court is a High Court or Court of Session, before the charge is read out and explained to the accused under section 271, sub-sec (1) and

(b) if the Court is the Court of a Magistrate before the evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution is taken ask the accused whether he pleads that he has complied with the conditions on which the tender of the pardon was made

(2) If the accused does so plead, the Court shall record the plea and proceed with the trial, and the jury, or the Court with the aid of the assessors, or the Magistrate, as the case may be, shall, before judgment is passed in the case, find whether or not the accused has complied with the conditions of the pardon, and, if it is found that he has so complied, the Court shall, notwithstanding anything contained in this Code, pass judgment of acquittal”

Note—The procedure laid down in ss. 339 and 339-A must be strictly adhered to and followed. In a case where the accused was not asked before the charge was read out to him whether he pleaded that he had complied with the conditions on which the tender of pardon was made, nor were the terms of s. 339-A explained to him, held that the trial was vitiated by non-compliance with the provisions of s. 339-A of the Code. 5 Lah. 379.

Right of person against whom proceedings are instituted to be defended and his competency to be a witness.

“ 340. (1) Any person accused of an offence before a Criminal Court, or against whom proceedings are instituted under this Code in any such Court, may of right be defended by a pleader

(2) Any person against whom proceedings are instituted in any such Court under section 107, or under Chapters X, XI, XII or XXXVI, or under section 552, may offer himself as a witness in such proceedings

Notes.—Pleader.—See for definition s. 4 (r) and Notes thereto at pp 16-17

1. Analogous law—Liberal provisions of N. Y. Cr. Pro. Code.—According to s. 188, when defendant is brought upon arrest, the Magistrate must immediately inform him of the charge against him and of his right to the aid of counsel in every stage of the proceeding and before any further proceedings are had. According to s. 189, the Magistrate must also allow the defendant a reasonable time to send for counsel and adjourn the examination for that purpose, and must, upon the request of the defendant, require a peace officer to take a message to such counsel in the town or city as the defendant may name. The officer must, without delay and without fee, perform that duty.

2. Accused has a right to be defended by a pleader of his choice—The defence of an accused person ought not to be shut out merely by the fact that he is represented by a mukhtyar, 33 C. 493. The Court has no

trate has no power under this section to forbid a duly-qualified pleader to appear for the accused, Ratanlal 25. See ibid. 29 and 6 B. 14 and 1 M. 304 as to similar right in appeals. See also 1 B. 64 and ss. 439 (2) and 440. Notes thereto

* The section was inserted by Act XVIII of 1923 s. 85

3. Right of accused's counsel to be heard.—It is not a question of indulgence that the counsel for the accused should be heard before judgment, but one of right. It is an elementary principle of law, that no order should be made to a man's prejudice especially in a criminal case without hearing him and the very object of the Legislature in allowing parties to be represented at trials by counsel is that counsel must be heard before a final opinion is formed by the Court. If counsel had a right to be heard it is not for the Court to say before hearing them whether the omission to hear and a judgment based upon opinion formed without such hearing have or have not caused prejudice to the accused, 6 Bom. L. R. 663. And the conviction will be set aside if the accused's vakil is not heard, 5 M. L. T. 290 = 9 Cr. L. J. 305; 9 P. R. 1877; 15 P. R. 1900.

4. Magistrate should not interpose between accused and his friends but should give every opportunity for making his defence.—In a case of murder, pleaders appeared on behalf of the accused's wife before the committing Magistrate and requested him to allow them to see the accused or ascertain in their presence from him whether he required their assistance. The Magistrate asked the accused in the absence of the pleaders whether he required their assistance, and then communicated to the pleaders that the accused did not want to engage them. When the case came before the High Court for confirmation, the Chief Justice remarked:—'In conclusion I wish to draw attention to the improper conduct of the investigating Magistrate in refusing to allow the pleaders engaged by his (accused's) wife to defend this accused, to have an interview with him or to appear and sit in Court. It was the duty of the Magistrate to have afforded the accused and his friends every opportunity of making his defence, and he should not personally have interposed in any way between them,' 1 Bom. L. R. 836. Prisoners and others are to have the fullest opportunity for giving takalatnamas to whomsoever they please, without reference to the mode in, or the circumstances by, which they may be influenced to do so, 1 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 16.

5. Access to prisoners by pleader.—Prisoners in the custody of the Police before being produced before a Magistrate are at liberty, at any time of the day, to see a pleader, due precaution being taken against escape. The access to prisoners in jails by pleaders is a matter for the officer in charge of the jail to decide—Mad. Pol. Mnn., p. 95, Note.

6. Right of private prosecutor to a pleader.—A pleader is entitled to appear not only on behalf of the accused, but also on behalf of a private prosecutor 6 B. L. R. Appx. LXX.

7. Position of pleader appointed by the Court to defend.—The position of a pleader appointed by the Court to defend a prisoner is not the same as that of a pleader whom the accused has authorized to act for him. Any admissions that may be made by the pleader appointed by the Court are not binding on the accused 2 Bom. L. R. 871.

8. Employment of Mukhtyars.—See Notes to s. 4 at pp. 16 to 18. 'The terms of s. 340 do not warrant any general rule for the exclusion of mukhtyars in all cases, but only allow the exercise by Magistrates of a discretion in each case as it arises. The Magistrates are expected not to deprive parties of legal aid which they could frequently obtain at a moderate cost by indiscriminate exclusion of persons who are invested by law with a distinct professional status in criminal trials.' This rule is equally applicable to Sessions Judges 33 C. 455; Hillins, 116.

9. Discretion with Court to hear agent or not.—To refuse or to allow the appearance of a mukhtyar on behalf of the accused person is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate concerned, Ratanlal 314; though it has been held in Ratanlal 1, that a prisoner is entitled to authorize any person to be his agent in any Criminal Court. A mukhtyar has no right to plead in a Criminal Court without the permission of the presiding Judge, 4 S. L. R. 195 = 12 Cr. L. J. 118; 6 B. 14 was held to be no longer law. The practice of admitting mukhtyars to defend parties is not illegal. It is discretionary with the Magistrate to hear such agents or not, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXVII. Courts are bound to exercise a discretion in each case as to permitting or not permitting the appearance of unauthorized pleaders, Weir II, 400. But a general order excluding any particular class from appearing as pleader is illegal. An order excluding any particular individual in any particular case on grounds stated, are apparently without grounds stated, would be within the discretion of the Magistrate and therefore legal, Weir II, 401. Where the High Court circular stated that as a general rule, no person not qualified as legal practitioner, should be permitted to act in any legal proceedings, except to prevent a miscarriage of justice, held, that a general rule by a Magistrate that no private vakil should appear in his Court, went beyond the terms of the circular, but that he would be acting in consonance with its terms if he stated that he was not prepared to make any general exception in favour of any particular individual, Weir II, 401; 33 C. 458.

10 General dismissal of Mukhtyar is bad.—A Magistrate has no power to dismiss a mukhtyar generally unless he be convicted of an offence involving moral turpitude or infamy. This refers to a general dismissal only and not to particular cases in which he might refuse to hear a mukhtyar whom he did not think qualified 1 W R 34.

11 No Court fee for Vakalatnama.—No advocate or attorney of the High Court or the authorized pleader appearing in defence of an accused person should be required to file a vakalatnama 7 M H C R Appx XL. See Court Fees Act VII of 1870 Schedule II Art 10 and see Note 15 below

12 Communication to Mukhtyar is privileged.—Communication made to a mukhtyar or his clerk is privileged. Section 126 of the Indian Evidence Act must be construed as applying to all persons who within the category of pleader as defined in s. 4 (r) of the Code and includes therefore mukhtyar. Statements made by accused persons that a false charge was going to be brought against them to a mukhtyar who was at the time acting for one of them as his mukhtyar and legal adviser and to whom the statement was made with the object that he should appear for them in Court are privileged 25 C 736

13. Who is an accused person?—An accused is a person over whom the Magistrate or Court is exercising jurisdiction 18 B. 661, therefore (s) A person ordered to give security for good behaviour is an accused person within the meaning of this section 23 C. 493 followed in 21 A. 107; 27 C. 656; 15 P. R. 1900, 25 A. 375 and 4 C. L. R. 432 contra see 27 C. 652 and 9 C. W. N. 983. And a Court is bound to hear a pleader on his behalf if he engages one 15 P. R. 1900. (ii) See 16 C. 781, 5 C. 535—5 C. L. R. 458 as to persons against whom maintenance proceedings are taken under s. 488. (iii) A Civil Court making a preliminary inquiry under s. 476 is not a criminal Court and the person against whom the inquiry is made is not an accused person 8 A. L. J. 237 = 12 Cr. L. J. 331. (iv) A person complained against before issue of a process has no right to be represented by a pleader—A person complained against does not become an accused person until it has been decided to issue process against him under Chapter XVI. Section 340 does not hence entitle a person complained against to be represented by a pleader during the preliminary inquiry which may be held under s. 202 (1). If he chooses to attend the proceedings he may of course do so like any other member of the public but he has no locus standi as a party the purpose of the law being clearly to exclude him until sufficient ground for joining him has been made out by the complaint 8 N. L. R. 81 = 8 Cr. L. J. 20. See 10 C. L. R. 553, 16 B. 661.

14. Duty of Pleader for accused.—Where a Sessions Judge took exception to the fact that the pleader for the accused had put forward witnesses on behalf of the accused who he must have known had been tampered with and threatened to report his conduct to the High Court it was held that the remarks of the Judge were improper and that it was the duty of the pleader for the accused to call witnesses for the defence if his client insists on submitting their evidence to the Court 3 Bom. L. R. 362

15. Practice—Memorandum of appearance.—Under Madras Dis. No. 272 of 1907 whenever a pleader representing a party in any criminal proceeding does not file in Court a vakalat from his client he shall be required to file a memorandum of appearance containing a declaration that he has been duly instructed to appear for the party whom he represents. Held even that is not necessary where the party is present in person along with his vakil 5 M. L. T. 290 = 9 Cr. L. J. 205

341. If the accused though not insane, cannot be made to understand the proceedings, the Court may proceed with the inquiry or trial and in the case of a Court other than a High Court if such inquiry results in a commitment, or if such trial results in a conviction the proceedings shall be forwarded to the High Court with a report of the circumstances of the case and the High Court shall pass thereon such order as it thinks fit

Notes.—1 Section not applicable to persons of unsound mind.—The provisions of this section do not apply to a person who is of unsound mind. They apply to persons who are unable to understand the proceedings from deafness or dumbness, or ignorance of the language of the country or other similar cause. In such a lunatic, the Magistrate should proceed under this section, 11 M. L. T. 24 = 13 Cr. L. J. 24.

2. Criminal responsibility of deaf mutes.—To escape punishment a deaf-mute to whom sections 82 and 83 I. P. C., do not apply must like his brother who can hear and speak come within s. 84 I. P. C. in other words if his mind is sound his inability to hear and speak will not excuse him. In U. B. R. (1910) I. 57 = 12 Cr. L. J. 386, it was held that the law does not provide for a sane deaf mute who has never been instructed being exempted from punishment and Q v. Bowla, 22 W. R. 35 and 73 and 27 C 368, were followed in preference to Dwarkanath v. Nader, 22 W. R. 35, 34 P. R. 1885 and 37 P. R. 1889. "It seems very doubtful whether a sane deaf mute could live to the age of, say, seventeen, without learning something of his duty towards his neighbour in person and property, I think, it must be presumed that if the mind is sound there is this knowledge in the deaf mute."

3. Section not applicable where accused understands the proceedings.—Where an accused person was deaf and dumb and the Magistrate who tried and convicted the accused, thinking that the accused was unable to "understand the proceedings in the case" referred the case to the District Magistrate who was satisfied that the accused did understand what he was charged with, held that the District Magistrate's finding as to the capability of the accused to understand the proceedings against him, was conclusive, and this section did not apply. The High Court annulled the conviction by the Magistrate and as the accused was previously convicted of an offence under Chapter XXII P. C., ordered his committal to the Court of Session. 19 W. R. 37. See 3 Bom. L. R. 371; 22 W. R. 35 and 72, 18 Bom. L. R. 653.

4. Magistrate should try and get into communication with a deaf and dumb accused.—When a deaf and dumb person is placed on his trial, some means of communication with him should, if possible, be adopted. Weir II, 402. A Magistrate should try and get into communication with a deaf mute accused with the assistance of his relations, as it is impossible that a deaf mute should be able to live to maturity without being able to communicate with his relations and that if he had, his relations must have established some practicable method of inter-communication by signs or otherwise, U. B. R. (1910) I. 57 = 12 Cr. L. J. 386. Where a deaf and dumb prisoner was convicted of an offence, and upon the trial no attempt was made to communicate with the prisoner respecting the charge against him, the conviction was quashed. 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. VII, and see Note 8 below and 22 W. R. 35 and 72.

5. Magistrate must refer only after conviction or committal.—While the complainant and his witnesses were being examined, the accused showed that he was dumb and thereupon the Magistrate without framing a charge but expressing an opinion that the accused was guilty, referred the case under this section. The High Court, noticing that the trial was imperfect as no charge had been framed refused to treat the mere opinion expressed that the accused was guilty as tantamount to a conviction, and returned the case for disposal to the Magistrate directing him to come to a definite opinion whether the accused could be made to understand the proceedings, and if he came to that opinion, to proceed with the inquiry or trial, and if the same resulted in a conviction or commitment, to forward the proceedings under this section with a report of the circumstances of the case, Ratanlal 679 and 836. Before a reference to the High Court can be made under this section there should have been a committal or conviction, Ratanlal 190. This section requires the Judge to proceed to the end of the trial and then report the result if a conviction follows, Weir II, 403. It does not authorize a Magistrate to refer the case in the midst of the trial. 4 Bom. L. R. 825, Ratanlal 836; 25 Bom. L. R. 43.

6. Magistrate must state his views when making reference.—In submitting a case to the High Court under this section, a Presidency Magistrate should state his view of the conduct of the accused and must take some evidence regarding the previous history and habits of the accused. Ratanlal 696.

7. Magistrate cannot pass sentence in cases of doubt.—This section prohibits a Court from passing sentence when it is uncertain that the accused has understood the proceedings against him. Weir II, 403, U. B. R. (1910) I. 57 = 12 Cr. L. J. 386, 11 M. L. T. 404 = 13 Cr. L. J. 243. See also 37 P. R. 1889 below.

8. Summary trial of deaf and dumb man not advisable.—It is highly inadvisable to try a deaf mute summarily. In such a case, an attempt should be made to find out whether the accused has any friends or relatives who are accustomed to communicate with him. The Magistrate should make inquiries about his antecedents and ordinary mode of life and the manner in which he is communicated with in the ordinary affairs of life, 8 Bom. L. R. 849 = 4 Cr. L. J. 445.

9. Power of High Court to pass final orders on reference by Magistrate—nature of the orders.—(a) On commitment.—An accused person who had been for some time confined in a Lunatic Asylum was tried and committed to the Sessions by a Deputy Magistrate on a charge of murder. The accused was deaf and dumb and could not be made to understand the proceedings which had been taken. On the proceedings being forwarded to the High Court under this section it was held that the law does not contemplate that the Sessions trial should necessarily take place. That it is discretionary with the High Court on a commitment made, to order the Sessions trial to be held, and the High Court must consider whether any benefit would be likely to result especially to the accused by such trial. The High Court in this case having come to the conclusion that no benefit would be likely to result to the accused by his being tried by the Court of Session found that the accused was guilty of the alleged murder, but that he was by reason of unsoundness of mind not responsible for his action, and directed him to be kept in the District Jail to await the orders of Government 27 C. 365. In a proper case, the High Court might even direct the accused to be made over to the custody of his father 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 131.

(b) High Court may pass sentence on Magistrate's finding—This section gives the High Court power to treat the proceedings before the Lower Court as amounting to a sufficient trial and pass sentence upon the prisoner according to the facts which seem to be established in the course and as the result of these proceedings, 22 W. R. 33 and 72, 27 C. 368, U. B. R. (1910) 1 57 = 12 Cr. L. J. 336.

(c) On conviction High Court may discharge—Where a person, who was deaf and dumb, was convicted the High Court, thinking that the prisoner was not a person to whom penal discipline can be properly applied set aside the conviction and directed that the prisoner be admonished and discharged 22 W. R. 33 followed 35 P. R. 1883, 4 Bom. L. R. 296.

(d) High Court may treat the accused as a lunatic and report to Government under s. 471—Accused, a deaf-mute was unable to understand the proceedings in Court, and was after inquiry convicted of an offence and sentenced to nine months' rigorous imprisonment by a Magistrate. Held, that in the absence of any clear and specific provisions in the Code the accused should be dealt with as a lunatic and the matter reported to Local Government under s. 471 37 P. R. 1889, followed 13 P. R. 1901.

(e) May direct re-trial—See 6 Bom. L. R. 849 = 4 Cr. L. J. 444.

Power to examine the accused.

342. (1) For the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him the Court may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, without previously warning the accused put such questions to him as the Court considers necessary, and shall, for the purpose aforesaid, question him generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined and before he is called on for his defence.

(2) The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions or by giving false answers to them but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just.

(3) The answers given by the accused may be taken into consideration in such inquiry or trial and put in evidence for or against him in any other inquiry into, or trial for, any other offence which such answers may tend to show he has committed.

(4) No oath shall be administered to the accused.

Notes.—See s. 164 for the power and mode of recording statements and confessions made during Police investigations. s. 364 for the method of recording examination of accused. s. 533 for curing of irregularities. s. 287 as to when the examination of the accused before the committing Magistrate has to be tendered in a Sessions trial. See ss. 209 242 244 245 253 256 (2) for statements by accused persons.

1 Scope of the section.—We think that the present law gives too great a latitude to the Courts with regard to the examination of an accused person. The object of such an examination is to give the accused an opportunity of explaining any circumstances which may tend to criminate him, and thus to enable the Court, in cases where the accused is undefended to examine the witnesses in his interest. It was never intended that the Court should examine the accused with a view to elicit from him some statement which would lead to his conviction. We have, therefore limited the power of interrogating the accused by adding to the first paragraph of s. 342 the words for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him. We think the accused should always have this opportunity of explaining and we have therefore, required the Court to question him generally for that purpose before he enters on his defence.—See Com. Rep. on the Bill of Act N. of 1882.

The limitation of the power of the Courts in examining the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any evidence against him is thus accounted for by Dr STOKES "The section assumed its present form partly owing to a judgment of the High Court of Bengal and partly owing to the words of EDWARD

LIVINGSTON "An unrestricted right of interrogating is also very apt to produce insidious and catching questions. Instead of a cool and impartial attempt to extract the truth, the examination becomes a contest in which the pride and ingenuity of the Magistrate are arrayed against the caution or evasions of the accused, and every construction will be given to his answer that may fix upon him the imputation of guilt. It may be added that badgering by the Judge is apt to arouse undue sympathy for the prisoner"—Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol II Introduction, p 20

2. Section applies to all proceedings in Magistrate's Court.—(1) In the stage of investigation Justice CARNDUFF is of opinion that neither this section nor s 164 places any limitation on the extent to which the accused may be examined in the stage of investigation. "At that stage, and, indeed at any point other than that indicated in s 342 the only thing that is abhorrent is pressure or inducement, and the sole criterion by which the fitness of an examination can be judged is with reference to the question whether it was voluntary or not," 37 C. 567 at p 514

(2) Inquiry preliminary to commitment—Sections 209 and 210 do not curtail the powers of a Magistrate under this section. Section 342 applies to all sorts of proceedings in Magistrate's Courts whether the case is one triable by a Court of Session or otherwise. Under that section a Magistrate is empowered at any time and without any previous warning to put questions to the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him 15 Cr. L. J. 474 (Oadh). As to inquiries under s. 117, etc. see note 5 A below

3. Analogous Law.—Under N Y Cr Pro Code, s. 196, a Magistrate must inform the defendant that it is his right to make a statement in relation to the charge against him, that the statement is designed to enable him, if he sees fit, to answer the charge and explain the fact alleged against him, that he is at liberty to waive making a statement, and that he is not bound to answer any question until he has consulted with counsel. If he makes a statement, it is in writing without an oath, and must ask him besides the questions of name, parentage, residence and profession only to give any explanation you may think proper of the circumstances appearing in the testimony against you and state the facts which you think will tend to your exculpation."

English Law—accused may give evidence.—The accused at common law was not a competent or compellable witness at any stage of the proceedings, on the ground of the maxim nemo tenetur seipsum prodere and if the accused was examined on oath any conviction would be bad. The position of the accused has been changed by a series of statutory provisions culminating in the Evidence Act, 1877 (40 and 41 Vict. c 14) and the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 and 62 Vict. c 38) whereby it is enacted that every person charged with an offence is a competent witness for the defence at every stage of the proceedings, whether charged solely or jointly. See Archbold, pp. 457–463. A Magistrate has no right to ask the accused any questions, except questions incidental, to the conduct of the examination, e.g., whether the accused wishes to cross-examine a witness, or to give evidence, and the statutory questions prescribed by s 18 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848. Unless the accused gives evidence under the Criminal Evidence Act, if the Magistrate does interrogate an accused who does not so examine himself, the answer of the accused is inadmissible as evidence against him, R v Berriman (1834) 6 Cox C. C. 333; R v Pettit, (1830) 4 Cox C. C. 184; R v Wilson (1817) Holt (N. P. 109) Halsbury Vol. IX, p 397. When an accused gives evidence, he may be asked any question in cross-examination, notwithstanding that it would tend to incriminate him, Archbold, p. 460

4. Court must examine and not prosecutor.—The Court conducting the trial or inquiry is alone authorized to examine the accused person, and the counsel or other person conducting the prosecution should not be allowed to take any part in the examination—C. P. Cr. Cr., Part II, No 24. The law allows the Court, not the complainant, to put questions to the accused and the Court should not put questions in order merely to convict the accused out of his own mouth 10 M. 121 at pp. 123–125.

EXAMINATION IMPERATIVE.

5. Court is bound to examine the accused.—The provisions of this section are not permissive, Ratanlal 625; but imperative, Ratanlal 710; 10 Bom. L. R. 201—7 Cr. L. J. 194; 11 Cr. L. J. 746 (Barma), U B R (1917) 2nd Qr. 18; 1 P. R. (1918) Cr. 22, 1 C. 786 (G) and the accused must be afforded an opportunity for the purpose of explaining any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, Ratanlal 100 and 720. In all warrant-cases there must be an examination of the accused, s. 263 (g) does not give the Magistrate any discretion whether he will examine the accused or not 41 C. 743. The term 'shall' in this section makes the duty imposed on the Court to question the accused generally on the case, after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined and before he is called on for his defence, mandatory and not discretionary only. Having regard to the object of the examination specified in the section, it is clear that the omission by the Court to perform such duty in a criminal trial, must be presumed to have seriously prejudiced the accused. In a criminal trial, forms prescribed by statute have to be strictly observed and the Court is bound to draw no inference of waiver against accused persons, especially in the case of omission by the Court to perform a duty imposed on it by the Legislature in express terms in his interest, unless the accused expressly waived it, 9 Bom. L. R. 358 = 5 Cr. L. J. 332. Where it appeared that the Court omitted to question the prisoner under this section the trial was held invalid. The case therefore in this respect resembles 25 M. 61 (P.C.), where the Judicial Committee observed 'their Lordships are unable to regard the disobedience to an express provision as to a mode of trial as a mere irregularity.' And if it was enough to vitiate the trial there that the accused was tried for more than the three offences which are permissible at one trial, then it seems to me a fortiori enough to vitiate this trial that the prisoner was convicted and sent to prison without being asked for his explanation of the matters appearing against him. That omission in my judgment goes deeper than the illegality which was committed in Subramania Iyer's case. For it is, I think, repugnant to one's natural sense of justice that a man should be convicted without being heard. It is no answer to that objection to say that the appellant had an opportunity of making a statement before the committing Magistrate, BACHELOR, J., 17 Bom. L. R. 892 = 16 Cr. L. J. 785. The law provides imperatively that before the Court of Session he shall have an opportunity of making his statement. See also Wafa II 414, where the omission to compel a defendant to make a statement was held to be fatal.

he has been questioned on the case generally by the committing Magistrate, 9 Bom. L. R. 750 = 8 Cr. L. J. 74. But in 4 L. B. R. 143 = 7 Cr. L. J. 422, a Magistrate convicted the accused omitting to examine them. The High Court refused to set aside the conviction on a reference by the District Magistrate, as the accused who had a right of appeal had not appealed and therefore were not in fact prejudiced.

Examination of the accused under s. 342 is imperative and the Court is bound to examine the accused generally, whether he wishes to offer an explanation of any of the evidence which has been given against him 26 Bom. L. R. 109; 28 C. W. N. 118, 119; 1 R. 639; 27 Bom. L. R. 1405.

5-A. Whether it is obligatory to examine the accused after cross-examination and examination of additional witnesses when the accused is once examined under s. 342 after the prosecution examination-in-chief.—Section 342 is not sufficiently complied with by examining the accused after the prosecution examination-in-chief but before their cross-examination. In all cases where additional witnesses are called after a charge has been framed or not the obligatory examination of the accused under s. 342 must take place after all the prosecution witnesses have been examined and cross-examined and before he is called on for his defence. 27 C. W. N. 743 (following 50 C. 223), 50 C. 303 (following 6 P. L. J. 644); 30 C. 518, 50 C. 939; but see 45 M. L. J. 279, 28 C. W. N. 1199 and 4 Lah. 61 and 45 A. 124; 50 B. 42 = 27 Bom. L. R. 1373. See 46 M. 449 = 43 M. L. J. 402 which is dissented from in 50 B. 42. See also 51 C. 924 and 933. See also 6 Patna L. J. 430; 6 Patna L. J. 147, 174, 4 Patna 231; but see 4 Lah. 61 (contra).

5-B. Effect of subsequent examination under s. 340.—Where an accused person has been examined under s. 342 after the close of the prosecution case and subsequently the Court examines a person under s. 340 (whether such person be one of the prosecution witnesses or another person) it is not necessary to re-examine the accused person under s. 342. 3 Pat. 1015.

5-C. Distinction between summons and warrant cases.—Where in a summons case a Magistrate examined the accused only after the examination-in-chief of some of the prosecution witnesses and did not examine him again after another witness had been examined and after the cross-examination of the previous witness. Held, section 342 not complied with and omission vitiated trial, 49 Cal. 1075. A Magistrate is bound in a summons case to examine the accused as required by section 342 of the Code. If he omits to examine the accused it is an irregularity which vitiates the trial per MACLEOD C.J.—It seems to me that while it is obligatory on the Magistrate to give the accused an opportunity of explaining the evidence against him according to the provisions of section 342 of the Code it is certainly desirable that he should not be hampered in these petty cases by the provisions of section 364 of the Code. 46 B. 411 following 45 B. 672 = 22 Bom. L. R. 1040. In warrant cases, see 44 M. L. J. 287 (F.R.) which holds per se. The provisions of section 342 of the Code is regards the examination of the accused, the mandatory and failure to comply with them is an illegality vitiating the trial. In a warrant-case the prosecution witnesses were examined and the accused did not avail themselves of the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses. The accused were then questioned generally in the case. For the purpose of enabling them to explain the circumstances appearing from the evidence against them and they stated they would put in a written statement. The Magistrate then framed a charge against the accused under section 411, I P C, and they pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourned. At a later date the accused cross-examined the prosecution witnesses under s. 236 of the Code and the witnesses were also re-examined. Evidence was then called for the defence and the accused were not further questioned generally on the case after the cross-examination and re-examination of the prosecution witnesses. Held, by the majority (VENKAT SUBBARAO, J., dissenting) that there was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of section 342 of the Code and the trial and conviction of the accused were legal (43 M. L. J. 402 overruled, 6 Pat. L. J. 644 dissented from). In 6 Pat. L. J. 644 it was held that under s. 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the Court must examine the accused after the witnesses for the prosecution had been examined. Therefore an examination of the accused after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined in-chief but before they have been cross-examined and re-examined is not a compliance with the section. Examination in s. 342 of the Code means examination in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination. 5 Pat. L. J. 402; 6 Pat. L. J. 147 and 6 Pat. L. J. 174 referred to. But see 4 Lab. 61 (contra) 4 Pat. 433 (contra) following 45 M. 449 (F.B.) and disapproving 6 Pat. L. J. 644. 3 Rangoon 139 seems to follow 46 Mad. 449 and to hold that the absence of examination of the accused under s. 342 need not vitiate a trial in every case.

5-D. The section does not apply to summary trial of summons-cases.—The provisions of s. 342 of the Code requiring the Court to examine the accused generally is inapplicable to summary trials of summons-cases under Chapter XXII, as to ordinary trials of such cases, 46 M. 766 = 45 M. L. J. 230.

The mandatory provisions of s. 342 of the Code requiring the Court to question the accused generally on the case after the examination of the prosecution witnesses, do not apply to trials in summons-cases.

The use of the expression 'before the accused is called on for his defence' in s. 342 itself as well as in s. 236 relating to trials in warrant-cases and s. 289 relating to trials in Sessions cases, and the absence of such an expression in the sections relating to trials in summons-cases under Chapter XX of the Code show that the provisions of s. 342 are not intended to apply to summons-cases. 46 M. 758 = 45 M. L. J. 224.

Written statement must not take the place of examination. See Note 21. A written statement can never have the same value as answers coming directly from the accused's mouth, 19 C. W. N. 1043 = 18 Cr. L. J. 725, 48 C. 411, but see 4 Patna 498 (contra).

5-E. The imperative provisions of s. 342 do not apply to inquiries.—Section 342 of the Code does not apply to an inquiry under s. 117. The omission to examine the person called upon for security, at the close of the prosecution case and before he is called on to enter on his defence, is not an illegality, but an irregularity covered by s. 537, when the accused is not prejudiced by such omission (80 C. 223 distinguished), 50 C. 985.

6. When accused leaves case entirely to his pleader, Court may not question him.—If the accused has left his case entirely in the hands of his pleader, the fact should appear on the record and when this is the case, a Judge may not question the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstance appearing in evidence against him. Weir II, 405.

7. Where accused is exempted from personal appearance, pleader appearing on his behalf may be examined.—When the accused has been exempted under s. 205 from personal appearance in Court, the Magistrate is not bound to enforce their personal attendance in order to examine them. The provisions of this section are complied with when the pleader for the defence is examined on behalf of his client. 5 S. L. R. 206 = 14 Cr. L. J. 272.

TIME FOR EXAMINATION.

8. When prosecution evidence discloses no criminal charge, accused not to be examined.—It is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate himself to judge whether during the inquiry before him it is right and proper that the accused shall be examined or not, and such discretion should not be exercised when the Magistrate thinks that the evidence for the prosecution does not disclose any proper subject of criminal charge against the accused. 10 W. R. 25 = 1 B. L. R. (S. N.) 18. Where no evidence has been given implicating the accused, the Magistrate has no right under the statute to put questions to him or to invite him to make a statement. A statement therefore made by the accused under these circumstances is not admissible in evidence against him on his subsequent trial 1915 M. W. N. 413 — 16 Cr. L. J. 823, where 27 M. 239 and R v Berriman, 6 Cox C. C. 388 are followed.

9. Examination must not be made before any evidence has been recorded.—It is illegal to examine the accused before any evidence has been recorded or to cross-examine him with regard to the part supposed to have been taken by the other prisoners, 9 M. 224; there is nothing for the accused to explain at that stage, 5 M. L. T. 216. It is not merely irregular, but contrary to the spirit of this section to take the statement of the accused three weeks prior to the commencement of the magisterial inquiry proper and before a word of evidence had been heard, 1883 A. W. N. 238. It is wrong to examine the accused prematurely at a time when no evidence to connect them with the crime with the commission of which they were charged had been recorded against them, nevertheless when their statements are actually made and are freely and voluntarily given, they cannot be rejected as inadmissible in evidence on account of this irregularity of procedure, Ratanlal 679.

10. Examination must be made before defence commences.—Before an accused person is put on his defence, he must be examined by the Court, Ratanlal 227.

11. Questioning accused in middle of case to fill up gap in prosecution evidence is serious irregularity.—Where the Court of Session put certain questions in the middle of the case to the prisoners, with a view to supply the evidence for the prosecution, held, that this was a most serious irregularity in the trial, 3 B. H. C. R. Cr. Cn. 51. See, however, 1 P. W. R. 1910; 11 Cr. L. J. 171. The object of this section is not to fill up a gap in the evidence of the prosecution, but to enable the prisoner to explain any circumstances appearing in evidence against him. It is a misdirection to ask the jury to consider a document, purporting to be proved by a statement made by the accused in his examination under this section, as evidence against the accused, 26 C. 49. To examine the accused generally on the case before the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution is completed is contrary to law and unfair to the accused 18 Cr. L. J. 438 (A.)

OBJECT AND SCOPE OF EXAMINATION.

12. Object of examination is to enable the accused to explain circumstances against him.—The examination of an accused person under this section is only to enable the accused to explain any circumstances appearing against him and not to supplement the case for the prosecution and to show that he is guilty, 10 M. 295; 30 A. 540. It is highly improper to subject the accused to a very embarrassing and cruel series of questions intended apparently rather to puzzle the accused than to elucidate the case, 6 Bom. L. R. 94. See also 10 C. 140 — 13 C. L. R. 335; 13 A. 345; 5 C. W. N. 866; 4 L. B. R. 244 — 8 Cr. L. J. 62 and Note 1. But see 6 N. L. R. 183, where it is laid down that s. 342 is not intended merely for the benefit of the accused. It is part of a system for leading the Court to discover the truth and it constantly happens that the accused's explanation of his failure to explain, is the most incriminating circumstance against him. The result of the examination may be beneficial, but it may equally be injurious, to him. The principle involved is that contained in the judicial maxim, judi alteram partem, and the section does not require that the accused should be heard only on what is prima facie proved against him, but on every circumstance appearing in evidence against him. Therefore in a case of previous conviction, it is not necessary that identity of the accused with the person previously convicted should be conclusively established before the accused is questioned. The moment there is some evidence of identity, accused may be asked to explain it and may be convicted on his plea of guilty to a charge of previous conviction.

13. Accused must in his own interests give explanation of circumstances against him.—The proof of the case against the prisoner must depend for its support not upon the absence or want of any explanation on the part of the prisoner, but upon the positive affirmative evidence of his guilt that is given by the Crown. But if there is a certain appearance made out against a party, if he is involved by the evidence in a state of considerable suspicion, he is called upon, for his own sake and his own safety, to state and to bring forward the circumstances, whatever they may be, which might reconcile such suspicious appearances with perfect innocence, (Regina v Frost, 4 Bt. Tr. N. 2. 85 followed) 42 C. 857. In cases of circumstantial evidence, where facts are put forward on behalf of the prosecution which, unless explained, justify an inference of guilt being drawn against the accused, then it is both lawful and proper for the Court to consider the explanation of those facts which the accused puts forward in his defence. The principle is clearly recognized in the explanations to s 114 of the Evidence Act, per PIGOTT, J., in 17 Cr. L. J. 23 (A.) The practice of refusing to answer questions in the Sessions Court and of putting in a written statement is a very pernicious practice. The refusal to answer questions may be attended with great risk to the accused, for the Court is bound to examine him, and a refusal to answer may involve an adverse inference against him, 19 C. W. N. 1043 = 18 Cr. L. J. 724. 'An innocent man cannot well injure himself by a truthful explanation, and it would be deplorable were we to hold that it was beyond the competence of the Court when dealing with a case under Act XIV of 1908 to give an accused an opportunity of explaining the circumstances appearing against him,' 16 C. R. L. J. 576 (C), 19 C. W. N. 923 = 21 C. L. J. 398. While it is not intended to empower Courts to cross-examine persons charged before them, they are nevertheless authorized to put any questions which appear necessary at any stage of inquiry or trial and particularly when all the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined, for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in evidence against him, 5 A. 253.

14. Accused must not be cross-examined nor driven to make incriminating statements.—The discretionary power, given by law, to examine a prisoner, should be used to ascertain from him how he may explain facts in evidence appearing against him, not to drive him to make self-incriminating statements, 1 M. B. C. R. 199; also 13 A. 345; 16 W. R. 21; 25 W. R. 57; 8 W. R. (F.B.) 47; 6 C. 379 = 7 C. L. R. 385; 10 M. 121; 1884 A. W. N. 106, 6 C. L. R. 431, 30 A. 340; nor for the inquisitorial purpose of making him confess his guilt or assist the prosecution by admitting facts which may go to criminate him, which is the only purpose that can be served by examining him before any evidence is recorded, 2 C. W. N. 702; 8 C. W. N. 22; 17 C. W. N. 354 = 14 Cr. L. J. 129. In 8 C. 98 at p. 102 = 8 C. L. R. 821 at p. 827. PRINSEP, J., made the following remarks on the way in which the accused had been examined —

We regret to have to notice the manner in which the examination of the accused has been conducted. In permitting a Sessions Judge to examine an accused person from time to time during a trial the law does not contemplate that he should commence a trial with a strict examination of a prisoner after the manner of the cross-examination of an adverse witness by counsel. This Court has already pointed out on more than one occasion—see particularly the case in 1 C. L. R. 436—that, by exercising the power allowed by s. 250 Act X. of 1872, the Sessions Court is not to establish a Court of Inquisition, and to force a prisoner to convict himself by making some criminating admissions, after a series of searching questions, the exact effect of which he may not readily comprehend. The real object is to enable a Judge to ascertain from time to time from a prisoner, particularly if he is undefended, what explanation he may desire to offer regarding any fact stated by a witness, or after the close of the case, how he can meet what the Judge may consider to be damning evidence against him. In one of these cases now before us, we observe that the Judge was engaged during the whole of the first day in examining the accused. In like manner, in the second case he examined the accused at considerable length before the case for the prosecution was opened. Such proceedings appear to us to be an abuse of the power given under the law'. See also 1882 A. W. N. 166; 14 W. R. 16; 13 A. 345; 21 C. 642 at p. 656; 5 A. 253 and Weir II, 807. It is objectionable to direct the examination towards obtaining from the accused some explanation in regard to the matter which he had previously mentioned in his confession and has already repudiated as untrue or to endeavour to elicit information in regard to statements made by a witness, 7 C. W. N. 345. Nor can the accused be examined about a confession which is inadmissible and if he is examined about such a confession the question and the answers to them are not admissible in evidence against the accused, 4 L. B. R. 244 = 14 Bur. L. R. 233 = 8 Cr. L. J. 62. An accused person may not be asked as to what were with him in the commission of the offence to supplement the case for the prosecution, 30 A. 340; 9 M. 224. Nor does this section allow of a Magistrate questioning the accused with regard to previous statements made by him, when such statements have not been made legal evidence or brought on the record of the inquiry, 9 M. 224. No attempt ought to be made to induce the accused to incriminate himself, 17 C. W. N. 354 = 14 Cr. L. J. 129. The fact that some of the questions put are inquisitorial and in the nature of a cross-examination, need not, however, make the whole statement inadmissible, 9 C. L. J. 65. Court has no power to cross-examine accused to test the truth of his story, 18 Cr. L. J. 941; 20 A. L. J. 669; 32 C. 622.

15. Remedying gaps in the prosecution case by the statements of the accused.—In 27 M. 238 the accused was charged with defamation, but there was no evidence of the making and publication of the statement by the accused. The Magistrate remedied this defect by examining the accused under this section, held, that the Magistrate was clearly wrong in having tried to fill up a gap in the evidence for the prosecution, and that his procedure being more than an irregularity, vitiated the conviction, see also 28 C. 49; 28 C. 689; 4 L. B. R. 244 = 8 Cr. L. J. 62; 36 M. 457; 1915 M. W. N. 413 = 16 Cr. L. J. 623; 28 M. L. J. 329 = 17 M. L. J. 214 = 18 Cr. L. J. 294.

A Magistrate is not entitled under s. 342 to put questions to the accused if the prosecution has not let in evidence implicating him in the offence charged and answers to questions put in contravention of the section are not admissible in evidence against the accused, 4 Loh. 55.

Questions as to previous conviction.—It is not competent to a Magistrate under this section, to ask the accused, before his conviction, about his previous convictions either with a view to take them into consideration for the purpose of conviction or with a view to dispense with formal evidence as to the alleged previous convictions and as to the identity of the accused in the event of conviction, 28 B. 129. But see 4 N. L. R. 163, Note 12 above. This section does not justify the Court in questioning the accused about previous convictions, 23 C. 889.

16. Court not justified in examining accused to know his defence.—The evidence referred to in this section is the evidence already given at the trial. A Court is not justified or authorized in examining an accused person for the purpose of ascertaining what witnesses he intends to call or what evidence they will give or what his defence is, 14 A. 242; 27 M. 238; 13 A. 345; 5 C. W. N. 884; 7 C. W. N. 343.

17. Confession before committing Magistrate to be treated as an examination.—A confession recorded by a Magistrate, who afterwards conducts the inquiry preliminary to committal and has jurisdiction to do so, is is, however, the distinction between a statement under s. 164, and one under this section. In the course of a Police investigation, a Magistrate can only record under s. 164, voluntary statements made to him, but he cannot examine the accused with regard to the facts of the case, 5 C. W. N. 864. As to the use in a Sessions trial of examination of an accused person before committing Magistrate, see s. 487.

18. When confession is retracted, Judge must ask accused to explain his having made the same.—Where the only evidence against an accused person is his retracted confession, it is a grave omission on the part of the Judge not to question the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain his having made the confession, M. H. C. Pro, 29th April, 1886, Weir 11, 507.

PROCEDURE.

19. Age of accused person to be placed on record.—In every case in which a charge is framed, the accused should, at the opening of his examination, be required to state his age, and in all cases in which the age of the accused appears to the Court to be under 20 or over 50 years or to be material for any special reason the Magistrate should add a note expressing his own opinion as to the probable age of the accused.—Pun. Cr., No 8-1574 G of 1894

20. The rules laid down in s. 364 apply to examination of the accused.—Following the directions of s. 364 the Magistrate should record in full not only every question put to the accused and every answer but also the whole examination should be made conformable to what the accused declares to be the truth and the Magistrate should certify that this examination of the accused contains a full account of the statement of the Magistrate, the Sessions Judge disallowed the questions put to the Magistrate as to the circumstances which led to the examination of the accused on the second day, but the High Court held the questions to be relevant and allowable 8 C. W. N. 22. See s. 533 for curing of irregularities.

21. Written statements must not take the place of the examination.—Though a written statement may be accepted from the accused in accordance with the universal practice in the Courts under the Calcutta High Court, they do not take the place of evidence nor of such examination of the accused as is contemplated by this section, 42 C. 957. This Court has recently animadverted on this practice of filing written statements, which is not provided for by the Code and enables statements to be put before the Court as statements of the accused when such statements are not, in fact drawn up by the accused themselves but by their legal advisers or friends and are entirely irresponsible, 18 Cr. L. J. 9 (C.). There is no provision in the Code for the making of a written statement by an accused and the obvious object of the practice in many cases is to defeat the provisions of s. 342. 19 C. W. N. 1043 = 16 Cr. L. J. 724. Quare, whether in a trial before the Court of Session, the accused may put in a written statement of the defence. Whether such a statement can or cannot be legally put in and be accepted by the Court, it most certainly cannot be allowed to take the place of the examination of the accused which this section imperatively orders to be made, 1903 A. W. N. 1; 42 C. 937. The only provision made in the Code for a written statement by the accused is s 256 (2). But see 4 Pat 438 (contra).

22. Sub-sec. (4)—no oath to accused.—A conviction based on the deposition of the accused on solemn affirmation is bad in law, 3 M. L. T. 138 = 7 Cr. L. J. 131. Under ss 118 and 133, Indian Evidence Act an accomplice is a competent witness and the only limitation imposed by the general rule there stated is that involved in sub-sec. (4) to this section. If the accused and the accomplices were being tried jointly, the accomplice could not be sworn and therefore could not be a witness against his co-accused. But if they were being separately tried, this prohibition would not apply and the accomplice could be examined as a witness on oath, 1906 U. B. R. Evid. 3 = 5 Cr. L. J. 300. See also 10 C. W. N. 862; 11 C. 633; 25 C. 413, 12 M. 153; 14 B. 260; 23 B. 213. Sub-section (4) of this section applies only to persons liable to punishment. It does not apply to a person called upon to show cause against an order under s 133, who can be examined on oath and who is liable to a prosecution under s 193, 1 P. C., if he makes a false statement, 2 C. L. J. 149. See Note 25 and 29.

23. Accused appellant is privileged.—A criminal appeal is a continuation of the criminal case, and except so far as there is a provision to the contrary, the appellant has the privilege of the accused and cannot be punished for making a false statement, 11 M. 451 at p. 453 followed in 19 A. 200.

24. Prohibition in the section not applicable to examination in another case.—The examination of the accused person referred to in this section is an examination touching the matter on which he is being tried and that the prohibition contained in the last clause applies to that examination and does not apply to an examination in another case in which the person who is being examined is not himself an accused person. If the Magistrate's view were correct, it would follow that no man while he stood charged with a criminal offence could possibly be examined as a witness in any criminal trial whatever. This was not the intention of the Legislature 20 A. 426. See also 27 C. L. J. 91.

25. When can oath be administered to co-accused?—Where an accused person called as witnesses other accused persons charged with him and awaiting a separate trial for the same offence, held, that he was entitled to call them as witnesses, and examine them on oath, 23 B. 213; U. B. R. (1906) Evid. 3 = 5 Cr. L. J. 300. As to examination of one of two accused in the absence of the other, see 6 B. 124; 7 C. 65 = 8 C. L. R. 331, 13 C. L. R. 375. An accused person cannot be examined as a witness because no oath or affirmation could be administered to him, till he is convicted or discharged, 1 B. 610; 2 A. 260; 10 B. 190; 12 P. R. 1902, even when accused pleads guilty there must be conviction, 18 B. 195; 23 A. 53; 5 A. 253; 30 A. 540; 13 C. W. N. 352 = 10 Cr. L. J. 484; but when the witness has never been brought before a Magistrate or released on bail with conditions to appear before a Magistrate, he can testify, 16 B. 661; see also 10 C. L. R. 553 and 1937 P. R. 38. Where the prosecution called one of the accused as a witness on the understanding that if he should tell the truth he would not be prosecuted for similar offences for which he was then awaiting trial, held he could be affirmed 15 Bom. L. R. 286 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ga. 171 = 17 Cr. L. J. 256. See Note 19 to s. 337.

In 3 Bom. L. R. 437, P and K were put up for trial along with seven other accused on a charge of dacoity. P and K having pleaded guilty, they were at once convicted, but the passing of the sentence was postponed till the conclusion of the trial of the others, in the meantime they were examined as witnesses against the others. Held per CANNY, J., that they were competent witnesses, for as soon as they were convicted, their trial was concluded, though they were not sentenced. Their evidence was admissible, though their credit might be questionable inasmuch as they are likely to think that it would be to their advantage to tell a story favourable to the prosecution. Held per FULTON, J. that under this section no oath could be administered to them as trial ends with sentence and not with conviction, and therefore P and K, being still under trial could not be competent witnesses.

25-A. Co-accused in a gambling case may be examined as a witness.—Section 19 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887 implies that the Magistrate has power to examine as witnesses persons arrested and brought before him under s 4 (6). The section can apply to no other but persons so arrested. The whole procedure of the Gambling Act is a special procedure and overrides the general law of procedure enacted in s. 342, B. B. L. R. 309 = 16 Cr. L. J. 447 where 31 B. 438 is cited with approval.

26. Sub-section (3)—value to be attached to accused's statement.—The expression may be taken into consideration is not perhaps very precise or definite, but it means at all events that the statement of the accused is is not to have the force of sworn evidence, and a conviction solely based upon it would be bad in law 1900 A. W. N. 169. See also 14 B. 331. In 3 L. B. R. 208 = 4 Cr. L. J. 471, where a person charged with giving false evidence had admitted in his examination and his defence was that he was the person who made the statement alleged to be false further evidence as to his identity was held unnecessary and the conviction in the absence of such evidence was held to be legal. The rule of evidence that what is admitted need not be proved, would apply so far as the identity of the accused with the person who made the affidavit was concerned. S 235 requires a Magistrate to take the plea of the accused immediately after the charge has been framed and when stating the plea facts are voluntarily admitted and there is no necessity for the prosecution to call evidence to prove such facts. Similarly, the admission of the defence having afforded sufficient proof of identity, the conviction was held not to be illegal merely on account of absence of evidence as to the identity of the accused with the perjuror. Statements made under this section are not made extra judicially and are not necessarily governed by the sections of the Evidence Act which relate to the admission of confessions, 15 Cr. L. J. 474 (Oudh). See also 27 M. 233; 26 C. 49; 28 C. 689; 13 B. 339; 2 L. B. R. 83; 49 B. 878.

27. Statements of accused made in the course of examination are privileged.—Statements of a defamatory character made by an accused person in the course of the statement which he is invited to make must be considered absolutely privileged so as to make him not liable to be punished for an offence under s 499, I P C in respect of such statements, 36 M. 216 (F.B.). 5 M. L. T. 236 = 9 Cr. L. J. 276, distinguishing 18 M. 414, where it was held that the privilege did not extend to defamatory statements against a witness interjected during the examination of such witness by the accused who was represented by counsel. But see 40 C. 433 and 40 C. 441 (Note).

28. Extent of immunity of accused against prosecution for false and defamatory statements.—[It is not the intention of the Legislature that an accused person shall be called upon to make a statement on oath or that he should be liable to punishment for giving false answers to questions put to him. A criminal appeal is a continuation of the criminal case and except so far as there is a provision to the contrary, the appellant has the privilege of the accused and cannot be punished for making a false statement in the memorandum of appeal, 12 M. 451, nor for a false statement in the revision petition, 9 A. 200. See also (1870) 2 N.-W. P. 128, 28 A. 331. But the protection afforded to the accused limited to statements made by the accused in answer to questions which are for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him and which are put at some stage of the inquiry or trial. Where, therefore, an accused person who was under trial filed a petition voluntarily containing false allegations in a Superior Court in order to induce the Superior Court to transfer the case, held, that he was punishable under s. 182 I P C, and not protected by this section, 12 O. C. 308 = 10 Cr. L. J. 509; 12 L. R. 124 = 8 Cr. L. J. 378. So also it was held in 40 C. 433 following 14 W. R. 27; 23 C. 887; 5 C. W. N. 293 that a defamatory statement made in bad faith by an accused, against whom a trial is pending in a Criminal Court and contained in a petition to the District Magistrate for transfer of the case is not absolutely privileged but is punishable under s 499, I P C, 11 L. B. R. 321; 15 C. 264, 27 C. 292; 35 C. 880; 32 C. 786; 40 C. 441; 36 M. 216 considered. See 6 Lah. 34 where 28 A. 331 is disapproved, and held that the only provision of law which confers immunity upon an accused person from criminal liability for making a false statement is that contained in sub-section (2) of section 342, but that protection is in respect of statements made by an accused in answer to questions put to him to enable the accused to explain evidence against him.

A recent ruling of the Bombay High Court is to the same effect and it is held that the statements made by an accused person under s. 342 of the Code or contained in written statement filed by him with the Court as permission, are not absolutely privileged as there is nothing in that section to give him an absolute privilege as regards defamatory statements made in the course of examination, 50 B. 162 (F.B.), (17 B. 127 and 17 B. 573 overruled) 48 C. 388 followed).

29. Who is an 'accused'?—This term means a person over whom the Magistrate or other Court is exercising jurisdiction. A person arrested by the Police as concerned in an offence and afterwards released without any order of discharge having been obtained from a Magistrate is not an accused within the meaning of this section, 16 B. 561; 23 C. 493. A person who has been discharged, legally or not, is not an accused 4 L. B. R. 362 = 9 Cr. L. J. 370. But a person under examination by the Court comes under this term, 23 B. 213, 28 C. 709. An accomplice to whom the Local Government has made a promise not to prosecute and by whom the promise has been accepted after the commencement of the trial, is not a competent witness. Such grant of pardon does not alter the position of the accomplice as an accused person and make him cease to be an accused person, nor could oath be administered to him, 9 P. B. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 232. See contra 21 P. R. 1904, 12 P. R. 1902. See Note 20 to s. 337 as to accused illegally pardoned and see also Note 13 to s. 340.

30 Inference from refusal to answer—See ill (h) to s 114 of the Indian Evidence Act. The Court may presume that if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer if given would be unfavourable to him. See also 19 C. W. N 1043—18 Cr. L J 734

No influence to be used to induce disclosures
343. Except as provided in sections 337 and 338 no influence by means of any promise or threat or otherwise, shall be used to an accused person to induce him to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge

Notes—1. With this section should be read ss 24, 28 and 29 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). See Notes to s 163. It is improper to hold out any inducement to confess. 1 W. R. 24 and it is not necessary on the other hand for a Magistrate to caution a prisoner before receiving his statement. 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. XI 10 C. 775. Also where pardon is illegally tendered the evidence so obtained becomes irrelevant and inadmissible, 2 A. 260 and see Note 20 to s 337. See also 1 B. 610, 10 B. 190 and 10 C. 935

2. Section 343 refers to the same accused person who is named and described in s 342. 25 B. 422 and this section does not deal with the admissibility of the evidence of a co-accused who is called for the prosecution on a promise of pardon. 18 Bom. L. R. 266—17 Cr. L. J. 256 (SHAH J., dubitante).

Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings
344. (1) If from the absence of a witness, or any other reasonable cause it becomes necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of or adjourn any inquiry or trial, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by order in writing, stating the reasons therefore from time to time postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody

Remand.

Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this section for a term exceeding fifteen days at a time

(2) Every order made under this section by a Court other than a High Court shall be in writing, signed by the presiding Judge or Magistrate Reasonable cause for remand.

Explanation—If a sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by a remand this is a reasonable cause for a remand

Notes.—1. Section applies only to inquiries and trials and not to Police investigations—This section relates to proceedings in inquiries and trials, and has nothing to do with Police investigations and it contemplates remand to jail and not to Police custody. 23 B. 32 at p. 34. See also 4 Bom. L. R. 878, where it was held that s. 344 does not empower the Magistrate to remand an accused person in custody of the Magistrate to Police custody

2. Detention of accused under trial is not intended to be penal, but its object is to secure attendance. See 38 C. 174. The seriousness of an alleged offence and some evidence of its perpetration by the accused would, however, justify detention.

3. Impropriety of undue protraction of trial—The Honourable the Chief Justice and Judges regret to observe that the trial of cases is at times unnecessarily and unduly protracted. Their Lordships therefore, desire to point out, for the guidance of all Magistrates, that it is their duty to despatch their criminal work with the least possible delay, it being essential for the proper administration of justice that it should be promptly dealt with. As far as possible criminal work should be given precedence over other work, cases in which the accused are in custody being taken up for disposal in preference to those in which the accused are on bail. Magistrates should so arrange for the despatch of their criminal work that the hearing of one case should as much as possible not be allowed to interfere with the hearing of another, each one being fixed for hearing for distinct days due regard being had to their probable duration. Every effort should be made to minimise delay and bring trial to the parties and witnesses. When a case is once commenced it should be heard de die in diem and completed with every possible despatch, the whole or as much of the working day as could be spared being devoted to its hearing. Witnesses remaining over from one day should be examined at the first sitting of the Court on the following day. The practice of taking up a case for an hour or so and then dropping it again should be avoided, and cases should be disposed of, as far as possible, in continuous sittings. Adjournments should, as a rule, be avoided, especially when the accused are likely to be prejudiced thereby, and if from any unavoidable cause an adjournment is deemed indispensable, it should be for as short a time as possible. In any case, a trial once commenced should be continued from day to day, except on Sundays and other days when the Public Treasuries are closed, and days when native usage absolutely requires the intermission of all business. Every Court should sit daily and punctually at the hour appointed for its opening unless prevented by circumstances, which should be recorded in its proceedings. When a Magistrate is on tour, every care should be taken to let the parties and witnesses know the place as well as the time for their appearance which should be fixed so as to obviate, as far as practicable, the inconvenience which must be caused to them by their being called away to long distances from their residences, and the hearing of cases should, as far as possible, be completed at the appointed place without obliging them to move from camp to camp with the Magistrate" (See Bom. Government Gazette, 18th Nov. 1900, p. 10,000). Sessions trial to be adjourned and be dealt with to grant adjournments, but such adjournments should be granted only on the strongest possible ground and for the shortest possible period, 10 A. L. J. 473 = 13 Cr. L. J. 551.

4. When criminal proceedings to be stayed pending disposal of civil litigation—Court's inherent jurisdiction.—As a general rule it is not a valid ground under this section for adjourning a prosecution, that issues similar to those arising in the Criminal Court, are concurrently the subject of determination by a Civil Court, with the possible result of conflicting decisions upon practically the same evidence, especially when the adjournment of the criminal proceedings would necessarily be very prolonged, 1903 A. W. N. 234 = 2 A. L. J. 747; but if the object of prosecuting criminal proceedings while a civil suit in relation to the same matter or a matter intimately connected therewith is pending be in reality to have a preliminary inquiry before the Magistrate into the matter of the suit and prejudice the trial of the civil suit or to coerce the accused into a compromise of the civil suit on terms to be dictated practically by the complainant, the Magistrate should, as a general rule postpone the inquiry into or the trial of the criminal case, till the disposal of the civil suit, Weir II, 413; 7 Bur. L. T. 73 = 15 Cr. L. J. 493. See also 1 M. H. C. R. 66, where it was held that when a Magistrate has, in the exercise of his discretion refused to proceed with a criminal charge

(P.) Parties should not be encouraged to resort to the Criminal Courts in cases in which the point at issue between them is one which can more appropriately be decided by a Civil Court, 33 P. R. 1910 = 87 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 50; 17 Cr. L. J. 7 (Pan). See also 8 S. L. R. 20 = 15 Cr. L. J. 661; 13 C. W. N. 601 and see Notes under Heading XXIX at p 546

ADJOURNMENT.

5. Verbal order of adjournment good.—Where the defendant appeared on a day fixed, but the Magistrate being unable to take up the case, verbally ordered him to appear on the following day, and on his omission to do so, he was convicted under s. 174, 1 P. C., held, that the conviction was good, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. XY.

6. Reasonable ground for adjournment.—If the Court considers either on objection made by or on behalf of the accused, or of its own motion that the examination of a witness not already examined before the committing Magistrate will be a surprise to the accused, and his reasonable cause for postponement or adjournment of the trial, the Court has power to postpone an uncommenced trial or to adjourn a commenced trial, 1 P. R. 1839. A Sessions Judge should allow time to enable the accused to prepare his defence though he delayed to take copies of the evidence of the witnesses before the Magistrate, 13 C. W. N. 142. But where a Sessions trial is adjourned owing to the absence of a witness, the Sessions Judge is not competent to discharge

See also s. 205. Similar Court must be the same event the necessity for a fresh trial (26 B. 50), for the same reason as where a Sessions Judge had vacated office before delivering judgment his successor is not competent to deliver judgment, 23 W. R. 89. An appeal pending against the conviction of the accused in a case is a good ground for adjourning the trial of the same accused in a subsequent case,

5 M. L. T. 90 = 9 Cr. L. J. 495. Where the witnesses of the accused not being in attendance, he makes application to summon them and the Magistrate refuses to comply with it, the accused is prejudiced by such omission, but when such is not the case the High Court will not interfere, 11 W. R. 13. It is not a reasonable ground for an adjournment, that if time is granted for prosecution, by dint of inquiry some evidence might be procured against the accused. See, however, s. 497 Where the proceedings have been completed against an accused person, the decision of the case or his commitment to the Court of Session should not be deferred merely because the principal offenders have not been apprehended, 3 W. R. Gr. Let. 21. A Magistrate should grant an adjournment to an accused to enable him to secure the service of a counsel for cross-examining the prosecution witnesses, 14 P. W. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 278. In 49 G. 182 it was held that the absence of the principal accused and the desirability of a joint trial were not sufficient grounds in the circumstances for a further postponement. The High Court directed the Magistrate to fix a date for hearing and to proceed from day to day and complete the inquiry with all possible despatch.

7 Improper refusal to adjourn.—Where a Magistrate refused to adjourn a case at the end of the day, to enable the accused to examine the witnesses who were in attendance but whose attendance was not certified in the Attendance Register of the Nazir,—the refusal being based on the ground that the witnesses must under some executive rule be treated as not in attendance—it was held that the order of Magistrate was wrong and a re-trial was directed, 7 C. W. N. 714. See also 12 C. L. R. 120. It was not an irregularity to adjourn the trial for the purpose of allowing the accused to secure the attendance of his witnesses, 18 W. R. 21. A decision arrived at without giving the accused reasonable opportunity to secure the attendance of his witnesses, is liable to be set aside 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXVII; 19 M. 375. The fact that the accused's advocate has to fulfil a longstanding engagement in a criminal case at another place is prima facie a reasonable cause for an adjournment, 4 Bar. L. T. 213 = 12 Cr. L. J. 474. See also 1 L. B. R. 60. On the 16th May the trial of the accused was fixed for the 26th May, and his chief pleader was informed of the latter date, but on the 17th, the date of hearing was changed to the 18th. Intimation of this change of date was given to the said pleader, but he asked to have the hearing fixed for the 23rd. Contrary, however, to his request and the wishes of the accused's other pleaders, the trial was proceeded with and the accused was convicted. Held, that the procedure of the Magistrate was improper and gave just cause for complaint to the accused. If there were any reasons for accelerating the date of hearing, the trial should not have been concluded and judgment pronounced without waiting until the date desired by the accused's pleader, or the date originally fixed, hearing the pleader and allowing him to recall any of the witnesses he wished, 15 P. R. 1898. Counsel for accused in a capital case applied for permission to cross-examine a witness on the day following as he was not prepared to cross-examine them that day, but the Court refused permission. Upon this the counsel, being unable to accept the responsibility of conducting the case on behalf of the accused, did not appear and a number of witnesses were consequently not cross-examined. Held, that the application was a reasonable one and should have been granted as no adjournment of the case itself was asked for and the case was a fit one in which the Court should have shown an indulgence although the accused was not entitled to a postponement as a matter of right, 41 C. 299.

7-A Improper to adjourn one of two cross-cases because one is a complaint case and the other is a Police report case.—The policy of the law is that a case should go on unless it be adjourned under the provisions of s. 444 of the Code, for reasons to be stated in the order. There is no justification for the postponement of a trial of a complaint case. There is no foundation for the view that a Police case is to have precedence because it is a Police case. To meet the ends of justice therefore both the cross-cases, the Police case and the complaint case should be tried simultaneously and contemporaneously but should be dealt wholly separately from each other, each on its own merits and upon the facts and circumstances appearing therein judgments in the two cases being pronounced if possible after both the trials are over, 28 C. W. N. 437.

8. Where depositions before Magistrate cannot be received the Court should adjourn to summon deponents.—If in the course of a trial a Sessions Judge is of opinion that the prosecution has not had a basis for the reception of the deposition taken before the Magistrate in the absence of the accused, he should adjourn the trial under this section and under s. 540 summon such witnesses as he may deem material, 12 C. L. R. 120. Similarly, when the particulars of the previous conviction are to hand but the requisite copy of the certificate is not ready, remand should be asked for—C. P. Pol. Man., p. 207.

9 Magistrate must fix place and date of proceedings before them.—By a Government Resolution in the Judicial Department, No. 46, of the 4th January, 1888, it is ordered, that the instance of the High Court, that whenever Magistrates are able, consistently with their other duties, to fix the place as well as the date of proceedings before them whether original or appellate they should do so in order to prevent the harassment of the accused person and others concerned—Bom. H Cr Cr p 39

10. Postponement of a case 'sine die'.—If for proper reasons a Magistrate has jurisdiction to adjourn a case under s. 145 sine die 13 C. W. N 601 = 11 Cr L J 7. A Court of Justice has inherent jurisdiction to stay proceedings in a case pending before it and s. 344 empowers a Criminal Court to adjourn an inquiry or trial for any reasonable cause such as the institution of a civil suit 4 P. W. R. 1916. See Note 4

11. High Court may set aside improper order of adjournment.—Magistrates should understand that the power conferred by this section is a power which is only to be exercised in cases which come really within the terms of that section. It is not a power to be exercised arbitrarily and not according to rule. Where a Magistrate had adjourned an inquiry for a cause not contemplated by this section viz his being busy with executive work, the High Court in the exercise of the power of superintendence conferred by s. 15 of the Charter Act set aside the order of remand 9 B. L. R. 351 = 17 W. R. 55

11 A. Trial on a holiday.—The trial on a Sunday or any other holiday would not necessarily make the proceedings invalid. It would however be irregular as contrary to the provisions of Circular No. 37 of the Criminal Circulars of the High Court (Bombay) and when the accused has been prejudiced e.g. inability to engage vakils the conviction may be set aside 16 Cr L J 752 (B)

COSTS

12. Adjournment on such terms as the Court thinks fit.—The words as it thinks fit empower Criminal Courts to allow the costs of an adjournment 20 P. R. 1904. A complainant may be directed to pay the costs of an adjournment to the accused and a witness 9 A. L. J. 170 = 13 Cr L J 263, 5 L. W. 763 = 22 M. L. T. 42. An order requiring an accused to pay the costs of an adjournment is one which a Magistrate in his discretion may make under this section and the High Court would not interfere with such an order if an order will be set aside by the High Court in revision. See also 23 A. 309 (footnote) 1902 A. W. N. 89 has been dissented from 40 M. 1130; 42 B. 254.

13. Improper to award costs against an absent accused.—Where the accused was absent at the date of hearing and he was not represented by any pleader or counsel the adjournment of the case is altogether unnecessary since the Court could not proceed with the trial or record evidence in the absence of the accused. Under such circumstances the costs of the adjournment could not be awarded against the accused person as it is entirely opposed to the spirit of conducting criminal trials to impose such terms on the accused even while granting adjournments for his benefit and it is requested 6 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr L J 76 dist. gushing 20 P. R. 1904, 20 A. L. J. 330

REMAND OF THE ACCUSED

14. Old and New Codes.—It was formerly held under the Codes of 1861 and 1872 that before making out the warrant of commitment the Magistrate must ascertain the existence of a charge and that he must ascertain

25 W. R. 8. Under the present Code there is no necessity for such evidence. But no remand without a hearing can last for a longer period than 15 days 3 B. H. Cr. Ca. 31

15. Distinction between detention under s. 167 and under s. 344.—Under s. 167 a Magistrate on the mere perusal of the entries in the Police diaries relating to the case to which the accused have no access may from time to time authorize the detention of the accused in custody for a term not exceeding 15 days whole. Thereafter he can under s. 344 by a warrant remand an accused for any term not exceeding 15 days if sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have an offence and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by such remand 36 C. 166 s. 167 at pp. 381—385

16 Remand cannot be granted in the absence of the accused—To remand is to re-commit to custody and since a first commitment requires the presence of the accused re-commitment also requires his presence Weir II, 409.

17 Copies of remand orders to be submitted to Sub-Divisional Magistrates.—Copies of all orders of remand together with reasons of such orders shall be transmitted by Subordinate Magistrate to Divisional or District Magistrates to whom they are subordinate within twenty-four hours from the date of the same—M H C Pro, 6th May 1878

18 Reasonable ground for a remand not supported by sworn testimony when sufficient.—This section must be read as a proviso to s. 208 which authorizes a Magistrate for reasonable cause to remand an accused person to jail without examining any witness. Where evidence was available but it appeared necessary to the Magistrate to defer the examination of witnesses, in order that further evidence may be produced (so that the inquiry when commenced might be continuous), held that such a reason recorded by the Magistrate justified a remand for five days and a further remand for four days. When a Magistrate defers the examination of witnesses adjourns the inquiry, and remands the prisoner, he is bound to express clearly on the record the reasonable cause from which such action became necessary or advisable, 6 M 63, 33 C 174, 11 M 98 and 20 W. R. 23 = 11 B L R. Appx VIII at p 11. But it ought to be understood by all Magistrates that remands to custody should not ordinarily be ordered under s. 344 without first recording some evidence, when such is already available to show that good ground exists for believing the accused person to have committed a non bailable offence. 11 N L R. 162 = 16 Cr L J 705 See Note 20 below

19 When second remand is needed by the Police direct evidence of accused being concerned in the crime must be produced—When the accused are first brought before a Magistrate and a remand is required by the prosecutor it is ordinarily sufficient to show by the evidence of a Police-officer that the Police are in possession of information believed to be reliable that an offence has been committed and that the accused were concerned in its commission but when they are again brought up after a remand and a further remand is needed some direct evidence of the guilt of the accused should be required to justify the Magistrate in refusing bail and with each remand the necessity for production of evidence of guilt becomes stronger 6 M 69 followed in 11 N L R 162 = 16 Cr. L J 705

20 Duty of Magistrate when farther remand applied for—It after a remand incriminating evidence is not adduced, and if the prosecution has already had sufficient time to adduce such evidence the Court will reasonably conclude that such evidence is not forthcoming at the time. It should then under s. 497 (2) release the accused on bail whatever be the nature of the offence though the preliminary inquiry should proceed (6 M. 63 followed). Whether there are reasonable grounds or not must be decided judicially, that is to say there should be, some tangible evidence on the record on which, if unrebutted, the Court can conclude that the accused might be convicted. The statement by a witness that he has seen a certain act of an incriminating character done by the accused might be sufficient. But if there be no evidence whatsoever or evidence of a very flimsy character on the face of it, the inference will be, after a reasonable time has elapsed since the beginning of the inquiry that there are no reasonable grounds for supposing the accused to be guilty. The prosecution must however have a fair opportunity of adducing evidence of a really incriminating nature. In all events the first information report should indicate with sufficient exactness the character of the evidence likely to be forthcoming. The detention of an accused under trial is not intended to be penal but its object is to secure attendance. The gravity of the offence and some evidence of its perpetration by the accused will, however justify detention.—Per MITRA J in 36 C 174, but see 36 C 166 See Chapter XXXIV for bail

21 When accused has made confessional statement and pointed out articles, remand for farther confession is most objectionable—Where the accused has already made a confessional statement and produced an article stolen from a person who had been murdered and there was ample evidence before the Magistrate it was held that a remand of the accused in order to get from him a confessional statement was most objectionable. The practice of pressing for examination of accused persons by Magistrate immediately after they have made confessions is also objectionable Weir II, 414 The accused was for 15 days in the custody of the Police and at the end of that period an application was made under this section for a further period of detention in Police custody. Held that this section does not empower the Magistrate to remand an accused person in the custody of the Magistrate to Police custody for the purpose of obtaining information with regard to the offences which the accused may be alleged to have committed. 4 Bom L R. 878 See Note 3 to s. 167 at p 382.

22 Remand improper in the case of bailable offences—The terms of s. 496 have been held to be permissive and if the offence is bailable the accused ought to be admitted to bail 8 C. W. N 779

23. Magistrate taking charge should inquire what accused persons are in detention under Court's order—Every Magistrate, on receiving or resuming charge of his office should inquire what accused persons are in detention under the orders of this Court, with a view to their being brought before him within the period allowed by law—Bom. H C Cr Cr, p. 18.

24. Magistrate liable in damages for unreasonable detention—A Magistrate who without reasonable cause, delays proceeding with the trial of persons, whom he keeps in jail is liable notwithstanding Act XVIII of 1850 to an action in damages if the prisoners are eventually acquitted 11 W R. 19

(3) When any offence is compounded under this section the abetment of such offence or an attempt to commit such offence (when such attempt is itself an offence) may be compounded in like manner

(4) When the person who would otherwise be competent to compound an offence under this section is dead under this section he may be competent to contract on his behalf

† These words were substituted for the words "a man or boy" by Act inserted by Act

(5) When the accused has been committed for trial or when he has been convicted and an appeal is pending no composition for the offence shall be allowed without the leave of the Court to which he is committed or, as the case may be before which the appeal is to be heard

* (5-A) A High Court acting in the exercise of its powers of revision under section 439 may allow any person to compound any offence which he is competent to compound under this section

(6) The composition of an offence under this section shall have the effect of an acquittal of the accused with whom the offence has been compounded

(7) No offence shall be compounded except as provided by this section

Notes.—1. Section is exhaustive as to the law on composition.—The section contains provisions with regard to (a) the persons who may compound (b) the nature of the offences that may be compounded (c) the stage of the criminal proceedings at which the composition is sought to be made (d) it also provides that in regard to some offences the mere consent of the injured person shall not suffice for composition he must obtain the permission of the Court, the Courts, being specified where permission to compound has to be obtained. Sub-section (7) must therefore be taken to mean that no offence shall be compounded except where the provisions of s. 345 are satisfied as to each of these four matters, 29 M. L. J. 521—18 M. L. T. 381—18 Cr. L. J. 758

WHO MAY COMPOUND

2. Only person to whom hurt is caused can compound.—The offence of hurt can be compounded only by the person to whom the hurt is caused. So where a widow who complained of hurt caused to her husband in consequence of which he died compounded the offence and the Magistrate thereupon acquitted the accused it was held the acquittal was wrong Weir II, 418, 37 A. 419 So also where hurt was caused to three persons one of whom died subsequently held that the remaining two could not lawfully compromise the offence as regards the deceased 31 A. 806 A compromise cannot be refused merely because the master of the person in whose quarrel the complainant was injured refuses to give his permission 17 O. C. 92—15 Cr. L. J. 587, 15 A. L. J. 467, 37 C. W. N. 168

3. Defamation of wife.—In 14 M. 379 at p. 381 it was laid down that where a woman had been defamed by the imputation of unchastity to her and the husband lodges a complaint being a person aggrieved within the meaning of s. 198 the wife may without the consent of the husband or against his wishes lawfully compound the offence under this section. WHAT OFFENCES MAY BE COMPOUNDED

3. Mischief when the only loss or damage is loss or damage to private person.—These words evidently refer to the definition of mischief contained in s. 425 I. P. C. under which the loss or damage may be caused either to the public or to any person. The distinction made is between private and public property and not between the property of a private person or a public servant. The fact that the complainant was a Village Mahar would not make his private property the property of the public but even of the Mahar community generally. Held therefore that the Magistrate was wrong in not entertaining the application of the complainant to compound and the case 22 B. 839

WHO MAY PERMIT COMPOSITION

6. Police officer cannot permit compromise.—Police officer is not empowered to entertain an application for withdrawal of a complaint. The permission a complainant to withdraw is a judicial act the exercise of which is vested in the Magistrate under this section and the Police have no authority to interfere in such matters Ratanlal 91.

* Sub-section (5-A) was inserted by Act XV III of 1923 s. 80 † Added by (ibid).

7 Appeal Court may permit composition.—Sub-section (5) is put in to meet 2 A. 339 and enables the Appellate Court to allow cases being compounded after conviction but pending the appeal. But without such leave there can be no composition. 11 L. W. 33

8. Is High Court competent to allow compounding of offence when exercising its revisional jurisdiction?—See Note under s. 439. Sub-section (3 A) is new and puts an end to the conflict of decisions on the point whether a High Court can allow composition in revision. So the decisions in 32 A. 153 and 37 A. 127 holding contrary opinions have lost their importance now since the above sub-section lays down distinctly that a High Court can allow composition in revision.

For the High Court's power in revision to allow an offence to be compounded see 46 A. 91 = 21 A. L. J. 838

9 It is open to parties to compound when conviction has been set aside on appeal and retrial ordered.—Where the accused is charged with a compoundable offence and is convicted and the conviction is set aside on appeal and a retrial ordered held that it was open to the accused and complainant to compound in the same manner in which a case may be compounded before conviction by the Magistrate and no sanction of the Court is necessary. 3 A. L. J. 533 = 1906 A. W. N. 200 = 4 Cr. L. J. 35.

9 A Former Magistrate from whose board case transferred to another Magistrate by the District Magistrate cannot record a composition.—Where a District Magistrate calls for papers in a case under s. 439 with a view to withdraw it from one Magistrate and refer it for trial to another the jurisdiction of a former Magistrate ceases and he cannot record a composition and acquit the accused. 27 Bom. L. R. 350

REQUISITES OF COMPOSITION.

10 Onus of proving composition lies on accused.—When an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it the onus is on him to show that there was a composition valid in law. 21 C. 103.

11 Is consideration for compromise necessary?—The compounding of an offence signifies that the person against whom an offence has been committed has received some gratification to act as an inducement or his desisting to abstain from prosecution. Per RIVINGTON J. in 21 C. 103 at p. 112 approved in 9 P. R. 1896. But a lawful composition may be effected within the scope of this section without the passing of any consideration or gratification. All that the law requires is that there must be some arrangement between the parties settling their differences. 9 P. R. 1896, 22 L. R. 16 = 10 Cr. L. J. 228. See also 18 M. L. T. 602 = 16 Cr. L. J. 803.

12 Composition need not be effected in Court.—In cases which can be compounded without the sanction of the Magistrate (sub-sec. 1) there is no necessity for the composition to be effected in Court in the criminal trial any more than in the civil suit. If in such cases a composition out of Court is proved a Magistrate would have no jurisdiction to go on with the trial. 62 L. R. 234 = 14 Cr. L. J. 292 following 21 C. 103. Where an offence has been compounded outside the Court but subsequently at the time of hearing one of the parties resiles from the agreement it is competent to the Court to take evidence as to the tactual agreement and give effect to it if it be found to have been entered into. Per ABUR RAHIM J. 18 M. L. T. 602 = 16 Cr. L. J. 803, 23 M. L. T. 240. 41 M. 685 = 34 M. L. J. 932

12-A. Muchilka or agreement signed referring dispute to a Panchayat does not, by itself, amount to a composition.—After a charge for defamation was framed the parties signed a Mu. hilka referring their dispute to a Panchayat. No arbitration took place and no award was passed. Held that the mere signing of a Muchilka does not amount to a composition of the offence under s. 345 of the Code. 49 M. L. J. 544

DUTY OF COURT IN CASES OF COMPOSITION

13. Magistrate has no power to prevent composition of compoundable offences.—All offences mentioned in the second column of the table given under this section may be compounded even when cases regarding them are sent up by the Police and a Magistrate has no power to prevent this course. 10 C. 253, 1894 A. W. N. 256. The permission of the Court mentioned in sub-sec. (2) is not required in the case of such offences except under the circumstances mentioned in sub-sec. (5). 1833 A. W. N. 245, 1836 A. W. N. 167. Where after a charge of an offence compoundable without the permission of the Court was pleaded to by the accused the person mentioned in first column of the table in s. 345 filed a petition of composition the Magistrate altered the charge to a non-compoundable offence. Held the petition should have been at once accepted and the accused acquitted. 29 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 81

14. Before allowing composition, Magistrate should decide whether compoundable offence is proved.—The accused was charged with furious driving and knocking down an old woman who died a few days afterwards of the injuries she had received. During the inquiry before the Magistrate, a relative of the deceased came to a compromise with the accused, and the Magistrate treating the charge as that of an offence under s. 336, I P. C., allowed it to be compounded. Held, that as it appeared from the evidence that the death of the woman was caused by her being run over, the offence would be brought under s. 304, I P. C., or under the definition of culpable homicide, neither of which is compoundable under this section. Therefore the Magistrate should find upon the evidence whether the accused is not competent to allow it to be compounded and to discharge the accused. Where the accused were forwarded usurped a jurisdiction not vested in him by law, as the offence disclosed was not compoundable under this section, 4 Bom. L. R. 718. See also 11 P. R. 1907 = 34 P. W. R. 1907, where it was held that a Magistrate had no jurisdiction to allow a non-compoundable offence to be compounded on the ground that it would probably be better for the complainant to do so, that the accused also wished for the compromise, and that it was probable that the case might in the end turn out to be a compoundable offence. Such an order is ultra vires. See, however, 29 P. R. 1914, Note 16 (b) where these cases are explained.

On withdrawal from prosecution in warrant case Magistrate cannot acquit—In a warrant case in respect of a non-compoundable offence it is not competent to the Magistrate on a private complainant offering to withdraw from the prosecution to enter an order of acquittal. 15 Bom. L. R. 81 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 17 = 16 Cr. L. J. 77. In 1 B. 84 the legality of such a procedure was not considered and Ratanlal 330 which is based on that case was not followed.

15. Court must at once give effect to composition.—When the parties to an offence compoundable without permission of Court produce before the Court a writing signed by them the Court is bound to act upon it and is not at liberty to call upon the parties to adduce further evidence that the case has been compounded, 16 Bom. L. R. 939 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 257 = 16 Cr. L. J. 83. The resolution of the Bombay Government in the Judicial Department, No 7969, dated 4th November, 1912, can only apply to cases where the permission of the Court is needed in order that the case may be compounded. In case of offences compoundable without sanction of the Court, the composition is complete immediately the complainant puts it forward in Court. When the petition of compromise is put in the case is at an end and the Court's sole remaining duty and sole remaining function is to record a formal order of acquittal and to set the accused person at liberty, 29 P. R. 1914 (F.B.) = 16 Cr. L. J. 81. See also the remarks of ABHAY RAU, J., in 18 M. L. T. 602 = 16 Cr. L. J. 803.

(a) Petition of compromise—A female, presented a petition to the Magistrate thereupon satisfied himself that the case then and there ordered the petition to be filed with the record. Held that the complainant could not be allowed to withdraw the petition, and the Magistrate was wrong in ordering the same to be put up with the record, but should have accepted the compromise and dealt with it then and there, 3 C. W. R. 322 and 343.

(b) Charge cannot be altered to a non-compoundable offence—Where charge covering offences compoundable without sanction of Court has actually been drawn up and read and explained to the accused persons and been pleaded to and a petition of compromise is filed by the person mentioned in the last column in the table in s. 345, it is not open to the Court at such a stage to sit down and consider whether the charge itself is drawn was appropriate or not much less proceed to alter that charge and go on with a case which has passed wholly out of its hands. The Court must accept the petition, 29 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 81 (F.B.). S. 227 has no application to such cases. The cases in 4 Bom. L. R. 718 and 11 P. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 335 were distinguished. Where the accused was charged with an offence compoundable under this section and the parties compromised the case, held, that the Magistrate should have acquitted the accused and that he was wrong in having proceeded with the trial of the case and convicted the accused of an offence disclosed by the evidence. Webb 11, 418. See also 1 L. B. R. 349; 4 Bom. L. R. 718.

16. Proof of composition.—The proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue, and unless it appears that parties were free from influence of any kind, and were fully aware of their respective rights, it would be impossible to give effect to a so-called arrangement or composition, 21 C. 103.

17 Award of compensation illegal when acquittal results from composition.—Though the composition of an offence under this section has the effect of an acquittal, yet it is not such an acquittal as brings the case within the provisions of s. 250. Therefore where an offence under s. 323, I P C., being compounded the trying Magistrate ordered the complainant to pay one of the accused Rs 25 as compensation, his order was reversed as illegal, Ratanlal 957; 10 Bom. L. R. 1056 = 9 Cr. L. J. 188; 19 P. R. 1888. See contra 24 P. R. 883. See Note 8 under s. 250.

EFFECT OF COMPOSITION.

18 By one accused on other accused not summoned.—If in the case of a compoundable offence, the complainant intimates to the Court that he has compounded it and desires to withdraw the complaint, the order passed by the Magistrate allowing the withdrawal, is in respect to the offence and not solely in regard to the persons actually under trial at the time, and in so providing the law contemplates that all the accused persons should be under trial at the same time before a judicial officer, unless it be in some exceptional circumstances such as sickness or absconding. Where, therefore, in a complaint against several persons, one only was summoned and the case was compromised and subsequently process was ordered to issue against the others, held that the order was wrong as the complaint was compounded in respect of the offences committed so as to include the parties now ordered to be summoned and that further proceedings should be stayed. The moment a composition is voluntarily effected under this section, it operates as an acquittal of all the accused, irrespective of the fact whether process has issued or not, 7 C. W. N. 176. But in 41 Mad. 323, 7 C. W. N. 176 is dissented from and it is held, that a composition with one of several accused does not effect an acquittal of others. And in 45 B. 346; 7 C. W. N. 176, was dissented from and 41 M. 323, was followed and it was held that the compounding of an offence with one of many accused has not the effect of acquittal of the remaining accused persons between whom and the complainant no satisfactory settlement has been arrived at. See also 43 A. 453 and also sub-section (6) wherein the words "with whom the offence has been compounded" are newly added in consonance with 45 B. 346.

19. Complete bar to further proceedings.—(i) Sub-section (6) indicates that the composition has the same effect in a criminal trial as it would have in a civil suit. It operates as complete a bar to the prosecution as if the accused had been acquitted, 6 B. L. R. 284 = 14 Cr. L. J. 292. When a case under s. 498, I P C., was under investigation by the Police, compromise was effected and subsequently a complaint was made to a Magistrate who issued process, held the proceedings before the Magistrate were ultra vires, 22 P. L. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 386.

(ii) On a cognate charge—An accused charged under s. 324, I P C., cannot, if the offence has been compounded with the permission of the Court, be again tried on the same facts on a charge under s. 323, I P C., if the composition which has the effect of an acquittal, is still in force, Ratanlal 519; 17 C. W. N. 965 = 14 Cr. L. J. 458. Where certain persons were accused of house-trespass causing grievous hurt and being members of an unlawful assembly but were only summoned under s. 325, I P C., and a petition to compromise the whole matter was put in and the Magistrate sanctioned the compromise so far as s. 325, was concerned, held, that the accused could not be tried for any of the other offences, as to the offence of house-trespass because no sanction was necessary and as to unlawful assembly because the object of the unlawful assembly could only have been to commit the two offences which had been compounded, 17 C. W. N. 943 = 14 Cr. L. J. 433.

(iii) To a suit—A composition can be pleaded as accord and satisfaction and would be a complete bar to a civil suit for damages 6 B. L. R. 284 = 14 Cr. L. J. 292.

20. Plea that original charge has been compounded is no answer to a charge under s. 211, I P C.—The fact that an offence, alleged to have been committed has been compounded, is no conclusive answer to a charge made against the prosecutor under s. 211 I P C. A laid a charge against M for wrongful confinement. The Police reported the case as a false one, and A not appearing to prove his complaint, the District Magistrate ordered him to be prosecuted under s. 211, I P C., and made over the case to a Deputy Magistrate. Upon the hearing of such charge, A pleaded that he had compounded the original charge laid by him against M, and that therefore the charge against him under s. 211 could not lie. The Deputy Magistrate, without hearing any evidence dismissed the case. Held, that the course so taken was illegal, as such plea was no conclusive answer to a charge under s. 211, 11 C. 79.

21 Comparison between withdrawal and composition—See 19 P. R. 1888; 14 M. 379; 21 C. 103 and Note 4 under s. 248.

22. Revision.—It is open to the High Court in revision to set aside the order of acquittal based on a petition of compromise if there has been material irregularity, 7 B. L. R. 300 = 15 Cr. L. J. 533.

23. Procedure where the injured persons refuse investigation—In non-compoundable cognizable summons-cases which affect the public interests, the Police shall ordinarily proceed irrespective of the wishes of the complainant. (2) In compoundable offences when the injured persons compound, the Police shall hold their hands. (3) In non-compoundable cognizable warrant-cases the Police shall proceed irrespective of the wishes of the complainants. (4) When the Police hold their hands, they shall make the report required by law—Rul and Ord., Punjab, p. 384

With respect to cases in which complainants are unwilling to prosecute the following rules shall have effect, that is, say—(a) In non cognizable cases of public importance which come to the knowledge of the Police, they shall lay information before the Magistrate having jurisdiction, and it rests with such Magistrate to take such steps as he may deem fit in any such cases which are important the Police shall confine themselves to the ordinary entry in the station diary. (b) In non-compoundable cognizable summons-cases which do not affect the public interests and which are brought forward by private complainants, the Police shall hold their hands if the complainant seeks no investigation, unless, on receipt of the report of the case, the Magistrate having jurisdiction, or the Magistrate of the district, orders investigation, or unless a clear case is made out against a known person. Rul and Ord., N W P

24. Analogous Law.—Under s. 663, N. Y. Cr Pro Code when a defendant is brought before a Magistrate or is held to answer, on a charge of misdemeanour, for which the person injured by the act constituting the crime has a remedy by a civil action, the crime may be compromised, as provided in the next section (i.e., with the permission of the Court) except when it was committed (1) by or upon an officer of justice, while in the execution of the duties of his office, (2) riotously or (3) with an intent to commit felony

25. Contracts to settle or withdraw from prosecution are illegal and unenforceable.—See s. 23 of the Contract Act. Even if made with sanction of Court such contracts cannot be enforced. See Windhill Local Board v Vent 45 Ch. D. 337; in re Campbell, 14 Q. B. D. 32 Kaufman v Gerson, (1904) 1 K. B. 591 (C.A.). They do not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed with the trial of the offence in question re Bryant, 27 J. P. 277—289; and even in civil proceedings, though the illegality is not pleaded the Court may intervene and dismiss the action, Scott v Brown (1892) 2 Q. B. 726.

26. A case may be compromised at any stage under this section before sentence is pronounced and a Magistrate cannot refuse to accept a petition of compromise filed at a time when the judgment was being written, 22 C. W. N. 744—45 C. 818

346. (1) If, in the course of an inquiry or a trial before a Magistrate in any district outside the Presidency-towns, the evidence appears to him to warrant a presumption that the case is one which should be tried or committed for trial by some other Magistrate in such district, he shall stay proceedings and submit the case, with a brief report explaining its nature, to any Magistrate to whom he is subordinate or to such other Magistrate having jurisdiction, as the

I proceed, of Provincial Magistrate in cases which he cannot dispose of.

District Magistrate directs

(2) The Magistrate to whom the case is submitted may, if so empowered, either try the case himself, or refer it to any Magistrate, subordinate to him having jurisdiction, or commit the accused for trial

Notes.—1. When section may be resorted to.—This section might appropriately be used where the particular Magistrate is not competent to try one which he is declared otherwise incompetent to try in European British subject over whom he has no jurisdiction of an European British subject, provided that the section is otherwise applicable and resort to its use is in the circumstances of the case permissible. There is nothing in Chapter XXXVI or in any other provision of the Code which renders section 346 inapplicable to proceedings against European British subjects, 7 M. L. R. 93—12 Cr. L. J. 438

(b) If the accused is an old offender—Proof of previous conviction, against a person accused before a Magistrate is evidence which will justify such Magistrate in taking action under this section 1894 A. W. N. 200.

2. Duty of inferior Court when aggravating circumstances become apparent during trial.—A tribunal can properly clutch jurisdiction by intentionally ignoring facts of aggravation which make the offence really cognizable only by a higher tribunal. Where the accused has himself objected to the jurisdiction the High Court would feel itself bound to interfere, and have no discretion but to annul conviction which has been the result of the exercise of jurisdiction by a lower tribunal, Weir II, 421. 'It is an evasion of the law to treat an aggravated offence as an ordinary one and thus introduce a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment. When evidence discloses circumstances of aggravation, e.g. such as the use of a dangerous weapon, which makes the offence one cognizable by higher Court, it becomes the duty of the trying Magistrate to use the proper procedure for sending the case to a Higher Court. PER JARDINE J., 13 B. 502 at p. 503.' See Weir II, 420, as to circumstances in which Subordinate Magistrate should refrain from exercising jurisdiction in theft cases. See 30 P. R. 1889, where a conviction by a Magistrate of a minor offence was set aside and the record was returned to him to proceed under this section or s 347 but if the interests of justice have not suffered the High Court will not interfere 25 M. 675, 2 M. L. T. 495 = 7 Cr. L. J. 215, 25 M. L. J. 434 = 14 Cr. L. J. 640.

3. Magistrate ought not to split up offences.—Magistrates are not at liberty to pass over material parts of the evidence in cases before them and so to withdraw cases from the cognizance of proper tribunals, 3 W. R. 68; 1 C. L. R. 434; 27 C. 983. Nor can a Magistrate split up an offence into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself jurisdiction over the minor charges, 1 C. L. R. 434; 11 C. 236; 4 C. 18 = 3 C. L. R. 44; 22 M. 439, 29 C. 409.

But in 25 M. 675 it was pointed out that where facts disclose an offence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, it would be a fallacy to say that he was not empowered by law to try the person charged for the offence which is within his jurisdiction, because the same facts disclose a more serious offence which is beyond his jurisdiction. But it was improper, it was said on the part of a Magistrate intentionally to ignore facts disclosing circumstances of aggravation which show that an offence beyond his jurisdiction, has been in fact committed as well as an offence within his jurisdiction. 'But if the Magistrate has so acted he has not acted without jurisdiction within the meaning of s 530. See also in 10 C. 85, it was held that an officer entrusted with special powers under s 34, should rarely, if ever, try a case himself when it appears from some of the evidence that the accused might have been charged with an offence beyond his jurisdiction to take cognizance of. See Note to s 260 and Notes to s 530.

4. Magistrates having no jurisdiction to try, cannot discharge.—A Magistrate who finds he has no jurisdiction to try a case cannot discharge the accused under s 233, but should proceed under this section Weir II, 323.

5. Submission after framing charge not illegal.—It is not irregular for a Magistrate of the second or third class, to frame a charge against an accused person in a case which he has jurisdiction to try even though at the time of framing the charge he intends if he is of opinion that the accused is guilty, to submit the proceedings to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate under this section, 1905 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 33 = 2 Cr. L. J. 464.

6. Superior Magistrate cannot return the case.—(a) With direction to prepare the charge under particular section.—A second-class Magistrate, not being empowered to pass a sentence of whipping, which in his opinion, was appropriate, reported a case to the District Magistrate for passing sentence, held, that the latter should have treated the report as one made under this section and not sent back the case to the second-class Magistrate with special directions to prepare a charge under a particular section, Ratanlal 499 and 554, 45 M. 840.

(b) With direction to commit.—In 3 M. 327, pending an inquiry into a case of house-breaking, the second-class Magistrate of one division was transferred to another division and the case transferred to his file by the District Magistrate. In the course of the trial, it appeared to the second-class Magistrate that the case was one of robbery and so not triable by him. He, therefore, stayed proceedings and submitted the case to the Divisional Magistrate and the latter forwarded it to the District Magistrate as he thought that he had no jurisdiction the offence having been committed outside his division. The District Magistrate ordered the case to be committed to the Sessions, if the second-class Magistrate thought there was sufficient evidence and the second-class Magistrate accordingly committed the case to the Court of Session, held, that the order of the District Magistrate was illegal. The submittal under this section is not a proceeding in the nature of a commitment.

7. Superior Magistrate must, if he elects to try, proceed de novo and not to act upon previously recorded evidence—consent cannot cure illegality.—In 91 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 369, a Subordinate Magistrate having found after the completion of a trial, that the accused deserved a more severe punishment than he could inflict, sent case to the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate treating the case as sent up under this section asked the accused whether they wanted the witnesses re-called and re-heard and on their replying in the negative proceeded to judgment and convicted the accused without trying the case afresh. Held, that the procedure adopted by the District Magistrate was illegal. The consent of the accused cannot dispense with strict compliance with provisions of the Code and illegalities are not cured by consent. A Subordinate Magistrate referred a case to the District Magistrate under this section. The District Magistrate would have had power to try it only under this section. He instead of trying the case himself, accepted the plea put fit before the Lower Court which was not actually a plea of guilty. The plea was neither made before the District Magistrate, nor was it recorded by himself. He merely contented himself with taking evidence as to previous convictions without recording any evidence as to the guilt of the accused. Held, that since the reference was under this section and not under s. 349, the evidence taken by the Subordinate Magistrate was not evidence in the trial before the District Magistrate and that procedure adopted by the latter Magistrate was illegal 106 P. L. R. 1905. The special provisions of s. 350 do not apply to proceedings stayed under this section. The accused have the right given by law to be convicted only on evidence recorded by the District Magistrate himself and the District Magistrate is competent to convict only on such evidence and they cannot be deprived of the right even with their consent, 25 P. L. R. 1905 = 361 P. L. R. 1905. Where a case which has been partly heard by one officer is transferred to another officer for trial, the latter should hear all the evidence in the case before deciding it. Where a District Magistrate brought a partly heard case on to his own file, recorded the rest of the evidence and passed a decision on the whole of the evidence, it was held that such a proceeding was not a legal trial, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 468. See also 14 W. R. 3; 25 C. 663; 4 M. 327. In 1894 A. W. N. 200, the High Court refused to set aside a conviction as it was not shown that the accused was prejudiced by the evidence not being taken afresh. But see Note below.

8. But a superior Magistrate can commit without taking fresh evidence.—The Sub-Divisional Magistrate to whom a case is submitted under this section can commit it to a Court of Session without taking evidence afresh, Ratanlal 473; 12 C. W. N. 136 = 6 Cr. L. J. 429. He is bound to dispose of it in one of the ways prescribed herein, Ratanlal 536.

Procedure when after commencement of inquiry or trial, Magistrate finds case should be committed.

347. (1) If in any inquiry before a Magistrate, or in any trial before a Magistrate before signing judgment, it appears to him at any stage of the proceedings that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session or High Court, and if he is empowered to commit for trial, he shall * commit the accused under the provisions hereinbefore contained

(2) If such Magistrate is not empowered to commit for trial he shall proceed under s. 346.

Notes—1 As to how Magistrate ought to exercise their discretion in committing cases, see Notes 22 and 24 to s. 209 at pp 604—607

2 Cases which ought to be tried by the Court of Session.—The words ought to be tried must be read with s. 254. See Note 2 to s. 207. If a Subordinate Magistrate be empowered to make a commitment to the Court of Session and the offence be triable by the Magistrate of the District or the Court of Session, he should refer the case to the District Magistrate rather than commit to the Court of Session after holding a preliminary inquiry, since this latter procedure though strictly legal, should as much as possible be avoided, as it tends unnecessarily to occupy the more valuable time of the Sessions Judge, 2 W. R. (Cr. L.) 19. Where a Magistrate commits a case well within his power to punish and does not give any good reason for commitment, the commitment is bad. See Notes 24—28 to s. 209, at p 607. But in 42 M. 83 it has been held that the terms of s. 347 of the Code are general and give a Magistrate who is empowered to commit a discretion in committing cases for trial which is not limited by s. 254 so as to make it obligatory on him to try every case which he can adequately punish (24 C. 429; 1 M. L. T. 81 and 11 Cr. L. J. 54 not followed. 1 M. 239 P. R. applied.) In the same case NAPIER, J., observed "I am at a loss to comprehend why the wide words of s. 347 should be curtailed by reference to s. 254 when there is a specific section, namely, s. 349 which deals with the circumstances referred to in s. 254."

3. Is this section subject to provisions of Chapter XVIII?—This section applies only to those inquiries or trials which have been started by the Magistrate with the intention of concluding them himself and then at some stage becomes satisfied that this original intention was inappropriate and thinks that the case was one which ought to be tried by a Sessions Court. If from the first he thinks that the case ought to be tried by a Sessions Court, the procedure laid down by Chapter XVIII is prima facie obligatory on him. The words "stop further proceedings" obviously refer to proceedings in a trial which he starts with a view to try them himself and not to shorten the proceedings before commitment under Chapter XVIII. The words "under the provisions hereinbefore contained" show that the Magistrate must make his proceedings conform to the provisions of Chapter XVIII and that before he writes and signs a committal order, the provisions of that Chapter must be carried out and he must not confirm himself to the mere passing of the order of commitment under s. 213, 8 L. B. R. 129 = 5 Bur. L. T. 539 = 13 Cr. L. J. 877 (F.B.), ROBINSON, J., dissenting. See also 36 M. 321 and Note at the head of Chapter XVIII at p. 593. The amendment proposed makes the point clear. "We agree entirely with the decision of the Full Bench of the Burma Chief Court that it was not intended by s. 347 to enable the Magistrate to deprive the accused of any of the right, conferred on him by Chapter XVIII, though as observed by one of the learned Judges, when an order has been made under s. 347, proceedings under Chapter XVIII need not necessarily be commenced de novo 13 Cr. L. J. 366 (M.). Under the old section there was a conflict of opinion as to the meaning of the words 'stop further proceedings.' Under the present amendment those words are deleted and therefore it is clear that the intention of the Legislature seems to be that the provisions of s. 347 are subject to Chapter XVIII, and this is further made clear by the wording of the section enjoining the Magistrate "to commit the accused under the provisions hereinbefore contained."

(a) Right of accused to cross examine prosecution witnesses—See Note 7 (2) at p. 615. The discretion to stop further proceedings does not justify a Magistrate in disregarding the directions in ss. 208–210, but only requires him to stop proceeding with the case as a trial and instead to commit the case to the Sessions. He should then follow the procedure laid down in Chapter XVIII, 5 Bur. L. T. 239 = 13 Cr. L. J. 877 (F.B.). Where however, the accused has not been prejudiced by the Magistrate not following the procedure laid down by Chapter XVIII, the commitment need not be quashed, 13 Cr. L. J. 366 (M.). The power of the Magistrate to commit the accused is not subject to the provisions of s. 209, that is to say, that no commitment could be made until all the evidence referred to in s. 208 sub-secs (1) and (2), had been taken. Such a contention altogether ignores the words "at any stage of the proceedings shall stop further proceedings," and is opposed to the clear meaning of this section which is contained in the Chapter dealing with general provisions as to inquiries and trials, and applies to all inquiries and trials, before a Magistrate, Ratanlal 975; 38 C. 45. Where, therefore the accused did not cross-examine the prosecution witnesses immediately after their examination in chief but applied to the Magistrate, after the close of the prosecution, to cross-examine them and to examine defence witnesses, held, that the Magistrate was justified under s. 347 in committing the case without the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses and the examination of the witnesses for the defence, 38 C. 45 dissenting from 20 A. 284 and 26 A. 171. Even where the Magistrate has issued summonses to the defence witnesses and has examined some of them it is open to the Magistrate to proceed under this section without examining the other witnesses. The power to stop proceedings at any stage which s. 347 gives him is unqualified 13 Cr. L. J. 704 (M.) where 36 C. 45 is approved on. But if before the prosecution case is absolutely closed, e.g. after all the witnesses but one have been examined the accused applies to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses and examine witnesses on his behalf, the accused is entitled to do so 16 C. L. J. 45 = 13 Cr. L. J. 688. See also 51 C. 442 where 36 C. 45 is referred to and discussed and distinguished.

4. Proceedings may be stayed and accused committed after charge.—This section authorizes a Magistrate after a charge has been drawn up to stop further proceedings, and commit for trial 3 C. 495; only the further procedure necessary for commitment shall be taken as directed in Chapter XVIII, 2 A. 910.

5. Committal must be before signing judgment.—Except as provided in ss. 369, 395 and 484 no Criminal Court has power to review or alter its own judgment when it has been formally recorded or to quash its own convictions though illegal, 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 67; 5 W. R. 61; 17 W. R. 2, 2 A. 33; 23 W. R. 49, 1 B. H. C. R. 3; 6 W. R. 70; 14 C. 42, 7 A. 672.

6. Application of section to trials of European British subjects.—S. 447 corresponds to this section but it does not override this section but is merely supplementary to it in that it contains directions regarding the Court to which the accused should be committed. Secs. 447 and 347 must be read together in cases in which the Magistrate thinks the accused should be committed and in cases where he does not think the accused should be committed he should adopt the procedure laid down by s. 346. See Note 1 to that section 7 N. L. R. 92 = 12 Cr. L. J. 436.

 348. (1) Whoever, having been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards is again accused of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards shall [†] if the Magistrate before whom the case is pending is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused^{*} be committed to the Court of Session or High Court as the case may be unless the Magistrate [‡] is competent to try the case and[§] is of opinion that he can himself pass an adequate sentence if the accused is convicted

Provided that if § any Magistrate in the district has been invested with powers under section 30 the case may be transferred to him instead of being committed to the Court of Sessions

|| (2) When any person is committed to the Court of Session or High Court under sub-section (1) any other person accused jointly with him in the same inquiry or trial shall be similarly committed unless the Magistrate discharges such other person under section 209

Notes.—1 Chapter XII ss. 230—264 A refers to offences relating to coin and Government stamps, Chapter XVII ss. 378—463 refers to offences relating to property To constitute an habitual offender within the meaning of this section it is necessary that the subsequent offence charged should have been committed by the accused after the previous conviction Ratanlal 143. See s 221 (7) for particulars of previous conviction in a charge s. 310 for procedure in case of previous conviction in a Sessions trial and s 511 for proof of previous conviction

2. Procedure to be followed.—It is not entirely easy to deal satisfactorily with cases under s. 348. The Magistrate is bound to commit if there has been a previous conviction of one of the offence described unless he can adequately punish the accused consequently he must either as a preliminary matter or at any rate before framing a charge determine whether there has been a previous conviction having decided that point he will have to consider whether in the circumstances of the case his powers enable him to pass a sufficiently severe sentence If he thinks they do not permit, he may either commit the accused for trial or try himself, if they do not so permit but the evidence does not warrant the discharge of the accused he must frame a charge under s. 21 and commit him for trial under Chapter XVIII 38 W 552.

3-A. Magistrate should not convict but frame charge and commit.—Where a Magistrate has to act under s. 348 he ought not to find the accused guilty before commitment but should merely frame charge and then commit as otherwise a conviction would bar a fresh trial before the Sessions Court under s. 403 38 W 552.

3 When accused is an old offender he need not necessarily be committed to Sessions.—4 Residency Magistrate convicted under ss. 407 and 380 I P C an accused whom he found to be an old offender Held that the Magistrate should have acted under this section and committed the accused to the High Court, Ratanlal 704. But now under this section as modified the Subordinate Magistrate might in his discretion either commit to the Court of Session or deal with the case himself Weir II, 422 There is no rule of law which lays down that a person who has once before been convicted should in the absence of proof of other circumstances against him be necessarily dealt with as an habitual offender and this section cannot be understood to have any such stringent meaning 1832 A. W N 215 Although the accused was several times previously convicted of offences under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII, I P C, a second-class Magistrate passed upon him sentence of six months rigorous imprisonment and fine Rs. 200 or in default one month's rigorous imprisonment. On a reference from the District Magistrate that the trying Magistrate had no jurisdiction held that looking to the discretion vested in the trying Magistrate the High Court (though agreeing with the District Magistrate) were unable to say that the second-class Magistrate had no jurisdiction and therefore they could not order a new trial Ratanlal 70 forward all the accused who are in his opinion guilty to the District Magistrate or Sub-Divisional Magistrate"

as he thinks fit and as is according to law

Provided that he shall not inflict a punishment more severe than he is empowered to inflict under sections 32 and 33

2. Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered void.—If any Magistrate not duly empowered passes a sentence under s. 349 on proceedings recorded by another Magistrate, proceeding shall be void, s. 530, cl. (1).

(i) Second and third-class Magistrates only can refer—A Magistrate of the first class cannot refer under this section 7 A. 414, though the District Magistrate can call for his records, 7 A. 853.

(ii) District and Sub-Divisional Magistrates only competent to deal with proceedings—Jurisdiction to deal with the proceedings under s. 349 is conferred upon District Magistrates and Sub-Divisional Magistrates and upon no other Magistrates, 38 B. 719.

APPLICATION OF SECTION.

3. Improper use of the provisions of this section.—The provisions of this section are put to an improper use when a Subordinate Magistrate takes up a case in which it is obvious from the outset that he will be unable to pass an adequate sentence if the accused is found guilty, and simply with the intention of making over the case to the District Magistrate for enhanced punishment. Such cases would more properly be taken up in the first instance by a first-class Magistrate. But when circumstances of aggravation come to light in the course of a case, a Subordinate Magistrate may properly proceed with the case (provided that, notwithstanding such circumstances, it is within his power to pass a sentence of imprisonment for not less than six months), and forward the case to the District Magistrate for enhanced punishment. It is not the intention of this section. It is not the intention of this section.

instructions, some check may be placed upon the existing tendency of Subordinate Courts to pass sentences wholly inadequate to the offences committed—Pun Cr Cir, No 21-3620 G of 1890

(a) Cases under s 348 not to be dealt with under this section.—The provisions of this section are subject to the express provisions of s 348, Weir II, 423, and cases falling under that section should not be dealt with under this section. See 4 L. B. R. 282.

(b) Not applicable to cases tried summarily—The procedure prescribed in s. 349 is unsuited to cases tried summarily and that section does not authorize any Bench of Magistrates to refer a case for a higher punishment. 4 L. B. R. 277 = 8 Cr. L. J. 475

3-A. Scope of sub-sec. (3) (A),* reference to superior Magistrate under an order forwarding all the accused though only one was guilty.—Where a Magistrate of the second class came to the conclusion that only one accused was guilty and deserved more punishment but submitted the record under s. 349 and directed all the accused to present themselves in the Court of the superior Magistrate and the superior Magistrate convicted them all, held that as regards the other accused the order was illegal and was in contravention of s. 349 (1) (A). Under this sub-section the inferior Magistrate can only send to the superior Magistrate, those alone who are in his opinion guilty, 24 A. L. J. 80.

4. Reference must be for one of the reasons contemplated by this section.—A Subordinate Magistrate, having taken all the evidence for the prosecution and for the defence, sent the case to the Magistrate of the District, not on the grounds mentioned in this section, and the District Magistrate observing that none of the accused asked to have the witnesses re-heard, gave judgment upon the evidence taken by the Subordinate Magistrate. The Sessions Judge refused to interfere in revision with the District Magistrate's proceedings on the ground that they were covered by s. 350. Held, that this view was erroneous, that neither under s. 192 nor under this section was there any transfer to the District Magistrate by his subordinate that s. 350 was inapplicable, and that the order passed by the District Magistrate must be quashed 12 A. 66; 12 P. R. 1903; 1889 A. W. N. 130.

* Sub-section (1 A) was inserted by Act V III of 1943 s. 23

5. Superior Magistrate cannot order Subordinate Magistrate to send up case.—If a superior Magistrate directs a Subordinate Magistrate to send up a case under this section, his order is ultra vires. The discretion, given by the section, is the discretion of the Subordinate Magistrate. Weir II, 427.

DUTIES OF REFERRING MAGISTRATE.

6. Referring Magistrate can record his opinion only and not convict.—A Magistrate of the second or third class who submits his proceedings to another Magistrate under this section, is required to record his opinion only. He cannot legally convict the accused. It is the duty of the Magistrate to whom a case is referred to pass judgment according to law, Ratanlal 387. The mere fact that the Sub-Magistrate who submitted the case has framed a charge is not a sufficient reason for the High Court to interfere by setting aside the charge and order the commitment of the accused to Sessions Court, Ratanlal 948. But it is not illegal for a second-class Magistrate, where several persons are charged before him, to convict some of the accused and forward the others under this section to a superior Magistrate, though it is desirable in such cases to forward all the accused to be dealt with by the superior Magistrates. A superior Magistrate acting under this section is not precluded from acting on the evidence recorded by the Subordinate Magistrate or from adopting his opinion, Weir II, 428 and 429. 3 Pat. 1018.

7. Referring Magistrate cannot refer after passing sentence.—If a Magistrate of the second or third class be of opinion that it is necessary for the accused in a case before him to be bound down under s. 106, he must refer the whole case to the proper authority for him to pass the sentence, and it is not open to such Magistrate to pass any part of the sentence himself, 33 G. 1093. A third-class Magistrate cannot, after convicting the accused, submit his case to the District Magistrate for binding down the accused to keep the peace under s. 106. 21 G. 822. Where, however, the third-class Magistrate convicts the accused, and on his recommendation a Sub-Divisional Magistrate binds him over under s. 106, the recommendation and the binding over are bad but the conviction is good, 41 Cr. L. J. 270 (G.). See also 12 C. W. N. 752; 21 P. R. 1905; 6 P. R. 1907; 7 P. R. 1903 = 10 Cr. L. J. 309; 30 M. 48 and see Notes 21 and 22 at p. 153.

7-A. Whether referring Magistrate may proceed to charge and complete the trial up to sentence.—In 2 L. B. R. 285 (F.B.) = 10 Bar. L. R. 306 = 1 Cr. L. J. 1010 it was held dissenting from Ratanlal 499 that it was not illegal for a Magistrate of the second or third class to frame a charge against any accused person, in a case in which he has jurisdiction to try even though at the time of framing the charge he intends, if he is of opinion that the accused is guilty to submit the proceedings to the District or Sub-Divisional Magistrate to pass sentence, see also 17 Cr. L. J. 201 = 34 In. Ca. 313 (Bar.).

POWERS OF MAGISTRATE REFERRED TO.

8. The whole case is opened up for him.—If a superior Magistrate, the latter is bound to form his Appx. XLIII followed in 4 M. 233; 9 M. 377. When the whole case is opened up for him to deal with it according to his discretion, Ratanlal 350. He should not confine himself to considering whether the decision of the Sub-Magistrate was plainly and manifestly opposed, to the evidence but he should find on the evidence the facts which he considers proved and in passing judgment should do so in advertence to s. 367, Ratanlal 636. He may act upon the evidence already recorded, Weir II, 428. Where a second-class Magistrate found the accused guilty, but referred the case under this section to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate and the latter sentenced the first accused, but regarding the rest he referred the case to the District Magistrate as he was of opinion that they should be committed for trial to the Sessions Court, on a reference by the District Magistrate to the High Court, it was held that the reference by the second-class Magistrate to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate would open up the whole case and leave the latter Magistrate free to deal with it according to his discretion and one of the powers he would have would be to order a commitment to the Court of Session, Ratanlal 945.

(a) "Order" means a final order.—This word, associated as it is with the words "judgment" and "sentence" means a final order, i.e., one disposing of a case so far as the Magistrate, to whom a Subordinate Magistrate submits the proceedings of the case for higher punishment, is concerned. It does not deprive that Magistrate of the exercise of his discretion as to its being a proper case for the Sessions and of the power of committing it for trial, given by this Code, 4 B. 240 (F.B.), 1 M. 289 (F.B.), see contra 10 W. R. 50. The order referred to in sub-sect. (2) is eiusdem generis with the words judgment and sentence which precede it and does not include an order returning the case to the Magistrate who submitted it, 26 A. 344.

(b) Magistrate referred to may commit.—A Magistrate to whom a case is referred for enhancement of punishment under this section may order the committal of the case for trial by the Sessions Court, 1 M. 389.

(F.B.), 4 B. 240 (F.B.). An accused person whose case is submitted under this section can no longer be described as convicted by the referring Magistrate. But now according to 9 M. 377, the Magistrate to whom the case is referred should himself commit to the Sessions. See Weir II, 428. Contra see 10 W. R. 50. He cannot return the case to the second-class Magistrate for committal to the Court of Session. The committal is liable to be quashed, if the second-class Magistrate does commit, Ratanlal 222, 479 and 948.

9. What the Magistrate referred to ought not to do—

(a) Cannot transfer proceedings to another Magistrate—The Magistrate cannot by virtue of s. 523 transfer the proceedings referred to him to another Magistrate. Even assuming that a Sub-Divisional Magistrate has the power to transfer the proceedings to another first-class Magistrate, he cannot transfer the jurisdiction conferred by the section upon him and not upon the first-class Magistrate, 33 B. 719. He has no power to send it for inquiry to another Magistrate, 4 M. 233; 6 M. H. G. R. Appx. II; 35 M. 470. The proceedings of the Magistrate to whom it is sent for inquiry would be void under s. 530 (f) 1905 U. B. R. (Ce. P. C.) 33 = 2 Cr. L. J. 484. A superior Magistrate to whom the case against an accused is submitted under this section, should not convict him of an aggravated form of the offence, without commencing the trial afresh for such aggravated offence, Weir II, 21 and 428.

(b) Has no power to order re-trial—When the proceedings of a case are submitted under this section to the Magistrate of the district he is bound to pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he deems proper and as is in accordance with law. He has no power to order a new trial by the Court of Session or by any other Court, unless he considers an offence has been committed which was not within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate before whom the trial is held, Ratanlal 130. He cannot quash the proceedings of the Subordinate Magistrate, and order re-trial by another competent Magistrate, but should report the proceedings to the High Court under s. 438, 14 P. R. 1800.

(c) Cannot return the case—A Magistrate to whom a case has been referred to under this section is not competent to send the case back to the referring Magistrate, Ratanlal 479, on the ground (a) that in his opinion the sentence which such Magistrate has power to pass would be adequate 28 A. 345, 6 C. L. R. 278 or (b) that the referring Magistrate should take the defence of an accused who had pleaded guilty in a warrant-case. If there had been any need to take the defence of the accused, the superior Magistrate ought to do it himself, 3 L. B. R. 279 = 5 Cr. L. J. 416 or (c) that the referring Magistrate should commit, 10 B. 196; 9 M. 377; Ratanlal 222, 479 and 998. See contra 14 C. 355 followed in Referred Case No 185 of 188, noted in 1 M. L. J. 252, where it was held that the forwarding of the accused to the District Magistrate for a severer punishment does not take away the jurisdiction of the second-class Magistrate to commit the case to the Sessions. All orders passed after a case has been so transferred are illegal, 6 C. L. R. 276; Ratanlal 479.

(d) If, however, the reference is informal, the case could be returned—A superior Magistrate can send back the proceedings to a Subordinate Magistrate when he considers the reference to be informal on account of defective inquiry, ie, the proceeding being incomplete, it was not ripe, for reference and on making a full investigation, it is open to the Subordinate Magistrate to come to a fresh and different finding as to the guilt of the accused Weir II, 426.

10. Duty of District Magistrate when he finds that conviction is by Sub-Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the offence—An Assistant Magistrate convicted a person under ss. 406 and 417 of the Penal Code, and deferred the case to the District Magistrate for sentence under the provisions of this section. The District Magistrate was of opinion that the offence was one properly punishable under s. 420 of the Penal Code, and one which the Assistant Magistrate had no jurisdiction to deal with and that therefore the reference under this section was ultra vires and illegal. On a reference to the High Court, held, that the Assistant Magistrate was not wholly without jurisdiction, as he was competent to commit the accused to the Court of Session, though not to hold a trial, and that the District Magistrate might, if he thought proper, commit the accused to the Court of Session 13 C. 303, where 1 M. 239 and 4 B. 240 are referred to and when a case is referred to a District Magistrate under this section, and he finds that the offence (s. 409 I P C.) committed by the accused was not one within the cognizance of the second-class Magistrate he should not convict him of that offence, but should hold that the Sub-Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the offence and should pass the order accordingly. Nor can he accept the first trial as a legal trial and on it sentence the accused on the evidence recorded by second-class Magistrate without jurisdiction, 1 Bom. L. R. 27.

11. Presence of accused necessary when passing sentence.—When the proceedings in a case tried by a Subordinate Magistrate are submitted to a District Magistrate to pass sentence upon the accused, the accused is entitled to be present at the passing of such sentence before the District Magistrate, 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. C. 31. That is why the section directs the forwarding of the accused, 14 G. 333; 7 W. R. 29.

12. Proviso controls referred Magistrate's power to inflict sentence—he cannot act under s. 30 in referred case—When a District Magistrate acts under this section, on records being sent up by a Subordinate Magistrate he must be regarded as a Magistrate, exercising his ordinary powers, even though the same officer is vested with the enhanced powers under s. 30. Therefore a sentence of five years' imprisonment in such a case purporting to be under s. 30 would be ultra vires under the last clause of this section and in spite of such a sentence, the appeal will lie not to the High Court, but to the Court of Session 4 L. B. R. 53 = 5 Cr. L. J. 339. See also 12 P. R. 1903

13. Appeal lies to the Sessions Court.—An accused person dealt with by a superior Magistrate under this section is "a person convicted on a trial held by the Magistrate," etc., for the purposes of appeal to the Court of Session—M H C Pro, 20th May, 1867, see ss. 407, 408 and 4 L. B. R. 53.

350. (1) Whenever any Magistrate, after having heard and recorded the whole or any part of the evidence in any inquiry or a trial, ceases to exercise jurisdiction therein, and is succeeded by another Magistrate who has and who exercises such jurisdiction, the Magistrate so succeeding may act on the evidence so recorded by his predecessor or partly recorded by his predecessor and partly recorded by himself, or he may re-summon the witnesses and re commence the inquiry or trial,

Provided as follows—

(a) in any trial the accused may, when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings, demand that the witnesses or any of them be re-summoned and re heard,

(b) the High Court or, in cases tried by Magistrates subordinate to the District Magistrate, the District Magistrate may, whether there be an appeal or not, set aside any conviction passed on evidence not wholly recorded by the Magistrate before whom the conviction was held, if such Court or District Magistrate is of opinion that the accused has been materially prejudiced thereby, and may order a new inquiry or trial

(2) Nothing in this section applies to cases in which proceedings have been stayed under section 346* "or in which proceedings have been submitted to a superior Magistrate under section 349†

† (3) When a case is transferred under the provisions of this Code from one Magistrate to another, the former shall be deemed to cease to exercise jurisdiction therein, and to be succeeded by the latter within the meaning of sub-section (1)†

"Our colleague, Sir B. C. Mitter, pointed out that in regard to sections 246 and 350 the general principle is recognized that a Court which convicts an accused should ordinarily act only on evidence heard by itself and suggested the advisability of applying the same principle to cases coming under section 349. The official members of the Joint Committee were of opinion that a distinction could be drawn in the case of s. 349 inasmuch as under that section a Magistrate who is competent to try the offence has heard the whole of the prosecution."

"The fact that he had not heard the whole of the evidence was not a ground for setting aside the conviction. The provisions of section 349 are not intended to apply to cases where the Magistrate who has heard the whole of the evidence is succeeded by another Magistrate who would prefer to dispose of cases themselves, and pass what in their opinion was an inadequate sentence rather than run the risk of having the cases re-heard. The non-official members were of opinion that in those circumstances

* These words and figures were added by Act XXIII of 1923

† Sub-section (3) was added by Act XXIII of 1923

s. 349 might be repealed. The Committee, however, as a whole agreed that they would not be justified in making such a drastic alteration in the Code until the point had been specifically put to Local Governments and their opinions had been invited. Clause 92 has, therefore, in this respect been left unaltered.

Notes.—1. Generally judgment must be by the Judge who heard the evidence.—It is a general principle that judgment must be delivered by the Judge who has heard the evidence, 23 W. R. 59; 23 C. 194.

1-A. Section 350 gives a Magistrate jurisdiction to decide the case on the evidence recorded by his predecessor but not to deliver a judgment written by the latter, 50 C. 664.

2. Scope of the section—SIR HENRY PRINSEP thinks that the application of this section would not be limited to inquiries preliminary to commitment, but to inquiries in miscellaneous matters under Part IV, Chapters VIII, X, XI, XII, that is, cases regarding security to keep the peace or for good behaviour, public nuisances and disputes regarding immovable property likely to cause a breach of the peace, as well as preliminary inquiry under s. 476, before sending the case for inquiry or trial by the nearest Magistrate of the first class. The words "the whole or any part of the evidence" were added in the 1882 Code in consequence of 24 W. R. 53.

3. Section applicable to all cases of transfer of proceedings.—This section is not limited to cases in which Magistrates succeed each other in their offices but applies also to all cases withdrawn for whatever reason from one Magistrate and transferred to another. When a case under inquiry or trial is transferred under s. 528, from the file of one Magistrate to that of another, the former ceases to exercise jurisdiction in the case and is succeeded by the latter in the exercise of the jurisdiction within the meaning of this section, 35 C. 457; followed in 32 M. 218 and 16 A. L. J. 217. In 39 C. 781, it was held, following 35 C. 457 and 13 C. W. N. 420 = 9 Cr. L. J. 278 and dissenting from 12 A. 66 and 13 C. W. N. 140, that the words "ceases to exercise jurisdiction therein" refer to the inquiry or trial and not to the post. It is not necessary, therefore, that the Magistrate should have left his post. See also 13 W. R. 40, 14 W. R. 3; 19 W. R. 23; 24 W. R. 53 and 23 C. 194; 37 C. 812. The cases in 12 C. W. N. 140 = 6 Cr. L. J. 434 and 14 A. 346 were distinguished and 1889 A. W. N. 130 was not followed in 35 C. 457, Piggott, J., in 35 A. 315 followed 35 C. 457 and 32 M. 218 and declined to follow the case in 1889 A. W. N. 130 and distinguished the case in 14 A. 346. See 60 A. 307 following 35 C. 457; 32 M. 218, and 39 C. 781.

3-A. Section applicable to any number of transfers.—Held, that s. 350 was not confined to two Magistrates, that the judgment of the third Magistrate was not without jurisdiction, and that conviction not illegal. 45 M. L. J. 809 = 47 M. 243.

4. Section applicable even when first Magistrate has not yet recorded evidence.—A Magistrate who succeeds another Magistrate has power under this section to try a case in which his predecessor has issued process and has granted a formal adjournment but has recorded no evidence, Ratanlal 652.

5. Section applicable to proceedings under Chapter VIII.—The provisions of this section apply to an inquiry instituted under s. 107 with a view to enforcing the giving of security to keep the peace, and in such a case, where the Magistrate, by whom a part of the evidence has been taken, is succeeded by another Magistrate, while the inquiry is pending, the person called upon to show cause why he should not give security, may insist upon the re-calling and re-examination of the witnesses whose evidence has already been taken by the former Magistrate, 4 C. L. R. 452; 23 W. R. 62; 24 W. R. 52; 43 M. 511.

6. Section applicable to proceedings under s. 143.—When, in the course of a proceeding under s. 143, one Magistrate is transferred and another comes in his place, the latter, if of competent jurisdiction, can deal with the proceeding under s. 350, 13 C. W. N. 420 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378; 37 C. 812.

7. Section applies to inquiries preliminary to commitments.—This section enables a commitment to be made by a Magistrate, who succeeds to the jurisdiction of another Magistrate, on evidence recorded by that Magistrate. In such a case the Magistrate actually making the order of commitment need not have himself recorded any of the evidence or the statement of the accused, 31 M. 40, 36 A. 313. The inference to be drawn from the proviso to this section is that, in determining whether or not to commit for trial, the Magistrate to whom the case is submitted is competent to base his determination on the evidence already recorded and the report sent with it, Ratanlal 872; 7 Loh. 70.

8. Section does not apply to cases of further inquiry directed under s. 437.—In 6 A. 367, the accused was discharged by a first-class Magistrate, and the Magistrate of the district acting under s. 437 summoned the accused, and on the evidence recorded previously by the first-class Magistrate and hearsay evidence of witness on behalf of the accused convicted the accused. The conviction was of course set aside. The further inquiry, if made by any other Magistrate, must be one de novo, this section having no application to such an inquiry, 7 Bar. L. R. 128.

11. Section not applicable to Benches of Magistrates.—The provisions of this section will not cover a case where one of a Bench of Magistrates is absent during the trial, 23 C. 104; 18 M. 394; 12 C. 558; 20 C. 870. See Note 3 to s 15 at p 28. In the case of a Bench of Magistrates, if the Bench is properly constituted in the absence of a particular Magistrate, it may proceed to hold the trial without him, 21 M. 246; 2 Lah. 237. But see now section 350-A. See 41 A. 116 where it is held that it is not ultra vires of the Local Government, in framing rules under section 16 of the Code, to say that section 350 should apply to a Bench of Honorary Magistrates. It should be noted that 20 C. 870 and 21 M. 246, hold to the contrary, and say that such a rule is ultra vires as it is not justified by anything in the provisions of section 16 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

10. Section not applicable to Judges.—A Sessions Judge cannot act on evidence recorded by his predecessor in office. On a change of Judge, a Sessions trial must commence de novo. The judgment passed by a Sessions Judge on evidence partly recorded by his predecessor is illegal and must be set aside, 8 C. L. J. 89 = 8 Cr. L. J. 121. A Sessions Judge is not competent to pronounce judgment upon evidence recorded in a trial by an Assistant Sessions Judge, 35 A. 63. A Sessions Judge is not competent to try a case partly on evidence not recorded by himself and consent on the part of the accused to such a trial cannot vest in him a jurisdiction to do so, 25 B. 50; 23 W. R. 59; 1 P. R. 1890. The power given by his section to a Magistrate does not extend to a Sessions Judge 21 W. R. 47; 3 M. 113; 7 C. P. 1; 1864 W. R. 8ap 32. A Sessions Judge hearing case in one division is not competent on transfer to another to pronounce judgment, 20 P. R. 1879.

11. Mere change of judicial designation and local jurisdiction is not sufficient reason to commence trial de novo.—Though the judicial designation of Magistrate as well as his local jurisdiction, is changed, that is no reason to commence the trial de novo if his magisterial powers are not changed. He can proceed with the trial from the point at which he had arrived when his judicial designation and local jurisdiction were changed. To such a case the provisions of this section do not apply, 32 M. 47. But if he has ceased to exercise jurisdiction by vacating office to another Magistrate, he is not competent to resume a trial commenced by him while holding that office, 3 A. 563 (F.B.), 14 Cr. L. J. 239 (A.). A Sessions Judge is not competent to pronounce judgment in a case heard by him in one division after transfer to another division, 20 P. R. 1879.

12. After electing to re-commence trial, Magistrate cannot dismiss complaint under s. 202.—A Magistrate examined the complainant, and, after making investigation through Police, examined the evidence for the prosecution and the accused, framed a charge, took the defence of the accused and issued processes to the witnesses for the defence. He was then succeeded by another Magistrate, who elected to re-commence the trial under this section, and thinking that this brought the case down to the stage at which it was after the complainant's statement had been recorded and the preliminary inquiry made, he dismissed the complaint under s. 263. Held, that summarily dismissing the complaint was not re-commencing the trial. The question was whether the Magistrate should have re-commenced the proceedings, or taken them up at the point to which they had been brought by his predecessor, and as he chose the former course, he was bound under this section to re-summon the witnesses and re-commence the trial, 7 C. P. Cr. 36. See also 19 W. R. 28; 14 P. R. 1903 = 175 P. L. R. 1903.

13. After re-commencing inquiry Magistrate cannot refer to Police under s. 202.—A Magistrate having accepted a complaint issued process upon it, and examined witnesses in support of the complaint ceased to exercise jurisdiction. Held, that his successor cannot refer the case to the Police for inquiry and report under s. 202, such proceeding is contrary to the provision of this section. The inquiry referred to in this section does not include a reference to the Police, 9 M. 282.

13-A. But see 46 M. 719 which holds that in warrant-cases all proceedings before the charge is framed are only "inquiry" and not "trial" and hence if there is a change of Magistrates before a charge is framed in such cases the accused is not entitled to a fresh examination of witnesses as provided by s. 350 (1) (a). (32 M. 210, 38 M. 585, and 43 M. 511 followed.)

13-B. Re-commencement of a trial does not imply cancellation of charge already framed.—When a charge is framed, and a trial is commenced, there, therefore, after the framing of a charge, the second Magistrate re-commences a trial under this section, the charge remains in force and the only order that can be passed is one of acquittal and not of discharge. A re-commencement does not involve the cancellation of the charge or the transformation of the proceedings, from a trial back to an inquiry, 38 M. 585 (following 14 P. R. 1903 = 175 P. L. R. 1903), 17 Cr. L. J. 1 (M.). But see § 350. which holds that for the purposes of s. 350 of the Code a trial cannot be said to commence only when a charge is framed the time expressly fixed by the proviso to the section for accused to exercise his right is when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings and not when a charge is framed.

Semble that in an inquiry by a Magistrate into a case triable by a Court of Session or High Court the accused has not the right to demand that the witnesses shall be summoned and re-heard in the event of a change of Magistrate.

14. Proviso—Magistrate bound to comply with demand of accused—Trial commences only when accused appears.—On a case being sent back by the High Court for re-trial the first order that was made by the Magistrate was dated 6th August and it was recorded before the accused had appeared in Court but in the presence of the mukhyar who had acted at the previous trial and who was directed to put in a list of witnesses against whom he wanted process to issue. The second order which was recorded on the 9th August was simply to the effect that warrant should issue against the witness named. On the 27th August the accused appeared before the Magistrate and made an application under this section for the re-summoning and re-hearing of the witnesses who had been examined for the prosecution at the previous trial. The Magistrate refused the application on the ground that it was made at the third hearing and that it ought to have been made when he commenced his proceedings. Held that the Magistrate acted in contravention of the provisions of this section in refusing the application inasmuch as the trial could not be held to have commenced before the 27th which was the first day when the accused entered appearance after remand and if the trial had not commenced it could not be said that the proceedings of the Magistrate had commenced before that day. 25 C. 883. In 3 L. W. 496 = 1918 M. W. N. 372 it was doubted if it would be legal for a succeeding Magistrate to date, sign and pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor when the accused demands a de novo trial. See next Note 19 A. L. J. 836.

15. Right of accused under proviso (a) is confined to trials.—A preliminary inquiry by a Magistrate into a case exclusively triable by the Court of Session is not before framing a charge a trial within the meaning of proviso (a) and where such an inquiry is transferred the accused is not of right entitled to a trial de novo. 32 M. 218, 14 P. R. 1903; see also 15 P. W. R. 1919 (Cr).

15 A. What is a de novo trial.—After the charge was framed the Magistrate was transferred the accused applied for a de novo trial but the Magistrate merely re-called the prosecution witnesses and gave leave to the accused to cross-examine them. Held that it was not a de novo trial. De novo trial means a new trial from the beginning of the case. 49 M. L. J. 823.

16. Second Magistrate not bound to ascertain whether accused wishes to exercise right given by proviso, cl. (a).—A Magistrate after framing charges against the accused and taking their evidence died before recording any judgment. His successor took up the case and wrote a judgment convicting the accused on all the charges framed and passed sentences proposed by his predecessor but omitted to have the accused brought before him to ascertain whether they desired to exercise the right given by proviso (a). Held that the irregularity not having prejudiced the accused was covered by s. 537 as the Magistrate was competent to pronounce judgment on the evidence taken by his predecessor. 6 P. R. 1884. See also 24 W. R. 12, 13 C. W. N. 550 = 10 Cr. L. J. 492. Also a mere failure to inquire from the accused whether he desires to exercise the right reserved by proviso (a) is at most an irregularity curable by s. 537. 3 P. R. 1903. This section confers the right on the accused person to demand and does not actually prescribe that the Magistrate shall ask the accused. U. B. R. (1912) 151 = 14 Cr. L. J. 175 distinguishing U. B. R. (1897—1901) 1, 87. But in 25 C. 883 it was held that s. 537 could not cure the defect in the proceedings due to the violation of the provisions of proviso (a) by a refusal to re-summon and re-hear the witnesses.

17. Where accused have been materially prejudiced conviction will be set aside.—Though the succeeding Magistrate may in the absence of objection have jurisdiction to convict on evidence partly recorded by his predecessor and partly by himself yet it is most desirable in a case of defamation that the examination and cross-examination of the complainant should be held in the presence of the Magistrate who has seized of the case and passes final orders therein. 13 C. W. N. 550. Where a Magistrate to whose Court a case under s. 355 I I C. had been transferred at a stage when all the evidence for the prosecution had been taken and not re-summon the witnesses for the prosecution but proceeded to act on their evidence as if it had been taken before himself it was held that the accused had been prejudiced and the conviction was set aside. 14 A. 346. Where after the prosecution witnesses were examined and cross-examined, the case was made over to another Magistrate and a de novo trial commenced, in which the prosecution witnesses were not again examined but were only cross-examined by the defence without any objection, the trial was set aside on the ground of prejudice to the accused 12 C. W. N. 138; where after several witnesses were examined the case was transferred to another Magistrate who convicted the accused on evidence partly recorded by the former Magistrate, no objection being raised, the conviction was set aside, 12 C. W. N. 140. See also 1389 A. W. N. 130, where it was held that if a case was transferred in the midst of a trial it must be tried de novo. As to the use of the record in the former trial, see 7 C. L. R. 193.

Accused cannot be called upon to pay expenses of recalling witnesses—Where the accused exercises the rights conferred by cl. (a) to have the witnesses for the prosecution re-examined by the Magistrate the witnesses should be re-summoned without payment of any fees 8 Barr. L. T. 43 = 15 Cr. L. J. 657.

18 Power of District Magistrate to set aside conviction by first-class Magistrate.—Even though appeals be from first-class Magistrates direct to the Court of Session this section specially empowers District Magistrates to set aside conviction of first-class Magistrates under the circumstances specified in proviso (b) to this section, 9 B. 100; 7 A. 853; 8 M. 18 (F.B.), 12 C. 573 (F.B.).

 350-A. No order or judgment of a Bench of Magistrates shall be invalid by reason only of a change having occurred in the constitution of the Bench in any case in which the Bench by which such order or judgment is passed is duly constituted under sections 15 and 16, and the Magistrates constituting the same have been present on the Bench throughout the proceedings.

Notes.—1 "We think, however, that the new sub-section (4) which has been introduced in the Bill to deal with the case of Benches goes somewhat too far, and we have substituted for it a new section after s. 350 which in our opinion gives effect to the law as laid down by the High Courts. Briefly, it provides that a judgment of a Bench shall be valid when the Bench is duly constituted at the time of passing the judgment and the judgment is passed by Magistrates all of whom have heard the proceedings throughout." Std. Com. Report.

2 A prosecution extending over several hearings was presided over by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates (consisting of three), only one of whom was present throughout. Held that as the quorum of the Bench consisted of two, the trial was bad under s. 350-A. 1 Lah. 123.

351. (1) Any person attending a Criminal Court, although not under arrest or upon a summons, may be detained by such Court for the purpose of inquiry into or trial of any offence of which such Court can take cognizance and which, from the evidence, may appear to have been committed, and may be proceeded against as though he had been arrested or summoned.

(2) When the detention takes place in the course of an inquiry under Chapter XVIII or after a trial has been begun, the proceedings in respect of such person shall be commenced afresh, and the witnesses re-heard.

Notes.—1. Scope of this section.—The provisions of this section would be applicable to the Court of Session, subject to the provisions of s. 193. Cf s. 91.

2. Proceedings under this section not controlled by ss. 190, 191—This section is self-contained and complete in itself and quite independent of the provisions of s. 190 and necessarily of s. 191 for the accused against whom action is taken under this section has full information as to the source and particulars of the materials upon which the Magistrate acts. He is thus not placed under a disability to combat the effect of the suspicious circumstances operating upon the mind of the Magistrate and influencing his judgment as in the case of a proceeding taking its rise under s. 190 (c). 3 N. L. R. 113 = 10 Cr. L. J. 303, 3 C. W. N. 279 followed 1 C. W. N. 103 dissented from. See Note 5 to s. 190

3. Provisions of this section do not apply when trial is begun.—A Magistrate took a person under this section without any previous notice or summons, from among the audience or attendant witnesses in open Court, and placed him in the dock to be immediately tried upon a charge which had already been commenced, to be entertained against other prisoners and on which evidence had already been given. This section applies to investigations preliminary being proceeded with and, moreover subjects prisoner, 14 W. R. 20. Sub-section (2) however now meets these objections.

4. Cognizance of case against a witness.—A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence against a witness in a case which is pending before him upon the facts disclosed by the evidence of another witness does so under s. 190 (c) and not under this section 1 G. W. N 103 Where however a Magistrate has already taken cognizance of the offence on a complaint on a Police report and joins as a co-accused any person attending his Court who seems to him to be implicated in the case under trial he acts under this section and not under s. 190 (c), 4 B. L. R. 258 = 12 Cr. L. J. 399 See Note 2 above and see Note 5 at p. 468 under s. 190

352. The place in which any Criminal Court is held for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence shall be deemed an open Court to which the public generally may have access so far as the same can conveniently contain them

Provided that the presiding Judge or Magistrate may, if he thinks fit order at any stage of any inquiry into or trial of any particular case that the public generally, or any particular person shall not have access to or be or remain in the room or building used by the Court

Notes.—1 Transaction of public business at private residence of Magistrate.—This course was condemned by the Calcutta High Court in Surendranath Banerjee's case reported in 10 G. W. N 1062—Cal Rules and Orders p. 1 of April 1889

2 Exclusion of any particular person or public generally.—In 1885 A. W. N 221 it was held that the Police-officer who investigated a case should not be admitted into the Court house at the time it is there being inquired into.

3. Right of admission to the public.—English Practice.—As a general rule all persons have a right to be present at the proceedings of the Court and the Court has no power to prevent her being present. Except in the above cases and in cases under the Punishment of Incest Act 1908 and the Children Act 1908. It does not appear that a Judge trying a criminal case has any power to exclude the public in general and to hear a case in camera Halsbury's Laws of England Vol. 12 pp. 362-363 Archbold p. 217 See Scott v. Scott (1913) A. C. 417, as to the general right of the public.

By Act 510 of the Louisiana Code it is enacted that in prosecutions for assault with intent to ravish rape adultery offences against decency and defamation implying a charge of such offences no person shall be present but the Magistrate Public Prosecutor accused and his counsel complainant certain officers of justice the witnesses and such persons not exceeding ten for each party as the complainant and the accused may desire to have admitted. In making a report of any such trial the reporter shall not give the details of the evidence or publish the names of the witnesses. See Notes 4-5 to s. 303 as to examination of Pardanashin witnesses etc.

CHAPTER XXV

OF THE MODE OF TAKING AND RECORDING EVIDENCE IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS

353. Except as otherwise expressly provided all evidence taken under Chapters XVIII, XX, XXI XXII and XXIII shall be taken in the presence of the accused or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with in presence of his pleader

Evidence to be taken in presence of accused.

Notes.—1 Chapter XVIII.—Inquiry into cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court. Chapter XX.—Trial of summons-cases by Magistrates. Chapter XXI.—Trial of warrant-cases. Chapter XXII.—Summary trials. Chapter XXIII.—Trials before High Court and Courts of Session.

1 A. When evidence may be taken in absence of accused.—See s. 205 as to power of Magistrate to dispense with attendance of accused and see the special provisions in ss. 116 and 145 In 16 Bom. L. R. 236 = 13 Cr. L. J. 484; it was held that the High Court has the same power in a Sessions case as a Magistrate has under s. 205. See s. 423 (3) for power of Appellate Court to take evidence in absence of accused, Chap. XL for the examination of witnesses on commission, s. 509 for evidence of a medical witness, s. 510 for the evidence of chemical examiner and s. 512 when the accused has absconded or the offender is not known.

2. Taking evidence in the absence of accused is illegal.—Where the witnesses are not examined in the presence of the accused the conviction is bad 2 B. W. P. H. C. R. 40 But where a purdah lady was examined in a passage, screened from the direct view of the Court, and her voice could be heard perfectly and the accused made no objection, it was held that this was virtually a hearing of the evidence in the presence of the accused, 41 P. R. 1887.

3. Recording defence evidence in the absence of accused is illegal and the illegality cannot be cured.—One of the accused after all the evidence for the prosecution had been recorded absconded. In his absence the witnesses named by him were examined and he was convicted along with the others, held, that the conviction was illegal and must be set aside even if no miscarriage of justice has been occasioned. S 537, clearly lays down that all evidence shall be taken in the presence of the accused and this includes both the evidence for the prosecution as well as for the defence. Such an illegality cannot be cured under s. 537, U. P. R. (1912), 4th Cr. 152 = 14 Cr. L. J. 287.

4. Pardanashin witnesses.—The deposition of the gosha females should only be taken in cases where the ends of justice cannot otherwise be attained. When requisite, the Court must be adjourned to some place where the gosha female can come and she must be examined behind a purdah in the presence of the accused. The Judge taking such precautions as he can to secure her identity, Weir II, 432. Generally a pardanashin woman summoned as a witness has a right to be examined on commission and to be exempted from personal appearance in Court, 4 C. 20; 12 A. 69, even though she herself is the complainant, Weir II, 639; 10 P. R. 1896; contra 5 A. 92 and see Notes to s. 503 and Note 2 above.

5. Pardanashin accused—where accused's presence dispensed with, evidence may be recorded in presence of accused's pleader.—A Magistrate may dispense with the presence of the accused when she is a respectable pardanashin woman and record the evidence in the presence of her pleader, 20 P. W. R. 1908. The High Court has power under the provisions of this section to dispense with the attendance of an accused person during his trial before it in the Sessions on the ground of his ill health, 14 Bom. L. R. 236 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 111 = 13 Cr. L. J. 484. In 5 P. W. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 158. It was held that unless and until a Magistrate has good reason to believe that there is a strong likelihood of the charge being proved, an accused, if she be really a pardah woman of good position, should not ordinarily be compelled to appear in person in the first instance, 43 M. 229.

6. Witnesses must be examined afresh—putting in evidence given in another trial will not satisfy the requirements of this section.—Where a Sessions Judge read over to the jury the evidence given by witnesses at a former trial of other persons for the same offence, and after the witnesses had admitted the correctness of their depositions, allowed their cross-examination, the conviction was set aside and a new trial ordered. The consent of the prisoner under trial, or of his pleader, will not cure this irregularity, for such a course cannot give the look or manner of a witness, his hesitation, his doubts, his variation of language or his precipitancy, his calmness or consideration. It is the dead body of evidence, without its spirit which is supplied when given openly and orally by the ear and eye of those who receive it, 3 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 20 = 12 W. R. 3; 1884 W. R. 1 and 33; 1 B. L. R. O. Cr. 37. Where, however, this objectionable course was pursued at the special request of the pleaders for the accused, the High Court in revision refused to interfere in 13 W. R. 40 on the ground that there was no prejudice to the accused. It is irregular to import into a case evidence given in another case by merely reading over a deposition to a witness and asking him if it was correct, 1 Bur. B. R. 399. Where three separate charges were preferred at the same time and the prisoners were convicted on the evidence recorded in one case, without hearing their defence in the other two cases, the proceedings were quashed, 1 W. R. 36. See Note to s. 282.

Putting in evidence given in another trial will not satisfy the requirements of this section even though the consent of the accused is obtained to such a course. The principle that a prisoner can consent to nothing which is not authorized by law and a counsel cannot consent to a course which the law does not authorize. Section 537 does not apply to an infringement of a statutory requirement but only to errors, omissions and irregularities of a technical nature. 4 Lah. 376.

7. Irregularity—Evidence given at previous trial treated as examination-in-chief.—At the trial of a party of Hindus for rioting the Magistrate, instead of examining the witnesses for the prosecution, caused to be produced copies of the examination in chief of the same witnesses which had been recorded at a previous trial of a party of Muhammadans who were opposed to the Hindus in the same riot. These copies were read out to the witnesses who were then cross-examined by the prisoners, and no objection to this procedure was taken on the prisoner's behalf, and the accused were convicted. Held, that, although the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was irregular, the irregularity was cured by the provisions of s. 537, and of s. 167 of the Evidence Act, as it was not shown that there had been any failure of justice or that the accused had been substantially prejudiced and as the matters elicited in cross-examination were sufficient to sustain the conviction 9 A 609 To satisfy the requirements of this section it is not enough to read over the sworn statement of the complainant in the presence of the accused treating it as examination in-chief Such examination must actually take place in the presence of the accused Ratanlal 24, 24 W R 14

8 Practice—Evidence to be recorded legibly—Difficulty having been frequently experienced in reading the evidence of witnesses the attention of all criminal officers is called to the necessity of carefully writing such evidence in a legible manner Depositions should be written on one side of the paper only a margin of one-fourth of the sheet being left blank In the case of trials forwarded to the High Court in which from any cause the evidence has been indistinctly or illegibly recorded copies of such evidence should be submitted with the record of the case Wilkins 116 Judges and Magistrates may use a typewriter instead of a pen but every sheet must be signed. Bombay Gazette 1889 Part I p 1920 See also Notes 4 to 6 under s. 355

Manner of recording evidence outside Presidency towns

354. In inquiries and trials (other than summary trials) under this Code by or before a Magistrate (other than a Presidency Magistrate) or Sessions Judge the evidence of the witnesses shall be recorded in the following manner

Note.—As to special provisions for summary trial see ss. 260 261 and 355 and as to the mode of recording evidence by Presidency Magistrates see s. 362.

Record in summons cases and in trials of certain offences by first and second class Magistrates.

355. (1) In summons-cases tried before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate and in cases of the offences mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 260 clauses (b) to (m) both inclusive when tried by a Magistrate of the first or second class and in all proceedings under section 514 (if not in the course of a trial), the Magistrate shall make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as the examination of the witness proceeds

(2) Such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate with his own hand and shall form part of the record

(3) If the Magistrate is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to do so and shall cause such memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court and shall sign the same and such memorandum shall form part of the record

Notes—S. 514 deals with the procedure on forfeiture of bonds.

1 What would be a sufficient memorandum—There is no particular form prescribed for the memorandum. But where the Judge merely recorded of four witnesses to character two give the defendant a bad character one say he knows nothing and one gives him a good character Held that this was not such a memorandum as was contemplated by this section Agra Hk Ad., 20th June, 1862 p 127 Nor will the provisions of this section be complied with by a mere statement that the witness deposes as the last " 1 B H C R 91, 1864 W R 15 The Magistrate's records in summary trials however brief must show the ingredients of the offence charged 6 C 579, 18 B 97 and 21 A 189 It is not necessary for a record of evidence to be made in summary trials even where an appeal lies but s. 264 provides that the substance must be embodied in a judgment as well as the particulars specified in that section. This section merely prescribes a briefer record in summons-cases and other cases which may be tried summarily when they are as a matter of fact tried regularly 3 L B R 3 = 2 Cr L J 375 Sections 263 and 355 must be read together if the Magistrate is unable at the commencement of the trial to determine whether the proper sentence to be passed should be an appealable one or not he must make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as his examination proceeds. But if he can at this stage determine that the sentence will be in any event non-appealable he need not record the evidence. If however he actually does so the notes of the evidence form part of the record of the case and cannot be destroyed by him 43 C 290

* Evidence recorded by Forest Officers under the Burma Forest Act II of 1902, in accordance with ss. 355 356 or a 357 of the Code are admissible in subsequent trials before Magistrates under s. 55 of that Act. Under the Madras Forest Act V of 1882 s. 55 Under s. 11 of the British Indian Forest Act of 1906 s. 35 Under the Forest Act VII of 1906 such evidence recorded under cl. (d) of s. 71 is admissible in any subsequent trial before a Magistrate provided it is taken in the presence of the accused person

2 Mode of recording evidence in maintenance case.—Evidence taken under Chapter XXXVI must be taken as provided in this section 20 G, 351 See s. 488 (6) also s. 170 (2)

3. Trial of summons cases—In summons-cases the reading over of the recorded deposition is not prescribed by law and its omission cannot therefore per se be regarded as a defect fatal to a conviction Weir II, 433 But where the evidence was illegally recorded in the form of a memorandum the conviction was set aside Weir II, 432

4 Substance of evidence may be recorded in English—There is no direction in the Code as to the language in which a memorandum of the substance of the evidence is to be recorded consequently if a Native Subordinate Magistrate not authorized to take down evidence in English records the memorandum of the substance of such evidence in that language there is no prohibition in law for such procedure and if it was an irregularity such irregularity would not justify the reversal of the conviction 19 M 269

5 Record should show that depositions are taken and attested in presence of accused—It is desirable that deposition of witnesses in criminal cases should be taken and attested in the presence of the accused and that the Magistrate should add a few apt words to make it apparent that this has been done although there is no obligation to that effect imposed by the Code 10 A 174

6 Full record of evidence when witness suspected of perjury—When during the investigation of a case coming within provisions of s. 355 it appears to the Magistrate that a witness is giving false evidence so that criminal proceedings against such witness are likely to be necessary the Magistrate shall in that case under s. 358 take down the evidence of the particular witness at length in the manner prescribed in s. 356 or s. 357 as the case may be.—Oudh Cr Dig p 22.

7 Where witness recalled, re affirmation not necessary—Where a witness is recalled, shortly after the close of his first deposition he need not to be re-affirmed Weir II, 483.

356.* (1) In all other trials before Courts of Session and Magistrates (other than Record in other cases outside Presidency Magistrates) and in all inquiries under Chapters XII and XVIII the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the language of the Court by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge or in his presence and hearing under his personal direction and superintendence, and shall be signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge

(2) When the evidence of such witness is given in English the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may take it down in that language with his own hand and unless the accused is familiar with English or the language of the Court is English an authenticated translation of such evidence in the language of the Court shall form part of the record

(2-A) When the evidence of each witness is given in any other language not being English than the language of the Court the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may take it down in that language with his own hand or cause it to be taken down in that language in his presence and hearing and under his personal direction and superintendence and an authenticated translation of such evidence in the language of the Court or in English shall form part of the record

(3) In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge he shall as the examination of each witness proceeds make a memorandum of the substance of what such witness deposes and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge with his own hand and shall form part of the record

(4) If the Magistrate or Sessions Judge is prevented from making a memorandum as above required he shall record the reason of his inability to make it

Notes.—1. Non-compliance with the provisions of this section is a material error.—The provisions of clause (1) of this section are imperative and its non-compliance cannot be condoned 42 C. 331. Sub-section (3) applies only to cases in which the evidence recorded under the first sub-section is not recorded in the Magistrate's own hand, ibid. Where a Magistrate omitted to record the evidence in the mode prescribed by this section held that it was a material error sufficient to set aside the proceedings, 20 W. R. 14 = 11 B. L. R. Appx. Y. In 1890 A. W. N. 184, the absence of a vernacular record of the evidence was held to be illegal. In every Sessions trial, no matter how often the case has been before the Court, the witnesses must be examined de novo in the same manner as if the case was entirely new and the witnesses had not been examined before 1854 W. R. 1 and 13. See Note 1 to s. 360. See 30 G. 508 as to whether the procedure applicable to inquiries under Chapter VII is that prescribed for summary trials 17 A. L. J. 1146

2. Irregularity in completing record will not avail where accused is convicted on his own plea.—Where the accused pleads guilty to the offence charged and the Court accepting the plea sentences the offender without any further record any subsequent irregularity in the mode of making up the record cannot affect the propriety of the conviction 2 G. L. R. 317

3. Record of evidence.—Care must be taken that the Judge's notes are bona fide what is intended i.e. notes of evidence taken from the mouths of witnesses and orders recorded at the time they are issued not abstracts made afterwards. The notes must be legible complete and properly arranged and must attest the presence of the witness at the time and mark every postponement and change of time or scene in the trial of the case so that their bona fide character may be apparent.—Oudh Cr Dig p. 21 See Notification under s. 538 as to what the language of any particular Court is.

4. Medical witness's evidence must be taken at length.—The testimony of a medical witness, especially in a case of murder, ought, when he is present, to be taken fully, and not supplemented by reading over his testimony given elsewhere and recording an answer that the earlier testimony is true Ratanlal 792.

5. Use of typewriter for writing judgment, etc.—Sessions Judges, Additional Sessions Judges and first-class Magistrates may use a typewriter, instead of a pen, for the purpose of recording judgments, depositions and memoranda of evidence but every sheet of any judgment, deposition or memorandum so recorded must be signed by the Sessions Judge Additional Sessions Judge or first-class Magistrate recording it.—Pura 43-d Bom H C Cr Cir. p. 81

(1) The Local Government may direct* that in any district or part of a district or in proceedings before any Court of Session or before any Magistrate or class of Magistrates the evidence of each witness shall in the cases referred to in section 356 be taken down by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate with his own hand and in his mother tongue unless he is prevented by any sufficient reason from taking down the evidence of any witness in which case he shall record the reason of his inability to do so and shall cause the evidence to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court

Provided that the Local Government may direct the Sessions Judge or Magistrate to take down the evidence in the English language or in the language of the Court although such language is not his mother tongue

Notes.—1. The authority conferred is local.—The authority conferred upon an officer under this force only so long as he remains in the district in which it has, Magistrate not being empowered under this section to record 1 committed the accused for trial held that the Magistrate's proceeding was irregular but that there was nothing to show that the accused had been prejudiced and so the commitment was good, Weir II, 634, the defect being cured by s. 537

3. Trial of summons-cases.—In summons-cases, the reading over of the recorded deposition is not prescribed by law and its omission cannot therefore per se be regarded as a defect fatal to a conviction, Weir II, 433. But where the evidence was illegally recorded in the form of a memorandum, the conviction was set aside Weir II, 432

4. Substance of evidence may be recorded in English.—There is no direction in the Code as to the language in which a memorandum of the substance of the evidence is to be recorded consequently, if a Native Subordinate Magistrate, not authorized to take down evidence in English records the memorandum of the substance of such evidence in that language, there is no prohibition in law for such procedure and if it was an irregularity such irregularity would not justify the reversal of the conviction, 19 M. 269.

5. Record should show that depositions are taken and attested in presence of accused.—It is desirable that deposition of witnesses in criminal cases should be taken and attested in the presence of the accused and that the Magistrate should add a few apt words to make it apparent that this has been done, although there is no obligation to that effect imposed by the Code, 10 A. 174

6. Full record of evidence when witness suspected of perjury.—When, during the investigation of a case coming within provisions of s. 355, it appears to the Magistrate that a witness is giving false evidence so that criminal proceedings against such witness are likely to be necessary, the Magistrate shall, in that case under s 358 take down the evidence of the particular witness at length in the manner prescribed in s 356 or s 357 as the case may be.—Oudh Cr Dig., p 22.

7. Where witness recalled, re-affirmation not necessary.—Where a witness is recalled, shortly after the close of his first deposition he need not to be re-affirmed, Weir II, 433.

(2) The evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate and shall form part of the record

Provided that the Local Government may direct the Sessions Judge or Magistrate to take down the evidence in the English language or in the language of the Court although such language is not his mother tongue

Notes.—1. The authority conferred is local.—The authority conferred upon an officer under this section is personal to that officer and remains in force only so long as he remains in the district in which it has been conferred 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. IX. When a Magistrate not being empowered under this section to record evidence in his own hand writing did so and committed the accused for trial held that the Magistrate's proceeding was irregular but that there was nothing to show that the accused had been prejudiced and so the conviction was good Weir II, 434, the defect being cured by s. 537

2 Special Magistrate required to conform to provisions of this Code.—Sessions Judges and Deputy Commissioners shall with all due courtesy inform upon special Magistrates that they must comply with the requirements of the law in regard to recording evidence in their own hand writing. It is not necessary that they should take up case at all, but it is necessary that, if they do, they should conform to the provisions of s. 357 of the Code, viz., that they take down the evidence of witnesses with their own hands unless they be prevented by any sufficient reason from doing so, in which case they should record the reason, and cause the evidence to be taken down in writing from their dictation in open Court.—Oudh Cr Dig, pp 21 and 22.

3. Plea how recorded.—The language in which a plea is conveyed to the Court by the interpreter, is the language in which it should be recorded, 5 C 816

358. In cases of the kind mentioned in section 355, the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, take down the evidence of any witness in the manner provided in section 356, or, if within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate the Local Government has made the order referred to in section 357 in the manner provided in the same section.

Option to Magistrate in cases under section 355

359. (1) Evidence taken under section 356 or section 357 shall not ordinarily be taken down in the form of question and answer, but in the form of a narrative

(2) The Magistrate or Sessions Judge may in his discretion take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer

Notes.—1. In the form of a narrative.—The ordinary and proper and convenient way of recording evidence is to take it down in the first person, exactly as spoken by the witness, 8 B. L. R. Appx. XXI = 16 W. R. 36. Though it cannot always be taken down in the exact words of witness, Judges should, as far as possible, adhere to the words actually used either in the question or in the answer. It is not a compliance with the law to record a more or less accurate paraphrase of the evidence, 11 Bar. L. R. 6.

2. Verbatim record of any particular question and answer.—This is now left to the discretion of the presiding Judge, if either side specially request him to do so. Under s. 165 of the Evidence Act, the Judge has also the right to ask any question at any time, but as questions by Court are frequently interpolated in the course of cross-examination, such right should be exercised with discretion. It is unfair to the accused to anticipate or break the thread of cross-examination, 11 Bar. L. R. 8.

360. (1) As the evidence of each witness taken under section 356 or section 357 is completed, it shall be read over to him in the presence of the accused, if in attendance, or of his pleader, if he appears by pleader, and shall, if necessary, be corrected

Procedure in regard to such evidence when completed

(2) If the witness denies the correctness of any part of the evidence when the same is read over to him, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, instead of correcting the evidence, make a memorandum thereon of the objection made to it by the witness, and shall add such remarks as he thinks necessary

(3) If the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it has been given and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence so taken down shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given or in a language which he understands

Notes.—1. See s. 512 as to when evidence may be taken in absence of accused and also see ss. 4 and 13 of the India Criminal Law Amendment Act XIV of 1908

2. Section is mandatory—deposition of each witness must be read over to witness in presence of accused.—Where a Sessions Judge refused to read over to the witness his deposition as it would involve a great waste of time and said 'the section seems to me directory and not obligatory. If the witness detects a mistake he can come back and say so. This is the universal practice in Sessions Courts, my experience extending to six such Courts. Optima est legum interpretis consuetudo'. Held, that the custom indicated could not alter the plain words of the Act. The practice is erroneous and such a departure from the terms of the Code might lead to considerable embarrassment and place a serious impediment in the administration of justice for there are cases in which it has been held that for the purposes of a prosecution on the ground of perjury depositions to which the procedure laid down in this section has not been applied cannot be properly used (see Note 1 below) 35 C. 955; 35 M 308; 12 C. W N 845 = 3 Cr L J 116 In strictly carrying out the provisions of 360 (1) by the daily reading over in open Court of the deposition of each witness, the Court does not lay itself open to criticism though that procedure should occupy considerable time 42 C. 857 It is not sufficient compliance with the provisions of cl. (1) of this section for a Magistrate after the deposition has been recorded to hand over the record to the witness to read it to himself 42 C. 250 A conviction based upon evidence not read over in the presence of the accused is bad and will be set aside Weir II, 435 But the terms of the section are sufficiently complied with if the deposition of a witness is read over to him in the presence of the pleader for one out of twenty-seven accused. A deposition so read over is admissible against the witness on his trial subsequently for giving false evidence 35 C. 808; 42 C. 240

In 52 C. 159 it is now held that s. 360 of the Code is mandatory. The omission to read over the deposition of a witness to him in the presence of the accused if in attendance or of his pleader if he appears by a pleader is an illegality vitiating the trial and s. 537 has no application 51 C. 1 followed

The reading over in the presence of the accused of the deposition to a witness during the examination of another witness by the Court is not a compliance with the provisions of s. 360 and the trial is vitiated 52 C. 499

It is also held that under s. 360 evidence of each witness must be read over to him as soon as it is completed and before the examination of the next witness is taken up. Reading over the deposition to the witnesses examined one after another not on the completion of the evidence of each witness but during the mid-day adjournment or after the close of the day is not a compliance with the section and the trial is vitiated 53 C. 129, 30 C. W N 644; 49 M 71 = 49 M. L. J 421

In 29 C. W N 826 it is doubted whether where the deposition is read by the witness himself and it is explained by the Sessions Judge to the accused though not in the presence of the witness it is a sufficient compliance with the section. Where a mere reading over of the evidence by the witnesses cannot convey to the accused what has been recorded as evidence given by the witnesses it is not a sufficient compliance with the section 29 C. W N 850

Where the trial of the accused was commenced before the Assistant Sessions Judge and a large number of witnesses were examined without their depositions being read over to them. On a reference by the Sessions Judge to the High Court held that the commitment need not be quashed but that the case should be sent back to the Assistant Judge where the witnesses whose depositions were not read over to them in the presence of the accused would be re-called and the provision of s. 360 complied with 29 C. W N 898

Reading over the deposition of a witness in the presence of the pleader of the accused and not in his own presence although he is in attendance in Court is not a sufficient compliance with s. 360 30 C. W N 336

Patna High Court.

The Patna High Court agrees in holding that the provisions of s. 360 are mandatory their object is both to protect the witnesses and also to help the accused. But where there is nothing to show that the depositions were not in fact read over to the deponents except an omission on the part of the Magistrate to append a certificate to that effect the High Court in revision will not enquire whether the depositions were as a fact read over or not, 4 Pat. 231

In 4 Pat. 438, it is now held by the Patna High Court that in every case in which the legality of a trial is challenged on the ground that the provisions of s. 360 are not complied with the real test is whether there has been prejudice to the accused by reason of such omission or whether the defect is cured by s. 537

In 5 Pat. 63, holds that if a deposition is read out by the witness and not read over to him as required by s. 360 such a deposition was nevertheless legal evidence and admissible as such.

Rangoon High Court.

Where it was proved that the depositions had not been read over to the witnesses and further the accuracy of the record was challenged and that there was evidence also that a relevant statement made by a witness had been omitted from the record held that while the failure to read over the deposition to the witnesses would not of itself vitiate the trial on the facts established and under the circumstances set out above the proceedings must be quashed and a re-trial ordered 3 Rang 612

2 A The section not mandatory in proceedings under s. 107.—Section 360 does not apply to proceedings under s. 107 and it is not necessary to read over the depositions of witnesses to them in the presence of the person called upon to furnish security 52 C. 668

But as far as s 110 is concerned it is held that s 360 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies to inquiries under s 110 and non compliance with the provisions of that section would vitiate proceedings because by s 117 (2) the evidence in an enquiry under s 110 must be recorded as in a warrant case, i.e., under s 365 52 C. 470. See also 52 C. 832.

Sec. 360, sub-sec. (1) of the Code applies to proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code, and the omission to comply with the terms of the section vitiates the final order, 52 C. 437.

But in 52 C. 721 a distinction was made between reading over the evidence to the witnesses themselves and reading over evidence in the presence of the parties or their pleaders. And it was held, that under s 360 of the Code the evidence of the witnesses taken in an enquiry under s 145 must be read over to them and the omission to do so vitiates the whole proceedings. Held also, that a party in such an enquiry is not an accused within s 360 and that the evidence of the witnesses is not required to be read over in the presence of the parties or their pleaders. (52 C. 437 overruled to this extent.)

3. Accused cannot take objection that witness did not understand language of deposition.—The section relates to the examination of witnesses and does not apply to the examination of the prisoners, 12 W. R. 44. It is intended for the protection of witnesses. The fact that, at the trial of an accused person, the evidence of the witnesses against him is recorded and read to them in a language not understood by them is no ground for setting aside a conviction based upon such evidence, where the accused person understands the language in which such evidence is recorded and read, and where the witnesses made no application to have the evidence so recorded and read interpreted to them. 7 C. L. R. 393, contra see 8 W. R. 63, in which failure to attach a memorandum, that the deposition of a witness was read over to him in a language which he understood was held to be an error in law by which the accused was materially prejudiced. See also 4 B. L. R. Appx. 1 at p. 11 = 13 W. R. 1 at p. 7 as to the question whether such an irregularity would vitiate a commitment. In 5 C. 342 where the deposition of a witness on which a charge of giving false evidence was made, had not been read over to him, he was acquitted, as it was held that the deposition was inadmissible in evidence.

4. Deposition not read over to witness.—Objection raised by Judge suo moto.—In a trial before a Sessions Judge while certain prosecution witnesses were under cross-examination, their depositions before the committing Magistrate were tendered in evidence by the accused to contradict their statements. No objection was raised by the Crown, but the Sessions Judge refused to admit the depositions made before the Magistrate on the general statement of a mukhtiyar in Court that the practice in Magistrate's Court was not to read over depositions to witnesses and refused the application of the accused to examine the Magistrate as a witness in the trial. Held that the Judge was wrong in refusing to admit the depositions and even if he had refused them rightly, he should allow the prisoner to call the Magistrate for examination, 13 C. 121.

5. Failure to read over deposition to witness makes it inadmissible as evidence on charge of perjury.—It was held in 6 C. 762, that failure to comply with the requirements of ss 182 and 183 of Act X of 1877 in a judicial proceeding is an informality which renders the depositions of an accused inadmissible in evidence on a charge of giving false evidence based on such deposition. When the provisions of this section are not complied with the deposition is inadmissible in evidence, and no other evidence can be given to prove it or its contents [s. 81 Act I of 1872]. See also 28 M. 308, 12 C. W. N. 845 = 5 Cr. L. J. 116; 36 C. 953 at p. 959; 42 C. 240. But MILLER J is of opinion that when the deposition is read over to the witness and he has admitted it to be correct and signed the same, the deposition may be used against the witness in a charge of perjury, though it may not be used against the accused against whom it is given, 8 M. L. T. 117 = 11 Cr. L. J. 482; 21 M. L. J. 411 = 9 M. L. T. 325 = 12 Cr. L. J. 44.

6. While evidence is being read over, Court not to take up another witness.—It is a very material irregularity to proceed with the evidence of the next witness, when the evidence of the previous witness is being read over to the accused, WEIR JJ, 435, unless the accused or his pleader has had a full opportunity of knowing substantially what is recorded as the examination proceeds. 11 B. L. R. 8. It is a gross infraction of the provisions of this section to have the deposition of the witness read over to him by a clerk in the verandah of the Court house, though both the witness and clerk were in view of the accused and his advocate, and such a deposition cannot be admitted in evidence, U. B. R. (1912), 1 Qr. 123 = 13 Cr. L. J. 569. See 53 C. 129.

7. Deposition as recorded may be corrected.—It is no doubt, very important that a witness honestly desiring to correct an error in his evidence should not be deterred from his doing so, by the risk of a criminal charge, 10 C. 937. Before a deposition is closed, a witness should be given an opportunity of explaining and correcting any contradictions which it may contain, and the statement which the witness finally declares to be the true one—and that statement only—must be taken to be the statement which the witness intended to make Ratanlal 88. Otherwise a man who has through carelessness made an inaccurate or through partiality an exaggerated statement will be driven to stick to it and thus the object of cross-examination will be defeated 18 W R. 67. If the Court, instead of allowing the correction to be made proceeds to make the memorandum referred to in sub-sec. (2), such memorandum must be appended to the deposition and care should be taken that the practice and the form prescribed by law are exactly adhered to 13 W R. 17. In spite of the presumption raised by s. 114 Illust. (c) of the Evidence Act in a criminal case where the prosecution must prove every step of its case it is not proper or expedient to act on a presumption that the requirements of the law have been complied with 9 A 720; 18 G. 129

Interpretation of evidence to accused or his pleader

361. (1) Whenever any evidence is given in a language not understood by the accused and he is present in person it shall be interpreted to him in open Court in a language understood by him

(2) If he appears by pleader and the evidence is given in a language other than the language of the Court and not understood by the pleader, it shall be interpreted to such pleader in that language

(3) When documents are put in for the purpose of formal proof it shall be in the discretion of the Court to interpret as such thereof as appears necessary

Note.—This section relates to the oral evidence of witnesses.—As to documentary evidence although a prisoner has right to have all or any part of any document used on his trial translated or interpreted to him yet where a document like a Government Gazette or letter of the Secretary to Government is put in for the purpose of merely giving formal proof of that which is an incontestable fact as the commencement of hostilities on the frontier, it is not necessary to interpret it at length. It would be sufficient if the prisoner was made to understand what the document was and for what purpose it was used. To interpret them at length would be merely wasting time 15 W. R. 25 In 26 W R. 80, the circumstance that the evidence of a Civil Surgeon given in English was not interpreted to the accused was held to be of small importance, where it was understood by the prisoners counsel and all necessary questions were put to the witness See also 5 G. 826 As to when the services of an interpreter are required see 543 s 5 of the Oath Act X of 1873 and 16 W R. 61 (71).

Record of evidence in Presidency Magistrate's Courts.

362. (1) In every case * tried by a Presidency Magistrate in which an appeal lies, such Magistrate shall either take down the evidence of the witnesses with his own hand or cause it to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court All evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Magistrate and shall form part of the record

(2) Evidence so taken down shall ordinarily be recorded in the form of a narrative, but the Magistrate may, in his discretion take down or cause to be taken down any particular question or answer

† (2-A) In every case referred to in sub-section (1), the Magistrate shall make a memorandum of the substance of the examination of the accused Such memorandum shall be signed by the Magistrate with his own hand and shall form part of the record

(3) Sentences ‡ unless they are sentences of imprisonment ordered to run concurrently passed under section 35 on the same occasion shall for the purposes of this section, be considered as one sentence

§ (4) In cases other than those specified in sub-sec. (1) it shall not be necessary for a Presidency Magistrate to record the evidence or frame a charge

* Words in inverted commas were substituted for the words in which a Presidency Magistrate imposes a fine exceeding two hundred rupees or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months by Act XVIII of 1923

§ Sub-section (4) was added by Act XVIII of 1923

Note—Referring to the amendment of this section, the Select Committee say—

'We are inclined to agree with those critics who point out that the re-draft proposed by sub-clause (i) in sub-sec. (1) of s. 362 does not get rid of the difficulty that a Magistrate has to make up his mind as to the sentence he will impose before he begins trying the case. We do not see how this difficulty can be got rid of but we think that the amendment proposed has the advantage of bringing the language of this section into conformity with the language of ss. 263 and 264, and we would, therefore, retain this sub-clause

In order to meet difficulties that have arisen, we have introduced a sub-section laying down that Presidency Magistrates in cases subject to appeal, shall make a memorandum of the substance of the examination of the accused, and we have introduced a new clause making a consequential amendment in sub-sec. (4) of s. 364.

The non-official members who constituted a majority in the Committee, expressed their dissatisfaction with the distinctions drawn in the Code between Presidency Magistrates and other Magistrates and in particular with regard to this clause would have liked to see Presidency Magistrates required, in warrant-cases at all events to keep as full a record as any other Magistrate. But the Committee as a whole held that there was some force in the contention put forward by numerous High Court Judges that no change should be made in the Code affecting to any extent the special powers of Presidency Magistrates until a much fuller inquiry had been made into the question of their status powers and procedure. We desire to take this opportunity of placing on record our hope that it may be possible to appoint a small Committee to undertake this investigation.'

Notes—1. Section 33 deals with a sentence in cases of conviction of several offences at one trial. See s. 370 as to the particulars of a judgment of a Presidency Magistrate and s. 441 which empowers Presidency Magistrates to supplement the reasons for their orders, when records are called for by the High Court under s. 436. From the wording of this section it would appear to be necessary either that the Magistrate shall make up his mind as to the sentence to be passed or likely from the nature of the case before him to be passed, before the case is gone into or that having determined to pass such sentence he shall recall and re-examine the witnesses and record their evidence.

2 Scope of the section—The provisions of Chapter XXII (Summary Trials) do not apply to trials before Presidency Magistrates. A warrant-case must be tried by a Presidency Magistrate in the manner provided by Chapter XXI, subject only to the special provisions of this section as to the method of taking down the evidence, Ratanlal 539. A Presidency Magistrate is bound to record evidence only in cases coming under this section i.e., in cases where he passes appealable sentences (s. 411). He is not bound to record evidence in any summons-case or warrant case or cases in which inquiries have to be made as in summons or warrant-cases, except where he may impose an appealable sentence. Thus in an inquiry for taking security for good behaviour (s. 110) a Presidency Magistrate is not bound to record the evidence of witnesses, though it is desirable that he should keep some record of the statements made by witnesses, or that his judgment should indicate what those statements are, so that the High Court as a Court of Revision may judge of the propriety or legality of the order passed by him 33 C. 1038, where 18 C. 799 is referred to. But see next Note.

2-A. Record of evidence when sentence of imprisonment over six months is imposed under the Reformatory Act—The Presidency Magistrate is bound under s. 362 to record evidence of witnesses in a case where he imposes imprisonment exceeding six months for detaining the accused in a reformatory, 26 Bom. L. R. 1232 (10 Bom. L. R. 201 referred to).

3. Section not applicable to cases referred under s. 110.—This section does not apply to cases under s. 110 where it has become necessary to make a reference to the Appellate Court under s. 123 (2) 33 C. 1038 does not refer to cases of this nature. It refers to cases which are held to be not applicable and in which no reference has to be made. Therefore the Presidency Magistrate in cases where he makes a reference is not absolved from the duty of recording evidence, but it is not necessary that he should provide the High Court with the same materials as in a case from a Mofussil Magistrate, 13 C. W. N. 318 = 10 Cr. L. J. 122 and see 110 30 A. 334.

4. Record of evidence in non-appealable cases not necessary (under the new section).—There is no obligation in law requiring a Presidency Magistrate to record evidence in cases other than those dealt with in this section. In non-appealable cases it is left to the discretion of the Magistrate to do so or not, and the High Court could not interfere with the exercise of such discretion 31 C. 253, but see 10 Bom. L. R. 201 = 7 Cr. L. J. 194, where it is laid down that the Code does not mean that a Presidency Magistrate can act arbitrarily and record nothing by way of evidence in cases in which he is not bound to take down evidence in the manner prescribed in the section. In such cases the section merely gives him a discretion to take down the evidence or not.

and the discretion should be exercised judicially in a reasonable spirit, and not arbitrarily. There may be no necessity to record any evidence in 'morning cases.' But where a respectable person is charged with an offence reflecting on his character and serious allegations are levelled against him, there ought to be some record of evidence to enable him in case of conviction to go to the High Court. Now it is made quite clear by sub-section (4) that in non-appealable cases a Presidency Magistrate need not record the evidence or frame a charge.

Even in a summary case a Magistrate is bound to record a summary of the accused's examination and any statement in the course of that examination.

5 Parties are entitled to copies of notes of deposition.—Where a Presidency Magistrate refused to furnish copies of the notes of deposition to a party the High Court under s 45 of the Specific Relief Act ordered the records to be brought to the High Court and kept with the Registrar and allowed liberty to the party to take copies 15 C. W. N. 770

363. When a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has recorded the evidence of a witness he shall also record such remarks (if any) as he thinks material respecting the demeanour of such witness, whilst under examination

Notes.—1. Until whole evidence is taken, it is unsafe to pronounce upon credibility of witnesses.—Although a Judge may note the demeanour of a witness, it is generally unsafe to pronounce an opinion on the credibility of a witness until the whole of the evidence has been taken, Weir II, 433

2. Value of Judge's remarks.—The object of this section is to give to the Appellate Court some aid in estimating the value of evidence recorded by another Court. In a case of noting a witness in his deposition before a Magistrate omitted to mention the names of some of the accused. The Magistrate recorded on the deposition of the witness that, at the time it was being taken, he was in such a weak state, that the Magistrate was unable to proceed with his examination and had only asked him two questions when the excessive weakness of the witness obliged him to stop. The attestation of the Magistrate, it was held, is prima facie proof of that fact and may be laid before a jury, 12 W. R. 51. Where a Sessions Judge of experience has, in the most emphatic manner stated that the demeanour of the eye-witnesses was evasive that they inspired him with no confidence and that no man could be convicted on their testimony, the Appellate Court before accept be rejected, before the Court should interfere 27 P. W. B. 1914 = 125 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 203. See also 6 P. R. 1898, 22 In. Ca. 987 (Pun.).

364. (1) Whenever the accused is examined by any Magistrate, or by any Court other than a High Court established by Royal Charter*† the whole of such examination including every question put to him and every answer given by him, shall be recorded in full, in the language in which he is examined, or, if that is not practicable, in the language of the Court or in English and such record shall be shown or read to him, or, if he does not understand the language in which it is written, shall be interpreted to him in a language which he understands, and he shall be at liberty to explain or add to his answers

(2) When the whole is made conformable to what he declares is the truth, the record shall be signed by the accused and the Magistrate or Judge of such Court, and such Magistrate or Judge shall certify under his own hand that the examination was taken in his presence and hearing, and that the record contains a full and true account of the statement made by the accused

(3) In cases in which the examination of the accused is not recorded by the Magistrate or Judge himself, he shall be bound, ‡ as the examination proceeds, to make a memorandum thereof in the language of the Court or in English, if he is sufficiently acquainted with the latter language,

* The words or the Chief Court of the Punjab were repealed by Act XVIII of 1919

† The words or the Ch. of Court of Lower Burma were repealed by Act XI of 1923

‡ The words unless he is a Presidency Magistrate were omitted by Act XXXVII of 1923 and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Judge with his own hand, and shall be annexed to the record. If the Magistrate or Judge is unable to make a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of such inability

(4) Nothing in the section shall be deemed to apply to the examination of an accused person under s 263 * "or in the course of a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate"

Notes—See s 164 for the mode of recording confessions and statements in the course of investigation, s 209 for examination of accused before committal, s 255 for recording the plea of guilty in a warrant-case, s 271 for recording the plea of guilty in a Sessions trial, s 287 as to when the examination of an accused has to be tendered in a Sessions trial, s 342 for power to examine the accused, and s 533 for the effect of non-compliance with provisions of s 164 or this section

APPLICATION OF SECTION.

1. Scope of this section.—This section and s. 164 should be read with s 533 This section applies only to inquiries and trials It does not govern investigations, otherwise s. 164 would be superfluous 10 B. C. F. 186 The rules laid down in this section as to the mode of recording statements are, however, applicable alike to confessions taken before inquiry or trial under s 164 and to the examination of the accused under s 342 1883 A. W. N. 243. Before criminating a man upon his own statement under examination, it is necessary to see that such statement was deliberately made and recorded, that after being recorded it has been shown or read to the accused and the examination has been attested by the signature of the Magistrate following a certificate to be given under his own hand, 7 W. R. 49. But this section does not limit the generality of s. 21 of the Indian Evidence Act and a confession is none the less admissible because in some instances, and to some extent, statements were made in response to questions but there was no pressure or inducement, 37 C. 467.

2. Section inapplicable to statement of person not in position of accused—Where during an inquiry under s. 202, the Magistrate recorded a statement made by a person against whom the complaint was filed, held, that the statement cannot be regarded as having been recorded under this section and s. 164, the statement having been made when the deponent was not in the position of an accused person, 32 C. 1085. A deposition on solemn affirmation recorded by a Magistrate is admissible if he was not an accused person when the statement was recorded, 222 P. L. R. 1918 = 16 Cr. L. J. 257.

3. Confessions duly recorded by Magistrate in Native States admissible.—A confession made to a Magistrate in a Native State is admissible in a trial in British India, if it is duly recorded as required by the Code But it is not entitled to the same weight as a confession recorded by a British Magistrate, 2 P. R. 1908 = 9 Cr. L. J. 297; 8 P. R. 1907; 12 A. 595 and see Note 17 at p 365

4. Magistrate does not become interested by omitting to record statement.—Where a Magistrate before whom an accused person is brought omits to record the statements made to him by the accused, he does not thereby make himself a witness and so become disqualified from trying the case, 24 C. 499.

5. Examination of accused is for explaining evidence against him.—The examination of an accused person under this section is subject to the purpose referred to in s. 342, viz., "to enable him to explain any circumstances appearing against him," and not to supplement the case for the prosecution against him to show that he is guilty Per KERNAN, J., 10 M. 293; 1 M. H. C. R. 193, 6 C. 96; 16 A. 242; 13 A. 345; 15 C. L. J. 372 = 13 Cr. L. J. 253. See Notes 12, 13 and 15 to s. 342. The procedure laid down in this section applies to the examination contemplated by s 342, 4 Bom. L. R. 461; 1 Bar. L. R. 320. Statement of accused in answer to questions put by Court under s. 354 cannot be used against a co accused to convict him on the strength of it. The expression "proving a confession" is inapplicable to the procedure where a Judge asks questions and the accused gives explanations under a special section provided for the purpose 43 A. 323 (23 M. 131 dissented from).

6. Whenever the accused is examined by any Magistrate, &c., either before the commencement of the inquiry resulting in the commitment of the accused or during that inquiry when the accused is questioned under s 209 and 342, 21 B. 493 at p. 498; but not before the case reaches the stage at which the examination of the accused is authorized, 2 C. W. N. 702.

7. Magistrate should refrain from assuming guilt of prisoner when examining him.—A Magistrate when examining the prisoner and asking him whether he pleads guilty or not should refrain from assuming that the prisoner is guilty of the crime with which he is charged. The proper mode is to tell the prisoner that he is charged with a certain offence and ask him if he has any explanation to give of the charge, and whether he wishes to make any statement, Weir II, 438. The form of the questions is immaterial, even though it assumes the prisoner's guilt, 2 B. H. C. R. 397. Nor is it necessary for the Magistrate to state in the body of the examination, that the statement comprised every question put to the accused and every answer given by him and that he had had liberty to add to or explain his answers. Attestation at the foot of the examination is sufficient, 7 B. L. R. Appx. LXII.

8. Examination and certificate need not be in Magistrate's hand.—There is nothing in the Code which necessitates a Magistrate to take down the examination of the accused in his own hand. It is enough that he appends a certificate that the examination is in conformity to this section, 20 W. R. 80; 1 B. 219; 1900 A. W. N. 203; 21 B. 495. Even the certificate need not be written by the Magistrate or Judge himself. It is sufficient if he signs it, 8 W. R. 83. But the memorandum mentioned in sub-sec. (3) must be written and signed with his own hand.

BOTH QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS TO BE RECORDED.

9. Every question put and every answer given to be recorded in full.—This is of very great importance, for a statement made in answer to a question put, may have a different meaning if considered without such question. The questions put should not be of the nature of a cross-examination, nor should they be put with the object of getting the accused to incriminate himself or others under trial with him, 6 C. L. R. 431; 1 M. H. C. R. 199; 13 A. 345. Ordinarily, every question and every answer must be recorded verbatim, no matter whether relevant or irrelevant, 25 W. R. (Cr. Let.) 3; 2 B. H. C. R. 395 and 398.

10. Confession in narrative form admissible unless accused prejudiced.—The confession of an accused person was recorded in a simple narrative form instead of in the shape of question and answer as required by this section. There was nothing in the character of the confession, or in the circumstances of the case, to lead to the inference that the accused had been prejudiced, by the error, held, that the error did not affect the admissibility of the statement in evidence, 8 C. 616; also Ibid. 618 (footnote) (F.B.) = 1 C. L. R. 1 followed in 14 C. 539. There the Magistrate omitted to record in the vernacular the questions put to the prisoner. They were of such a nature that it was perfectly immaterial to the sense and meaning of the prisoner's statement whether they were recorded or not. It was held, that the prisoner was not prejudiced in any way by the omission. The mere absence of questions in a prisoner's statement does not make it inadmissible, 12 C. L. R. 120. See also 5 A. 253; 1892 A. W. N. 60.

LANGUAGE OF RECORD.

11. Object of recording statement of accused in his language.—“The law requires that ordinarily such a statement, i.e., the examination of the accused, should be recorded in the language of the person making it, the object being to represent the very words and expressions used so as to ensure accuracy and prevent misrepresentation or misconstruction of what was said. If such a record is not practicable, the law directs that the statement shall be recorded in the language of the Court or in English, if, however, as in this case a second translation be made, and the statement be recorded as so understood, the accuracy which the law contemplates is made more remote,” 21 C. 642 at p. 660, 13 A. 345. If an interpreter is employed, the examination should be recorded in the language in which it is communicated to the Court by the interpreter, 5 C. 826.

12. Statement taken down in language other than that in which it was made.—When answers are made by an accused person in one language and written down in another, the provisions of this section would not be complied with unless it is shown that it was impracticable to write them in the language in which they were spoken. If the answers were not taken down in accordance with the provisions of this section, it is doubtful whether the defect could be cured by s. 533, 15 C. 593 (F.B.), 10 O. G. 112 = 6 Cr. L. J. 94. Where a Bhil accused, having been examined by a Magistrate in the Marathi language and the accused's answers having been given in Marathi with a large sprinkling of Bhil terms the Magistrate recorded the accused's statement in English, held, that the procedure was irregular, and that the statement should have been recorded in Marathi, Ratanlal 533. See s. 533 and 21 B. 495, 10 O. G. 112 = 6 Cr. L. J. 94; but see contra 17 C. 852.

13. Where impracticable, statement need not be recorded in accused's own language.—The confession of an accused person made in Bengali, the language in which accused was examined, was recorded in English. The committing Magistrate, in his evidence in Court, said that he could not write Bengali well, and that there was no Mohurrir with him at the time when the confession was recorded. Held distinguishing 17 C. 862

the provisions of this section were sufficiently complied with, 22 C. 817. See also 21 B. 495 at p 500; 15 C. 539 and 1891 A. W. N. 85; 1892 A. W. N. 60. Where a confession given in Hindustani was taken before a Sub-Divisional Magistrate, and was recorded by the Court officer in Bengali, that being the language of the Court and where it appeared that the Magistrate himself was a Muhammadan, and it was contended that he must be taken to have been able to record the confession in the language in which it was given, there being no evidence to the contrary, held, in the absence of such evidence, the Court should presume that the proceedings of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate were conducted in accordance with law, and that in the absence of anything to show that it was practicable for the officers of his Court to record the statement in Urdu, it could fairly be held that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate found that it was impracticable, and adopted the alternative allowed by law of having the confession recorded in the Court language. In this case the confession was received, but the record of the Magistrate was treated as a mere memorandum, 18 C. 549, where 17 C. 862 is doubted. See also 21 B. 495. There a Presidency Magistrate examined the accused under ss. 209 and 342. The accused was examined in Marathi, but the questions and answers were recorded in English. The Magistrate deposed at the trial that it was the invariable practice in his Court to take down depositions in English and that he could not himself have accurately recorded the prisoner's statement in Marathi. In 10 O. C. 112 = 6 Cr. L. J. 94 an English record was held inadmissible in the absence of proof that it was impracticable to record the statements in the language they were made and no presumption under s. 80 of the Indian Evidence Act could be made in favour of such a record. See also 23 B. 221, where 17 C. 862 is dissented and 21 B. 495 is followed.

Burden of proof as to impracticability.—In 17 C. 862 it was held that it would be for the prosecution to establish the impracticability. See also 15 C. 585. In 18 C. 594 it was, however, held that in the absence of any evidence the regularity of proceedings must be presumed.

14. English record held good, when accused not prejudiced.—A Magistrate fully conversant with Urdu and English languages, and able to write fluently in both, took down a confession in English. The Magistrate was subsequently examined and testified that the English record was in his hand writing, and that was the confession actually made by the accused, and was recorded in English because he was in the habit of doing all his civil and criminal work in English (not that it was impracticable as the section contemplates). There was no vernacular record of confession. The Magistrate swore that the confession was taken down sentence by sentence, and was interpreted by himself to the accused who admitted its correctness. Held, that the defects in the manner of recording confessions had not injured the accused in his defence on the merits, and could therefore, be cured by s. 533 7 P. R. 1899.

15. Where the English and Vernacular records differ, the latter to be relied on.—Where an accused, a Manipuri, was examined before a Magistrate through an interpreter who obtained his answer in Manipuri and they were written in that language, and the interpreter translated them into Bengali and they were recorded by the Magistrate in English and the statement in English and that in Manipuri were found to differ, held that the statement recorded in Manipuri must be taken to be the record in the case. Had the Manipuri statement not been made, the Magistrate by recording statement in English would not have complied with the spirit and intention of this section, though the record in English might not have necessarily been inadmissible in evidence, 21 C. 642.

RECORD MUST BE SIGNED.

16. Direction as to accused's signature.—The direction that "the accused person shall sign etc." in para 4, s. 346, Act X of 1872, was held not to be satisfied by the following supscription —

"Signature of A B (the accused), the hand writing of C D"

Where the conviction of a person was substantially based upon a confession thus subscribed, the High Court reversed it and held, that the Sessions Judge was bound to prevent such a confession being admitted in evidence, 11 B. H. C. R. 44. A confession not signed by the accused is inadmissible in evidence until the defect is cured in manner provided by s. 533, 1883 A. W. N. 243.

17. Accused's signature should be taken in Magistrate's presence.—To take the signature of the accused in an adjoining room before a clerk and not in the immediate presence of a Magistrate is not a proper compliance with s. 364. The signature of the accused should be taken in the immediate presence and under the control of the Magistrate himself, Ratanlal 887.

18. Mark of accused unable to sign is sufficient.—When an accused person cannot sign his name, his mark is sufficient for the requirement of this section, that the statement must be signed by the accused, Weir II, 437. See the General Clauses Act X of 1897, s. 3 (52).

19. Refusal by accused to sign record.—An accused who refuses to sign a statement made at his trial in answer to questions put by the Court does not commit an offence punishable under s 180 I P C., 4 B. 15. The procedure indicated by sub-sec. (2) involves the Magistrate offering the record for the accused's signature, but it does not empower the Magistrate to require his signature. It is only when a person refuses to sign a statement which a public servant is legally empowered to require him to sign that he renders himself liable to punishment, 3 L. B. R. 199 = 4 Cr. L. J. 205. But see 15 A. L. J. 291, wherein 41 B. 15 is distinguished and not followed.

20. When thumb-impression not sufficient signature.—A thumb-impression in the case of a person who can write, is not a signature within the meaning of s. 3 (52) of the General Clauses Act under which a mark is to be considered a signature only in the case of a person unable to write his name. Held therefore, the thumb-mark of a person who can write, attached to a confession, did not satisfy the requirements of s. 164, 32 C. 550. See also 23 B. 221.

21. Proof of accused's mark or signature.—If the signature or mark of the accused is not taken to his confession ostensibly recorded under this section, the Magistrate who took down the confession may be examined as to the circumstances under which the confession was recorded, 1896 A. W. N. 161.

22. Effect of absence of accused's signature.—Where a record of confession does not bear the mark or signature of an accused it is inadmissible in evidence. But parol evidence of the confession may be given and the confession when proved is evidence against the accused under s 533 23 B. 221.

23. When objection as to absence of accused's signature is waived.—Where the signature of the accused was not taken by the committing Magistrate, and no objection was raised before the Sessions Court by his pleader on the ground of the irregularity of the Magistrate and of his being prejudiced thereby, held that under all the circumstances, the accused was not prejudiced, and that there was no sufficient ground for reversing the judgment. 11 B. H. C. R. 237.

24. Attestation unnecessary when confession is made in the Court.—The attestation required by this section is unnecessary when a confession is made in the Court to the officer trying the case at the time of trial, 3 C. 756. A distinction is thus drawn between the examination of the accused and the admission of his guilt.

CERTIFICATE OF MEMORANDUM.

25. No particular form for certificate.—This section unlike s 164 does not prescribe any particular form of certificate. Where the certificate and attestation are wanting to a statement, the Appellate Court is not competent to direct the same to be supplied and then to receive the statement as evidence. But their absence is not necessarily fatal 7 B. H. C. R. 50 at p. 53. Where, however, no attempt is made to conform to the provisions of this section or of s. 164 read with this section, which are imperative, s. 533 will not render a confession admissible. 9 M. 224 at p. 240, 2 C. W. N. 702.

EFFECT OF NON-COMPLIANCE WITH FORMALITIES

26. Omission to certify confession is not an error unless the accused is prejudiced.—Omission to certify the confession in the manner provided in this section or to record the whole of the questions put to the accused when the accused has not been prejudiced by the omission, is not such a material error as will justify the High Court in setting aside the conviction Weir II, 436. Confession does not become inadmissible because the memorandum is not written in the exact form prescribed. 3 A. 338.

27. By what evidence defect in certificate or memorandum can be cured?—A defect in the memorandum or certificate to be attached to the examination of the accused person by a Magistrate cannot be cured by the examination of a witness to prove the hand-writing of the Magistrate. The proper course is to examine either the Magistrate or some other person who was present when the statement was made. 8 C. P. Cr. 6; 22 M. 15; 23 B. 221; 2 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 297. It would also be necessary to show that no inducement had been held to the accused by threat or promise or otherwise, 1 B. 219. In 3 C. W. N. 387 the High Court, in a case where the examination was not signed by the Magistrate who recorded it, directed the Sessions Judge before whom the case had been tried to examine the Magistrate and take the evidence that the accused had duly made the statement recorded. Again where the statements made to a Magistrate on two successive days and duly recorded by him under this section were objected to on the ground that the certificate required by this section appeared only on the first pages of the record of his examination, while the record of his examination on the first day alone extended over two pages and that of the second day was entirely written on the second page, held, that the defect was cured by the evidence of the recording Magistrate who had been examined as witness at the trial, 8 C. W. N. 22. See also 222 P. L. R. 1918 = 18 Cr. L. J. 257.

28. Non-compliance with letter of law may result in diminishing value of confession.—Magistrates should in all cases be careful to observe all the provisions of ss. 164 and 364, for although various defects can be cured, the value of the confessions may sometimes be very much diminished by non-compliance with the strict letter of the law. Per ROBERTSON, J., 7 F. R. 1899.

29-A. It is now held by the Calcutta High Court that omission to comply with requirements of s. 364 may vitiate a trial. The provisions of s. 364 are mandatory. Where the examination of the accused during the trial in the Sessions Court was not recorded, conviction and sentences were set aside and the case was directed to be heard according to law. 29 C. W. N. 939; 52 C. 446; 53 C. 402.

In a Lahore case it was held that the omission to record his reasons under s. 256 did not render the trial illegal as s. 256 was not mandatory. Further held that the recording of statements of two accused persons collectively, instead of separately, is an illegality which vitiates the proceedings. 8 Lah. 554.

29. Statement inadmissible if formally not observed.—Where the examination of the accused is not recorded in conformity to the directions of this section, and when there is no certificate referred to in sub-sec. (2) attached to it, held that the Judge rightly rejected it, and did not allow it to go to the assessors or act on it himself, 12 W. R. 64. The law requires attestation by the signature of the Magistrate and is not satisfied by the affixing of an unreadable initial to what purports to be the statement of the accused, 13 W. R. 63; 7 W. R. 69. But a certificate which contains the words, 'taken by me,' but in which the Magistrate omitted to record that the prisoner's statement was taken in his hearing, was treated as substantially a compliance with this section, 3 C. 958 = 6 C. L. R. 333.

30. Is oral evidence admissible to supplement informal record?—Under the Code of 1872 the Bombay High Court held that oral evidence is admissible and no certificate is required. 4. 219; 10 Bom. Jur. in 24 W.

R. 29 sent the case back for the examination of the Magistrate to remedy the defect. See also 3 A. 338 and 11 Bom. R. C. R. 237. Now under the terms of s. 533, oral evidence that the accused duly made the statement recorded may be given and it provides that notwithstanding anything contained in s. 91 of the Evidence Act such statement shall be admitted if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits, and s. 533 applies to all cases, in which the directions of the law have not been fully complied with, 23 B. 221; 18 C. 569. But s. 533 does not apply where no record whatever has been made of such a confession and therefore a confession cannot be proved merely by oral evidence, 35 A. 260. In 37 C. 467 it was laid down that ss. 164, 244 and 364 of the Code are not exhaustive and do not limit the generality of s. 21 of the Evidence Act as to relevancy of admissions. See Notes to s. 533 and Note 7 to s. 164 at p. 363.

31. Confession to Magistrate must be recorded to be admissible.—The confession by an accused person made to a Magistrate holding an inquiry a matter required by law to be reduced to the form of a document within the meaning of s. 91 of the Evidence Act, and no evidence can be given to the terms of such a confession except the record, if any, made under s. 364. S. 533 deals only with errors in the record and does not apply where no record whatever has been made of such a confession, 35 A. 260.

365. Every High Court established by Royal Charter, *†‡§ shall, from time to time, by general rules, prescribe the manner in which evidence shall be taken in cases coming before the Court, || "and the evidence shall be taken down in accordance with such rule."

CHAPTER XXVI

OF THE JUDGMENT

Note.—Appellate judgment must conform to rules contained in Chapter XXVI. Appellate Courts continually overlook that s 424 prescribes that rules in Chapter XXVI shall apply to judgments of Appellate Courts, 37 C. 194; 14 C. W. N. 23. The rules contained in this Chapter shall apply, so far as may be practicable to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court. See s 424

366. (1) The judgment in every trial in any Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall be pronounced, or the substance of such judgment shall be explained—

Mode of delivering judgment

(a) in open Court either immediately after the termination of the trial or at some subsequent time of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders, and

(b) in the language of the Court, or in some other language which the accused or his pleader understands

Provided that the whole judgment shall be read out by the presiding Judge, if he is requested so to do either by the prosecution or the defence

(2) The accused shall, if in custody, be brought up, or, if not in custody, be required by the Court to attend, to hear judgment delivered, except where his personal attendance during the trial has been dispensed with and the sentence is one of fine only, or he is acquitted, in either of which cases it may be delivered in the presence of his pleader

(3) No judgment delivered by any Criminal Court shall be deemed to be invalid by reason only of the absence of any party or his pleader on the day or from the place notified for the delivery thereof, or of any omission to serve or defect in serving, on the parties or their pleaders, or any of them, the notice of such day and place

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit in any way the extent of the provisions of section 537

367. (1) Every such judgment shall, except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code be written by the presiding officer of the Court * or from the dictation of such presiding officer' in the language of the Court, or in English, and shall contain the point or points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision, and shall be dated and signed by the presiding officer in open Court at the time of pronouncing it † and where it is not written by the presiding officer with his own hand, every page of such judgment shall be signed by him'

Language of judgment

(2) It shall specify the offence (if any) of which, and the section of the Indian Penal Code or other law under which the accused is convicted and the punishment to which he is sentenced

(3) When the conviction is under the Indian Penal Code, and it is doubtful under which of two sections, or under which of two parts of the same section, of that Code the offence falls, the Court shall distinctly express the same, and pass judgment in the alternative

Judgment in alternative

(4) If it be a judgment of acquittal, it shall state the offence of which the accused is acquitted and direct that he be set at liberty

* These words in ——— were inserted by Act XVIII of 1973

† These words in ——— were added by Ibid

(5) If the accused is convicted for an offence punishable with death, and the Court sentences him to any punishment other than death, the Court shall, in its judgment, state the reason why sentence of death was not passed.

Provided that, in trials by jury, the Court need not write a judgment, but the Court of Sessions shall record the heads of the charge to the jury

* (6) For the purposes of this section, an order under sections 118 or 123, sub-sec (3) shall be deemed to be a judgment

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section, the Sel. Com. say—

"We do not see any necessity to limit the privilege of dictating judgments in the manner provided by the Bill and we have, therefore, re-drafted this clause. We think it desirable to lay down that orders under ss. 118 and 123 (3) should be deemed to be judgments for the purposes of the section."

APPLICATION OF SECTIONS.

1. Section apply only to judgments of conviction or acquittal on a trial.—The term judgment is nowhere defined in the Code. In the words of TREVELIAN J. in 31 G. 121 at p. 127 it means the expression of the opinion of the Judge or Magistrate arrived at after due consideration of the evidence and of the arguments. But the terms of s. 367 show that the word as used in this Chapter means a judgment of conviction or of acquittal, and not an order of discharge or the dismissal of a complaint, 28 G. 652; 29 G. 726; 29 M. 126 (F.B.), 31 M. 543. Quare Whether the final order of acquittal on a petition of composition is a 'judgment' under this section? 29 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 81 (F.B.) A judgment is not a judgment 5 N. L. R. 76 = 9 Cr. L. J. 201. In 1861 Code was held not to apply to gation of offences, Rastinial 61. It has been said that at common law in strictness a conviction consists of verdict, judgment and sentence. See Archbold p. 244

2. Sections do not apply to inquiries e.g., Chap. XII.—Having regard to the language of s. 368 which deals with 'the judgment in every trial' and the reference in ss. 366 and 367 to the accused and to acquittal and conviction it may be questioned whether this section applies to orders made in inquiries (e.g., under Chap. VIII or XII) as distinguished from trials 21 M. 310; 37 G. 91. But now under the new sub-section (6) orders under sections 110 and 123 shall be deemed to be judgments. And also see 49 G. 187.

3. Sections do not apply to sanction proceedings.—In 6 Bom. L. R. 897, it was held this section does not apply to sanction proceedings under s. 195 and that it relates only to judgments in trials, i.e., such judgments as are referred to in s. 366. It may be held that this section does not apply to proceedings under s. 476 which are substituted for the old sanction proceedings under section 195.

4. Sections do not apply to cases of discharge and dismissal of complaint.—Discharge and dismissal orders are specially provided for in ss. 253, 207 and 203. The Legislature does not render the writing of reasons necessary when an accused person is discharged under s. 253, after the whole of the prosecution evidence had been heard. But it is desirable that the Magistrate should record his reasons for discharge though it is not compulsory, 9 Bom. L. R. 250 = 5 Cr. L. J. 245. See 29 G. 726 as to whether an order of discharge amounts to a judgment within the meaning of this section, and the observations of WHITE, C.J., in 29 M. 126 (F.B.) and also 1 N. L. R. 18. In 31 M. 543 it was held that an order of discharge is not a judgment. In 29 P. R. 1914 it was doubted whether an order made on a composition was a judgment.

5. Sections apply to appellate judgments.—See s. 424 and 37 G. 194 noted at the head of this Chapter and Notes 29—33 below

6. Sections do not apply when appeal summarily dismissed.—See s. 421 and Note 29 below. A dismissal of an appeal or an application for default of appearance of party is not a judgment, 5 N. L. R. 76 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553, 10 G. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 237.

II.—DELIVERY OF JUDGMENT.

7. Judgments to be delivered in open Court.—Every judgment must be delivered in open Court, 21 C. 12. Judge after writing his judgment, judgment is not to be considered as a judgment, but merely as an opinion, 13 W. R. (Civ.) 209; 11 A. L. J. 745 = 14 Cr. L. J. 562. But where a Magistrate conducted and closed the trial in the established Court house, but could not by reasons of illness pronounce judgment, which he did at his private residence, held, that the proceedings being exceptional, need not be quashed as illegal, as no prejudice to the accused was made out, 1 Agra H. C. R. 17. Similarly, in 1 Bom. L. R. 117, where the Magistrate had died after passing sentence, but had left no written judgment, the High Court declined to set aside the sentence on the ground that the Magistrate had not signed the judgment after he had pronounced it. See also 1 A. L. J. 745 = 14 Cr. L. J. 562.

7-A. When judgment should not be dated and signed.—Section 367 requires the dating and signing of the judgment to be in open Court at the time of its pronouncement, 3 L. W. 476 = (1916) M. W. N. 372.

8. Judgment should not be delivered in the absence of accused.—Accused was charged with abetment of cheating in assisting another person to obtain Rs 5 from complainant. He absconded after all the evidence had been taken, was convicted and sentenced in his absence. But the Magistrate re-pronounced judgment on his being re-arrested and brought before him. Held, that judgment should not be pronounced in the absence of the accused, Ratanlal 325. But s 366 (2) contemplates the absence of accused up to the stage of judgment or even after that stage when the judgment is one of acquittal or of fine only, 6 B. L. R. 206 = 14 Cr. L. J. 272. In England, if the Court is satisfied that the prisoner is too ill or infirm to be brought up, the judgment may be pronounced in his absence, R v Constable, 7 D and B 669. Archbold p 240.

9. No Court has inherent power to adjourn passing of sentence for indefinite period.—Judgment in criminal cases should be delivered without undue delay, as delay is not only unjust to the accused as it prevents them from appealing at once, but it is opposed to the principles of law, 5 C. P. 24. Where on conviction, under s 379, I P. C., the Judge directed the accused to furnish security for six months and then to come up for receiving sentence and the Judge justified his procedure on the ground that he was only adjourning the proceedings by not passing a sentence but instead calling on the accused to furnish security, held that no Court has inherent power to adjourn the passing of sentence in this way for an indefinite period and the Judge did not exercise his discretion reasonably. The order cannot be treated as one of adjournment because the Judge has as a matter directed a security to be given which is a sentence, 14 Bom. L. R. 144 = 1 Bom. C. C. 85 = 13 Cr. L. J. 288.

10. Judgment must be written and delivered before sentence is pronounced.—Judgment must always be written and delivered before sentence is pronounced. It is illegal to pass a sentence at the termination of a trial and to postpone the writing of the judgment to a future occasion. All cases must continue to be shown on the pending file until judgment and sentence are written and delivered, Pun Cir p 239.

11. Legality of conviction where judgment written after sentence.—In 14 A. 242 it was held that inasmuch as a sentence in the case of conviction and the direction to set the accused at liberty in the case of acquittal can only follow on the decision and cannot precede it and inasmuch as the decision must be contained in the written judgment which is read out in open Court, and in such judgment only, it must necessarily follow that where there is no written judgment when the sentence is passed the sentence is illegal. But now the rigour of this rule is somewhat relaxed as sub-sec. (4) indicates that the want of a complete judgment in writing can be cured by s 537, 23 C. 502. In 1892 A. W. N. 157, where judgment had not been delivered until several days after the order of acquittal had been passed and the accused had been discharged from custody, the order of acquittal was set aside and re-trial ordered, on appeal by Government. The Madras High Court, following the Allahabad Rulings, set aside a conviction and ordered re-trial, where a Sessions Judge had his judgment ready only some days after pronouncing sentence of conviction, holding that the procedure adopted was in violation of the provisions of ss 366, 367, 27 M 237, where 14 A. 242 is approved. See also Madras Case Ref. Trial I of 1909 noted in 19 M. L. J. (S.N.) at p 9. A Magistrate passed sentence on the accused without delivering his judgment in open Court, the judgment (one in the course of being written during the hearing of the case) being in fact not then completed. The case went on appeal to the Sessions Judge, who dealing fully with the evidence taken before the Magistrate, confirmed the conviction and sentence. Held, per PRINSEP and TREVELYAN, JJ, that the judgment of the Magistrate was not in accordance with the law as laid down in this section, but held by PRINSEP and O'KINEALY, JJ (TREVELYAN, J, dissenting), that the irregularity was contemplated by s 537 and not having occasioned failure of justice, re-trial was not necessary, per TREVELYAN, J, the case was more than one of mere irregularity within the meaning of s. 537. The judgment having been irregularly arrived at and pronounced, there was no judgment in accordance with law, and therefore no fair trial to which every accused person is entitled, the case ought therefore to be re-tried. Judgment means the expression of the opinion of the Judge or Magistrate arrived at after due consideration of the evidence and of the arguments, 21 C. 121. See also 20 C. 353. It is a material irregularity to pass a sentence before recording a judgment, but unless it has occasioned failure of justice the conviction need not be quashed, 5 B. L. R. 131 = 12 Cr. L. J. 810. Whether a judgment delivered after sentence passed is an illegality or a mere irregularity must depend on the circumstances of each case, 13 Bom. L. R. 635 = 12 Cr. L. J. 457. In this case the High Court refused to interfere with the judgment of the Presidency Magistrate as the accused had not been prejudiced. Where a Magistrate died immediately after pronouncing sentence, but before writing judgment, High Court declined to interfere in the matter, holding that it was for the accused either to have moved the High Court or to have exercised their right of appeal, 1 Bom. L. R. 117. In 1 Bom. L. R. 160, under similar circumstances, there was a petition of the accused, so the High Court reversed the conviction and ordered re-trial. See 43 M. L. J. 369 (F.B.)

12. Conviction not bad where Magistrate died without writing judgment.—A Subordinate Magistrate died after passing sentence but before recording judgment. The sentences were entered on the back of the depositions and the accused were committed to custody under warrant addressed to the jailor. Held, on reference to quash the proceedings, that a conviction on a trial regularly held will not be set aside merely because the Magistrate had been unavoidably prevented from recording a judgment in accordance with the requirements of s 367. In such circumstances, the right of appeal is not taken away by the absence of a complete judgment, Weir II, 438. See Note 7.

13. Delivery of sentence and subsequent destruction of judgment does not render conviction illegal.—S 366 only imposes the condition that the judgment should be pronounced in open Court and imposes a few other conditions but such conditions do not include the condition that the record should not have been lost or that if only a portion of the judgment (that relating to conviction and sentence only) is pronounced the conviction is illegal. In Weir II, 711, omission to read a portion of the judgment was held to be a mere irregularity covered by s 537. So also omission to pronounce the judgment before convicting and sentencing is cured by s 537, though it might be different if no judgment had been written, 38 M. 498.

14. Delivery of judgment must not be delegated.—The duty of dating and signing the judgment and of delivering the same should not be delegated by the presiding officer to any other. In a case in which the Sessions Judge after holding trial in a district within his Sessions division, went back to his headquarters in another district and sent his judgment in the case to the Magistrate of the district in which the trial had taken place, to be delivered by the latter and the latter delivered it accordingly, it was held that the trial had never been legally complete and must be set aside, 1889 A. W. N. 181. But in 18 M. L. J. 197 = 7 Cr. L. J. 639 it was held that a judgment written by a Magistrate, but dated, signed and pronounced by his successor, was good.

III.—LANGUAGE AND CONTENTS OF JUDGMENT.

15. Judgment must be written by the Court.—The judgment must be written by the Court itself. It will not do if the judgment is written by a clerk and signed by the Court, Ratanlal 543. See, however, ss. 265 and 370. In other cases, it will not do if the judgment is written by a clerk and signed by the Judge, 14 A. 242. The judgment must be in the hand writing of the presiding officer, but where it was actually dictated and when reduced to writing signed by the Magistrate, the procedure was held to be a mere irregularity curable by s. 537, 4 C. L. J. 411.

16. Judgment to be in language of the Court or in English.—Under this section, the judgment of a Criminal Court, should be written in the language of the Court or in English. Where an Honorary Magistrate had written his judgment in Urdu, the script used being Persian. Held, this was irregular and that the judgment should have been in Hindi (language of the Court) or in English, and the script should have been in the former case Kaith (as directed by the Local Government) and Roman in the latter. The irregularity was, however, cured by s 537, 4 C. L. J. 232 = 4 Cr. L. J. 162.

18. Judgment must be temperate and sober.—Comment on conduct of parties and witnesses should not go beyond what is really necessary.—"A judgment is a privileged document and it is well to remind judicial officers that the immunity which they enjoy in writing judgments carries with it the duty of circumspection. Any temptation to pillory or pour ridicule on strangers should be restrained and comments on the conduct of witnesses and parties should not go beyond what is really necessary for the elucidation of the case. A humorous judgment is not necessarily a bad one. But if it is a good judgment its value does not depend on the value of its humour. It is better to disregard the humorous aspect altogether, even if the reproach of dulness was incurred in consequence." 4 Bur. L. T. 173 = 12 Cr. L. J. 464. In this case it was held there was no sufficient reason to order anything to be expunged. 'It cannot be too strongly insisted on, that temperate and sober language should be used in judgments. It must not be forgotten that strangers attacked in judgments are not able to defend themselves. A judgment should confine itself to a consideration of the issues before the Court together with fair and legitimate comment on any errors or irregularities that may be disclosed in the course of the trial,' 5 Bur. L. T. 20 = 13 Cr. L. J. 239. In this case several parts of the judgment were directed to be expunged. For the purposes of judgment in a Sessions trial, the testimony or conduct of Police-officers concerned may be scrutinised and commented on in the same degree as those of other material witnesses and no further, 25 W. R. 65. Remarks to the effect that the prisoner was a person of wealth and influence, and had prevented truth from appearing, ought not, unless established in evidence, to find a place in a judgment, 8 W. R. 13.

19. Contents of judgment.—Care shall be taken that the decisions of judicial officers are written on a uniform, concise and complete plan, neither too prolix, nor omitting all reference to the facts, as is sometimes the case. Reference should first be concisely made to the main facts and proofs on which the decision is founded, secondly, the deduction and reasons should follow, and then in due course will come, thirdly, the sentence or decision. When reference is made in a judgment to witnesses or accused persons, judges shall not content themselves with merely mentioning their numbers on the list, but shall also mention their names. The name of the person referred to shall always be distinctly stated, Oudh Cr Dig. p 22. Judgments are sometimes faulty, in that they hardly refer to the evidence at all, and contain little more than an expression of the Magistrate's convictions as to the guilt of the accused. Others, again, are rambling, inconsistent and arbitrary. Magistrates import into their judgments their personal knowledge of character and behaviour, and refer to matters not found in the record in explanation of the probable motives or causes which may have led to an offence. A judgment should be clear, systematic and straightforward. It should state the facts of the case, establishing each fact by reference to the particular evidence by which it is supported and it should give sufficiently and plainly the reasons which justify the finding, C P Cr Cir. Part II, No 27, 14 C. W. R. 23. Attention is drawn to s 367 which lays down what every judgment of a Criminal Court must contain, and in particular to the necessity of stating clearly the points for determination in each case, Bom H C Cr Cir. p 38.

20. Judgment should contain enough particulars to enable Appellate Court to decide whether it will interfere.—A judgment should state sufficient particulars to enable a Court of Appeal to know what facts are found and how, Ratanlal 833. Where the judgment of an Appellate Court is in the nature of a stereotyped one, which might answer for any case, it is not in accordance with this section and s 424. But where a judgment though not a long and elaborate one affords a clear indication that the Court duly considered the evidence, it is a good judgment, 1 C. W. R. 169, and see Note below.

21. Particulars to be given in every judgment.—(i) Names of accused to be set out—At the head of every written judgment and of the record of the heads of the charge to the jury, the names of all the accused persons shall always be set out, together with the numbers by which they may respectively be referred to by the Court in the course of the judgment or charge to the jury, Bom H C Cr Cir. p 39.

The following tabular form should be annexed to judgment, Madras G O No 918, dated 16th June, 1910—

Serial Number	Description of accused.					Date of				Explanation of delay
	Name.	Father's name.	Caste.	Occupation.	Residence.	Age.	Occurrence.	Complaint.	Apprehension.
								Commencement of trial.	Close of trial.
1	2					3				4

(11) Offences must be clearly specified—The offence of which the accused is convicted must be specified in the judgment with the same precision as in the charge 5 L B R 21; 33 C. 718 When an offender is convicted of two or more offences and it is competent to the Court to award more than one sentence the Court shall in its judgment declare in respect of which offence or offences any sentences awarded is imposed Mad G O No 1448 Judicial dated 26th October 1909

(12) Finding on all charges to be given—A Sessions Judge should record findings whether of conviction or on all the charges under which prisoners are committed for trial 13 W R. 50

(13) Judgments should be signed and not stamped—Judicial officers shall in all cases take care to sign their names distinctly and legibly Wilkins 119 When the law prescribes that a proceeding should be signed by a judicial officer it ordinarily intends that the signature should be made with a pen and not with a stamp. There are obvious reasons why judicial documents should be authenticated in such a manner that the authenticity may admit of proof 6 M 396, and the signature by a Magistrate to the judgment must be appended at the time of pronouncing it in open Court Ratanlal 429 In the case of all the documents which are required by law to be signed the impression of a stamp bearing the officer's name is insufficient and illegal Wilkins 119

(14) Indication of power should be apparent beneath the signatures of Magistrates—Magistrates should indicate in their judgments beneath their signatures the extent of their magisterial powers with which they have been invested. Omission to do so frequently impedes the exercise of the powers of revision possessed by the High Court Al H C Memo 27th July 1871 In every sentence or order made by a Criminal Court the jurisdiction of the Judge or Magistrate making it should distinctly appear on the face of the record Wilkins 112

(15) List of witnesses and material objects must be appended—There shall be appended to every judgment a list of the witnesses examined by the prosecution and for the defence and by the Court also a list of exhibits and material objects R 39 Madras Rules of Practice

(16) In trials with assessors—The record of opinions of the assessors should be appended to the judgment It should also be noted of what caste or castes the assessors were. See Rules 245 and 250 of the Madras Rules of Practice Where the Sessions Judge convicted the accused but gave no reason for differing from the opinion of the assessors it was held to be an irregularity which did not vitiate his finding 5 B H C R. Or Gs. 55 But where an Appellate Court merely rejected an appeal without specifying the points for determination its decision thereon and the reasons therefor the appeal was ordered to be reheard 8 P R 1376

(17) Judgment must specify punishment—Under this section this sentence is a part of the judgment and when an accused person is convicted it is incumbent upon the Court to pass a formal sentence of but a single day's imprisonment (or any other punishment) in order to make the record legally complete unless it seems fit to act under s. 582 1883 A W N 210 A = Illegal to antedate a sentence It is r imprisonment for as many days as he is as imprisonment after conviction and release him at once Ratanlal 392

22 Judgment in particular offences—(1) Mischief—In every case of mischief (s. 420 I P C) a question of legal title involved is a point for determination It is the duty of the Criminal Court to determine whether the offender in such a case was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right 2 A 101 at p. 203

(2) Unlawful assembly—It is the duty of the Court to determine where several alternative common objects of an unlawful assembly are alleged in the charge to determine whether the charge is sustainable and if so which of the common objects is made out 35 C. 718, 36 C. 158 On a charge under s. 143 I P C. the judgment should contain as one of the points for determination on a statement as to existence of the elements constituting the unlawful assembly 37 C. 194

(3) Theft—The judgment on a charge under s. 379 I P C should contain as one of the points for determination the question as to the dishonest intention and a finding on it especially when a bona fide claim of right is set up 37 C. 194

23. Duty of the Court of limited jurisdiction to state in conviction its legal justification—Every conviction by a Court of limited jurisdiction ought to contain a statement of its legal justification within itself Therefore where the accused was convicted under s. 47 of Bom. Act V of 1878 (Akkari) for being in possession of more than one gallon of country liquor without a permit from the Collector and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 10 the conviction was reversed as being insufficient on its face and no other authority being cited in support of it Ratanlal 350

24. Judgment must be self-contained and cannot be supported by subsequent explanation.—A Magistrate cannot supplement his judgment by his explanation to the superior Court. If there are no material findings in the judgment, the defect cannot be cured by the Magistrate's explanation, 7 C. L. J. 238 = 7 Cr. L. J. 312.

25. Personal knowledge of Magistrate may be stated in judgment.—It is not improper for a Magistrate to state in his judgment as an additional ground for believing certain evidence that it is in accord with what he had himself personally seen or heard M H C Pro, 6th September, 1883. But where the judgment in a criminal trial is based partly upon evidence and opinions formed in another criminal case the conviction was set aside on the ground of prejudice to the accused 11 C. W. N. 151.

26. Reasons for not passing capital sentences to be stated, when accused convicted of offences so punishable.—Sub-sec. (5) of s. 367 must be complied with, 8 M. L. T. 81 = 11 Cr. L. J. 481. Judges must not shrink from doing their duty and they are bound to pass the death sentence in a case of murder when they believe the evidence, 7 W. R. 33. The fact that the accused is a woman is no ground for not passing the death sentence 1885 A. W. N. 134. Even where the accused is a pregnant woman, capital sentence should be passed, but the execution of the sentence shall be deferred till after delivery, 15 W. R. 66. Where a Judge passes on conviction for murder, the alternative sentence of transportation for life, he should set forth his reasons for not passing the capital sentence, 1884 W. R. 27. The circumstance that the body of the murdered man has not been found should not influence the Court in passing the death sentences, 3 A. 393; 1892 A. W. N. 160. But see 11 W. R. 20. Where, however, the condition of the accused rendered it likely that if he were hanged, decapitation would ensue, the sentence of death was commuted to transportation for life, 2 C. L. R. 215. In 16 M. L. T. 535 = (1915) M. W. N. 34, the fact that the evidence was all circumstantial and the age of the accused were taken into consideration.

27. Benefit of doubt as to propriety of death-sentence to be given to accused.—Where a Judge is in doubt whether a sentence of death or a sentence other than death should be passed in a capital case, the doubt like all other doubts should result in favour of the accused. It is quite erroneous and illegal, that feeling reasonable doubt as to whether death alone can be the proper penalty, the Judge should yet pass a sentence of death, leaving the responsibility to the High Court of commuting it, if necessary. There is no authority in law for holding that a Sessions Judge has any right to devolve his responsibility in respect of sentence in a capital case on a higher tribunal, 3 L. B. R. 111 = 3 Cr. L. J. 25, where 1 L. B. R. 216 is dissented from. It is highly improper for a Sessions Judge to pass sentence of death and, at the same time in his reference to the High Court, recommend the prisoner for mercy, M H C Pro, 24th April, 1866.

28. Judgment in the alternative.—The provision in sub-sec. (3) applies only where the facts are established but there is a doubt as to the application of the law to the proved facts and not where the doubt in the mind of the Judge is whether there was sufficient proof that the accused had committed one of two offences, e.g., murder of the deceased or merely caused evidence of the murder to disappear, 11 P. R. 1913. See Note 6 to s. 236, 11 P. R. 1887; 7 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 137 and 21 C. 955 referred to. The power to pass judgment in the alternative should not be resorted to until both the committing officer and the Sessions Judge are satisfied that no reliable evidence is procurable in support of one or other of the charges, and such a finding cannot be based in a case of giving false evidence upon the statements which are not absolutely contradictory, the one or the other, nor when in one of them the accused gives only hearsay evidence. Every presumption in favour of the possible reconciliation of the statement must be made, 12 W. R. 11. As the section allows a judgment to be given in the alternative, where it is doubtful under which of two sections or of two parts of same section, an offence falls, and alternative finding that a trespass was committed with one or other of two intents, either of which would make it criminal trespass as defined in s. 441, I P. C., is sufficient if there is evidence to support the finding, 5 P. R. 1886. So where the judgment did not state in express terms that the Court was in doubt as to the question under which of two sections the offence fell as required by this section, held, that this was at most an irregularity and did not vitiate the judgment, Weir II, 450.

IV.—JUDGMENT ON APPEAL.

29. Section inapplicable when appeal summarily rejected under s. 421.—Though in rejecting an appeal under s. 421, the Appellate Court is not bound to write a judgment, 20 B. 540; 21 C. 92, 23 M. 534; 35 A. 496, it is advisable to give reason for dismissing the appeal, in view of the order being challenged by an application for revision, 17 A. 241 (F.B.), 35 A. 496; 13 N. L. R. 169. See Notes 10 and 11 to s. 369.

30. Unless every appellate judgment conforms to provisions of s. 367 it is not legal.—See s. 424 and Notes thereto. No judgment of a Court other than a High Court which purports to dispose of an appeal under s. 423 is a legal judgment unless it contains at least (1) the point or points for determination raised by the memorandum of appeal, (2) the decisions thereon and (3) the reasons for the decisions. The Legislature appears to regard two rules as cardinal points in ensuring public confidence in the tribunals of justice, namely (1) that the Judges should understand and the parties before them should have the assurance that they do understand what questions are submitted for their decision and (2) that the Judges should lay open to criticism the reasons which impel them to their conclusions. A judgment as the following "I have considered the evidence in this case and I agree with the Magistrate in his conclusions and in the reasons given for them, and in my opinion the sentence which he passed was a proper sentence," is not a proper judgment. The fallacy in 19 A. 506 lies in the assumption that, in a criminal appeal, the matter before the Appellate Court is precisely and only, the matter which was before the first Court. This is obviously not the case. The first Court had to try the accused for the offence charged, and both parties are entitled to a judgment which shows on the face of it that the 'case' of both parties has been judicially considered and weighed one against the other prior to arrival at a decision. The Appellate Court has to try, not the accused, but the appeal. In every appeal, at least two points are raised which can only be raised for decision in the Appellate Court, namely (1) is any objection raised in the memorandum of appeal a valid objection and if not, (2) is there any ground apparent on the record for interference in appeal. The judgment abovementioned does not comply with the law and ought not to be accepted as valid merely because Judges can be trusted to act honourably. The judgment of EDGE, C.J., in 19 A. 506 dissented from, 8 N. L. R. 84 = 13 Cr. L. J. 559. See 10 A. L. J. 435 = 13 Cr. L. J. 839; (1913) U. B. R. 2nd 469 = 14 Cr. L. J. 870, 37 C. 184. Having regard, however, to the provisions of s. 537, it does not follow that because the form of judgment does not exactly comply with all the requirements of this section, it is not a valid judgment and the conviction must be set aside. It is sufficient if the Judge in appeal has appreciated the points which the prosecution had to establish and expressed opinion thereon, 20 C. 353 and 19 A. 506 (F.B.). In 36 C. 158, a conviction for rioting was not set aside even though there was no express finding as to the common object, as the common object was set out in the charge and there was no question about it and the accused was not prejudiced, 22 C. 276 and 33 C. 295 distinguished. See 33 C. 384 for a slight difference in the common object charged and found, 24 A. L. J. R. 318.

Effect of s. 537—S. 537 (a) deals with omission or irregularity in a judgment and it cannot be invoked in a case of the absence of any judgment. Where the only order made was—the appeal is dismissed under s. 423, Cr. P. C., held the order could not be sustained, 17 Bom. L. R. 1085 = 16 Cr. L. J. 832. The provisions of s. 367 are mandatory. See 8 N. L. R. 84 = 13 Cr. L. J. 559.

31. Case of several accused—Appellate judgment must be independent and not supplementary to judgment of first Court.—An Appellate judgment must be quite independent and stand by itself. It ought not to be read in connection with or as supplementary to the judgment of the Court of First Instance. The judgment of an Appellate Court dealing with the case of several accused in a joint trial must show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration and should state reasons as far as may be necessary to show that the Appellate Court has devoted judicial attention to the case of each accused 33 C. 138; 37 C. 91; 16 Cr. L. J. 496 (M).

32. Instances of informal and defective appellate judgments—Where an additional Sessions Judge after admitting an appeal without dismissing it under s. 421, disposed of it in these terms—"No one appears to argue the appeal. I have read the record myself and think the conviction is right, appeal dismissed" It was held this order did not comply with the provisions of this section and that the Appellate Court ought to have written a judgment, even if no one appeared for the accused, 11 C. W. N. 135. Even if the counsel for the appellant does not refer to the defence evidence it is the duty of the Appellate Court to look into that evidence and after dealing with it come to its own decision, 40 C. 376, and see Note 11 under s. 369. The Appellate Court in finally deciding the appeal should record its reasons for confirming, reversing or modifying the sentences or orders of Lower Courts, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx XII. Although, as a general rule, it is not incumbent on an Appellate Court to record its reasons in full when confirming a decision, yet in the circumstances of a case, anything peculiar should be noted, 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 101; and where no facts were stated and no reasons given in the judgment for the conclusion arrived at on appeal, by a Sessions Judge, the appeal was ordered to be re-heard, 7 C. W. N. 30, 9 C. W. N. 23. Similarly, where a Sessions Judge, after hearing an appeal gave the following judgment "It is urged that the evidence is quite untrustworthy, and that the decision should be reversed. The depositions have been gone through and commented on at considerable length. The Court finds no ground for interference. The application is dismissed," it was held that this was not a sufficient compliance with this section and s 424 of the Code, and, that the case should be re-tried, 11 C. 444 followed in 13 C. 110. Similarly, when the judgment contained inconsistent findings of fact and it was not possible to decide which set of findings was correct without going through the whole evidence the appeal was directed to be re-heard, 13 Cr. L. J. 895 (C). Again when on appeal the Sessions Judge gave the following judgment "After reading the evidence and hearing the learned counsel for the appellant and the learned Government pleader, I am convinced that the Deputy Magistrate has decided the case rightly. The appeal is dismissed." Held, that the judgment was not in accordance with the law with the meaning of this section and s. 424, 23 C. 420. But a Magistrate is not bound to give his opinion as to the character of the evidence in prolix detail, much less the Judge in confirming the sentence passed by the Magistrate, 1884 W. R. Sup. Vol. Cr. 6; 19 A. 506; 20 C. 333. The judgment of an Appellate Court must comply with the provisions of s 367. If it does not consider the evidence of the defence nor even allude to it, it is defective 7 M. L. T. 182 = 11 Cr. L. J. 331; 18 C. W. N. 167; 12 M. L. T. 335 = (1912) M. W. N. 881 = 13 Cr. L. J. 712. So an Appellate judgment which merely stated "I have heard the arguments and have perused the records. The conviction is in my opinion thoroughly justifiable on the evidence on record" is defective, 13 C. W. N. 192. See also 15 P. R. 1897; 1886 A. W. N. 289; 22 C. 241; 15 B. 11; 31 P. R. 1885; 8 A. 516; 17 Bom. L. R. 1085 = 16 Cr. L. J. 882 and see Notes under s 424.

33. Even order of acquittal may be set aside if judgment defective.—In 5 C. L. J. 452 = 5 Cr. L. J. 349, it was held that the High Court should not interfere with an order of acquittal, unless there has been a miscarriage of justice. Where, however, an appellate judgment of acquittal, was so meagre that it was impossible to form an opinion as to the merits of the case or to say whether there has been a miscarriage of justice or not, the High Court on the application of the complainant set aside the order of acquittal, directing appeal to be re-heard. See also 7 C. W. N. 30, 13 Cr. L. J. 48 and see next Note.

33-A. Appellate Court not to remand for insufficiency of original judgment.—The orders of High Courts directing re-hearing for insufficiency of judgments being passed mostly in revision, it is not to be supposed that an Appellate Court is competent to remand a case, because the Court of the First Instance has not recorded a proper judgment. Its duty is to decide the case under appeal on its merits, 32 C. 1069. But it would be for those who contend that a judgment is not a proper judgment, so as to have in fact occasioned a failure of justice (s 537) to show that there were points raised for the determination of the Appellate Court on which no decision was given or reasons stated. The fact that the objection was set out in the petition of appeal does not show that it was necessarily taken in the course of argument before the Appellate Court, nor is it the duty of the Appellate Court to do more than consider the arguments actually raised at the hearing of an appeal, 21 C. 131 at p. 125. See, however, Notes 30 and 33.

Y.—RECORD OF CHARGE TO THE JURY.

(See s. 297 and Notes under Heading I thereto) .

34. Charge to the jury need not be written before being delivered.—It is not necessary that the direction to the jury should be reduced to writing before delivery, but it is essential that the "heads of the charge" placed upon the record should represent with absolute accuracy the substance of the charge, and be such as to enable the High Court, in the event of an appeal, to see distinctly whether the case was fairly and properly placed before the jury, Wilkins, 116, 34 C. 698; 36 C. 281.

35. Charge must be written out as soon as possible after the delivery of the charge.—In a case the verdict was delivered on the 29th May, and the sentence was passed on the 5th June, but the charge to the jury was not written out until the 29th June. On appeal the High Court remarked though there was nothing in the section as to when the charge must be written as in the case of a judgment, it was very unsatisfactory that the charge was not written out until nearly three weeks after the sentence. "We are strongly of opinion that in these cases such charges ought to be written out as soon as possible after the charge to the jury has been actually delivered, and when the facts of the case are fresh in the mind of the Judge," 36 C. 281.

36. Reference to heads of charge not sufficient when jury become assessors.—When an accused person is charged at the same trial with several offences some of which are, and some are not, triable by jury, and with respect to the heads of charge on which the Sessions Judge convicts the jury become assessors, it is the duty of the Judge to pronounce a judgment containing the particulars specified in s 367. A reference to the heads of the charge to the jury is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the section, Ratanlal 426.

37. What "the heads of the charge to the jury" should contain?—These words must be construed reasonably, and must be held to include such statement on the part of the Sessions Judge as will enable the Appellate Court to decide whether the evidence has been properly laid before the jury, or whether there has been any misdirection in the charge, 23 W. R. 32, and must represent with absolute accuracy the substance of the charge, 36 C. 231 referring to Circular Orders of the Cal H C Ch I, Ord 59. Although a Judge is not bound to record a judgment yet he should give sufficient indication in his record of the heads of the charge that he has complied with the law so as to enable the Appellate Court to determine whether or not he has acted in accordance with this section, 25 C. 736. In a trial by jury before a Sessions Judge, the record made by the Judge of the heads of his charge to the jury under the provisions of this section should include such a statement as will enable an Appellate Court to decide whether the evidence was properly laid before the jury, or whether there has been any misdirection in the charge 1903 A. W. N. 232; 39 A. 343, 4 Pat. 626 following 3 Pat. L J 633 and 1 Pat. L J. 317. See 30 C. W. N. 693.

VI.—EXPUNGING REMARKS FROM JUDGMENT.

38. Judge himself may expunge remarks.—It is open to a Judge to reconsider and expunge damaging observations regarding a witness in a criminal case who had at the trial no chance of defending himself. This does not amount to the reviewing of a criminal judgment as there is no question of re-considering the guilt of the accused, 2 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 176.

39. Power of High Court to expunge improper remarks from judgment of Subordinate Court.—G S and G C were prosecuted under ss 181 and 199, 1 P C, for making a false statement on oath, the alleged false statement being that G C was 21 years old and eldest son of his father. The Magistrate discharging the accused recorded his opinion that both the accused had deliberately perjured themselves. Only one witness was examined for the prosecution who gave no evidence tending to show whether the statement was false or true. The accused asserted the truth of their statement, but no evidence was adduced for the defence also, Atk. per CLARKE C J and CHATTERJEE, J, that under the circumstances, it was obviously most improper for the Magistrate to express any opinion that the accused had deliberately perjured themselves and the words "I am of opinion that both the accused have deliberately perjured themselves" were ordered to be expunged from the judgment Punjab Gazette, 23rd November, 1901. See also 22 P. W. R. 1908 = 197 P. L. R. 1909 = 8 Cr. L. J. 462. An application to expunge several paragraphs from the appellate judgment in the Kodur case was made to the Madras High Court by the Public Prosecutor, but the Court merely enhanced the sentence expressing its disapproval of the views of the Sessions Judge, M H C Cr Rev Case 530 of 1907. In 3 Bur. L. T. 20 = 13 Cr. L. J. 259, the High Court directed several parts of the judgment to be expunged. See also 4 Bur. L. T. 173 = 12 Cr. L. J. 465. In 15 Cr. L. J. 820 (Oudh) the High Court directed the expunging from judgment of the Lower Court remarks against the accused's counsel to the effect that a suggestion was a daring attempt to mislead the Court.

VII.—MISCELLANEOUS.

40. Particulars to be endorsed on the copy of judgment.—In order to aid the Appellate Courts in determining whether appeals are time-barred by limitation, every Criminal Court subordinate to High Court shall cause to be endorsed the following particular on every copy of a judgment, order, or charge to a jury furnished under the provisions of s. 371 or s. 548, Cr. Pro. Code.—(1) The date on which the copy was applied for, (2) the date on which it was ready for delivery and (3) the date on which it was delivered. To prevent unauthorized alterations being made, the date should be written in letters in distinct hand writing and each endorsement should be signed by some responsible officer of the Court on the date to which it refers Bom H C Cr Cir., p 72, Wilkins, 138.

41. Copies of conviction and sentences of persons in the Military Department.—When any person serving under the Government of Bombay in the Military Department is convicted in a Criminal Court, such Court shall inform the officer commanding the regiment or corps to which the convict belongs, Bom H C Cr Cir., p 33, see also Pun. Cir., p 324, Wilkins, 139.

42. Copies of convictions and sentences of military pensioners.—When a military pensioner is convicted and sentenced to imprisonment in a Criminal Court, the facts of the case should be reported, without delay to the Pension Paymaster of the Circle to which the pensioner belongs, Bom H C Cr Cir., p 39 see also Pun. Cir. p 325.

43. Immediate discharge of prisoner on acquittal.—A prisoner entitled to be discharged from custody immediately on the judgment of acquittal being pronounced, when there is no other charge pending against him, and his further detention is illegal, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. II.

44. Distribution of copies of judgment of Court of Sessions.—Under the Madras Rules, every Court of Session must print all its Sessions judgments and distribute copies to the District Divisional and Commuting Magistrates, the Inspector-General of Police, the Superintendent of Police, High Court, accused person, Local Police, Prosecutor and to the Superintendent of Jail, Chemical Examiner and Inspector-General of Registration where they are concerned.

45. European soldiers not to be sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for petty offences.—“The Lieutenant Governor would be obliged if the Judges of the Chief Court would point out to Magistrates that a sentence of rigorous imprisonment or hard labour, when passed upon a soldier in Her Majesty's Service, involves his discharge under military regulations, and that consequently, though unintentionally, they may in passing such a sentence give a far higher punishment than they in any way intended. This point, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, should be borne in mind by Magistrates when trying soldiers for petty offences”—Extract from letter No 3365, dated 30th October, 1876 from Secretary to Government, Punjab, to Registrar, Chief Court, Punjab

Why should not the above rule be extended to all Government servants like Village Munsiffs, Kurnams, Policemen, etc.?

368. (1) When any person is sentenced to death, the sentence shall direct that he be hanged by the neck till he is dead

(2) No sentence of transportation shall specify the place to which the person sentenced is to be transported

Notes.—1. Form of warrant of execution of sentence of death.—See Sch. V, Form No 35

2. No sentence of transportation shall specify the place, etc.—Under the Prisoners Act III of 1900, s 32, printed in Appendix in cases in which the sentence passed is one of transportation for life, the judgment must be preserved until a report is received of the convict's death or release—M H C Letter, 14th January, 1892.

369. * “Save as otherwise provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force or, in the case of a High Court established by Royal Charter, by the Letters Patent of such High Court, no Court” when it has signed its judgment, shall alter or review the same, except to correct a clerical error.

Court not to alter judgment

Note—Referring to the amendment of this section, the Select Committee say—

“The proposal to repeal the words ‘other than a High Court’ was intended to remove the possibility of reading s. 369 as if it gave High Courts unlimited powers of altering or reviewing their judgments. But there are cases other than those referred to in ss. 395 and 484 in which a review of judgment is possible. We would refer to s 434 and also to clause 26 of the Letters Patent of the Presidency High Courts. The Indian Legislature has power to amend the Letters Patent of the High Courts, and the amendment introduced by clause 27 might be interpreted as an intention to amend the Letters Patent in this respect. We have, therefore, re-drafted the amendment so as to provide that no Court shall alter or review its judgment save as provided by or under any law for the time being in force or, in the case of a High Court, in its Letters Patent.”

Notes—1. Undelivered judgment is inoperative and may be changed.—A Bench of Magistrates after writing a judgment convicting and sentencing the accused but before delivering the same changed their mind and referred the case under s. 349. On its being contended that they could not refer after having written out the judgment, held, as the judgment though signed was never pronounced, it was inoperative as a judgment and must be merely taken as an expression of opinion, 11 A. L. J. 743 = 14 Cr. L. J. 562.

2. Section must be read subject to s. 437.—Where the District Magistrate who had discharged the accused under s. 259, owing to the absence of the complainant, revised the case on an application by the complainant and made over the inquiry to another Magistrate. Held, on the reference of the Sessions Judge that this section was no bar to the District Magistrate making further inquiry into a case dismissed by himself 28 C. 102. But when a Magistrate has already dealt with a case in revision and decided that there was no case for interference he cannot subsequently under s. 437 direct further inquiry. Such an order would be one reviewing the earlier order and he is prohibited by s. 369, 5 Bar. L. T. 37 = 13 Cr. L. J. 301. See Notes to s. 437.

* The words in inverted commas were substituted for the words ‘no Court other than a High Court’ by Act XVIII of 1921,

3. Section applicable to final order in miscellaneous proceedings.—(i) Sanction.—See Notes under Heading XXVI at pp 543-544. A Magistrate cannot grant a sanction having once refused it, 10 M. L. T. 339 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 431 = 12 Cr. L. J. 556; 40 C. 423.

(ii) Orders under Chap. XXI.—See Notes under Heading XVII at pp 303-306. A Magistrate having once passed an order under s. 146 cannot cancel the order and pass an order under s. 147 in lieu thereof. 16 O. C. 192 = 14 Cr. L. J. 603; 35 C. 350 followed.

(iii) Order directing delivery of property.—The same considerations which prevent Subordinate Courts from altering their judgments on review, hold good in respect of final orders passed by them and which are of the nature of a judgment and this rule was in 23 B. 949 at p. 959 applied to an order refusing to send to a foreign State, property seized in execution of a search warrant, which was reviewed by the Magistrate and was drawn out. But see 23 C. 652 at p. 660 (F.B.) and 29 C. 726 (F.B.).

(iv) The section applies equally to final orders under s. 488, 21 O. W. N. 344.

4. Where judgment has been signed it cannot be altered.—After signing and pronouncing judgment in open Court a Magistrate on the same day enhanced imprisonment by one day at the request of the accused in order to make his order appealable. Held, that although the Magistrate acted with the best of motives, yet nevertheless the alteration of the sentence was illegal 1933 A. W. N. 16. No Magistrate can add to or alter the proceedings or judgment in any case after they are signed and published. It is especially irregular when made in the absence of the accused and without notice to him, 10 C. W. N. 1062 = 5 C. L. J. 415 = 4 Cr. L. J. 210, 12 Bom. L. R. 521 = 11 Cr. L. J. 416. See also 12 Cr. L. J. 473 (Bar.)

5. Sessions Judge not competent to alter judgment, once signed.—A Sessions Judge has no power to alter or set aside a conviction and sentence once made and signed by him, 23 W. R. 49, 23 B. 50. On the 27th August 1895 a Sessions Judge sentenced the accused to three years rigorous imprisonment. On the 29th id. he directed that the sentence should run from the 26th June, as the prisoner was on that day convicted and sentenced by the Magistrate and thereafter in appeal conviction and sentence being set aside, retrial resulted in his committal to the Sessions, where he was convicted and sentenced as above. Held, that under s. 387 the sentence is part of the judgment, and the express words of this section forbid the Sessions Judge to alter it. The altering order dated the 29th August was a nullity, Ratanlal 804. Where a Judge added a note to his judgment throwing doubts on the conclusion at which he had arrived on the evidence, STUART, C.J., describes the proceedings as most unwarrantable, 2 A. 33. But in 3 M. 49, where a Sessions Judge on appeal annulled the conviction by a Magistrate, but omitted at the time to order a retrial, it was held that he was not precluded from passing such an order subsequently. A Judge may also expunge improper remarks from his judgment 2 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 478, as there is no question of reconsidering the guilt of the accused.

6. Even when judgment has been obtained by fraud or trick, Court cannot alter judgment.—The accused obtained his acquittal under s. 247 by preventing the complainant from appearing when the case was called on by wrongfully arresting and detaining him on a false charge, though the order was obtained by fraud on the Court, the Code does not permit the Court which made the order to vacate it on proof of fraud. There is no provision resembling Order IV, r. 4 of the Civil Procedure Code by which a case can be restored to file by the Court which dismissed it, 38 M. 1028. The only course is to move the Local Government to file an appeal.

7. Judgment final, even though based on erroneous view as to limitations.—A Sessions Judge, after receiving a criminal appeal recorded a written order of rejection on the ground that it was barred by limitation but on a later representation by the prisoner, admitted the appeal and at the hearing acquitted him. Held that the order of acquittal was made without jurisdiction the previous order rejecting the appeal being final and not open to review by the Sessions Judge, 19 B. 732. See Note 9 below.

8. Not open to Judge to differ from jury, after accepting verdict.—After accepting the verdict of the jury it is no longer open to the Sessions Judge to change his mind and refer the case to the High Court under s. 307. The only course open to him is to refer the case to the Local Government, 5 E. W. N. 693.

9. Proper course when mistake made—(i) Magistrate.—A judgment cannot be reviewed. The proper course is to apply to the High Court under s. 433 (Mad H C Pro, 13th November, 1873), through the Sessions Judge, 1 Bar. B. R. 334. Where a Magistrate erroneously dismisses an appeal as out of time, he cannot subsequently re-admit it on his file on the discovery of his mistake; but the case must be referred to the High Court for revision, 6 Bom. L. R. 360. On finding that he has passed an illegal sentence, a Magistrate may, if the prisoner is suffering prejudice, direct the jailor to suspend the execution and merely keep the prisoner in detention, which should in no case be allowed to exceed the term of imprisonment awarded while the case is referred to the High Court, Ratanlal 137. (ii) Sessions Judge.—Where a Sessions Judge discovers he has made a mistake, he cannot himself alter the sentence but must refer the case to the High Court, 23 W. R. 49; 22 B. 949—958. See also Note B.

10. Does section apply to orders of dismissal and discharge?—(i) Cases under s. 203.—See Notes 27 to 30 at pp. 586-587. See Note 1 to s. 368. An order of dismissal under s. 203 is not a judgment within the meaning of this section. Per WHITE, C.J., in 29 M. 126 (F.B.) But in 4 C. W. N. 26 it was held, that where a Presidency Magistrate orders the dismissal of a case, it is not open to him to revise his proceedings. It has been held, that an order of a Magistrate dismissing a case for default of appearance of the complainant is not a judgment, but when after examining the complainant or after taking certain evidence, however incomplete such evidence may be, the Magistrate exercises his judgment upon the merits of the complaint, and makes an order of discharge, it is a judgment which under this section cannot be reviewed or altered by himself.—Per GHOSE, J., in his dissenting judgment, 23 C. 652 (F.B.) at p. 654—666.

(ii) Cases under s. 253.—See Note 18 at p. 718. An order of discharge under s. 253 (1) is not a judgment, as it is not a final order in a trial terminating either in the conviction or acquittal of the accused, 31 M. 543, 9 Bom. L. R. 250. Order of discharge passed by a Magistrate under s. 253 when the complainant withdrew from the complaint is not a judgment, 29 C. 726 (F.B.).

(iii) Cases under s. 259.—See Note 10 at p. 732, 28 C. 652 (F.B.).

(iv) Dismissal of an appeal.—An order dismissing an appeal for non-appearance of an appellant is not a judgment, 5 N. L. R. 76 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553, 10 C. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 287.

10-A. An order for costs under s. 145 (3) subsequent to the final order under s. 145.—Under s. 145 (3) of the Code a Magistrate who makes an order under s. 145, without any direction as to costs, has power to order the same subsequently, and such latter order is not an alteration or review of his judgment in the original case within the meaning of s. 369 of the Code, 47 C. 974.

10-B. An order under s. 204 is not a judgment within the meaning of s. 369.—On a complaint being made, the Magistrate ordered issue of process under s. 204. Subsequently on that date a cross-complaint being made the Magistrate rescinded the order and sent both the cases to a Subordinate Magistrate for local inquiry and report. Held that the order passed by the Magistrate under s. 204 was not a judgment under s. 369 of the Code. There is nothing in the Code which forbids a Magistrate to reconsider an order of this kind on sufficient grounds, 27 C. W. N. 651.

11. Dismissal of appeal for non-appearance of pleader may be set aside.—In 7 M. H. C. B. Appx. XXIX it was held, a District Magistrate could re-hear an appeal rejected for non-appearance of appellant's pleader when sufficient cause was shown for such non-appearance. See also 5 N. L. R. 76 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553. But this view has not been accepted in Bombay, where even a summary dismissal under s. 421 was held not open to review, 4 B. 101; 19 B. 732. Anyhow an Appellate Criminal Court cannot dismiss an appeal for mere default of appearance. It is bound to go into the case, even if the accused is not present in person or by pleader, 5 N. L. R. 76 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553.

But in 46 M. 332 it is held, that it is the duty of the Court to go into the matter and to dispose of an appeal on the merits. When a criminal appeal or revision petition is dismissed for default of appearance, there is no decision on the merits and no proper disposal of the case and therefore the Court may re-hear it. In such a case the order of dismissal for default of appearance is no judgment at all. The order is tantamount to an adjournment of the case till some one appears and moves the Court to hear him. (re: Ranga Rao, (1912) 23 M. L. J. 371 doubled.)

11-A. Where an accused was charged under s. 379, I P. C., and also under ss. 75 and 379, I P. C., and at the trial the Sessions Judge tried the accused on the first charge alone and convicted and sentenced him and then inquired into the second charge, viz., as to previous convictions and then sentenced on that charge, held, the subsequent proceedings were not valid as they amounted to a review which is not allowed by this section, 20 Bom. L. R. 87 = 42 B. 202.

POWER OF HIGH COURT TO ALTER ITS JUDGMENT.

(See Note 7 to s. 439.)

12. High Court has no power to alter or review its judgment.—As soon as the judgment is pronounced and signed by the Judge, the High Court is functus officio, 14 C. 42; 7 A. 672; 24 A. L. J. 61 = 17 Cr. L. J. 57, 1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 306; 4 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378. See, however, s. 434, s. C. 63. There is no inherent power to revise a judgment once pronounced.—Per SUBRAHMANYA AYYER, J., in 29 M. 126 (F.B.) 23 M. L. J. 371 = 12 M. L. T. 350 = 13 Cr. L. J. 710. The words 'other than a High Court' do not give to a Division Bench of the High Court power to review its judgment in a criminal appeal. The words are to be accounted for by the power of review given to the High Court under s. 434, on points specially reserved by the Judge presiding at the High Court Sessions, Ratanlal 791; 1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 306; 46 C. 67. It should be noted that s. 369 as amended makes it clear that even the High Court have no unlimited power of altering or reviewing their judgment save as provided by their Letters Patent.

13. Judgment or order not complete until signed and sealed.—A judgment of the Allahabad High Court was held not complete until it was sealed in accordance with Rule 83 of Rules of 1898, and that up to that time it may be altered by the Judge or Judges concerned therewith, without any formal procedure by way of revision or judgment, 21 A. 177 followed in 27 A. 92, where it was held, that the High Court is not precluded from entering an application for revision merely because an appeal petition from the same conviction has been previously dismissed on the ground that no appeal lay, coupled with the remark to the effect that there appeared no ground for taking up the case in revision. These two rulings were recently followed in 14 A. L. J. 61 = 17 Cr. L. J. 47. An application to re-hear must be disposed of by the Judge who originally heard the case. See also 10 C. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 287. A judgment or order not complete until signed, 33 C. 828. Accused and witho copied and signed and sealed and communicated to the Court below, the application was ordered to be dismissed, 7 C. W. N. 7.

14. Dismissal of revision application for non-appearance of pleader.—The High Court has no power under this section to review an order dismissing an application for revision made by an accused person and the only remedy is by an appeal to the prerogative of the Crown as exercised by the Local Government, 7 A. 673 followed in 10 B. 176, see also 15 C. 42 and 1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 306. Even if the application for revision is dismissed for default, the High Court cannot re-hear, 23 M. L. J. 371 = 12 M. L. T. 350 = 13 Cr. L. J. 710. But see 46 M. 382 in which 23 M. L. J. 371 is doubted. See above Note 11. The High Court can set aside its own order dismissing a revision application for non-appearance of pleader, 10 C. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 287, but not if it has been disposed of on the merits. Similarly, when the High Court has passed an order in revision under s. 439, it has no power to review its own order, (1905) U. B. R. (Cr. Pr. Code) 35 = 2 Cr. L. J. 485. It would not do so on the ground of the discovery of fresh evidence for the prosecution, since the Police ought to have produced the evidence (as to previous conviction) at the trial, Ratanlal 458. High Court has no power to review an order passed by it rejecting an appeal, 46 C. 60, 47 M. 428 = 146 M. L. J. 436.

15. Judgment of single Judge or Division Bench of High Court cannot be interfered with by himself or by Division or Full Bench.—The powers of a single Judge in a matter with which he has jurisdiction to deal are the powers of the Court and cannot in any way be controlled by a Bench or Full Bench of the Court. As no appeal lies so no revision lies. Both procedures imply subordination or inferiority which does not exist. 1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 306; 4 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378; 8 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314. See also 8 C. 61, 14 C. 42 (F.B.), 10 B. 176 (F.B.), 7 A. 672 and 27 A. 92. But see Note 11 above.

16. Remedy for erroneous order.—Remedy against an erroneous order of High Court in its appellate jurisdiction is to petition the Local Government—the authority with whom rest the discretion either of executing the law or of commuting the sentence Ratanlal 791; B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 438 (F.B.) = 5 W. R. 61, 14 A. L. J. 61 = 17 Cr. L. J. 47. In Referred Trial No 40 of 1903, WHITE, C.J. and MOORE, J., after confirming the sentence of death on the accused, entertained serious doubts as to the propriety of the conviction. Their Lordships holding that they had no power to review their judgment, reported the case to the Local Government with a strong recommendation for a free pardon under s. 401.

LOSS OF JUDGMENT.

17. In case of loss of judgment and records after conviction, Court may restore by memory.—There seems to be no provision of law which empowers the High Court to quash the conviction and sentence because some of the material records of the Sessions trial have been lost. There is no provision of law which enacts that, unless all the records of a case are in the Court house at the time of convicting and sentencing, the conviction and sentence are void and should be quashed or that the trial has been held without jurisdiction or the sentence was passed without jurisdiction. Where a judgment has been lost, it is open to the Judge to re-write from memory the substance of it, see 8 C. L. J. 52. A Court has inherent power in case of loss or destruction of a judicial record to restore such record see 11 C. L. J. 243; 88 M 498.

Presidency Magistrate's judgment.

370. Instead of recording a judgment in manner hereinbefore provided a Presidency Magistrate shall record the following particulars —

- (a) the serial number of the case,
- (b) the date of the commission of the offence,
- (c) the name of complainant (if any),
- (d) the name of the accused person and (except in the case of an European British subject) his parentage and residence,
- (e) the offence complained of or proved,
- (f) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any),
- (g) the final order,
- (h) the date of such order, and
- (i) in all cases in which the Magistrate inflicts imprisonment or fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or both, a brief statement of the reasons for the conviction.

Notes.—See s. 283 for summary trials s. 362 as to record of evidence by a Presidency Magistrate and s. 441 for power to supplement his decision and s. 537 as to irregularities in judgment etc.

1. In petty cases reasons for conviction need not be stated.—Imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of cl. (i) of this section. The meaning of that clause is that where the offence found is sufficiently grave to involve a fine of Rs. 200 or imprisonment as the substantive sentence, the Magistrate is bound to record his reasons for the conviction so as to enable the party to bring the matter up to the High Court, but in petty cases, which can be met by a fine of a few rupees the decision of the Magistrate may be recorded shortly, 14 C. 174.

2 Effect of not giving reasons.—Where reasons are stated they should be stated in such a manner that the High Court on revision may judge whether there were sufficient materials before the Magistrate to support the conviction 13 C. 272. If reasons are not clearly stated in an appealable case, the conviction is liable to be quashed in spite of s. 537. But the law does not demand a full and complete statement of reasons 31 C. 983.

3. In non-appealable cases reasons for conviction should generally be stated.—Not appealable to High Court, a Presidency Magistrate should state his reasons for that the High Court may judge as to whether there were sufficient materials before the conviction. Where the notes of evidence taken by a Presidency Magistrate materials upon which the prisoner could legally be convicted and the Magistrate reasons for the conviction under clause (i), the conviction was set aside by the High Court provisions of s. 537, 13 C. 272. In 8 C. W N 837, it was further held that the reasons for show the previous convictions in order to justify the punishment imposed see, how—

4 When sentence of Imprisonment is passed, reasons for conviction to be stated.—It requires that in case in which the accused is sentenced to imprisonment a brief statement of the reasons for the conviction. It is not sufficient for him to say for that may necessarily be implied to be his opinion from the fact that he has convicted the accused. It contemplates something further as the reason for the conviction 27 C. 481. In 17 B. 100 the High Court set aside the judgment of a Presidency Magistrate which was for the accused. I believe the evidence of the complainant and the witnesses is not sufficient to satisfy the provisions of this section, which required the Magistrate to give reasons for the conviction.

B. Section does not apply to cases under Workmen's Breach of Contract Act.—The provisions of this section do not apply to cases under Act XIII of 1859, where no offence is committed and where there is no accused, 72 C. 131; 4 C. W. N. 253; 20 M. 235 at p. 238; 16 B. 268; 11 A. 262 and 4 M. 234.

Copy of judgment, etc., to be given to accused on application.

371. (1) On the application of the accused a copy of the judgment, or, when he so desires, a translation in his own language, if practicable, or in the language of the Court, shall be given to him without delay. Such copy shall, in any case other than a summons case be given free of cost

(2) In trials by jury in a Court of Session, a copy of the heads of the charge to the jury shall, on the application of the accused, be given to him without delay and free of cost

Case of person sentenced to death (3) When the accused is sentenced to death by a Sessions Judge, such Judge shall further inform him of the period within which, if he wishes to appeal, his appeal should be preferred

Notes.—1. Limitation.—An appeal against a sentence of death must be filed within seven days from the date of the sentence—Act XV of 1877, Sch. II Art 150 and Art 180, Sch. II of Act IX of 1908.

2. Remission of Court-fee on copy of judgment.—In the exercise of powers conferred by s 85 of the Court fees Act (No VII of 1870) the Governor-General in Council is pleased to remit the Court fee on a copy or translation of judgment in a case other than a summons-case and a copy of the heads of the Judge's charge to the jury when the copy or the translation is given under this section, also on a copy or translation of a judgment in a summons-case when the accused is in jail.—Notification, Government of India, No 4680, dated 10th September, 1889 (Gazette of India 1889, Part I, p. 506)

3. Appeal not to be rejected for copy of judgment not being stamped.—Where an Appellate Court rejected an appeal from a conviction under s 323 I P C, because the copy of judgment of the Lower Court was not stamped, the High Court reversed the order of the Lower Appellate Court under the above notification Ratanlal 364

4. Who are entitled to obtain copies.—All prosecutors whose charges are dismissed, are affected by the order of discharge, and are therefore entitled to obtain copies of the order made by, and of the depositions taken before, the Magistrate, 8 C. 186 = 10 C. L. R. 190. An advocate against whom remarks have been made by a Court in a judgment imputing to him misconduct should have furnished to him on application a copy of the judgment containing those remarks in order to enable him to explain his conduct, 8 Bom. L. R. 540. See also s 548

Judgment when to be translated.

372. The original judgment shall be filed with the record of proceedings, and, where the original is recorded in a different language from that of the Court, and the accused so requires, a translation thereof into the language of the Court shall be added to such record.

Court of Session to send copy of finding and sentence to District Magistrate.

373. In cases tried by the Court of Session, the Court shall forward a copy of its finding and sentence (if any) to the District Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the trial was held

CHAPTER XXVII.

OF THE SUBMISSION OF SENTENCES FOR CONFIRMATION

Sentence of death to be submitted by Court of Session.

374. When the Court of Session passes sentence of death, the proceedings shall be submitted to the High Court and the sentence shall not be executed unless it is confirmed by the High Court

Notes.—See s 31

1. For Form of warrant of commitment under sentence of death, see No 34, Sch. V.

2 Description of weapons, etc., produced in Court should be on record in certain cases.—When death or grievous hurt has been caused by a blow from a stick or other weapon the weight and dimensions of the weapon should be stated in the Sessions Court proceedings with such particularity as may enable the High Court (which has no opportunity of seeing it) to form an opinion as to the character of the weapon and the intention with which it was probably used. The mere entry of a stick or a stone in the list of property produced before the Sessions Court does not enable the High Court to judge whether the stick or stone was a deadly or a comparatively harmless weapon.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cir. p 70. In all cases referred to the Chief Court for confirmation of sentence of death and in all cases where death or serious bodily injuries are found to have been caused by an accused person a full and accurate description of all weapons produced in Court in connection with the trial should form part of the record transmitted. Such description should in the case of cutting instruments of all kinds include mention of the condition of the edge and in the case of all weapons, not being firearms their dimensions and weight.—Pun. Cr. p 238. When any article or articles are produced in evidence before a Criminal Court a description of such article shall be entered under the Court's signature on the flysheet of the record. This description should always include dimensions and weights when dimensions and weights are material either as regards the article itself (as in excise and weight and measure cases) or as regards the use that was made of it (as in murder and hurt cases). Each article should be distinguished by a letter or number and when reference is made to it in the course of the evidence the letter or number shall be quoted.—C. P. Cr. Cir., Part V, No 11.

3. Practice—High Court must be satisfied on facts as well as law—Bombay—In cases sent up to the High Court for confirmation of sentence of death it is the practice of the Court to be satisfied on the facts as well as the law of the case that the conviction is right before it proceeds to confirm the sentence. Ratanlal 710. In the Bombay High Court when a prisoner has been sentenced to death even though the conviction was with the unanimous verdict of a jury, the whole case referred is before the High Court on matters of fact as well as on matters of law, 47 Bom. L. R. 1072 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 149 = 16 Cr. L. J. 818. The correctness of the procedure was doubted.

Cuttack.—When the case is referred to the High Court under s. 374, the Court is bound under this section to go into the facts of the case, although the conviction was by the verdict of a jury, 19 W. R. 87. But this rule will not be followed in hearing the appeal of a co-accused not sentenced to death along with reference under s. 374, in the case of a person sentenced to death. 2 C. W. N. 49. Thus a person sentenced only to transportation for life may be in a worse position as regards involving the Appellate Court than one sentenced to death, 11 B. L. R. 14. See also 26 W. R. 19. Where there is a case of clear failure of justice to a person sentenced to transportation for life in a trial by jury the High Court can only bring his case to the notice of the Local Government to be dealt with under s. 401, 30 C. W. N. 166.

375. (1) If when such proceedings are submitted the High Court thinks that a further inquiry should be made into or additional evidence taken upon any point bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the convicted person it may make such inquiry or take such evidence itself or direct it to be made or taken by the Court of Session.

(2) Such inquiry shall not be made nor shall such evidence be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors and unless the High Court otherwise directs the presence of the convicted person may be dispensed with when the same is made or taken.

(3) When the inquiry and the evidence (if any) are not made and taken by the High Court the result of such inquiry and the evidence shall be certified to such Court.

Note.—This section is an exception to s. 363.

1 High Court's power to take additional evidence.—Under this section and s. 428 the High Court when recording the further evidence could dispense with the presence of the accused especially where the additional evidence was recorded by itself, as in the Ranga Reddy Murder Case, 24 M. 523. See Criminal Appeal 52 of 1906, Allahabad High Court. Under the powers conferred by this section, the Bombay High Court in 25 B. 186 admitted a confession rejected by the Sessions Judge. In 16 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 412, the High Court admitted further evidence in an appeal from a conviction of murder and inspected the building where the offence was alleged to have been committed.

Power of High Court to confirm sentence or order of Session Court.

376. In any case submitted under section 374 whether tried with the aid of assessors or by jury, the High Court—

(a) may confirm the sentence, or pass any other sentence warranted by law; or

(b) may amend the conviction, and convict the accused of any offence of which the Session Court might have convicted him, or order a new trial on the same or an amended charge; or

(c) may acquit the accused person.

Provided that no order of confirmation shall be made under this section until the period allowed for preferring an appeal has expired, or, if an appeal is presented within such period, until the appeal is disposed of.

Notes.—1. Power of High Court to amend conviction and direct fresh trial.—On a case sent up under section 374 for confirmation of the sentence of death, the High Court in 6 C. W. N. 123 ordered a new trial in the evidence was insufficient and further evidence was necessary. See also 13 C. W. N. 156 = 21 C. L. J. 413 = 13 Cr. L. J. 424, where the High Court directed the re-trial of the accused, who was understood in the Session Court on the same charge after arrangements being made for his defence.

2. Power of High Court on acquittal of murder, to convict accused of minor offence though so finding on the minor charge.—In a case where the appellant was tried for murder and convicted of murder, and was convicted of murder, but no finding was given on the minor charge, the Court on appeal acquitted the accused of the charge of murder, but held that it was competent for it to convict the appellant on the minor charge, although no finding was recorded, provided there was evidence on record to support it, 2 P. R. 1213 = 22 P. L. R. 1213 = 22 P. W. R. 1213 = 14 Cr. L. J. 274.

Confirmation of new sentence to be signed by two judges.

377. In every case so submitted, the confirmation of the sentence, or any new sentence or order passed by the High Court, shall, when such Court consists of two or more Judges, be made, passed and signed by a majority of them.

378. When any such case is heard before a Bench of Judges and such Judges are equally divided in opinion the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge and such Judge after such hearing as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Procedure in case of difference of opinion.

Note.—Judge to whom case is referred may decide according to his own opinion.—In a case the referred to a third Judge, it is the duty of that Judge to express and act upon the opinion at which he has himself definitely arrived, and not necessarily to hold that the opinion of the one in favour of an acquittal should prevail, 1337 A. W. N. 123 dissenting from the judgment of MAHMOOD J., in 1345 A. W. N. 275 who was of opinion that the principle ought to be that wherever one Judge was for acquittal the accused must have the benefit of the same and be acquitted. See also s. 429. In 17 C. W. N. 1213 = 14 Cr. L. J. 642, CARNDUFF J., to whom the case was referred, there being a difference of opinion between the Judges who first heard the appeal, upheld the conviction for murder but did not pass the capital sentence for the reason that the accused had the capital sentence hung over their heads for six months owing to the delay in the High Court.

379. In cases submitted by the Court of Session to the High Court for the confirmation of a sentence of death the proper officer of the High Court shall, without delay, after the order of confirmation or other order, has been made by the High Court, send a copy of the order, under the seal of the High Court and attested with his official signature to the Court of Session.

Procedure in cases submitted to High Court for confirmation.

380. Where proceedings are submitted to a Magistrate of the first class or a Sub-Divisional Magistrate as provided by section 562 such Magistrate may thereupon pass such sentence or make such order as he might have passed or made if the case had originally been heard by him, and if he thinks further inquiry or additional evidence on any point to be necessary, he may make such inquiry or take such evidence himself or direct such inquiry or evidence to be made or taken

Notes.—1 This section is new. The Select Committee in their report say: "We have omitted this clause in the Bill as introduced for reasons already given under s. 31 ante. We have substituted a clause providing the procedure to be followed when a Magistrate not empowered under clause 562 is of opinion that a first offender should be dealt with under this section."

2. Superior Magistrate cannot refer the case back.—A second-class Magistrate found the accused guilty of an offence under s. 376 I P C. and he sent the record and the accused to the District Magistrate under s. 562. The District Magistrate sent the case back to the second-class Magistrate pointing out that s. 562 was inapplicable. Held the District Magistrate's order was illegal inasmuch as s. 380 of the Code enacts that such Magistrate may pass such sentence or order as he might have passed or made if the case had originally been heard by him and he could not have sent the case to the second-class Magistrate for the purpose of sentence if he had originally heard it. 4 L. B. R. 150 = 7 Cr. L. J. 449, 1 L. B. R. 128 referred to.

3. What order superior Magistrate may make.—Query—Whether a Magistrate to whom a case is submitted under s. 562 proviso can pass under this section any order other than a sentence or an order for release on the probation? 4 L. B. R. 277 = 8 Cr. L. J. 475

4. Superior Magistrate may even acquit.—In 1915 U. B. R. 1st Cr. 55 = 16 Cr. L. J. 533 it was held that the Magistrate to whom the proceedings were submitted under s. 562 was not prevented from acquitting the accused under the powers vested in him by this section if on a perusal of the evidence he comes to the conclusion that the conviction ought not to stand. 4 L. B. R. 277 = 8 Cr. L. J. 475 referred to.

5. Appeal lies against conviction to Sessions Court.—A conviction under this section must for purposes of appeal be considered to be passed by a first-class Magistrate and appealable within the meaning of s. 409 and not a conviction within the meaning of s. 407. 17 Bom. L. R. 895 = 16 Cr. L. J. 738

CHAPTER XXVIII

OF EXECUTION

381. When a sentence of death passed by a Court of Session is submitted to the High Court for confirmation such Court of Session shall, on receiving the order of confirmation or other order of the High Court thereon cause such order to be carried into effect by issuing a warrant or taking such other steps as may be necessary.

Execution of order passed under s. 376

Notes.—1 For Form of warrant of execution on a sentence of death see Sch. V No. 35 and on commutation No. 36

2. Order of High Court to be communicated to Superintendent of Jail.—Sessions Judges are directed to make arrangements for communicating every order of confirmation reversal or commutation of sentence of death to the Superintendent of jail wherein the prisoner is confined within 24 hours of receipt of the order in the Sessions Court. Madras Rules of Practice s. 249

3. Reference to Government in cases of infanticide.—In all cases where women are convicted for the murder of their infant-children a reference should be made through the High Court to the Government with an expression of his opinion by the Sessions Judge as to the propriety or otherwise of reducing the Madras G. O. No. 404 dated 13th February 1884

382. If a woman sentenced to death is found to be pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life

Notes.—1. For Form of warrant after a commutation of sentence, see Sch. V, No. 36.

2. It is only the High Court that can postpone execution.—The High Court is the only tribunal in which the law vests the power of postponing the execution of a sentence of death (passed and) confirmed on a woman found to be pregnant, Weir II, 441. Such a case, the Sessions Judge is competent only to direct the postponement of the execution of the sentence, until further orders of the High Court. The High Court is now under such circumstances empowered to commute the sentence to one of transportation for life, if it thinks fit and this is an instance of a case contemplated by s. 369 in which the High Court after signing or passing judgment, may alter or review the same.

3. English Practice.—This is an instance of a 'Reprieve' or 'Respite'. In England when a woman is convicted and sentenced to death, the Clerk of the Crown after sentence is to ask whether the woman has anything to say in stay of execution of the sentence. If she then alleges or the Court then or later has reason to suppose that she is pregnant, a jury of twelve matrons should be empanelled sworn to try whether or not she is quick with child. If the jury require the assistance of a medical man, a medical man is requested by the Court to retire and examine the prisoner and is then examined as a witness. If the jury find that the prisoner is quick with child, the Court stays execution of the capital sentence until the prisoner is delivered of a child, or it is no longer possible that she should be so delivered. See Halsbury, Vol. IX, p. 375, Archbold p. 242. It is for the prisoner to plead pregnancy and unless she so pleads the right to a jury of matrons is said not to be absolute, R. v. Hunt, 2 Cox 261.

383. Where the accused is sentenced to transportation or imprisonment in cases other than those provided for by section 381, the Court passing the sentence shall forthwith forward a warrant to the jail in which he is, or is to be confined, and, unless the accused is already confined in such jail, shall forward him to such jail, with the warrant.

Notes.—1. Sentence of transportation on woman, if not appealed against, to be referred to Government.—Under the orders of Government, the Chief Court has directed that in every case in which a sentence of transportation for life is passed on a woman for the murder of her infant-child, and the sentence is not appealed against, the file of the case shall, after the expiration of the period allowed for appeal, be forwarded to the Chief Court for submission to Government with a view to the consideration of the question whether any commutation or reduction of the sentence to be allowed. Pun. Cr., Chapter XLIV, p. 402.

2. Warrant of imprisonment.—Schedule V, Form 29 gives the form of a warrant of commitment on a sentence of imprisonment passed by a Magistrate. The signature of a Magistrate to warrant, should not be affixed by a stamp, 6 M. 396.

3. Sentence of imprisonment commences when it is passed.—A sentence of imprisonment ought to commence from the time that the sentence is passed, unless there is some lawful reason for ordering it to commence at some future period, 3 B. L. R. App. Cr. 50 = 12 W. R. 47. A sentence once passed might be postponed by Legislative enactment (s. 397) or by judicial order warranted by law (ss. 35 and 426). When a Magistrate after sentencing two persons to separate terms of imprisonment, admitted them to bail in order that they might have the means of appealing, it was held that admission to bail did not make the sentence one to appeal, upheld future time and consequently illegal, 7 C. L. R. 393, 12 W. R. 47.

379. Sentence of imprisonment cannot be antedated.—A sentence of imprisonment for period up is illegal, but sentence of imprisonment until the rising of the Court is good and valid. Law, 9 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 217; 4 L. B. R. 152 = 7 Cr.

Procedure in cases submitted to High Court for confirmation.—High Court to commit prisoner to jail outside the jurisdiction, in a case referred under s. 307 the High Court is not in the exercise of its ordinary original jurisdiction to the warrant within the territorial limits of the High Court is required to send the accused to the jail in which he would be confined by the Court submitting the case, subject to any rules under s. 511 ss. 7, 8 and 9 of the Prisoners Act III of 1900 do not apply to such a case 29 C. 286 (F.B.)

6. Illegal to order confinement in 'Police Lock up'—In the absence of a notification by Local Government declaring a Police Lock up as a place where person sentenced to imprisonment may be confined it is illegal for a Magistrate to direct the prisoner to suffer imprisonment in such a place, 7 L. B. R. 62 = 15 Cr. L. J. 10

7. Period of imprisonment how to be calculated—In calculating sentence of imprisonment the day upon which the sentence is passed and the day of release ought both to be included and considered as days of imprisonment, for example a man sentenced on the 1st January to one month's imprisonment should be released on the 31st January, not on the 1st February Madris G. O. No 2411 dated 22nd November, 1891 In calculating their (soldiers') sentences of imprisonment the rule laid down in para. 778 (Queen's Regulations) is that the day on which the sentence is signed and the day of release shall both be included * * * This rule is founded on the principle of English Law which omits to take notice of fractions of days and considers a year completed on the last day of the year. A soldier who is sentenced to imprisonment for one year on the 1st January is entitled to be released on the 31st December and if detained on the following day he is illegally in custody. This method of reckoning sentence is further enjoined in the Bengal Military Regulations s. 43 para. 27 Oudh Cr. Dig., p. 25

8. Endorsement of previous conviction on back of warrant.—Every Criminal Court when it passes a sentence of imprisonment or transportation shall endorse on the back of the warrant, with which under s. 383 it forwards the convict to jail the following particulars—(a) age of the convict (b) caste of the convict (c) place or residence of the convict (d) plea of the convict and (e) opinion of the assessors (where the trial is conducted with the aid of assessors).

If at the trial any previous conviction has been established the following particulars shall also be given—(a) name of the offence of which the convict was previously convicted (b) sentence passed upon him (c) date of such sentence and (d) name designation of the trying authority

The above particulars shall be written in the same language in which the warrant itself is written.—Pom. H. C. Cr. Cir. p. 38

9. Warrant of execution—directions as to—See C. P. Cr. Cir. Part II No. 35

384. Every warrant for the execution of a sentence of imprisonment shall be directed to the officer in charge of the jail, or other place in which the prisoner is or is to be confined

Notes.—1. Separate warrant for each prisoner.—A separate warrant should be issued in case of each prisoner and a definite period of imprisonment should be stated. Thus an order directing a person to be imprisoned 'until he gives security' is bad 8 C. 646

2. Confinement in jail other than that stated in warrant unlawful.—In 11 C. 527, it appeared that a Sheriff's officer delivered over to the officer in charge of the Alipore Jail a judgment-debtor who had been duly committed to the Presidency Jail. It was held that the imprisonment was unlawful. See also 29 C. 236 (F.B.).

385. When the prisoner is to be confined in a jail, the warrant shall be lodged with the jailor

 386. (1) Whenever an offender has been sentenced to pay a fine, the Court passing the sentence may take action for the recovery of the fine in either or both of the following ways that is to say it may—

(a) issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to the offender,

(ii) Compensation under s. 250—When compensation is ordered to be paid under s. 250 the proper procedure is to recover the fine in the first instance under this section and s. 387, and if not recovered, then alone can the Magistrate order imprisonment, 3 L. B. R. 32; 25 Q. 164 and 251; 26 M. 127. See Notes 31 and 32 under s. 250 at p. 710

(iii) Compensation under s. 545, q v

(iv) Excess charge and railway fare is not fine—The excess charge and fare mentioned in s. 113 of Act IX of 1890 (Indian Railway) is not a fine though it may be recovered as such, and no imprisonment in default can be inflicted, 20 M. 333. See Note 11 to s. 33 at p. 55

(v) Court and process fees—A Magistrate can recover the costs of the Court fee paid upon the complaint and the process-fees from the accused, but he has no authority to order imprisonment in default, 1 Bar. B. R. 593.

3. Fine must be levied by the same Court with as little delay as possible.—See C P Cr Cir, Part II, A v 38. See s 389 The successor in office of a Judge or Magistrate may levy a fine imposed by his predecessor, 9 W. R. 50. But the Court that levies the fine must be the same as the Court which imposed it. There should be no delay in the levy of a fine directly on passing a sentence, which includes a fine leviable by distress, whether that be the only punishment or not, it is quite lawful for the Magistrate to issue his warrant for the levy of the fine by distress and sale of the goods of the offender, see imprisonment and distress may be simultaneously ordered, the law nowhere providing that fines may be levied by means of imprisonment, 22 C. 139; 8 B. L. R. Appx. XLVII at p. 49; see 3 W. R. 61. The levy of the fine should not be deferred until the result of any appeal the convict may prefer, be known; nor can the Appellate Court order a Lower Court to abstain from issuing such a warrant, 3 W. R. (Cr. Let.) 13.

4. Is it legal to pass sentence of fine against several accused collectively and individually?—A sentence of fine must be specific as to each person fined. It is not legal to pass a sentence of fine on the prisoners individually and collectively, 8 M. H. C. R. Appx. Y. When, however, the payment of a fine or fee is ordered to be made jointly by several persons convicted together, it may be recovered from all or anyone of them, and if payment made by one is nullified by the reversal of the order as to him, the liability of all and each of the others revives, as what was done subject to appeal was but provisional or subject to a condition subsequent, Ratanlal 90.

5. Fine may be levied at any time within six years—Fine may be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence or during the term of imprisonment if it exceeds six years, and the death of the offender does not discharge any of his property from liability which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts—vide s. 70, 1 P. C., Ratanlal 207. The attention of Sessions Judges and Magistrates is called to the fact that proceedings are seldom taken to recover fines after the imprisonment in default has expired. If, at any time, subsequent to the return of the original warrant and within a period of six years from the passing of the sentence, the fine, or any part of it, remains unpaid, and the Court, from information gained, has reason to think that there is any moveable property belonging to the offender, it should issue a fresh warrant for the attachment and sale of that property within a special period, returnable within a certain time—Bom H C Cr Cir, p. 53, also Wilkins, 118

6. Liability to fine does not cease when imprisonment is undergone in default.—An offender who has undergone the full term of imprisonment to which he was sentenced in default of the payment of fine, is still liable to have the amount levied by distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to him, which may be found within the jurisdiction of the Court passing the sentence, whether the officer who inflicted the fine issued any special direction on the subject or not, 3 W. R. 61. The imprisonment which the Court is authorized to impose in default of payment is intended as a punishment for non payment, not as a satisfaction and discharge of the amount due. Ratanlal 91. But see the new amendment made by the insertion of the proviso under which no warrant can be issued without special reasons when the accused has undergone the full term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine.

7. Court should exercise its discretion whether fine should be recovered even after imprisonment.—The law is merely permissive and not imperative. When efforts have been made to realize a fine by distress and sale, and when the offender has undergone the imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine, the Court should exercise its discretion, according to the circumstances of each particular case, as to whether, after the release of the prisoner, any further steps should be taken towards the realization of the fine within the pe allowed by law. If there is reason to believe that the offender was able to pay and would not, preferring to undergo imprisonment, the law should be strictly enforced, but if it appears that the fine was not paid for want of means or that its realization would be ruinous to the offender or his family, it is not desirable that further steps should be taken.—Pun. Cr., Chap. LI, p. 264. But see preliminary Note above.

DISTRESS AND SALE.

8. Formalities to be observed in attachment and sale.—Formalities will be observed in attachment, sale and adjudicating upon objections similar to those in force in the execution of civil decrees, with this difference that the process issues on the criminal side.—Pun. Cr., Chapter LI, p. 268. But see s. 538. Thus the officer attaching moveables must have the warrant at the time of attachment, otherwise the attachment is illegal. 27 A. 258.

9. Signature on warrant should not be affixed by means of stamps.—This practice besides being illegal, is objectionable on other grounds, and is strictly prohibited. No officer of a jail would be justified in receiving or detaining a prisoner on a warrant so signed.—Pun. Cr., p. 263, also 6 M. 396. The impression of a stamp bearing the officer's name is insufficient and illegal, Wilkins 126.

10. What property may not be sold.—See Note 9 at p. 127.

(i) Agricultural implements.—Although agricultural implements are not exempt from distress and sale in realization of a fine the measure is one which should be resorted to with discretion, otherwise it may entail undue hardship in cases which do not require such severity.—Pun. Cr., Chapter LI, p. 269.

(ii) Joint family property.—This language denotes things which may be taken by distress and then sold so as by mere act of sale to pass the property in them, not mere rights and interests or shares in joint moveables, such as that of an undivided Hindu family, Weir II, 442, 20 C. 478. See also 28 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 166. In Weir II, 443 it was held that an attachment of moveable property belonging to an Ahyasantana family (of which complainant and accused were members) in execution of the warrant for the levy of the amount of compensation ordered under s. 250 to be paid by the complainant to the accused, was illegal. But a Full Bench of the Madras High Court has, however recently held that the interests of an absconder in the joint family of which he is a member can be attached under s. 88. The mode of levying pecuniary penalties should be strictly confined to the provisions of the law that gives the jurisdiction. In 27 Bom. L. R. 1363 the question whether a share of joint Hindu family estate can be attached and sold by a Magistrate came before the High Court and it was held per FAWCETT, J., that under s. 488 (3) read with s. 386 (1) (a) a Magistrate can attach and sell property even if such property consists of a share in a joint Hindu family estate. See Mad. Pol. Min. Vol. I, p. 115. See 31 M. L. J. 84 (F.B.), 31 M. L. J. 120.

(iii) Growing crops are not moveable property for the purpose of this section. Weir II, 446.

(iv) Property in a foreign State.—There is no authority in the Code to attach the property of the offender in a foreign State, as the Code is only applicable to British India, Weir II, 445. ✓

(v) Where money was deposited by a person's surety for his brother's appearance in a criminal trial and the latter being convicted in the case, and sentenced to a fine, the money was seized in realization of the fine, on the ground that the depositor and his brother were members of a joint Hindu family, but there was nothing to show that the money deposited was not the depositor's own. Held, that the deposit could not be seized in levy of the fine. 19 A. L. J. 887.

CLAIMS OF THIRD PARTIES.

10-A. Under the new amendment by sub-section (2).—The Local Government under the amended sub-section (2) is authorized to frame rules regarding the execution of warrants and the determination of claims preferred by third parties on an attachment of property in execution of a warrant of fine. Under the old law, upon a claim preferred by a third party, the Magistrate could not try any such claim because the section did not provide for such contingency.

Under the old Code.—It was held that the principles applicable to attachments under s. 88 apply equally to attachments under this section, 28 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 166; what may be said with regard to s. 88 would equally apply to s. 386, 20 M. 88.

11. Is a Magistrate bound to inquire and decide claims?—The Code does not contain any provision for the trial of claims which may be preferred to property distrained under s. 386, 28 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 166. In cases of dispute the Magistrate should stay the sale of the property seized to give the claimant time to establish his right, 22 M. 89. The Magistrate is nowhere required by law to try any claim that may be preferred to the ownership of any property distrained, 22 G. 935. A Magistrate is bound to inquire judicially into and decide a claim to property attached under his orders in attempting to recover a fine. A claimant must be given an opportunity of showing bona fide interest in such property before it was attached, 1 Bur. 8. R. 332. But see 10-A above.

A Magistrate, who has issued a distress warrant under this section, is not required by law to try any claim which may be preferred to the ownership of the property distrained, 22 G. 935. A was sentenced to pay a fine. Proceedings were taken under this section to realise the fine inflicted on A and certain moveable property supposed to belong to him was sold for Rs. 5. The property thus sold really belonged to B, A's father, who thereupon sued the Secretary of State praying for restoration of the said property, or its value Rs. 10. Held, per BLAIR, J., that the order of the Magistrate for the sale of particular chattels made under the circumstances was not a judicial proceeding and was not the proper subject of criminal revision, that the remedy of an aggrieved third party was by suit, not against Magistrate or Government, but against the person in whose possession the goods were found. Per AILMAN, J., that a claimant may proceed against the purchaser, but this does not prevent his proceeding against the Crown if he prefers to do so, 1898 A. W. N. 173.

12. Claims and objections how disposed of.—See Notes 17 to 21 at p. 123.—When an objector comes forward, he should be warned of the penalties contained in s. 207, I P C., against a fraudulent claim to property to prevent its seizure in satisfaction of fine. After this warning, the objection should be inquired into and disposed of either by admitting the claim or referring to civil action if his claim seems prima facie groundless.—Fun. Civ., p. 269. If any claim is made to the attached property, the Magistrate before ordering its sale should allow the claimant an opportunity of establishing his title in a Court having jurisdiction to determine civil rights, Weir II, 443.

13. Postponement of sale of attached property when necessary.—When claim is made to property attached under this section, the Court should direct the postponement of the sale of property seized for such time as in its opinion would be sufficient to give the claimant time to establish his right to the property, unless by the reason of the nature of the property an immediate sale would be for the benefit of the owner, in which case the proceeds should be held over. Ratanlal 976, where 22 G. 935 and 20 M. 89 are followed.

14. Claims to be decided by Magistracy and not by Police.—A warrant issued under this section for the levy of a fine should ordinarily be directed to a Police-officer and the authority issuing it should set a time for the sale and for the return of the warrant. If no one claims the property, the Police have the power of selling it within the time specified in the warrant, without any previous reference to the Magistrate, if a claimant comes forward then the ownership of the property distrained must be determined by the Magistracy and not by the Police, Witkins 118.

15. Revision.—If the Magistrate errs the remedy is by civil suit and not by application to the High Court in revision, 20 M. 89; 23 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 166. But see 9 P. R. 1908 = 29 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 260. Where it was held that the High Court has jurisdiction under s. 439 to revise the orders of a Magistrate. See Note 20 at p. 128.

MISCELLANEOUS.

16. Information to jailor about recovery of fine.—As soon as a fine or any part of it is recovered information should immediately be given to the jailor of the same. The responsibility is with the Court.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Civ., p. 54. The responsibility for intimating to the jail authorities, the fact of the payment rests entirely with the Court, such information should invariably be acknowledged by the jail authorities and the acknowledgment should be filed by the Court for future reference. Madr. Rules of Practice, p. 177.

17. Refund of fine to be made without application.—In cases where an Appellate Court has ordered a fine indicated by a Court of First Instance to be refunded, the Appellate Court should forthwith certify its order to the Court of First Instance, and the Court of First Instance should, on receipt of the Appellate Court's order for such refund of the fine, immediately prepare a payment order, if the fine has been levied, and deliver it to the payee, whether he applies for it or not. The Court of First Instance should at the same time ascertain from the payee at what treasury or sub-treasury he desires the refund to be made and at once direct the officer in charge of such treasury or sub-treasury to make the refund and inform the Appellate Court of having done so. The officer in charge of the treasury or sub-treasury should, on presentation of the payment order and without requiring the applicant to furnish an official copy of the Appellate Court's order or judgment or any other document besides his bare application, make the refund upon demand of the applicant.

soon as he has furnished satisfactory proof of his identity. In such cases a written application from the person entitled to the repayment of the fine is not required and should an applicant for refund present at any time such a written application it should be accepted on plain paper without any Court fee (vide Government Gazette for 1896 Part I pp 427 and 428)—Bom H C Cr Cr. Whenever an Appellate Court other than the High Court reduces or reverses a sentence of fine, it shall if the fine has been levied grant to the appellant an order of refund. When the order of refund is presented to the Court of First Instance it shall forthwith prepare the necessary order and deliver it to the payee without requiring any formal application therefor. Madras Rules of Practice p 65.

18 Liability of judicial officers for judicial act done illegally within the limits of their jurisdiction.—

A judicial officer, who in the discharge of his judicial duties issues a warrant which he has authority to issue though the particular form or manner in which he issues it is contrary to law acts within and not without the limits of his jurisdiction. That word means authority or power to act in a matter and not authority or power to do an act in a particular manner or form. See 2 M I A 293 and cf 39 C 933 (P.C.) Where a Magistrate of the first class having sentenced an accused person to three years rigorous imprisonment and Rs. 500 fine under ss 379 and 411 of the Penal Code and having issued a warrant purporting to act under this section for the levy of the fine by distress and sale of cattle belonging to the accused sold such cattle before the date fixed for the sale and in contravention of Form 37 Sch V and s. 534 of the Code and Form D in Chap V of his judicial duty within his jurisdiction was immaterial that he did not in fact do so and that the fact that he acted with gross and culpable irregularity did not deprive him of the protection afforded by Act XVIII of 1880, 12 A 118.

378. * A warrant issued under s 386 sub-section (1) clause (a) by any Court may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court and it shall authorize the attachment and sale of any such property without such limits when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found

Effect of such warrant.

Suspension of execution of sentence of imprisonment.

§ 388. (1) When an offender has been sentenced to fine only and to imprisonment in default of payment of the fine and the fine is not paid forthwith, the Court may—

(a) order that the fine shall be payable either in full on or before a date not more than thirty days from the date of the order, or in two or three instalments of which the first shall be payable on or before a date not more than thirty days from the date of the order and the other or others at an interval or at intervals as the case may be of not more than thirty days and

(b) suspend the execution of the sentence of imprisonment and release the offender on the execution by the offender of a bond, with or without sureties as the Court thinks fit conditioned for his appearance before the Court on the date or dates on or before which payment of the fine or the instalments thereof as the case may be is to be made and if the amount of the fine or of any instalment, as the case may be, is not realised on or before the latest date on which it is payable under the order, the Court may direct the sentence of imprisonment to be carried into execution at once.

(2) The provisions of sub-section (1) shall be applicable also in any case in which an order for the payment of money has been made on non recovery of which imprisonment may be awarded and the money is not paid forthwith and if the person against whom the order has been made, on being required to enter into a bond such as is referred to in that sub-section fails to do so the Court may at once pass sentence of imprisonment

* The words and figures in the inverted commas were substituted for the words such warrant by Act XVIII of 1925

† The word was substituted for the word "distress" by 1925

‡ The section was substituted by Act XXVII of 1922

Notes.—1 The words 'and the Court issues a warrant under s. 386' and the words 'day appointed for in return of such warrant' of the old section have been omitted by the present amendment, 1923. So it is clear that section 388 does not contemplate the issue of a warrant under s. 388 and therefore a Magistrate is entitled to proceed under s. 388 without the issue of a warrant. The effect of this change would be to overrule 28 M 127 which held that the issue of a warrant under s. 388 was a condition precedent to the carrying out of the sentence of imprisonment.

2. This section inapplicable if no alternative sentence of imprisonment.—Where a Magistrate sentences an offender to a fine and fails to pass a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine, he has under this section no power to bind him over in his own recognizance to appear. Weir II, 445

3. Issue of distress warrant a condition precedent to suspension of sentence.—The accused was sentenced to pay a fine and in default to three months imprisonment. The Magistrate allowed her some days to pay the fine and released her on her giving security. Held the procedure was illegal unless at the same time a distress warrant for the levy of the fine was issued. The suspension of the sentence was not lawful in this case. 4 L. B. R. 151 = 7 Cr. L. J. 452. See Note 1 and the present amendment enabling a Magistrate to proceed under section 388 without the issue of a warrant, so now such a distress warrant would be perfectly legal and valid.

389. Every warrant for the execution of any sentence may be issued either by the Judge or Magistrate who passed the sentence, or by his successor in office.

Note.—Change of incumbent does not change the Court.—The successor in the office of a Judge may levy a fine imposed by his predecessor. The power is restricted to the Court which sentences the offender, but the word 'Court' is not restricted to the particular individual who held the office. 9 W. R. 80

390. When the accused is sentenced to whipping only, the sentence of whipping shall* be subject to the provisions of section 391 be executed at such place and time as the Court may direct.

Notes.—1 Whipping not to be inflicted in public.—The punishment of whipping is never to be inflicted in public or in front of the Court house but always within some walled enclosure, and in the presence of a Magistrate or the Superintendent of a jail and when practicable, of a medical officer. Pun. Cr. p. 477. Judicial floggings shall be inflicted in private either at a jail or in an enclosure near the Court house and if possible in the presence of a medical officer. Madras Rules of Practice s. 80. See also Note 1b to s. 32.

2. Execution of sole sentence of whipping not to be deferred.—This section authorizes a Court passing a sentence of whipping only to fix the place and time for its execution but it does not contemplate a postponement of the execution of the sentence to a future day. It must take place at once. Ratanlal 90a, 28 M 465. It is illegal to state in the warrant that execution of the sentence of whipping shall take place at some future day, such as the date of the expiry of the sentence of imprisonment. 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXVIII. Where execution, has been so deferred the sentence was cancelled as inoperative, 20 W. R. 72. See Notes 2 and 3 to s. 391.

391. (1) When the accused—

Execution of sentence of whipping in addition to imprisonment. † "(a) is sentenced to whipping only and furnishes bail to the satisfaction of the Court for his appearance at such time and place as the Court may direct, or

(b) is sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment, whipping shall not be inflicted until fifteen days from the date of the sentence, or, if made within that time, until the sentence is confirmed by the Appellate Court, but shall be inflicted as soon as practicable after the expiry of the fifteen days, or, in case of appeal, as soon as practicable after the receipt of the order of the Appellate Court.

(2) The whipping shall be inflicted in the presence of the Judge or Magistrate unless the Judge or Magistrate orders it to be inflicted in his own presence.

* These words and figures were inserted by Act XII of 1923

† These words were substituted for the words 'in sentence of whipping in addition to imprisonment' by 15 d.

(3) No accused person shall be sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment when the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced is less than three months.

Note—Under the new clause (a)—A sentence of whipping can be postponed though in addition to whipping no sentence or imprisonment is passed. The old section contemplated cases of whipping in addition to which a sentence of imprisonment was also passed. So under the old section a sentence of whipping alone could not be postponed.

Notes—1. "Sentence"—whipping when to be carried out.—The word 'sentence' in this section means the total punishment inflicted at one trial. Therefore when an accused is convicted at one trial of two offences and sentenced to a separate term of imprisonment for each, and also to whipping for the second and the sentences are directed to be consecutive, held, that the sentence of whipping ought not to be delayed until the expiry of the first sentence, but shall be carried into effect according to the provisions of this section, Ratanlal 303

2 No provision for postponement of execution of sole sentence of whipping when convicted by a second-class Magistrate.—The refusal of a second class Magistrate to postpone a sole sentence of whipping only, pending an intended appeal, is quite proper, as that is the only order he could legally pass. The Code makes no provision whereby a second class Magistrate, imposing a sentence of whipping only, can suspend its execution nor does it provide for the detention of a person so sentenced to allow of his appealing nor for his refusal to undergo the whipping if the sentence is confirmed on appeal. It is only when whipping is added to imprisonment in an appealable case that the whipping may and ought to be postponed under this section, 26 M. 465 at p. 466. But now a second-class Magistrate cannot pass a sentence of whipping. See s. 32 as amended by Act IV of 1909. See Note to the section and also CL (a) to sub-section (1)

3. Postponement of whipping illegal.—In a case where a person was sentenced on three separate convictions, first, to a term of imprisonment, second, to certain number of lashes to be inflicted at the expiry of the term or the imprisonment, and third, to a term of imprisonment to take effect after the sentence of whipping was carried out, held that the postponement of whipping after the first term of imprisonment had expired is illegal 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXVIII, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXIX; Ratanlal 300. See also 4 Bom. L. R. 929. Similarly, in 4 Bom. L. R. 436 it was held that where the accused was convicted of two offences for one of which he is sentenced to imprisonment and for the other to whipping, the postponement of the sentence of whipping is illegal, (i) that no appeal lay against the conviction and (ii) the whipping ought not to be postponed, merely because the accused appeals against the sentence of imprisonment. The immediate execution of a sentence of whipping is not illegal in a case in which in the same trial, whipping is imposed for one distinct offence and imprisonment for another, Weir II, 446. See also note 2 to s. 390. See Note to the section and also CL (a) to sub-section (1)

4. When sentence becomes inoperative, it should be cancelled.—Where a Deputy Magistrate ordered that the prisoner should be brought before him at the expiration of his imprisonment, and that the sentence of whipping should then be carried out, the High Court cancelled the sentence of whipping as having become inoperative and incapable of being carried out by lapse of time, 20 W. R. 72. The words "as soon as practicable" in sub-sec. (1) renders this ruling practically absolute. But where an accused person was ordered to receive thirty stripes on the day of his release from prison, the High Court set aside the order as altogether illegal and improper, 1881 A. W. N. 133.

5. When does sentence of whipping become inoperative?—A sentence of whippings delayed beyond the period prescribed by the Act, cannot legally be carried into effect, Weir II, 446, e.g., where a second-class Magistrate passes a sentence of four months' rigorous imprisonment and whipping and the order of the Appellate Court is not received within the four months, the prisoner must be released at the expiration of the sentence of imprisonment and the sentence of whipping will become inoperative, for the law provides no means for obtaining the attendance of the prisoner so sentenced. Sub-section (3) which is new is put in to render such cases rare.

6 Prisoner not freed from liability to whipping through breach of duty, etc., of officer.—The punishment of whipping is to be inflicted immediately on the expiration of the time set forth in the section. But if through accident or neglect, or wilful breach of duty, the direction as to whipping is not obeyed, the prisoner is not thereby, in any way, freed from his liability. The sentence still subsisting must be executed, Ratanlal 136

7. When whipping is illegal—When the term of imprisonment to which the accused is sentenced is less than three months, the infliction of the punishment of whipping is illegal. 2 Bom. L. R. 54 and under s. 439 (5), the High Court has power to set aside such illegal sentence of whipping, otherwise than at the instance of the party who could have appealed, Weir II, 447. Sub-section (3) of this section controls s. 3 of the Whipping Act, 4 Bom. L. R. 438.

8. Double sentence of whipping illegal—Accused was convicted under ss. 454 and 380, I. P. C., and sentenced to two years rigorous imprisonment and five stripes for each of the offences, held, reducing the sentence, that it was doubtful whether the double sentence of whipping was legal under this section, Ratanlal 855.

392. (1) In the case of a person of or over sixteen years of age whipping shall be inflicted with a light rattan not less than half-an-inch in diameter, in such mode and on such part of the person, as the Local Government directs, and, in the case of a person under sixteen years of age, it shall be inflicted in such mode, and on such part of the person and with such instrument, as the Local Government directs.

Limit of number of stripes.

(2) In no case shall such punishment exceed thirty stripes and in the case of a person under sixteen years of age, it shall not exceed fifteen stripes.

Notes.—Amendment.—The words in brackets in sub-sec. (2) have been added by the Whipping Act IV of 1909.

1. On which part of the person whipping shall be inflicted—(1) In the case of a person of, or over, sixteen years of age—

Bombay—The punishment of whipping shall, when inflicted in private (i.e., within precincts of prison) be inflicted on the bare buttocks, when inflicted in public (i.e., without precincts of prison) across the bare shoulders.—Bom. G. R. No 608 of 1897.

Central Provinces—The rattan shall be applied to the bare posterior, the offender being tied to a triangle and a leather apron fastened round his waist.—Notification No. 20, dated 4th January, 1899, C. P. Gazette.

Madras—The punishment of whipping shall be inflicted on the posteriors, and that care is to be taken that the person undergoing punishment is tied to a triangle or that his incontinence be otherwise secured, in order to preclude the possibility of the rattan falling on any other part of the body.—Fort St. George Gazette, dated 1st January, 1893, Gazette, 1893, Part I, p. 1248. A thin cloth soaked in antiseptic should be spread over prisoner's buttocks.

Burma—The punishment of whipping shall be inflicted on the breech.—Notification No. 203, dated May, 1891, Burma Gazette, 1891, Part I, p. 201.

Assam—See Assam Gazette, 1899, Part II, p. 384.

(2) In the case of a person under sixteen years of age—

Bombay—The punishment of whipping shall be inflicted in private with a light rattan across the bare buttocks.—Bom. G. R. No 6222, dated the 16th September, 1893.

The United Provinces of Agra and Oudh—The whipping shall be inflicted on the buttocks with a light rattan half-an-inch in diameter.—G. O. No 1290, dated 12th May, 1893.

Central Provinces—The whipping shall be inflicted on the bare posterior or in the case of a boy under the age of twelve on the hands, at the discretion of the Magistrate. The instrument shall be a rattan lighter than that used for adults, and while the whipping is being administered the prisoner shall be held but not tied on a triangle or in any other convenient way, as the Magistrate or officer present may think fit.—C. P. Gazette Notification No. 20, dated 4th January, 1899.

Madras—A still lighter cane shall be employed.—Madras Rules of Practice, s. 180.

Punjab—The punishment of whipping shall be inflicted on the buttocks in the way of school discipline with a rattan not more than half-an-inch in diameter.—Notification No. 677, dated 16th May, 1899.—Punjab Gazette, 1899, Part I, p. 314.

Burma—The punishment of whipping shall be inflicted with a light rattan the breech in the way of school discipline.—Burma Gazette Notification No. 193, dated 1st July, 1898, P.

2. Only one sentence of whipping permissible—Under the provisions of this and the next section not more than one sentence of whipping and that not exceeding thirty stripes should be awarded at one time 1906 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 47 = 4 Cr. L. J. 231, where 1892—96 U. B. R. 1 and 44; 1897—1901 U. B. R. 1 and 247, 9 W. R. 51, 14 W. R. 7 and P. J. L. B. 582 are referred to 1

Not to be executed by instalments.
Exemptions

393 No sentence of whipping shall be executed by instalments and none of the following persons shall be punishable with whipping, namely—

(a) females,

(b) males sentenced to death, or to transportation or to penal servitude, or to imprisonment for more than five years,

(c) males whom the Court considers to be more than forty five years of age

Notes—1 Sentence of whipping cannot be enhanced—An accused person was convicted under s 882 I. P. C. and sentenced to whipping. The whipping was inflicted and an application was made for an enhance-ment of the sentence on the ground that it was inadequate, held that the sentence was legal and could not be enhanced, as no sentence of whipping can be executed by instalments, Rastanlal 537.

2 Sentence of whipping may subsequently be incompatible—A sentence of whipping passed on a person who is already under sentence of death or transportation, or penal servitude or imprisonment for more than five years is illegal. Even if the sentence of whipping precedes instead of follows the other sentence, the passing of the latter sentence renders the inflicting of the punishment of whipping illegal, 1 M. 88.

394. (1) The punishment of whipping shall not be inflicted unless a medical officer, if present certifies, or, if there is not a medical officer present, unless it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo such punishment

(2) If, during the execution of a sentence of whipping, a medical officer certifies, or it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo the remainder of the sentence the whipping shall be finally stopped

Stop of execution.

Note—Medical officer cannot certify for part of sentence before commencement—A sentence of whipping is wholly prevented from being executed when a medical officer certifies under this section that the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo the punishment. It is partially prevented from being executed if, during the execution of the sentence the medical officer certifies that the offender is not in a fit state of health. But there is no provision of law authorizing a medical officer to give a certificate before the commencement of whipping, that the accused is fit to receive only a portion of the sentence and such a certificate cannot be held as one granted under this section. The Magistrate is not in such a case empowered by s 393 to sentence the offender to imprisonment in lieu of so much of the sentence as was not executed 131 M. 84.

395. (1) In any case in which, under section 394, a sentence of whipping is, wholly or partially, prevented from being executed, the offender shall be kept in custody till the Court which passed the sentence can revise it, and the said Court may, at its discretion, either remit such sentence, or sentence the offender in lieu of whipping, or in lieu of so much of the sentence of whipping as was not executed, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding twelve months* "or to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees" which may be in addition to any other punishment to which he may have been sentenced for the same offence.

Procedure if punishment cannot be inflicted under section 394

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize any Court to inflict imprisonment for a term* or a fine of an amount exceeding that to which the accused is liable by law, or that which the said Court is competent to inflict

* These words were inserted by Act XVIII of 1923.

Notes.—1 Under the old law no Court could inflict fine in lieu of whipping where the sentence of whipping could not be carried out. But now under the present section as amended the Court has power to revise its sentence of whipping by inflicting a fine. So under the new amendment 11 A 208 and Weir II, 449 have become obsolete.

2 Section deals with substantive sentence of imprisonment.—The word imprisonment in this section means a substantive sentence of imprisonment and not imprisonment for default in payment of a fine 11 A 208.

3 "The Court which passed the sentence"—When a sentence of imprisonment and whipping passed by a District Magistrate is confirmed on appeal by the Sessions Judge the power of the former to revise the sentence of whipping is not affected by such confirmation & the only Court which can act when a sentence of whipping cannot be carried out under the circumstances referred to in s. 394 is the Court which passed the original sentence 10 P R. 1239. But the words "the Court that passed the sentence" do not mean the same officer who inflicted the sentence of whipping originally where therefore a first-class Magistrate who passed the sentence of whipping, was transferred. It was held that the District Magistrate who had jurisdiction over the whole district was competent to commute the sentence of whipping to one of imprisonment 33 P R 1901 = 20 P L R. 1902

4 Limit of imprisonment awardable in lieu of whipping.—Imprisonment for a term exceeding that which the Court is competent to inflict cannot be awarded. Therefore where a Magistrate has passed substantive sentence of imprisonment on the accused to the full extent of his powers he cannot sentence him to a further term in lieu of whipping. If he finds him unfit to undergo that sentence 21 A 25 followed 11 P R. 1901 and so also if the aggregate of the substantive sentence of imprisonment and the imprisonment in lieu of whipping exceed the maximum term imposable by the Magistrate Weir II, 449; 11 P R 1901. SIR HENRY JENKINS que tu is the correctness of these rulings.

5 Solitary confinement in lieu of whipping.—Solitary confinement may be awarded in lieu of whipping when that sentence cannot be carried out 14 P R. 1299

6 Imprisonment in lieu of whipping cannot be awarded where medical certificate invalid.—See Note under s. 394

396. (1) When sentence is passed under this Code on an escaped convict such sentence if of death fine or whipping shall subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained take effect immediately and if of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation shall take effect according to the following rules that is to say—

Execution of sentence on escaped convicts

(2) If the new sentence is severer in its kind than the sentence which such convict was undergoing when he escaped the new sentence shall take effect immediately

(3) When the new sentence is not severer in its kind than the sentence the convict was undergoing when he escaped the new sentence shall take effect after he has suffered imprisonment penal servitude or transportation as the case may be, for a further period equal to that which at the time of his escape remained unexpired of his former sentence

Explanation—For the purposes of this section—

(a) a sentence of transportation or penal servitude shall be deemed severer than a sentence of imprisonment

(b) a sentence of imprisonment with solitary confinement shall be deemed severer than a sentence of the same description of imprisonment without solitary confinement and

(c) a sentence of rigorous imprisonment shall be deemed severer than a sentence of simple imprisonment with or without solitary confinement.

Notes.—1 Succession of sentences.—A life-convict under sentence of transportation for murder cannot on conviction for attempting to escape from lawful custody be ordered to undergo sentence of rigorous imprisonment for that offence prior to the expiry of the sentence of transportation regard being had to the provisions of this section. Ratanlal 965

2 Sub sections (2) and (3) to be strictly complied with.—The punishment under s. 224 I P C being in addition to the original sentence the Courts when passing sentence must comply, with the provisions of sub-sections (2) and (3) of this section, Weir I, 203 204

3 Sentence under this Code.—The word sentence here applies also to an order of imprisonment passed under s 123 Ratanlal 774 But see Notes 1 and 2 to s 397

4 Rules for the arrest of escaped convicts from Port Blair.—The Police having arrested a person upon the charge of having escaped will apply to the Magistrate before whom the accused has been brought for an adjournment to enable them to ascertain whether a warrant has been received from Port Blair for his recapture. Inquiry must be made at the Home Department of the Government of India, if no warrant has been received by the Police of the Province in which the convict has been arrested. And in all cases of escape by a life-convict the Superintendent of Port Blair or other Magistrate having jurisdiction as soon as the fact of escape is known should issue a warrant charging him with having committed an offence under s 224 I P C. to the Chief of the Police of the Province or Administration in which the convict is known or is likely to be found and he should also forward a warrant forthwith to this department. If the warrant is forthcoming, the Magistrate by whom the case is being inquired into will decide whether there is any reason why the accused should not be removed in custody under ss 85 and 86 of the Criminal Procedure Code to the Magistrate at the Andamans who issued the warrant.—Order of Government of India Home Department, 18th May, 1874

397. When a person already undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, penal servitude or

Sentence on offender transportation is sentenced to imprisonment penal servitude or transportation already sentenced for such imprisonment penal servitude or transportation shall commence at another offence the expiration* of the imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation to which he has been previously sentenced† “unless the Court directs that the subsequent sentence shall run concurrently with such previous sentence.”

Provided that if he is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, and the sentence on such subsequent conviction is one of transportation the Court may, in its discretion, direct that the latter sentence shall commence immediately, or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced

‡ Provided further, that where a person who has been sentenced to imprisonment by an order under sec 123 in default of furnishing security is whilst undergoing such sentence sentenced to imprisonment for an offence committed prior to the making of such order, the latter sentence shall commence immediately

Referring to the amendment of this section the Select Committee say—

We agree with those critics who point out that the drafting of this clause will not have the effect which the Committee of 1916 contemplated. The result of the amendments introduced will ordinarily be that imprisonment for a subsequent offence will not be concurrent with detention under s 123. The Bill in fact appears to alter the law as laid down by the High Courts which is that when a person is in jail in default of giving security a sentence of imprisonment for subsequent offence passed subsequently must take effect at once. We think that almost every case is what the law should be that is to say, in cases where an offence has been committed prior to the order under s 123 but the conviction takes place subsequently the sentences should ordinarily run concurrently but where the offence is committed after the order under s 123 has been passed e.g. cases of escape from custody or jail or of offences committed in jail then we think that the imprisonment for the subsequent offence should ordinarily not be concurrent otherwise the prisoner might in some cases receive no further punishment for his subsequent offence. We have therefore re-drafted this clause on these lines.

Preliminary Notes.—I Rulings under the old section held that where a person undergoing rigorous imprisonment in default of giving security for good behaviour was convicted of an offence and punished subsequently with rigorous imprisonment the sentence for the substantive offence must commence at once and cannot be postponed to take effect after the expiration of the sentence which the prisoner was undergoing in default of giving security for good behaviour. But under the second proviso which is newly added it is clear that a distinction is made as to an offence for which a person undergoing imprisonment in default of security is subsequently convicted and as to whether such offence was committed before or after the order under section 123 was made. An amendment under the new proviso if the offence was committed before the order under section 123 was made the

* In the case of a youthful offender however no sentence to run concurrently with, 32 of the Regulatory Schools Act XVIII of 1869
 † In the sentence these words were inserted by Act XLII of 1925
 ‡ The proviso was added by Act XVIII of 1923

imprisonment under the subsequent conviction would commence immediately, but if the offence was committed after the order under section 123, etc., as in Weir II, 452, the subsequent imprisonment would not commence immediately but will be postponed after the period of imprisonment under section 123 is undergone. So cases following Weir II, 452, have become obsolete.

II. Detention under the order of a Civil Court is not a sentence of imprisonment, etc., referred to in s. 397.—Where an accused person was ordered to suffer imprisonment in default of compensation under s. 250 while he was already under detention under the order of a Civil Court, held that a Magistrate cannot order under s. 317 that the sentence of imprisonment shall take effect at the expiry of the term of detention in the Civil Jail as detention under the order of a Civil Court is not a sentence of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation within the meaning of s. 397, 3 Rang 93.

Note 1. Sentence for substantive offence must be first carried out before imprisonment in default of security for good behaviour.—See Note 72 at p. 200. Imprisonment in default of giving security for good behaviour cannot be considered a sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of this section. Sentence of imprisonment implies the punishment awarded on conviction of an offence, 14 P. R. 1895. See also 27 M. 825, where it was held, that an imprisonment which a person is undergoing in consequence of default in complying with an order under s. 123 to give security, is not within the terms of this section. So where a person so imprisoned was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for an assault on a jail-warden, execution of that sentence could not be deferred until the termination of the imprisonment under s. 123, Weir II, 452; 1914 M. W. N. 500 = 18 Cr. L. J. 137; 3 B. L. R. 114 = 11 Cr. L. J. 15. Where a person undergoing rigorous imprisonment in fault or giving security for good behaviour was convicted of an offence under s. 224 I P. C., and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for two months, held that the sentence for a substantive offence must commence at once and cannot be postponed to take effect after the expiration of the sentence which the prisoner was undergoing Ratanlal 970; 8 Bom. L. R. 36 followed in 8 Bom. L. R. 1095 and 31 M. 515; 34 B. 326; 37 B. 178; 3 B. L. R. 114 = 11 Cr. L. J. 15; 7 B. L. R. 203 = 15 Cr. L. J. 692; 5 M. L. R. 20 = 13 Cr. L. J. 189; 17 Cr. L. J. 450 contra 30 A. 334 (P.B.) where it was held that a substantive sentence of imprisonment passed on a person who has been committed to prison under s. 123 (1) for failing to give security must commence after the first sentence. See Preliminary note above and the second proviso which is newly added.

2. Concurrent sentences.—Section 35 provides for sentences being concurrent if they are passed at one trial. The passing of concurrent sentences otherwise than at one trial is opposed to the provisions of this section 18 C. P. 87. As to previous law, see 20 A. 1 and Notes under Heading IV at p. 63.

3. Only sentences passed at one and same trial can be made to run concurrently.—See Notes under Heading IV at p. 65. A Court has no power to direct that a sentence passed at a trial against an accused person do run concurrently with a sentence passed against him in a previous trial and supersede it, Weir II, 453. See also *Ratanlal 552; 4 Bom. L. R. 876; 2 Bom. L. R. 111 Ratanlal 16; 11 A. L. J. 283 = 14 Cr. L. J. 240, 14 Cr. L. J. 388 (Bur.), 4 L. B. R. 147 = 7 Cr. L. J. 445; 11 M. L. T. 213 = 1912 M. W. N. 396 = 13 Cr. L. J. 466; 20 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 3. In 13 Bom. L. R. 200 = 12 Cr. L. J. 241, however, it was held that inasmuch as the trials took place on the same day and one after the other, it was for all practical purposes one trial and the sentences could be made to run concurrently. Accused was convicted at two trials held on the same day, of two distinct offences under ss. 75 and 378, I P. C., and was sentenced on each to seven years' transportation the sentences to be concurrent. Held, there is no provision in the Code which enables any Court to pass concurrent sentences, 12 P. R. 1894. Nor has the Court power to direct that a sentence of transportation should take effect concurrently with a sentence of rigorous imprisonment that the accused was then undergoing 2 B. L. R. 23 = 10 Cr. L. J. 236. In 15 Cr. L. J. 68, it was held that a sentence of transportation and a sentence of rigorous imprisonment passed at one trial can be made to run concurrently, and see Notes under Heading I at pp. 67-8.*

4. Sentence usually to take effect when it is passed.—This section provides for an exception to the general rule that sentences commence to run from the time of their being passed, 3 B. L. R. 114 See also 27 M. 825 R. 70. The direction that a sentence in one case is to run from the date of the expiration of the sentence in the previous case passed on the same day should appear in the body of the sentence and should appear in the warrant, Weir II, 451. Sentences of imprisonment imposed upon the same person on the same day take effect by the terms of this section one after the other in the order in which they are passed, and a Magistrate need not therefore give any direction in his judgment in respect of the sentences.

5. Procedure in consecutive sentences.—When a convict is imprisoned and a substantive sentence of imprisonment and imprisonment in default of payment is given to the second warrant, Ratanlal 132. See now s. 398 (2).

6 Sentences taking effect in succession—It is only sentences mentioned in para (1) of this section that can be pronounced to take effect in succession Ratanlal 300 But it is competent to a Magistrate in British India to pass a sentence of imprisonment for an offence committed in India which should take effect after the expiration of the sentence which the accused is undergoing in foreign territory 20 M 444

7 Sentence to take effect on expiration i.e., whether by reversal or completion—See Note 39 at p 63 When a person was convicted in two distinct trials by two different tribunals and on appeal the conviction in one of the cases was set aside it was held that the imprisonment undergone should be reckoned as imprisonment under the sentence in the conviction which was not reversed Wells II, 450 A person was sentenced to two years' imprisonment by a Magistrate of the first class on 6th February 1879 A month afterwards he was sentenced to three years imprisonment by the Court of Session which directed the sentence to take effect on the expiration of the sentence passed by the Magistrate On appeal the conviction and sentence passed by the Magistrate were reversed Held that the sentence by the Sessions Court must be deemed to have commenced from the time it was ordered to commence viz from the expiration of the sentence by the Magistrate whether by reversal or completion of the punishment Ratanlal 439 and 523 When a prisoner has been committed to jail under two separate warrants the sentence in the one to take effect from the expiry of the sentence in the other the date of such second sentence shall in the event of the first sentence being remitted on appeal be presumed to take effect from the date on which he was committed to jail under the first or original sentence Wilkins 120

8 Order under this section is no part of judgment—An order made by a Court under this section is not a part of its judgment and may therefore be made after the judgment has been signed Ratanlal 391 Where therefore in ignorance that the person under trial before him was already under sentence in jail a Magistrate convicted and sentenced him dating the warrant irrespective of the previous sentence it was held the Magistrate was competent to alter the date of the warrant as the alteration referred only to the time at which the sentence should commence and not to the sentence itself 3 W R. (Cr. L.) 16

398. (1) Nothing in sections 396 or 397 shall be held to excuse any person from any part of the punishment to which he is liable upon his former or subsequent conviction

Saving as to sections 396 and 397

(2) When an award of imprisonment in default of payment of a fine is annexed to a substantive sentence of imprisonment or to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude for an offence punishable with imprisonment and the person undergoing the sentence is after its execution to undergo a further substantive sentence or further substantive sentences of imprisonment transportation or penal servitude effect shall not be given to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine until the person has undergone the further sentence or sentences

399. (1) When any person under the age of fifteen years is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any offence the Court may direct that such person instead of being imprisoned in a criminal jail shall be confined in any Reformatory established by the Local Government as a fit place for confinement in which there are means of suitable discipline and training in some branch of useful industry or which is kept by a person willing to obey such rules as the Local Government prescribes with regard to the discipline and training of persons confined therein

Confinement of youthful offenders in Reformatories.

(2) All persons confined under this section shall be subject to the rules so prescribed

(3) This section shall not apply to any place in which the Reformatory Schools Act 1897, is for the time being in force

Notes.—1 Section applies only to Coorg.—Sec. 399 is in force only in Coorg see ss. 1 (3) and 3 of the Reformatory Schools Act VIII of 1897, printed in Appendix IV and s 3 (1). It will cease to be in force in that Province also on the extension to it of that Act see s. 3 of that Act.

2 Order of detention in a Reformatory is not a sentence within the meaning of s 426—A Sessions Judge cannot under s. 426 prevent carrying out of the order of detention as such an order is not a sentence 18 Cr L J 334 (M) See Note 5 at p. XXXIX of the Appendix

3. Sentence of imprisonment is indispensable.—Where there is no preliminary sentence of imprisonment an order under s. 399 cannot be passed 34 P. R. 1910

4. Confinement for short period in Reformatory is not good — Sentence cannot be enhanced by the passing Court.—A Magistrate finding a juvenile offender guilty of theft in a building sentenced him to three months' rigorous imprisonment, and ordered that in place of this sentence the offender should be confined in a Reformatory for 14 months. Held that the Magistrate having once passed a sentence of imprisonment for a particular term cannot direct that the offender shall be confined in a Reformatory for a longer term Ratanlal 109

5. Period of detention must be fixed.—A sentence ordering a person to be detained in a Reformatory School until he attains the age of 18 years is not legal. The period of detention must be for a fixed period 24 M 13; 15 Bom. L. R. 308—2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 57—14 Cr. L. J. 238

6. Sentence on juvenile offenders must be irrespective of the establishment of Reformatories.—A Judge or Magistrate is not at liberty in estimating the proper sentence to consider the fact that there is no Reformatory. The fact that the provisions of law as to Reformatories have not been carried out should not prevent the Judge or Magistrate from passing an adequate sentence Weir II, 432.

7. Only first-class Magistrates can send juvenile offenders to a Reformatory.—The Reformatory Schools Act (V of 1876) was extended to the Madras Presidency by a notification in the Official Gazette in 1887. It provided only for male juvenile offenders being sent to Reformatory Schools by Magistrates of the first class and s. 399 of the 1882 Code so far as it authorized a Magistrate not of the first class to direct that a male juvenile offender be sent to a Reformatory, was thereby repealed. Held therefore when a second-class Magistrate directed a boy to be sent to a Reformatory under section 399 of the 1882 Code that the order was illegal 12 M 84; 25 C. 333; 21 M 430. See now Act VIII of 1897 Reformatory Schools Act s. 9 which provides for such a contingency. Under this section any Criminal Court may also direct that a female juvenile offender be sent to a Reformatory when one is established Weir I, 673.

8. On release, juvenile offenders to be made over to their friends.—All juvenile offenders who have been detained in a Reformatory may be made over on release by the Superintendent of the Jail to the District Superintendent of Police and shall be escorted to their homes by the Police and made over to the charge of their friends in the presence of the lambardar or headman of the village. The report of the Police-officer who actually made over charge will be forwarded to the District Superintendent of Police of the district from which the released offender was despatched. The latter will then return the warrant of release to the Superintendent of the Jail concerned. Before despatching such juvenile offenders the District Superintendent of Police will personally satisfy himself that a sufficient subsistence allowance has been supplied by the jail authorities.—Reg and Ord., N W P p. 288

9. Rules under Reformatory Schools Act.—See Appendix IV where the Act is set forth with annotations and rules. Sub-sec. (3) is new and follows 25 C. 333 and Ratanlal 85, 915 and 929

400. When a sentence has been fully executed the officer executing it shall return the warrant to the Court from which it issued with an endorsement under his hand certifying the manner in which the sentence has been executed

Return of warrant on execution of sentence

Note.—Shall return the warrant.—If the sentence be one of both imprisonment and whipping a certificate of the execution of the whipping should be endorsed on the warrant at the time of inflicting that punishment, but the warrant should not be returned but detained (except when the prisoner dies) until the sentence of imprisonment has been undergone Wilkins 170

CHAPTER XXIX

* OF SUSPENSIONS REMISSIONS AND COMMUTATIONS OF SENTENCES J

401. (1) When any person has been sentenced to punishment for an offence, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may at any time with out conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts suspend the execution of his sentence or remit the whole or any part of the punishment to which he has been sentenced

Power to suspend or remit sentences punishment to which he has been sentenced

(2) Whenever an application is made to the Governor General in Council or the Local Government for the suspension or remission of a sentence, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government as the case may be, may require the presiding Judge of the Court before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused together with his reasons for such opinion * and also to forward with the statement of such opinion a certified copy of the record of the trial or of such record thereof as exists

(3) If any condition on which a sentence has been suspended or remitted is, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council or of the Local Government, as the case may be, not fulfilled, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may cancel the suspension or remission and thereupon the person in whose favour the sentence has been suspended or remitted may if at large be arrested by any Police-officer without warrant and remanded to undergo the unexpired portion of the sentence

(4) The condition on which a sentence is suspended or remitted under this section may be one to be fulfilled by the person in whose favour the sentence is suspended or remitted or one independent of his will

†“(4-A) The provisions of the above sub-sections shall also apply to any order passed by a Criminal Court under any section of this Code or of any other law, which restricts the liberty of any person or imposes any liability upon him or his property”

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to interfere with the right of ‡“His Majesty or of the Governor General when such right is delegated to him” to grant pardons reprieves, respites or remissions of punishment

§“(5-A) Where a conditional pardon is granted by His Majesty or, in virtue of any powers delegated to him, by the Governor General, any condition thereby imposed, of whatever nature, shall be deemed to have been imposed by a sentence of a competent Court under this Code and shall be enforceable accordingly

(6) The Governor General in Council and the Local Government may, by general rules or special orders give directions as to the suspension of sentences and the conditions on which petitions should be presented and dealt with

Note—The new clause (4 A) is intended to make it clear that the power to remit sentences conferred by section 401 can be exercised in the case of orders of a penal nature e.g., orders under s. 565 of the Code. The object of the new clause (5 A) is to enable any condition on which a pardon has been granted by His Majesty or by the Governor-General when such power has been delegated to him to be enforced in the same way as a sentence of a Court.” Statements of Objects and Reasons

In section (4 A) the word “Law” has been used instead of the more common word “Act” to make it clear that this section applies to the case of persons sentenced by tribunals constituted by Regulations and Ordinances. Report Joint Committee 1922.

Notes.—1 When any person has been sentenced.—The special authority conferred by this section relates to persons sentenced to punishment and does not touch cases under s. 337, in which an approver satisfies the conditions precedent, upon which the pardon was tendered, 11 A 79 at p 89.

2 Convolving Court to state its opinion.—A Sessions Judge, required to state his opinion under this section must forward his reply through the High Court whether the requisition for the opinion has been received through the High Court or not.—M H C Cr No 3204, dated 15th November, 1895

“The word ‘Law’ is used in this section to include Regulations and Ordinances.”

3. Procedure where Court is of opinion that Local Government should act under this section.—When any Court shall be of opinion that there are grounds for recommending the Local Government to exercise the powers vested in it by ss. 401 and 402 of suspending, remitting or commuting the punishment to which any accused person has been sentenced the recommendation shall be submitted with the proceedings in the case though the Court of the Judicial Commissioner se High Court.—C P Cr Cir Part II No. 40. See also 23 G. 604 followed in 18 P. W. R. 1909—11 Cr. L. J. 105; referred Trial No 40 of 1905 Madras 7 A 672; 10 B 178

See the Madras Police Manual Vol. I pp. 319-320 as to form of conditions to be assented to by a prisoner when released on medical grounds. See also s. 21 of the Prisoners Act III of 1900 printed in Appendix A.

4. Together with his reasons for such opinion.—In cases of murder the Judge may record any extenuating circumstances rendering it expedient that there should be a mitigation of the sentence required by law and submit the same to Government and the Government may under this section act in such manner as to it seems proper, 1864 W. R. 27

5. Object of sub-sec (8).—Sub-sec (8) is new it will enable the different Government to make rules for respites in emergent cases so that execution of a sentence—especially one of death—may be suspended until the orders of Government shall have been received on a petition made to it under this section by a convicted person. It will be useful also in cases where the Local Government had refused to interfere and an application is afterwards made to the Governor General in Council.

 402. (1) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may without the consent of the person sentenced commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it —

Death transportation penal servitude rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding that to which he might have been sentenced simple imprisonment for a like term fine

{ (2) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of sections 54 or 55 of the Indian Penal Code.

CHAPTER XXX

OF PREVIOUS ACQUITTALS OR CONVICTIONS

403. (1) A person who has been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and convicted or acquitted of such offence shall while such conviction or acquittal remains in force not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236 or for which he might have been convicted under section 237

Person once convicted or acquitted not to be tried for same offence.

(2) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 236 sub-sec (1)

(3) A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which together with such act constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last mentioned offence if the consequences had not happened or were not known to the Court to have happened at the time when he was convicted

* This section was renumb. ed by Act XVI of 1923

† Sub-section (2) was added by ib id

(4) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of s 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1857, or of s 188 of this Code

Explanation—The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249 the discharge of the accused or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section

Illustrations

(a) A is tried upon a charge of theft as a servant and acquitted. He cannot afterwards, while the acquittal remains in force, be charged with theft as a servant, or, upon the same facts, with theft simply, or with criminal breach of trust

(b) A is tried upon a charge of murder and acquitted. There is no charge of robbery, but it appears from the facts that A committed robbery at the time when the murder was committed, he may afterwards be charged with and tried for robbery

(c) A is tried for causing grievous hurt and convicted. The person injured afterwards dies. A may be tried again for culpable homicide

(d) A is charged before the Court of Session and convicted of the culpable homicide of B. A may not afterwards be tried on the same facts for the murder of B

(e) A is charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, voluntarily causing hurt to B. A may not afterwards be tried for voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B on the same facts, unless the case comes within paragraph 3 of the section

(f) A is charged by a Magistrate of the second class with, and convicted by him of, theft of property from the person of B. A may be subsequently charged with, and tried for, robbery on the same facts

(g) A, B and C are charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, robbing D. A, B and C may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, dacoity on the same facts

I.—PRELIMINARY.

Notes.—1. Explanation of terms.—Tried—See 32 M. 220 at pp. 225 and 234; 34 M. 253; 9 N. L. R. 42 = 14 Cr. L. J. 230; 15 C. 608; Notes 1 to 3 at pp. 12 13, Note 5 under s 251 and Notes 18—20 below. Chapters XXI XXII and XXIII deal with trials in summons, warrant and sessions cases respectively

Offence—For definition, see s 4 (a) at p 15 and Notes thereunder

Conviction—"Undoubtedly 'conviction' is verbum equivocum it is used sometimes to denote the verdict of the jury, and at other times in its strict legal sense, to denote the judgment of the Court."—Per TINDAL, C J, in Bergess v Beaufeur, 8 Scott N. R. 194 cited in 29 M. 128 (F. B.). For judgment of conviction, see ss 243, 245, 245 238, 301, 305, 306 307, 309, 423, 480 and 485

Sentence—"does not in all cases follow a conviction," see s 562

Acquittal—"The word 'acquittal' is an equivocal expression, in common parlance a party is said to be acquitted by the verdict of the jury finding him not guilty." But it is only the formal judgment of the Court that in legal intendment satisfies the word "acquittal."—Per TINDAL, C J, noted above (cf ss. 301, 305 and 306).

BOUVIER in his "Law Dictionary" explains 'acquittal' as "the absolution of a party accused on a trial before a traverse jury" and also as "the absolution of a party charged with a crime or misdemeanour," SCHRAMANIA IYER, J, is of opinion that the word 'acquittal' is used in the Code in a sense different from what is ordinarily attached to it as a term of English Law. Under that Law a plea of autrefois acquit is technically available only where there is an acquittal after verdict or sentence. But the Code has introduced a modification in several instances (see Note 26) 38 M. 128 (F. B.) For acquittals, see ss. 245, 247 and 248 in summons-cases, s. 258 in warrant cases, ss. 365, 366, 368 and 369 in Sessions trials, and see also ss. 240, 249 333, 345, 427, 470, 480 and 495

2. Acquittal must be accepted as completely establishing innocence of accused on all facts charged.—"It is a very dangerous principle to regard a verdict of 'not guilty' as not fully establishing the innocence of the person to whom it relates," R v Pinner, (1932) 2 K B 339 followed in 35 C 359. When once an accused has been acquitted of an offence his innocence must be presumed. A verdict of acquittal is immune from challenge, 37 B 338. A complaint which is based on part of the facts which were the foundation of previous proceedings cannot be entertained. Where a false complaint was made to the Police on the 5th and repeated at the Police inquiry on the 11th who therefore took proceedings under s. 211, 1 P C., which resulted in an acquittal, a fresh proceeding, under s. 182 1 P C., in respect of the false complaint of the 5th cannot be entertained 35 W 303. The prisoner was charged originally with an offence under s. 493, 1 P C., of having enticed away a married woman from her husband and was finally acquitted on appeal by the District Magistrate who found the whole case was a deliberate fabrication. The prisoner was next charged under s. 353, 1 P C., of having kidnapped two infants of A, who were with her when she left the husband's house, and the prisoner was convicted and the conviction upheld by the Sessions Judge, who held that the prisoner was the person who induced A to leave her husband's house along with the infants and convicted the prisoner, held that so long as the acquittal under s. 493 remained in force the Judge was bound to take it as proved that the accused did not so take or entice away A. Though the acquittal is no bar to the trial the finding was perverse and contrary to every recognised principle of law and the Judge had no right to arrogate to himself the right to adjudicate upon the finding of the District Magistrate in the previous case 65 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 84.

Propriety of ordering further inquiry into offences some of which formed component parts of an offence of which the accused was acquitted.—Where an accused was charged with being a member of an unlawful assembly with the common object of assaulting the complainant and that he so assaulted the complainant and was acquitted under s. 147, 1 P C. after trial but notwithstanding the order of acquittal, the District Magistrate directed further inquiry into an offence under s. 323 1 P C. held that the matter cannot be re-opened until the order of acquittal shall have been set aside and further, no order within the terms of s. 437 having been passed regarding the offence under s. 312 1 P C. the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to order further inquiry with regard to that offence, 5 C. W. N 73.

3. Burden of proof is on accused.—The burden of proving autrefois acquit or autrefois convict when such a plea is set up by a party, is on him 1899 A. W. N 8. The onus of proving the plea is on the accused, he may prove it by producing a certified copy of the record or proceedings or the alleged conviction or acquittal and showing by such copy or other evidence if necessary, that he has been convicted or acquitted of the offence on which he has been arraigned, or that he might have on his former trial been convicted of the offence on which he has been arraigned or that his previous conviction or acquittal is by statute a bar to subsequent proceedings for the same cause. Halsbury's Laws of England Vol. IX p 356

4. Procedure—pleading—Section 403 has nothing to do with pleading being in terms a limitation on the jurisdiction of the Court, and is not to be construed with reference to the English Law of criminal pleading 41 C. 1072. Under English Law the accused cannot plead double that is a defendant having pleaded not guilty to an indictment is not entitled whilst that plea is standing to have a plea of autrefois acquit put on the record. The verdict of the jury must be taken at once on the special plea and then the general issue must be pleaded to by the defendant. See 41 C. 1072.

(i) Method of proof—See s. 511. When the second trial is in the same Court the Judge is entitled to refer to his own notes see remarks of STEPHEN, J in 41 C. 1072.

(ii) When plea may be set up—Unlike English procedure, a defence under this section may be set up, at any time before verdict, 41 C. 1072.

(iii) Judge or jury to decide the plea—In England the jury are sworn instantly to try the issue whether there has been a previous acquittal or conviction on the same facts. The counsel or the prisoner opens his case in support of the plea and calls his witnesses, the counsel from the Crown afterwards addresses the jury and calls witnesses and the counsel for the prisoner replies. See R v Sheen 2 C and P 636. Russell on Crimes, pp 1993—1996, Archbold pp 179-180.

Wherever the offences charged in the two indictments are capable of being identified as the same offence it is a question of fact whether the offences are the same and the identity must be proved, but where a plea of autrefois acquit upon its face shows that the offences are legally distinct and incapable of identification, the Court may determine the question as a matter of law, 7 W R 15 citing R v Vandercomb, 1 Leach, 712. In 41 C. 1072, STEPHEN, J., held, that under the circumstances arising in that case, the question whether the accused who was acquitted of the offence of murder, could be tried for the offence of culpable homicide is a question of law to be decided by the Judge and not by the jury. See ss 310 and 311 for procedure in cases of previous conviction.

5. Effect of loss of records of previous trial.—See s 369 and 38 M. 498 where SADASHA AYYAR, J., held that it was open to the Judge to re write the judgment by memory and the Court had an inherent jurisdiction to replace the records. But where in an appeal before the High Court from a conviction and sentence for murder, it appeared that the entire record of the proceeding of the trial has been lost and that no trace of it could be discovered the High Court directed that the conviction and sentence and all other proceedings in the case be set aside and a new trial of the accused held by the Sessions Judge, on the counsel for the accused, assuring the High Court that no legal plea in bar of a new trial could be put forward by or for his client, 1899 A. W. N. 55.

6. S. 26 of the General Clauses Act deals with the same acts constituting offences under two or more enactments.—'Where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more enactments the offender shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished under either or any of those enactments, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence.' This is almost identical with s 63 of the Interpretation Act, 1889 (82 and 83 Vic., c 63), which does no more than extend to statutory offences the common law rule as laid down in R v Ailes, 24 Q B D. 423, Archbold, p 177. The editors observe that the enactment would have been clearer if for the word 'offence' at the end had been substituted the words 'act or omission'.

II.—SCOPE OF SECTION.

7. Section applies to second trial and not to powers of Court of Appeal and Revision.—Under s. 403 it is the duty of the Court before the plea of autrefois acquit is taken in bar, to decide on evidence, and not merely by hearing the parties and looking into the papers of the previous trial. Where the petitioner charged the opposite party with cheating and criminal breach of trust, and the accused took the plea of autrefois acquit and the Magistrate on hearing both the parties and looking into the papers of the previous trial discharged the accused. Held, that whether the facts in the present case were the same as those in the previous case has to be determined after hearing the evidence and ascertaining what the facts are in this case and what were the facts found in the previous case. 23 C. W. N. 599 following 23 C. W. N. 543. This section refers only to a second trial and bars it, if it comes within its terms. It does not affect the powers of a Court of Appeal or Revision in the same proceedings, as those proceedings are only a continuation of the same trial, 23 C. 975 at p 977. An appeal is not a second trial, but a continuation of the trial in the Lower Court and s 403 has therefore no application, 37 M. 199. Thus an Appellate Court can, under s 424, convict on a charge on which the accused had been acquitted by the Court of First Instance, or order a new trial on the same charge. See also 23 C. 377; 27 C. 172, 40 C. 183 and Note 62 to s 423 and Note 49 to s 439.

8. Section does not apply to re trial of accused under s 303 after discharge of jury.—The accused who was charged with several charges and had pleaded not guilty, was acquitted on two of the charges and the jury disagreeing on the other charges were discharged and the accused when put up for trial before a fresh jury pleaded autrefois acquit. STEPHEN, J., held, that for the purposes of s 403, the accused was not being tried again. 'He is being tried on the original indictment and I consider that he is being tried on his first plea of not guilty.' The duty of the Court is to continue the trial of the accused before another jury, and the process may continue till a verdict is passed on all the counts without the accused being tried again under s. 403. I am aware that s. 308 refers to the accused being re-tried, but this does not affect the construction of s 403, 41 C. 1072.

9-A. Does acquittal on some of several charges bar re-trial after disagreement of jury on the other charges?—N was committed and tried before a jury on a charge containing five counts. The fourth count charged him with the murder of A T under s 302, I P C, and the fifth count charged him with culpable homicide of A T under s 304, I P C. The accused pleaded not guilty and the jury unanimously acquitted the accused of the fourth count and differed as to the fifth count. The jury was then discharged and the accused was put up for trial on the fifth count among others. It was urged in defence that as the accused had been acquitted of the charge of the murder of A T, he could not be tried again for committing culpable homicide of A T. Held, that s. 403 protects him only against a trial for murder and any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made. But the offence of culpable homicide for which he was to be tried again was the same charge that was made against him and on the terms of this section the defence must fail. 'If he had been charged with murder alone, no doubt a verdict of not guilty would protect him from another trial for culpable homicide, and should he be acquitted of culpable homicide he will be protected from a trial for any offence involving hurt but where a charge was made, the case falls outside the provisions of the law dealing with cases where it might have been made." 41 C. 1072. STEPHENS, J. held, that even according to the law of England in such a case the acquittal for murder is no bar to the re-trial for culpable homicide and the authority of R v Grimwood, 60 J. P. 409 cited at p. 235 of Archbold was doubted.

9. Does section bar second application for maintenance under Chapter XXXVI?—A dismissal of a previous application for maintenance does not constitute a legal bar to an order granting a maintenance on a subsequent application. Res judicata does not bar any proceedings by general principle, but only by a special enactment, is confined in s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, and s. 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code, but where a second application for maintenance is made after a dismissal of the first application on the ground that the applicant was not entitled to it, the second application is barred. See 10 C. W. N. 1031—4 Cr. L. J. 173, where on a charge of theft against A, B and C under s. 330, I P C., A and B were placed on their trial and acquitted by a competent Magistrate and subsequently on the discovery of some stolen property in the house of C, C was put on his trial for an offence under s. 411, I P C., it was held, dissenting from 4 C. W. N. 346 and 7 C. W. N. 493, that the previous acquittal of A and B was not a bar to the subsequent trial of C, as there were certain additional facts before the Court ascertained subsequent to the acquittal, which supported the charge under s. 411, I P C. See also in 41 C. 754 where in a previous trial two persons were acquitted by the jury of the offence of conspiring with a third person who was not a party to that trial, it was held, that such an acquittal was no bar to fresh proceedings being taken against the third party. See also 36 A. 163.

10. Does section apply to security proceedings under Chapter VIII?—S. 403 applies only when the proceedings could end in an acquittal or discharge. In 33 M. 85 and 37 C. 662 it is explained that the expression 'discharge' in s. 119 means merely 'discharged from custody' and is not used in the technical sense of 'discharged' as opposed to acquittal from an offence as used in s. 253. See Notes 131 and 132 at p. 213. Even though a Magistrate enters an acquittal in security proceedings it is unmeaning and does not bar further proceedings on the previous facts, 36 M. 315. "We are not to be understood as countenancing the idea that it would be right to vex a party repeatedly with proceedings under those sections on the same facts as formed the foundation for previous proceedings when those facts were found insufficient to justify an order for security. See also 14 Cr. L. J. 189 (C.) and 15 Cr. L. J. 69 (A). But see 35 B. 401, and Notes 21 and 22 to s. 437.

11. Section does not apply to proceedings under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act.—This section does not bar a second prosecution under Act XIII of 1859, when the complainant withdrew the first case before the Magistrate made any order. It is the non-compliance with the Magistrate's order that constitutes the offence, a wrong order or acquittal on the withdrawal it does not bar prosecution. In 21 C. 262 it was held, that where a person was convicted and imprisoned it is a bar to any subsequent conviction on the same contract for not returning to service. See Notes 5 and 6 at p. 147 of the Appendix, 24 M. 660.

12. Does section bar subsequent prosecution of persons jointly implicated with accused who was acquitted?—There is no provision of law which renders the subsequent prosecution of persons jointly concerned in the commission of an offence illegal, where on a previous trial others concerned in the offence have been tried and acquitted, but the principle of the section was in 7 C. W. N. 493 applied to such persons and it was held that until that order of acquittal declaring the facts on which the prosecution proceeded were false, was set aside on the appeal of Government, the Magistrate was not competent to take proceedings against others for the same offence. Where, however, on a complaint charging a number of persons with offences under ss. 148, 326 and 302, I P C., only three were sent up for trial and acquitted on the ground that the prosecution story was not a true one, and subsequently others implicated in the complaint were placed on trial and it was objected on the authority of 7 C. W. N. 493 that they could not be prosecuted until the previous judgment declaring the case untrue was set aside, held, there was no bar, 37 C. 640. 7 C. W. N. 493 was a peculiar case. There five persons were indicted for various offences, which included the offence of unlawful assembly that there should be five persons. Three out of the five were placed on trial and acquitted, and the other two were alleged with the other two to make up the five were put for trial and acquitted. The other three had already been acquitted and the High Court held, that such prosecution ought not to proceed. It did not lay down any general rule. In 10 C. W. N. 1031—4 Cr. L. J. 173, where on a charge of theft against A, B and C under s. 330, I P C., A and B were placed on their trial and acquitted by a competent Magistrate and subsequently on the discovery of some stolen property in the house of C, C was put on his trial for an offence under s. 411, I P C., it was held, dissenting from 4 C. W. N. 346 and 7 C. W. N. 493, that the previous acquittal of A and B was not a bar to the subsequent trial of C, as there were certain additional facts before the Court ascertained subsequent to the acquittal, which supported the charge under s. 411, I P C. See also in 41 C. 754 where in a previous trial two persons were acquitted by the jury of the offence of conspiring with a third person who was not a party to that trial, it was held, that such an acquittal was no bar to fresh proceedings being taken against the third party. See also 36 A. 163.

13. Rule equally applies where first trial is against accused jointly with others and subsequent charge is against him alone.—The rule is equally applicable, though the first indictment is against the defendant jointly with others, and the second against him alone. R v Dunn, 1 Mood. 424.

14. Plea in the nature of, or analogous to, "autrefois acquit."—The reason for the plea autrefois acquit is that an accused person should not in respect of any offence, be in jeopardy of prosecution more than once. Though, technically, such a plea cannot be relied upon where there has been no trial resulting in an actual acquittal, it would be impossible to contend that the great principle with reference to which the law allows the said plea should be inapplicable to cases where the prosecution failed before it reached that stage without any fault on the part of the accused. It is justice that a person prosecuted on a former occasion upon evidence sufficiently strong to warrant his being put upon his trial and being called upon for his defence and his evidence, should not be vexed again in the matter when the trial terminates in his favour, it must, a fortiori, be so, when evidence on which his prosecution was initiated was so weak as not to justify the trial and the accused discharged and saved from the necessity of entering upon the vindication of his innocence. BISHOP in his "Commentaries on the Law of Criminal Procedure," after pointing out that according to the better doctrine a person is in legal jeopardy when the jury is empanelled and ready to try him on a valid indictment and there is no latent or patent obstacle in the judicial path to prevent the cause from proceeding to the end, observes "then, if contrary to his rights and without his consent, the cause is suffered to break off before a verdict of acquittal or conviction is reached, there cannot technically be a plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict by reason of this jeopardy, yet the prisoner is entitled in some way to rely upon it afterwards for his protection." The same jurist lays down that a plea analogous to the plea of autrefois acquit setting out the special facts which show the jeopardy may be brought forward as the proper method of taking the objection and calls it the defence of former jeopardy.—PER SUBRAMANIAM IYER, J., in his dissenting judgment in 23 M. 128 (F.B.). But in 31 M 543 it is stated that the Code is exhaustive on the subject of autrefois acquit and it is not permissible to add to its provisions.

15. "Section bars second trial and no judgment can be passed in respect of second complaint."—Where a prosecution is barred on account of a previous trial s. 402 directs that the accused "shall not be liable to be tried." An order of acquittal on a subsequent complaint is therefore, improper, as no such order can be passed without a trial, 2 L B. R. 12 = 9 Cr. L. J. 578. The section bars any trial and therefore no order regarding the disposal of property can be made under s. 517 on a second complaint after a previous acquittal, as an order under s. 517 could only be made "when an inquiry or trial in a Criminal Court is concluded," 4 L B. R. 229 = 7 Cr. L. J. 490.

16. Liability of accused to be tried after acquittal, for using false evidence in his defence.—Where an accused person obtained an acquittal, and in the course of his defence which he knew to be false, held (PER LINDBAY, J., dissenting), that he was liable to be tried under s. 196, Indian Penal Code, for using such evidence. PER LINDBAY, J.—The second trial, viz, that under s. 196, 1 P C., was in effect a trial of the accused for the offence of which he had been already acquitted 35 P. R. 1870.

III.—GENERAL RULE OF AUTREFOIS ACQUIT OR CONVICT.

17. A person shall not be in jeopardy in respect of any offence more than once.—It is an established rule of the common law that a man may not be put twice in peril for the same offence, 2 Hawk C. 35. The principle on which the right to plead "autrefois acquit" or "autrefois convict," is founded is that a man should not be put twice in jeopardy for the same matter, and it does not rest on any doctrine of estoppel. See Archbold, p. 178. At common law a man who has once been tried and acquitted of a crime may not be tried again for the same offence if he was "in jeopardy," on the first trial. He was so, in jeopardy, if (1) the Court was competent to try him for the offence, (2) the trial was upon a good indictment on which a valid judgment of conviction could be entered, and (3) the acquittal was on the merits, i.e., by verdict on the trial or in summary cases by dismissal on the merits, followed by a judgment or order of acquittal. Russell on Crim., p. 1932.

The general rule of the common law forbids a man to be punished twice for the same offence. This is now read as meaning for the same acts and omissions, irrespective of the exact terms of this indictment, and as meaning, that the evidence to obtain a legal conviction on the first charge was in substance the same as that necessary to sustain the second charge, see R v King, (1897) 1 Q. B. 246—248.

MUST HAVE BEEN TRIED.

18. There must have been a 'trial' for the application of the rule.—Under English Law unless acquittal was on the merits, i.e., by verdict on the trial, or in summary cases by dismissal on the merits followed by a judgment of acquittal, it does not operate as a bar. See judgment of SCRAMSAY & LIVER, J, in 29 M. 126. Where a jury sworn and charged with a prisoner is discharged without giving a verdict, such a discharge does not bar a fresh indictment. Hasson v R, L. R. 2 Q. B. 239, 390 and R v Lewis, 78 L. J. (K B) 722. Where the Judge disagreeing with the divided verdict of the jury discharges them and orders the re-trial of the accused under s. 309, this section has no application, 41 C. 1072. Under the Code trial in the literal sense of the word does not seem to be necessary. Throughout the Code clear directions are given as to when an order of acquittal or discharge should be entered. To set up the plea dealt with by this section, there must have been a previous trial in which some final order has been passed, i.e., of conviction or acquittal. The explanation to this section makes the point clear. So when, after an investigation, the Police reported that theft (a cognizable offence) had not been established, and the Magistrate passed an order striking off the offence, it was held that such order could not affect the subsequent trial of another non-cognizable offence regarding which no proceedings had been taken. The Magistrate could not take cognizance of that offence on a Police report, but only on a complaint and he had not done so, 5 B. 405.

19. When may a person be said to be "tried"?—See Note 1 above. A process must have issued to the accused for his appearance, 38 W. 313. In a summons-case when the accused appears and answers to the charge, he is said to be "tried," although the case is dismissed owing to non-appearance of the complainant. In such a case the accused cannot be tried again upon the same facts for the same offence at the complaint of another person, Weir II, 457. Even though the accused also was absent in spite of having been served with a process and the case is dismissed under s. 247 the accused is entitled to the full benefit of s. 403, 34 M. 233 following 4 C. W. N. 346; 7 C. W. N. 711 and 493. See Notes 17—21 at pp 699-700. If the trial has otherwise been regularly conducted, even though no formal charge has been framed therein, the order of acquittal would still be a bar to further proceedings, 3 A. 129; 40 M. 9788.

20. Judgment of acquittal without adducing any evidence would still operate as bar—(i) Under s. 247 on the non-appearance of the complainant in a summons-case the accused has to be acquitted, for the effect of such an acquittal, see Notes 17—20 thereto at p 609 and 34 M. 233. (ii) Under s. 248, a Magistrate may permit the withdrawal of a summons-case and acquit the accused. (iii) See s. 333 where the Judge of a High Court can enter a judgment of acquittal on a Nolle prosequi by the Advocate-General. (iv) Under s. 345, a compromise has the effect of an acquittal, Ratanlal 519; 29 P. R. 1914—16 Cr. L. J. 81. (v) Under s. 494, an acquittal follows where a Public Prosecutor withdraws from the prosecution after the charge has been framed or there is no charge required, 9 N. L. R. 26—14 Cr. L. J. 133; 12 M. 35. (vi) See also s. 240 where the withdrawal of remaining charges on conviction on one of several charges has the effect of an acquittal 19 W. R. 55.

An acquittal under s. 247, equally with an acquittal after trial on the merits acts as a bar to further proceedings by virtue of s. 403 43 A. 53.

BY COURT OF COMPETENT JURISDICTION

(See Notes 39—41)

21. 'Council of Elders' is a Court of competent jurisdiction.—For the purposes of this section, the Council of Elders established under Punjab Frontier Regulation (IV of 1887) is a Court of competent jurisdiction, and a person convicted by such council cannot be committed to be committed on the same facts on which he was convicted, 30 P. R. 1885.

22. Order of incompetent Court of no avail under this section.—The principle is that the accused must have been in jeopardy at the previous trial, where, therefore, owing to the incompetency of the Court he was not lawfully liable to suffer judgment in the previous proceeding, the section does not apply. See Russell on Crimes, p 983. Where a former trial is set aside on the ground of want of jurisdiction and illegality, it is no bar to the second trial. For, when the High Court quashed the whole of the original proceedings as being all together without jurisdiction and therefore illegal, their result cannot be pleaded as autrefois acquit, it being necessary to that plea that the first Court should have had competent jurisdiction to try the offence, 2 W. R. 10. A Magistrate cannot convict or acquit a prisoner whom he has no jurisdiction to try. Such an order is of no avail under this section, 6 W. R. 13. Where a prisoner is released by the Court of Session on the ground that the proceedings had in his case were illegal and irregular, this section is no bar to his being subsequently tried and convicted of the same offence, 13 W. R. 52. See also 29 C. 612 at p. 414, where it was held that if the trial is void ab-initio for want of jurisdiction in the Magistrate, It cannot be called a trial, and that a discharge by the Appellate Court, without an order for trial by the proper Court, does not bar fresh proceedings being taken in the proper Court. Where an offence is tried by a Court without jurisdiction, i.e., a Court of not competent jurisdiction, the trial is void under s 330, and the offender, if acquitted, is liable to be re-tried under this section. It is not necessary for the High Court to reverse the acquittal, before the re-trial can be had, 8 B. 307. A Court which has no jurisdiction to try has no jurisdiction to acquit the accused, it can only discharge, 7 P. R. 1910 = 7 P. W. R. 1910. 19 A. L. J. 813.

Effect of absence of complaint—See Note 41

23. Is want of sanction under s. 195 condition of the competency of a Court?—Want of sanction under s. 195 is only a condition precedent for the institution of a proceeding before a tribunal, it is not a condition of the competency of the tribunal, 36 M. 393. But in 37 A. 107 it was held following 22 B. 711 that where the law requires a previous sanction to be given before a charge can be entertained by a Court, that Court is not a Court of competent jurisdiction until the sanction has been maintained. See also Note 41. S 403 does not bar the re-trial of the accused after sanction on the same facts in respect of which he was acquitted for an offence which required no sanction, 37 A. 107. See Note 20 under s. 195, see also 40 B. 97 and 3 M. 43. But it should be noted that the necessity of a sanction is done away with under the present Code as amended.

24. Does personal disqualification under s. 556 affect competency of Court?—If a person put on his trial for an offence produces an order of acquittal, passed by a Court which on the face of it is a Court of competent jurisdiction, in that it had both territorial jurisdiction and jurisdiction under the second Schedule of the Code in respect of the offence charged, the Court before which such order of acquittal is produced is not entitled to impeach the competency of the Court which passed the order, on the ground that the presiding officer of that Court may perhaps have laboured under the disqualification prescribed by s. 556 of the Code. Until the order of acquittal has been set aside and a new trial ordered by some competent Court, the person acquitted is entitled to plead it under s. 403 in connection with any further proceeding that may be taken against him, 8 A. L. J. 1129 = 12 Cr. L. J. 575. The accused were tried and acquitted by two Justices of the Peace. One of them was under statute (Coal Mines Act) disqualified to have acted as a Justice without the consent of parties for the offence of which the accused were acquitted. This fact was not known to the prosecutor at the time. Held on an application to quash the commitment, that the principle nemo debet bis vexari applied, R v Simpson (1914) 1 K. B. 85.

25. Acquittal by foreign Court may operate as bar.—An acquittal by a Court of competent jurisdiction outside England has been held to be a bar to an indictment for the same offence before any tribunal in England. It does not matter whether the Court is one in the King's Dominions or of a foreign country. Russell on Crimes, p. 1984 citing R v Hutchinson, (1878) 3 Keb. 785. R v Roche, (1773) 1 Leach 435.

MUST HAVE BEEN CONVICTED OR ACOUITTED

25. to be acquitted
'discharged'

35; 50 M. 876. Where the prisoner have pleaded to a formal charge the Magistrate is bound to convict or acquit and his order only dismissing the case, will amount to an acquittal, 5 G. L. R. 359; 29 P. R. 1914; 33 M. 895.

(i) Wrong order of acquittal.—If a Magistrate tries a warrant-case as a summons-case and acquits the accused, it must be regarded as an order of discharge only and cannot operate as a bar, 1835 A. W. N. at p. 280. See also 24 M. 660 where a wrong order of acquittal was entered on the withdrawal of a case under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act. See Note 11 above.

(ii) Acquittal before issue of process—Where the Police laid a preliminary charge-sheet before a Magistrate and before process was issued the Police applied to withdraw which was permitted. The Magistrate endorsed on the charge-sheet that the accused were acquitted, second charge sheet was subsequently laid by the Police, held, that the order passed by the Magistrate on the first charge-sheet was no bar to proceedings on the second charge-sheet. "It appears to be clear that neither an order of discharge nor of acquittal could properly be made in a case when the accused has not been directed to appear at all. The provisions regulating trials and inquiries all contemplate the appearance of the accused as essential for the commencement of the proceedings." See ss. 242, 252, 208 (1) and 271. The order of acquittal on the first proceedings was unmeaning and could not be availed of. 36 M. 815. 17 A. L. J. 867.

(iii) Order for release not amounting to acquittal.—Where the nature of the charge was explained to the accused, but no formal charge in writing was drawn up against him as required by s. 254; held, that the order for release (s. 249) did not amount to an acquittal under s. 258, 4 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 1. But an order for the release of the accused as "Nirdoshi" has been held by the Calcutta High Court to operate as an acquittal. Where a complaint was made of extortion under s. 384, I P. C., and the Magistrate allowed the dispute to be referred to arbitration and discharged the accused, but the arbitration having fallen through, the Magistrate allowed the complaint to be revived. The High Court held the discharge to be improper, but refused to interfere with the order reviving the prosecution, 1 C. W. N. 49; 36 M. 315; 17 O. C. 10

JUDGMENT MUST BE IN FORCE.

27. Bar only so long as such conviction or acquittal remains in force, ie., so long as such judgment or order has not been set aside by a Court of Appeal or Revision. When so set aside, the result will be that the proceedings on the trial will be annulled, and thus will not prevent the prisoner being again put on his trial 7 W. R. 2. If the order of acquittal is set aside by a Court of Appeal or Revision, the proceedings on the trial will be annulled and there is no prohibition against the prisoner being again put on his trial, 7 W. R. 3. Where the Appellate Court reverses the verdict of a jury and orders a re-trial, unless it has limited the scope of the re-trial such re-trial must be taken to be one upon all the charges originally framed, 22 C. 377; 40 C. 693. A judgment reversed by a Court of error is the same as no judgment, and in that case, therefore, the plea of autrefois acquit is not available, Drury, (1849) 3 C. and K. 193.

28. So long as previous order is in force, irregularity of proceedings is of no consequence.—It is not necessary that the judgment of acquittal should be, in fact, correct and proper, for, while unreversed, it will support a plea of autrefois acquit in bar of a second trial. Thus a judgment for the defendant, though consequent on a misdirection or erroneously given on a special verdict, or on an insufficient indictment, so long as it stands unreversed, is a bar to a new indictment. Russell on Crimes, p. 1983. If the offence is the same, the former conviction or acquittal is a bar to the second trial, whether the second Court considers that the former conviction or acquittal was warranted by the evidence given in the first trial or not, 7 W. R. 15. Even if the judgment of acquittal was passed under a misapprehension of the law it would still operate as a bar. When a Sessions Judge considering that two charges under ss. 302 and 201, I P. C., could not be combined, separated the charges and tried the accused on a charge of murder only and acquitted her, it was held that the accused could not be tried again for the offence under s. 201, I P. C., as the two charges might have been combined in the former trial and though he clearly intended that the accused should thereafter be tried on a charge under s. 201, 4 B. L. R. 174 = 11 Cr. L. J. 731. See also 9 N. L. R. 28 = 14 Cr. L. J. 133, where the accused was acquitted of a charge, under s. 203, I P. C., on a withdrawal of the case under a misapprehension and it was held he could not be tried again under s. 177, I P. C., on the same facts. Even if the acquittal had been obtained by a trick on the part of the accused, the acquittal would operate as a bar. See 39 M. 1028. See 33 P. R. 1870. The Court before which an order of acquittal is produced is not entitled to impeach the competency of the Court which passed the order, on the ground that the presiding officer was disqualified under s. 556, 8 A. L. J. 1129. See Note 24 and Note 19

IDENTITY OF OFFENCE

29. Offence must be the same.—Immaterial difference do not affect identity of offence.—When it is the same, and therefore, immaterial circumstance, for it the precise accuracy of which is not material, the prosecutor could change the rights of the defendant and subject him to a second trial for what in reality is the same offence. Thus if a prisoner be indicted for murder alleged to have been committed on a certain day and acquitted and afterwards be charged with killing the same person on a different day, he may plead the former acquittal in bar notwithstanding this difference, for the day stated in the indictment on the former trial was not material. If a prisoner should be charged with murdering A and should plead a former acquittal, and prove that he had been acquitted upon a charge of murdering B, evidence would be admissible to prove that the two charges related to the same person and to the same killing. But if the offences are different identity of evidence is no bar. Therefore where, the prisoner was charged with forging the document A, but evidence was given in respect of both the documents A and B indiscriminately, and the accused acquitted, held, that such acquittal was no bar to his being tried again for forging the document B for a conviction and acquittal both fall under the same category in this section. It would be no answer on a trial for one, to say that the prisoner had been acquitted or another on a trial at which evidence was given respecting both, and which, if believed, would have proved the prisoner guilty of both, 7 W. R. 15. It was held in Weir, 1, 739, that an illegal and inoperative conviction under s. 21 of the Forest Act, will not bar a prosecution under the Penal Code for such other offence as the accused may be proved to have committed. Where a charge of kidnapping from lawful guardianship under s. 366, I P C., is in general terms and does not state from whose guardianship the kidnapping took place, an acquittal on such a charge of the offence of kidnapping from the lawful guardianship of a particular person may be pleaded in bar of a trial on a charge of kidnapping from the guardianship of another person, 23 M. 284. Where it was the duty of the prosecution to put before the Court true evidence respecting the measurement of the timber which the accused cut in excess of his license, the failure to do this at the first trial does not entitle the Crown to prosecute the offender again in respect of the same timber, on the ground that the measurement stated at the first trial was incorrect and below the quantity actually cut, 3 L. B. R. 253 = 5 Cr. L. J. 412.

30. Test for finding whether the offences are same.—The true test by which the question whether such a plea is a sufficient bar in any particular case may be tried is whether the evidence necessary to support the second indictment would have been sufficient to procure a legal conviction upon the first. R v Clark, 1 B. and B. 473; Archbold, p. 177. A trial is said to be upon the same facts if the evidence in the first case would have supported a conviction for the offence charged in the second case, Q v Bird, 2 Den. C. C. 94 and 1 Bom. L. R. 15 cited 5 B. L. R. 12 = 16 Cr. L. J. 224. Except for the purpose of ascertaining whether the offence which formed the subject of the first trial is the same as that which forms the subject of the second charge, the Court before which the second trial is held has nothing to do with the evidence given on the former trial. If the offence is not the same, the former conviction or acquittal is no bar to the trial upon the second charge, notwithstanding the evidence given in the two cases is the same, and the Court, whether the same as that which tried the prisoner for the first offence or a different Court, is bound to apply its own judgment to the evidence before it. Two distinct offences cannot be converted into one such offence by reason of any evidence which the prosecutor may think fit to adduce upon the trial for one of them, 7 W. R. 15.

31. The rule prohibits second trial not merely for same offence, but also upon same facts, for any other offence.—Where a person has been tried and convicted or acquitted of an offence arising out of a particular set of facts, he cannot while such conviction or acquittal remains in force be again tried in respect of any offence based on the same facts, unless the case can be brought under one or the other specific exception to the rule provided by the section, 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135. The two offences may not be the same, but this finding by itself is not sufficient for disposing of the applicability of s. 403. A bar under that section operates not only where a person has been tried for an offence and convicted or acquitted of it, and is sought to be tried again for the same offence but also when he is sought to be tried on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under s. 236 or for which he might have been convicted under s. 237. Where on the same facts a person has been tried and acquitted on charge under s. 182, I P C., he cannot be tried again on a charge under s. 211, I P C., after obtaining a fresh sanction, 24 M. 308. It has long been fully established that acquittal on an indictment is a bar to a subsequent indictment for any offence of which the accused could have been lawfully convicted on the first indictment whether the offence was or was not specifically stated in the first indictment and whether the proper evidence was or was not adduced at the first trial. Under the present practice, the substance rather than the form of charges in the two indictments is considered, R v Sheen, 2 C. and P. 634. See Russell on Crimes, pp. 1984-85.

32. Where on same facts a charge 'might have been framed' under s. 236 and is not so framed, subsequent trial for that charge will not lie.—See Notes 3 and 6 under s. 236 at pp. 671-672. The protection afforded by this section extends only to other and different offences of which the accused could be charged if they were supported by the same facts and fell within the category of offences mentioned in ss. 236 or 237, 1 Bom. L. R. 15. The joinder of charges of murder (s. 302, I P C.) and of causing evidence of the murder to disappear (s. 201, I P C.), on the alternative is legal. Where the Sessions Judge considering that the two charges could not be combined, separated the charge and tried the accused on a charge of murder only and acquitted her. He next tried her for an offence under s. 201 and convicted her, held that the conviction was bad. Though he clearly intended that the accused should thereafter be tried on a charge under s. 201, I P C., such subsequent trial is absolutely prohibited by s. 403, for as the two charges might have been combined in the former trial she cannot be tried again on the same facts 4 B. L. R. 174 = 11 Cr. L. J. 373. In 5 B. L. R. 16 = 12 Cr. L. J. 224, PRATT, C. J., was of opinion that this case was wrongly decided. The offences are distinct offences committed in the same series of acts and fall under s. 233 (1) and sub-sec. (2) of s. 403. 45 C. 727; 26 Bom. L. R. 440.

(i) Acquittal under s. 203 bars trial under s. 177, I P C., on same facts.—U was killed by a shot from the gun of Z. The Police Patel, though aware of this fact, falsely reported that U died of fever. The Patel was prosecuted for an offence under s. 203 I P C. on the ground that he gave false information regarding an offence which he knew to have been committed. After a charge was framed against him, the shooting of U by Z was found to be accidental. Thereupon the prosecution of the Police prtel under s. 203, I P C., was withdrawn, and he was acquitted under s. 494, held that the Police-officer could not afterwards be tried again for an offence under s. 177, I P C., on the basis of the same false report, 9 N. L. R. 28 = 16 Cr. L. J. 133.

(ii) Acquittal under s. 352 operates as bar to trial under s. 323, I P C.—A person tried and acquitted on a charge of using criminal force under s. 352 cannot be tried in respect of the same criminal matter on a charge of hurt, 18 W. R. 3 = 7 B. L. R. Appx. XXV; see 32 P. R. 1884.

(iii) Acquittal under s. 201 bar to trial under s. 176, I P C.—Similarly, a person who has been tried for offences under ss. 201 and 202, I P C., and acquitted by the Sessions Court, cannot be tried again for an offence under s. 176 I P C., based on the same facts by an Inferior Criminal Court, as the case of such a person comes not within sub-sec. (1), but within sub-sec. (2) of s. 235. The charge under s. 176, I P C., might have been framed at the former trial on the very same facts and the Sessions Court which tried him under s. 202, I P C., was also competent to try him under s. 176, I P C., 10 C. W. N. 518 = 3 Cr. L. J. 339.

(iv) Person convicted of secreting letter cannot on same evidence be again convicted of making away with that letter.—Where a prisoner was convicted and sentenced under s. 5 of Act XVII of 1854 (now s. 52 of Act VI of 1898) upon a charge of fraudulently secreting a postal letter, and on appeal such conviction and sentence were confirmed, held, that he could not subsequently be convicted under the same section of having fraudulently made away with the same letter upon the same occasion, both acts being connected and substantially a part of one criminal transaction, 1 M. H. C. R. 83.

(v) Acquittal under s. 411 is bar to trial under s. 414, I P C.—So also, where a person had been convicted under s. 411, I P C., in respect of certain property stolen on a particular occasion from a particular person, he could not, subsequently, be tried for an offence under s. 414, I P C., in respect of other property stolen on the same occasion from the same person, 28 A. 313 where 15 A. 317 is referred to 27 C. W. N. 554; 3 Pat. 503.

(vi) Theft and mischief.—E was charged with theft and mischief in respect of certain branches cut from a tree claimed by complainant and was acquitted on the charge of mischief on the ground that, as against the complainant E had title to the property. The District Magistrate ordered further inquiry under s. 437. Held, that a trial on the charge of theft was barred under this section, as the offences were not distinct and the facts were common to both offences and had been found in favour of the accused, 8 M. 296. Similarly, an accused person who was charged with theft of an animal was held not liable to be separately charged with and convicted of mischief for the subsequent killing of it, Weir I, 497.

(vii) Acquittal in summons case for one of several offences alleged operates as bar to trial of the other offences.—Where a Magistrate issued processes against and summoned the accused persons for one of several offences alleged against them and acquitted them of the offence for which they were summoned, held, that no fresh process could in view of the provisions of s. 403 (1) be issued against them in respect of all the offences alleged against them on the previous occasion including the one for which they were summoned and acquitted, 2 C. L. J. 622 = 3 Cr. L. J. 115, distinguishing 15 C. 608 and 29 C. 726. See also Note 17 to s. 247.

(viii) Trial and acquittal under special law may be pleaded in bar.—All offences against the Abkars Law (Bombay Act V of 1876) being cognizable by a Magistrate of the second class (s. 8 cl. 5 and s. 56) a person tried for any such offence by any such Magistrate, and acquitted, is not liable by reason of this section to be tried again for the same offence unless the acquittal has been set aside by the High Court on appeal by the Government. The jurisdiction conferred by the Code does not affect any special jurisdiction or power conferred by any law in force at the time when the Code came into force, 10 B. 181.

(ix) Composition of offence under s. 324 I P C., may be pleaded in bar on charge under s. 324, I P C.—An accused person charged under s. 324, I P C., cannot, if the offence has been compounded with the permission of the Court, be again tried on the same fact on the charge under s. 223 I P C., if the composition which has the effect of an acquittal is still in force Ratanlal 519.

(x) Acquittal under s. 211 may bar trial under s. 182 I P C.—Where the accused made a complaint to the Police that certain articles had been stolen from his house and the Police made an enquiry when the accused repeated his complaint and said that he suspected C and it was found that no theft took place and the complaint was false. C laid a charge against the accused under s. 211, I P C., sanction for a complaint of an offence under s. 182 I P C. having been refused, the accused was convicted but the High Court set it aside stating that the offence was one under s. 182, I P C., and not under s. 211. C then obtained sanction and instituted a complaint for an offence under s. 182 I P C., and it was contended that the previous acquittal was no bar as the offences were not the same, held, that the previous acquittal under s 211, I P C, operated as a bar on the same facts because a charge under s 182, I P C, might have been framed under s. 236 and the case came under sub-sec. (1) and not sub-sec. (2) of s 403, 36 M. 308. In 20 P. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 420, however, it was held that acquittal of the accused under s 182, I P C, was no bar to the trial for an offence under s. 211, I P C, as a person could not be charged in the alternative under s. 236 of offences under ss 182 and 211, I P C, and the offences are essentially distinct. See 32 C. 180 and 31 B. 204 and also 8 S. L. R. 179 = 16 Cr. L. J. 104.

(xi) Acquittal under s 302, I P C, may bar trial under s 304 I P C—See 22 C. 371—383.

(xii) Acquittal on charge under s 193 bars trial on charges under ss 465, 471, 120-B, I P C—Petitioners were tried under s. 193 and upon a careful and exhaustive consideration of the whole evidence acquitted. They were again put on trial under ss. 465, 471 and 120—B, I P C. Held that inasmuch as the facts on which the complainant founded the present case were inseparable from those upon which the previous case was proceeded with, the proceedings should be quashed, 30 G. W. N. 384.

32-A.—Effect of the amendment of s 238 by the insertion of sub-sec. (2) (A) and its removal from s. 237.—Where in an appeal to the Sessions Judge, the Sessions Judge altered the conviction to one under ss 385 and 508, I P C, holding that ss 420 and 507, I P C, were not applicable to the facts, held in revision that the accused's offence did not fall under ss. 507 or 508 or 385 or 420, I P C, but amounted to an attempt to cheat under ss. 420 and 511, I P C, read together, that by virtue of the new amendment of s. 238 of the Code cl. (2) (A) the accused were liable to be convicted under those sections, though he has been charged only under s 420, and that as the Sessions Judge had not acquitted the accused of the offence of attempting to cheat, s 439 (4) of the Code was no bar to the accused being convicted in revision of the offence of attempting to cheat under ss. 420 and 511, I P C, read together, 48 M. 774 = 48 M. L. J. 190.

EXCEPTION I.—DISTINCT OFFENCES UNDER SUB-SECTION (2).

33. Section does not bar trial for distinct offence for which separate charge might have been made under s. 235 (1).—See illustration (b) to s. 235 and Notes thereto at pp. 657—669. The limitation of this exception to sub-sec. (1) of s 235 necessarily involves the exclusion of cases falling under the other sub-sections of s 235, where the several offences are separable for the purposes of charging, but not distinct for the purposes of punishment. But the Legislature even here recognises a special case should be provided for, and therefore sub-sec. (3) of s. 403 makes an exception in respect of a case which eventually falls under sub-sec. (3) of s 235, 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 133, 10 G. W. N. 518 = 3 Cr. L. J. 323. If the crimes were so distinct that the evidence necessary to prove one will not prove the other it cannot properly be said that they were so far the same that the acquittal of one is a bar to a prosecution for the other. Archbold, p 171.

(i) Acquittal of charge under s 324, I P C, does not bar trial under s 365, I P C—Where certain persons trespassed into a house (and after beating the inmates, carried off a woman, it was held that their conviction under s. 452 was no bar to their being tried under s. 365 I P C, 1906 A. W. N. 32 = 3 A. L. J. 2 = 3 Cr. L. J. 93.

(ii) So also ss 395 and 400 I P C—The acquittal of accused on a charge under s. 400 I P C, cannot operate under this section as a bar to his being prosecuted again on a charge under s. 395, I P C, for committing one of the atrocities in respect of which evidence was given in the previous trial under s. 400, 1 Bom. L. R. 15.

(iii) Being in possession of excisable articles and putting false trade-marks—The trial and conviction of the accused for being in possession of excisable articles without a license under s 61 of the Bengal Excise Act (VII of 1868) is no bar under this section to his trial upon the same facts under ss. 486 and 487, I P C, and ss. 6 and 7 of the Merchandise Marks Act of 1889, ie, for putting false trade marks upon cases containing excisable articles and making use of false trade-marks for his own trade, 23 C. 174. See, however, s. 26 Genl Cl. Act X of 1897 and 22 C. 371.

(iv) Conviction under s 325 no bar to trial under s 365 I P C—When the accused attacked the complainant's house, inflicted a beating on him and his two sons and carried away A, a woman and on the first trial they were convicted for the attack on his house and for beating him and his sons, and at the second trial the accused were charged under s 365, I P C, for the abduction of A, held, that the case fell under s. 235 (1) and the previous conviction was no bar under s. 403 (ii) 3 A. L. J. 2 = 1906 A. W. N. 32 = 3 Cr. L. J. 93.

(v) Acquittal under s 182 I P C no bar to trial under s 500 I P C—Where the accused who had in a petition to a Tahsildar under the Court of Wards falsely made certain allegations against an Inspector of Police was tried under s. 182, I P C., but was acquitted on the ground that the person to whom the application was made was not a public servant, and a subsequent prosecution by the Inspector under s. 500, I P C., was objected to, held the previous acquittal was no bar, 37 G. 604, where 10 G. W. N. 518 is distinguished. 49 C. 383.

(vi) Section 467 or 109, I P C., and s. 82 of the Registration Act, 1908.—Acquittal in respect of the offence of aiding and abetting the forgery of a document presented for registration does not bar the trial for an offence under s. 82 (a) of the Registration Act in respect of the same document, 37 A. 107. But see 1 Rang 299 where it is held that if an accused is already tried and acquitted for offences of forgery and abetment thereof, their re-trial for a separate offence under the Registration Act, s. 82, was barred under s. 403 as no sanction is necessary for a prosecution under s. 82, I R., Act and as the accused might have been charged and tried for an offence under s. 82 Registration Act.

(vii) Acquittal of abetment of forgery, s. 467/109, I P C., does not bar trial for offence of using as genuine the forged document, s. 471, I P C.—The series of acts beginning with the forgery and ending with the use of the forged document in a Civil Court must be regarded as so connected together as to form one transaction, so that under s. 235 (1) it would have been competent to try the accused for both the offences at the same trial, the case therefore fell under subsec. (2) of s. 403 and was not governed by subsec. (1), 40 B. 97; 30 G. W. N. 432.

(viii) Conviction under s. 243, I P C., no bar to trial under s. 240, I P C.—C gave 50 counterfeit coins to P to pass for him. Subsequently C was convicted under s. 243, I P C., for being in possession of other counterfeit coins. He was again tried jointly with P in respect of the 50 coins under s. 240, I P C., and convicted. On appeal it was contended that C could not be tried for an offence under s. 240, I P C., after the previous conviction under s. 243, I P C., held, that the delivery of the 50 coins by C to P with a view to its being changed was a distinct offence from that for which C was previously convicted and that the second conviction of C was good, 31 G. 1007.

(ix) Offences under ss. 302/34, I P C.—Effect of acquittal under ss. 302/34, I P C. on re-trial under ss. 302/109 and 302/114, I P C.—Where the Judge directed an acquittal under ss. 302/34, I P C., on legal grounds, the verdict of that jury to that effect has not determined any question of fact and the acquittal has no effect on the trial of charges under ss. 302/109 and 302/114, I P C., 41 G. 1073.

(x) An acquittal under s. 342, I P C. no bar to trial under s. 147, I P C.—Several Police constables were convicted of rioting. Two of them were previously tried and acquitted on charge of wrongful confinement for having taken into custody some persons in the course of such rioting. Held, that the second trial was not vitiated by contravention of the rule embodied in s. 403 subsec. (1) of the Cr. Pro. Code (R v Barron, 1914 2 K. B. 570 followed, 2 G. L. J. 622 distinguished 48 G. 78.)

(xi) A conviction under s. 379, I P C., no bar to a trial again under s. 9 of the Opium Act (I of 1878).—An accused previously convicted of theft under s. 379 in respect of some opium can be tried again for an offence of illicit possession of the same opium under s. 9 of the Opium Act 24 A. L. J. 559.

34. Acquittal in respect of some of several sums misappropriated whether bar to trial in respect of others?—The accused was tried for and acquitted of criminal breach of trust in respect of Rs. 12 misappropriated between July 1907-08. He was subsequently tried and convicted in respect of another sum of Rs. 19 misappropriated during the same period. On appeal the Sessions Judge being of opinion that when the prosecution had made its election and s. 222 (2) and proviso, by choosing some out of the different amounts misappropriated during the period they were estopped by s. 403 from instituting any further prosecution in respect of any fresh items covering the same period, and set aside the conviction, held the previous acquittal was no bar. Sections 234, etc., do not bar the separate trial of the accused for each separate offence. See the case noted above under ss. 233 and 235, 12 Bom. L. R. 226 = 11 Cr. L. J. 337. Where, however, a charge has been framed under s. 222 (2) in respect of a gross sum of money misappropriated during a certain period and a conviction obtained, the accused cannot be tried again in respect of another gross sum of money misappropriated during the same period. The charge in the previous case should be taken to include all the items misappropriated by the accused in the course of the same transaction during that period. That ought to be the interpretation of s. 222 because otherwise it seems difficult to conceive that the Legislature should have intended that under s. 222 the prosecution should be at liberty to prosecute for a gross sum misappropriated during a particular period consisting of certain items more than three in number and obtain a conviction for the same, and then choose another gross sum consisting of different items alleged to have been misappropriated during the same period and have a separate trial for the second group of items. What the Legislature apparently intended was that where there is to be a trial for misappropriation of a gross sum 'there should be only one trial for such an offence during the period covered by the defalcation,' 17 Cr. L. J. 30 (M), 27 G. W. N. 578.

Acquittal on trial for criminal breach of trust of a sum between certain dates does not bar a subsequent trial for criminal breach of trust committed on an intermediate date, of a separate sum not included in the amount forming the subject of the first trial. 50 C. 632 (following 12 Bom. L. R. 226)

35. Similarity of offences does not render them identical.—

(i) Forgery of several documents—See Note 12 at p 628 When a person was first tried in respect of three out of six documents alleged to be forged under such circumstances which constituted the forgery of all six documents one and the same transaction, and acquitted in respect of those three documents; held, that there was nothing in this section which could prevent his being tried again in respect of the other documents, but that in the circumstances of the case, it was inexpedient to take proceedings in respect of the remaining three documents, 1905 A. W. N. 238 = 2 A. L. J. 673 = 2 Cr. L. J. 790. See 7 W. R. 15.

(ii) Threatening three witnesses at same time—Each person brought a separate case, held separate sentences were legal, 9 W. R. 30.

(iii) Stealing of several articles at the same time—It has happened that a man acquitted of stealing a horse has yet been arraigned and convicted for stealing the saddle, though both were done at the same time Hale's Pleas of the Crown cited in 7 W. R. 15. The tendency now is to extend the rule for the same acts and omissions irrespective of the exact terms of the indictment See 28 A. 313.

(iv) Possession of stolen property—Accused was found to be in possession of property stolen from two different persons on different occasions He was separately tried and sentenced on each charge, held, that there was nothing in the fact that the goods were stolen at different times, to constitute by itself proof that they were received at different times, or under such circumstances as to show that more than one offence was committed in receiving them Conviction on the second trial was set aside, 15 C. 511; 15 A. 317; 27 C. W. N. 554.

EXCEPTION II.—SCOPE OF SUB-SEC (3).

36 The new facts must constitute different offence—See illustration (8) and 36 A. 4.—It is not enough to defeat the plea of autrefois acquit to show that the second indictment charges circumstances of aggravation not included in the first, or serious consequences of the offence which have occurred since the first indictment, unless the new facts or circumstances are such as to indicate a different kind of offence of which there could be no conviction for the first trial. A man who has been acquitted on an indictment for manslaughter cannot be indicted for the same death of murder Russell on Crimes, pp 1985—87. There is no authority for holding that when a man has been convicted of committing an act constituting an offence, and further evidence subsequently comes to light which shows that his act constituted a graver offence than that of which he was convicted, he may merely on that ground alone be put upon his trial for the graver offence. Clauses 2, 3, 4 and 5 lay down under what circumstances alone a previous conviction is not a bar to a subsequent trial for the same matter, held, therefore, a person convicted under s. 31 of the Rangoon Police Act 1899, for being in possession of an article supposed to be stolen cannot be again tried later for an offence under s. 457, I P C., merely on the ground that the owner of the article is traced and some further evidence is available, 8 Bur. L. T. 129, 16 Cr. L. J. 267.

37 The new facts must have happened after or not known to the Court at the first trial.—Where A causes hurt to B, and as a consequence of the injury so inflicted, B dies and A is tried and convicted of the hurt. If death took place before the trial and the fact was known to the Court which convicted A of hurt, then A could not again be tried for the homicide under this sub-sec. (3) though he might be under sub-sec. (4), 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135. A summary conviction for common assault may be a bar to an indictment for wounding with intent to murder, R v Stanton, (1891) 5 Cox 344, R v Elrington, 1 B. and s. 685, R v Miles, 21 Q. B. D. 423. In 1901 the accused was prosecuted by the Bombay Municipality under s. 476 of the City Municipal Act II of 1895 for proceeding to erect certain balconies contrary to the Act. He was acquitted. Subsequently in 1902, the accused was called upon under ss 308 and 309 of that Act to remove the balconies which had been in existence at the time of the previous prosecution, and on the accused's failure to comply with the notice, he was again prosecuted, held, that the former acquittal did not preclude the Magistrate from trying the present charge, as the second offence could not have been committed until the notice to remove was served on the accused and this notice to remove was not served on the accused until the year following that in which he was acquitted of the previous charge, 4 Bom. L. R. 675. See also 9 Cr. L. J. 676 (Barma) where an acquittal of the offence of disobedience of an order under s. 92 (2) of the Burma Municipal Act III of 1898 was held no bar to the trial for the disobedience of an order under s. 92 (3). See 3 P. R. 1901 and 36 A. 4, where a man was first tried for hurt and later, the injured person dying, held the previous trial was no bar to a fresh trial for culpable homicide.

EXCEPTION III.—SCOPE OF SUB-SEC. (4).

33. 'Was not competent to try' means 'had no jurisdiction to try.'—It is only when the Court which first tried the accused had no jurisdiction to try the offence with which the accused is subsequently charged, that this sub-sec. (4) prevents the operation of the general rule enacted in sub-sec. (1). See 24 M. 641 and illustrations (f) and (g). The clause refers to the character and status of the tribunal when it refers to the competency to try the offence, 36 M. 303. Upon a charge of dacoity the Magistrate, having split up the charge, convicted the accused of rioting, using criminal force and misappropriating the property of a deceased person.

Sessions Court was no bar to further proceedings by virtue of sub-sec. (4), 7 M. 637. So, where an accused person appears to have committed culpable homicide, his conviction by a Magistrate for a minor offence does not prevent his trial for murder, etc., Ratanlal 337. In 5 Bom. L. R. 125 the accused was charged with an offence under s. 304, I P C., but the trying Magistrate convicted and sentenced him under s. 323 I P C., being of opinion that the evidence was not sufficient for commitment. The District Magistrate, however, taking a different view, ordered a commitment, and it was held, that the order was not bad as the previous conviction under s. 323, I P C., was no bar to a trial under s. 304 which the Magistrate was not competent to try. This case was followed in 7 P. R. 1912 = 39 P. W. R. 1912; 263 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 782, where the accused were acquitted of offences under ss. 323, 326 and 148, I P C., and were subsequently tried and convicted under s. 302, I P C. See 18 Cr. L. J. 643; 43 M. L. J. 490.

39. That offence is triable by jury does not affect competency of Court.—A Sessions Judge with the aid of assessors tried and acquitted the accused of the offence of abetment of murder with dacoity, ss. 396 and 109, I P C. Subsequently on the same facts, the accused was charged with an offence under s. 412, I P C., and tried by the Sessions Judge and a jury and convicted. The conviction was sought to be sustained under this subsection inasmuch as the Court which tried the accused on the first occasion. Sessions Judge aided by assessors, was not competent to try the offence under s. 412 which was triable by a jury; held, setting aside the conviction that the words "not competent to try" means "had not jurisdiction to try." But the Court by which he was first tried, i.e., the Court of Sessions, was competent as a Court of Session to try the offence under s. 412, I P C., 24 M. 641. See 7 M. 557.

40. Want of complaint under s. 199 renders Court incompetent.—The accused was tried under ss. 368, 369, 376, I P C., and acquitted. On complaint by the husband, the accused was tried and convicted on the same facts under s. 498, I P C., held, that the conviction was not bad by virtue of s. 403 as the earlier Court was incompetent to try the accused under s. 498 in the absence of a complaint by the husband, 17 Bom. L. R. 678 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 91 = 16 Cr. L. J. 657. A intimated to the District Magistrate that he had authorized his brother B to institute a complaint against C for enticing away A's wife (s. 498, I P C.) and the charge was heard and evidence for both sides recorded, but the Magistrate discovering that B had no authority purported to acquit C. On the husband A instituting a fresh complaint, it was held that the so-called acquittal was no bar to the trial, as the Magistrate's finding amounted to this, that there was no complaint before him of which he could take cognizance, 31 A. 317. See Note 10 at p. 568.

41. Effect of absence of sanction on competency of Court.—(i) Sanction under s. 195 only a condition precedent for institution of proceeding before tribunal, it is not a condition of the competency of the tribunal.—The clause refers to the character and status of the tribunal when it refers to competency to try the offence. See illustrations (f) and (g). Where, therefore, a person was acquitted of an offence under s. 211, I P C., and no charge under s. 182, I P C., was framed for want of sanction though it could have been jointly tried in the first trial held, that the acquittal was a bar to a trial under s. 182, I P C., 36 M. 308.

(ii) Contra.—Want of sanction renders Court incompetent.—A complaint was made to a Magistrate of offences under ss. 182 and 500, I P C. When accused appeared, the Magistrate passed the following order—'As there is no sanction, prosecution withdraws the charge. Accused is discharged.' Sanction having been obtained, a fresh complaint was lodged against the accused for the same offences. The Magistrate ordered that the proceedings be stopped as they could not be taken by reason of the provisions of this section. Held, that as the accused had not been acquitted by a Court of absence of sanction the Court could not take cognizance of that offence. And as the offence under s. 500 is not a bailable offence, the only legal order that the Magistrate could have passed was one of discharge under s. 253.

An accused, was placed upon trial for

Acquittal on trial for criminal breach of trust of a sum between certain dates does not bar a subsequent trial for criminal breach of trust committed on an intermediate date, of a separate sum not included in the amount forming the subject of the first trial. 50 C. 632 (following 12 Bom. L. R. 226)

35 Similarity of offences does not render them identical —

(i) Forgery of several documents — See Note 12 at p. 623. When a person was first tried in respect of three out of six documents alleged to be forged under such circumstances which constituted the forgery of all six documents one and the same transaction, and acquitted in respect of those three documents, held that there was nothing in this section which could prevent his being tried again in respect of the other documents, but that in the circumstances of the case, it was inexpedient to take proceedings in respect of the remaining three documents, 1905 A. W. N. 233 = 2 A. L. J. 673 = 2 Cr. L. J. 790. See 7 W. R. 15.

(ii) Threatening three witnesses at same time — Each person brought a separate case held separate sentences were legal 9 W. R. 30

(iii) Stealing of several articles at the same time — It has happened that a man acquitted of stealing a horse has yet been arraigned and convicted for stealing the saddle though both were done at the same time Hale's Pleas of the Crown cited in 7 W. R. 13. The tendency now is to extend the rule for the same acts and omissions irrespective of the exact terms of the indictment. See 23 A. 313.

(iv) Possession of stolen property — Accused was found to be in possession of property stolen from two different persons on different occasions. He was separately tried and sentenced on each charge, held, that there was nothing in the fact that the goods were stolen at different times, to constitute by itself proof that they were received at different times, or under such circumstances as to show that more than one offence was committed in receiving them. Conviction on the second trial was set aside 15 C. 511; 15 A. 317; 27 C. W. N. 554.

EXCEPTION II—SCOPE OF SUB-SEC (3).

36 The new facts must constitute different offence. — See illustration (9) and 36 A. 4. — It is not enough to defeat the plea of autrefois acquit to show that the second indictment charges circumstances of aggravation not included in the first, or serious consequences of the offence which have occurred since the first indictment unless the new facts or circumstances are such as to indicate a different kind of offence of which there could be no conviction for the first trial. A man who has been acquitted on an indictment for manslaughter cannot be indicted for the same death of murder. Russell on Crimes, pp 1985–87. There is no authority for holding that when a man has been convicted or committing an act constituting an offence, and further evidence subsequently comes to light which shows that his act constituted a graver offence than that of which he was convicted, he may merely on that ground alone be put upon his trial for the graver offence. Clauses 2 3 4 and 5 lay down under what circumstances alone a previous conviction is not a bar to a subsequent trial for the same matter, held therefore, a person convicted under s. 31 of the Rangoon Police Act 1899 for being in possession of an article supposed to be stolen cannot be again tried later for an offence under s. 457, I P C., merely on the ground that the owner of the article is traced and some further evidence is available 8 Bur. L. T. 129, 18 Cr. L. J. 267.

37 The new facts must have happened after or not known to the Court at the first trial. — Where A causes hurt to B, and as a consequence of the injury so inflicted, B dies and A is tried and convicted of the hurt. If death took place before the trial and the fact was known to the Court which convicted A of hurt then A could not again be tried for the homicide under this sub-sec. (3) though he might be under sub-sec. (4). 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135. A summary conviction for common assault may be a bar to an indictment for wounding with intent to murder R v Stanton, (1851) 5 Cox 344, R v Elrington, 1 B. and C. 683, R v Aldrich, 23 Q. B. D. 423. In 1901 the accused was prosecuted by the Bombay Municipality under s. 476 of the City Municipal Act II of 1888 for proceeding to erect certain balconies contrary to the Act. He was acquitted. Subsequently in 1902 the accused was called upon under ss. 308 and 309 of that Act to remove the balconies which had been in existence at the time of the previous prosecution and on the accused's failure to comply with the notice he was again prosecuted, held, that the former acquittal did not preclude the Magistrate from trying the present charge, as the second offence could not have been committed until the notice to remove was served on the accused and this notice to remove was not served on the accused until the year following that in which he was acquitted of the previous charge, 4 Bom. L. R. 575. See also 9 Cr. L. J. 578 (Barma) where an acquittal of the offence of disobedience of an order under s. 92 (2) of the Burma Municipal Act III of 1899 was held no bar to the trial for the disobedience of an order under s. 92 (3). See 3 P. R. 1901 and 36 A. 4, where a man was first tried for hurt and later, the injured person dying, held the previous trial was no bar to a fresh trial for culpable homicide.

EXCEPTION III.—SCOPE OF SUB-SEC. (4).

38. 'Was not competent to try' means 'had no jurisdiction to try.'—It is only when the Court which first tried the accused had no jurisdiction to try the offence with which the accused is subsequently charged, that this sub-sec. (4) prevents, the operation of the general rule enacted in sub-sec. (1). See 24 M. 661 and illustrations (f) and (g). The clause refers to the character and status of the tribunal when it refers to the competency to try the offence, 36 M. 303. Upon a charge of dacoity the Magistrate, having split up the charge, convicted the accused of rioting, using criminal force, and misappropriating the property of a deceased person. On appeal, the Sessions Court reversed the conviction, holding that the offence, if any, was dacoity, but that the facts alleged being incredible, there was no need to order a committal. The complainant thereupon lodged a fresh complaint of dacoity based on the same facts before another Magistrate. Held, that the judgment of the Sessions Court was no bar to further proceedings by virtue of sub-sec. (4), 7 M. 537. So, where an accused person appears to have committed culpable homicide, his conviction by a Magistrate for a minor offence does not prevent his trial for murder, etc., Ratanlal 337. In 5 Bom. L. R. 123 the accused was charged with an offence under s. 304, I P. C., but the trying Magistrate convicted and sentenced him under s. 323 I P. C., being of opinion that the evidence was not sufficient for commitment. The District Magistrate, however, taking a different view, ordered a commitment and it was held, that the order was not bad as the previous conviction under s. 322, I P. C., was no bar to a trial under s. 304 which the Magistrate was not competent to try. This case was followed in 7 P. R. 1912 = 39 P. W. R. 1912; 243 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 762, where the accused were acquitted of offences under ss. 323, 326 and 148, I P. C., and were subsequently tried and convicted under s. 302, I P. C. See 18 Cr. L. J. 643; 43 M. L. J. 490.

39. That offence is triable by jury does not affect competency of Court.—A Sessions Judge with the aid of assessors tried and acquitted the accused of the offence of abetment of murder with dacoity, ss. 396 and 109, I P. C. Subsequently on the same facts the accused was charged with an offence under s. 412 I P. C., and tried by the Sessions Judge and a jury and convicted. The conviction was sought to be sustained under this subsection inasmuch as the Court which tried the accused on the first occasion Sessions Judge aided by assessors, was not competent to try the offence under s. 412 which was triable by a jury, held setting aside the conviction that the words "not competent to try" means "had not jurisdiction to try" But the Court by which he was first tried, i.e., the Court of Sessions was competent as a Court of Session to try the offence under s. 412, I P. C., 24 M. 661. See 7 M. 537.

40. Want of complaint under s. 199 renders Court incompetent.—The accused was tried under ss. 366, 368, 376, I P. C., and acquitted. On complaint by the husband, the accused was tried and convicted on the same facts under s. 498, I P. C., held, that the conviction was not bad by virtue of s. 403 as the earlier Court was incompetent to try the accused under s. 498 in the absence of a complaint by the husband, 17 Bom. L. R. 678 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ga. 91 = 16 Cr. L. J. 657. A intimed to the District Magistrate that he had authorized his brother B to institute a complaint against C for enticing away A's wife (s. 498, I P. C.) and the charge was heard and evidence for both sides recorded, but the Magistrate discovering that B had no authority purported to acquit C. On the husband A instituting a fresh complaint, it was held that the so-called acquittal was no bar to the trial, as the Magistrate's finding amounted to this, that there was no complaint before him of which he could take cognizance, 31 A. 317. See Note 10 at p. 666.

41. Effect of absence of sanction on competency of Court.—(i) Sanction under s. 193 only a condition precedent for institution of proceeding before tribunal, it is not a condition of the competency of the tribunal.—The clause refers to the character and status of the tribunal when it refers to competency to try the offence. See illustrations (f) and (g). Where, therefore a person was acquitted of an offence under s. 211, I P. C., and no charge under s. 182, I P. C., was framed for want of sanction though it could have been jointly tried in the first trial held, that the acquittal was a bar to a trial under s. 182, I P. C., 36 M. 308.

(ii) Contra.—Want of sanction renders Court incompetent.—A complaint was made to a Magistrate of offences under ss. 182 and 500, I P. C. When accused appeared, the Magistrate passed the following order—"As there is no sanction, prosecution withdraws the charge. Accused is discharged." Sanction having been obtained a fresh complaint was lodged against the accused for the same offences. The Magistrate ordered that the proceedings be stopped as they could not be taken by reason of the provisions of this section. Held, that as the accused had not been acquitted by a Court of competent jurisdiction, the order was illegal. As owing to absence of sanction the Court could not take cognizance of the offence under s. 182, it could not acquit him of that offence. And as the offence under s. 500 is not a summons-case, the only legal order that the Magistrate could have passed was one of discharge under s. 253, 22 B. 711, 3 M. 48. An accused was placed upon trial for aiding and abetting the cheating of a Sub-Registrar in respect of a forged document presented for registration and was acquitted the Registrar thereupon gave sanction for his trial for an offence under s 82 (a) of the Registration Act. Held that the former trial was no bar to the first Court was not competent by want of sanction to try the offence with which the accused was subsequently charged, 37 A. 107. So also in 40 B 97 it was held following 22 B 711 that want of sanction under s. 18a rendered the Court incompetent. Where a person has been acquitted of the abetment of the forgery of a document he may after sanction obtained under s 195 be put upon his trial for using the same forged document as genuine, as the first Court was not competent to try the offence subsequently charged for want of sanction. See also 37 A. 283. But it should be noted that under the present Code as amended the necessity of sanction is done away with and a complaint under section 476 is a condition precedent to the institution of a prosecution under s. 195.

41-A — Where the prosecution of the accused for an offence under s. 21 of the Bengal Food Adulteration Act fell through for want of valid sanction and the accused was acquitted under s 245, held that the previous acquittal of the accused did not operate as a bar to his subsequent trial after sanction being obtained in writing of the Municipal Commissioner for such prosecution. Because the previous prosecution was incompetent as there was no sanction and there could have been no trial of the accused within the meaning of s. 403. 30 C. W. N. 382.

SCOPE OF EXPLANATION

42. Purpose of explanation.—SUBRAMANYA AYYAR, J., in his dissenting judgment in 29 M. 126 (F.B.) is of opinion that this explanation does not bar resort to a plea analogous to autrefois acquit (see Note 14 above) in cases where such plea ought to be allowed on grounds of justice, and the words 'is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section' was not merely equivalent to 'in no way bar a fresh prosecution for the same offence'.

43. Dismissal of complaint.—Where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint under s. 203 it is competent for him without any order for further enquiry by a superior tribunal, either to entertain a fresh complaint or to re-hear and act upon the complaint already on record. See 24 C. 284; 33 C. 993; 29 M. 126 (F.B.), 36 A. 53 following 1895 A. W. N. 85 and see Note 27 to s. 203. Where, however the order of the Magistrate dismissing the complaint has been upheld by the Sessions Judge, it is not open to the Magistrate to entertain a fresh complaint. The complainant's remedy is to move the High Court by way of revision 58 P. L. R. 1902 distinguished 11 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 347.

44. Withdrawal having the effect of acquittal.—Where a conviction has been had on one or more of several charges the withdrawal of the remaining charges under s 248 has the effect of an acquittal on such charges unless the conviction be set aside 19 W. R. 55, and see Note 28 for other instances.

45. Stopping of proceedings under s 249.—An order under s. 249 is specifically excluded by the explanation from being an acquittal and fresh proceedings are not barred, 9 P. R. 1913 = 3 P. W. R. 1913 = 13 Cr. L. J. 860. A Magistrate trying an accused person upon charges under ss. 193 and 204 I P C., convicted him under the former section and with regard to the latter observed that the facts appeared to him to constitute an offence under another section and he therefore directed the file to be laid before the District Magistrate with a view to having such offence enquired into. On appeal the conviction under s. 193 I P C. was set aside and substituted by a conviction under s. 204 I P C. Held that the conviction under s. 204 I P C. was a stay of the trial of such charge under s 249 and the subsequent trial was not barred by this section 1895 A. W. N. 8.

46. Discharge and its effect.—(i) An accused person may in an inquiry preliminary to commitment, be discharged by the Magistrate under s. 209 before a charge is framed or under s. 213 after the framing of the charge. In 4 Bom. L. R. 779 at p 785 it was held that an order of improper discharge under s. 209 need not be set aside before an order of committal of the accused person improperly discharged can be made. (ii) In a warrant case an accused person may be discharged under s 253 before a charge is framed and under s. 259 when the complainant is absent and the offence is compoundable. It is now held by all the High Courts that the Magistrate is competent to re-hear a case when the accused is discharged. See 1 C. W. N. 49, 28 C. 211, 28 C. 632 (F.B.) where 4 C. W. N. 28 and 45 are dissented from 29 C. 726 (F.B.) 29 M. 126 (F.B.) 35 A. 53, 1 B. 64 and see Notes 18 and 20 to s 253 and Notes 7 and 8 to s 259. (iii) In a Sessions trial before the High Court the accused may be discharged by the Advocate-General entering a nolle prosequi. See s. 333. An order of discharge on a nolle prosequi is no bar to fresh proceedings 15 C. W. N. 983 = 13 Cr. L. J. 488. (iv) In cases of contempt of Court when the offender submits an apology the Court may discharge him. See s. 486 (1) When a Public Prosecutor withdraws from the prosecution before a charge is framed the accused shall be discharged, s. 494 (1) The word 'discharge' in s. 119 is used in the sense of "permission to depart" its meaning in that section is non-technical as no 'charge' need be drawn up, 33 M. 83. See Notes 19, 29 and also 10 Bar. L. R. 1 = 2 L. B. R. 27, where all the authorities are reviewed. No order under ss. 435 and 437 is necessary, to enable proceedings to be taken afresh after an order of discharge, 8 W. R. 61; 9 Ibid. 13; 14 Ibid. 63; 18 Ibid. 39; 20 Ibid. 46 and 47; 23 Ibid. 31; 1 C. 282; 2 C. 405; 4 C. 16 and 647; 10 C. 268; 1 B. 64; 2 B. 834; 10 Bar. L. R. 1; 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. VIII; 5 N.-W. P. PART VII.

OF APPEAL, REFERENCE AND REVISION.

CHAPTER XXXI.

OF APPEALS.

404. No appeal shall lie from any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided for by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force.

Notes.—Limitation for presentation of appeal.—Appeal under this Code to any Court other than a High Court.—An appeal must be preferred within thirty days from the date of the sentence or order appealed from. The Limitation Act IX of 1908, Sch. I, Art. 154

Appeal to High Court from a sentence of death passed by a Court of Session.—Appeal must be preferred within seven days from the date of the sentence.—Ibid., Art. 150

Appeal to High Court from an order of acquittal.—Appeal must be preferred within six months from the date of the order appealed from.—Ibid., Art. 157

Appeal to High Court in other cases, within sixty days from the date of the sentence, or order appealed from.—Ibid., Art. 155, 2 C. 436.

2. Extension of period of limitation.—If the period of limitation prescribed for any appeal, etc., expires on the day when the Court is closed, the appeal may be preferred on the day that the Court re-opens. Section 49, Act IX of 1908. But any appeal may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefore when the appellant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not referring the appeal within such period.—Ibid., s. 5, formerly s. 5 of Act XV of 1877, 1891 A. W. N. 10.

Sufficient cause.—These words ought to receive a liberal construction so as to advance substantial justice when no negligence, nor inaction, nor want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant. Delay in the filing of an appeal ought not to be excused unless there are special circumstances, e.g., a misleading by the other side, a mistake in the office itself or some sudden accident, 9 Bom. L. R. 693 = 6 Cr. L. J. 221, following 13 M. 269. See 16 Cr. L. J. 300 (F). In the case of a convict in jail, the presentation of the petition of appeal to the officer in charge of the jail, is for the purpose of the Limitation Act, equivalent to presentation to the Court, 9 M. 258; 29 P. R. 1890. In 2 A. 385, SPARKES, J., treated an appeal presented long after the period of limitation, as a petition for revision and decided it on the merits as an appeal. Where one of several accused appealed and was acquitted, held, that his acquittal was a sufficient cause for admitting the appeals of others, 7 P. R. 1871.

3. Mode of computation of the period of limitation.—(i) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any appeal, etc., the day from which that period is to be reckoned shall be excluded. (ii) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the sentence or order ordered appealed from shall be excluded.—S. 12, Act IX of 1908

"The time requisite for obtaining copy, etc."—The words imply that the appellant is not to lose his right of appeal by reason of the neglect of the officials who issue copies, or who are required to give notice when such copies are ready, 12 A. 103. They (the words) do not mean requisite by reason of the carelessness or negligence of the applicant, they mean the time occupied by the officer who has got to provide the copy, in making the copy delivered, but the d has had notice that

Computation of time when appellant is in jail.—The time taken in forwarding an application by a prisoner for a copy of the judgment and in transmitting the same from the Court to the jail must be excluded, 9 M. 258; 5 P. R. 1885; 10 C. 642.

4. Petition of appeal how presented.—See Note 7 to s. 419

5. When appeals require stamps each must be presented separately.—Except where the petition requires a stamp, it is not material whether the appeals of several convicted persons in the same case are made jointly in one petition or separately. Where a stamp is required, the petitions must be separate and separately numbered, and be accompanied by separate copies of judgment or of letters appealed against.—Born H. C. Cr. Cir., p. 42, Weir II, 467. Where certain appellants, undergoing a sentence of imprisonment had presented an appeal accompanied by an unstamped copy of a judgment, held, that other persons sentenced in the same trial, but who were not undergoing imprisonment, in presenting an appeal against the same judgment, were not entitled to take advantage of the unstamped copy of the judgment put in by the appellants who were in jail, but must present along with their appeal, a stamped copy of the judgment appealed against. For remission of Court fees on copies of judgment, etc., see Note 2 to s. 371.

6. No appeal from Magistrate exercising special jurisdiction outside British India.—(1) The District Magistrate of Simla was specially deputed by the Punjab Government to try certain Native Indian Subjects of His Majesty for offences committed in a Native State outside British India. The trial took place and sentences were passed outside British India. Held, the Chief Court had no jurisdiction to hear appeals against the sentences, 14 P. R. 1910 = 20 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 390.

(2) Mourbhanj and Tributary Mahals—No appeal lies from conviction of Superintendent of Tributary Mahals when exercising jurisdiction over offences committed in Mourbhanj a place not within British India. See 9 C. 288; 16 C. 667; 8 C. 983 and 7 C. 523.

7. Jurisdiction of the Appellate Court to dispose of pending appeal is not affected by locality of offence ceasing to be British India.—An offence was committed at a place in British India and on conviction by the Magistrate an appeal was filed to the Sessions Judge. Pending the disposal of the Appeal the place where the offence was committed was constituted an Independent State. The Sessions Judge returned the memorandum of appeal to the appellants for presentation to the proper Court in the Native State on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Held, the Sessions Judge was in error. The offence was committed in British India, the appeal was presented to the proper Court, the appellants were then confined in a jail in British India, and the mere fact that the particular locality has ceased to be British India before the appeal has been determined does not oust the jurisdiction of the Judge, 38 A. 378. See also 34 A. 118.

8. This Chapter does not exhaust all appeals.—See ss. 250 (3) 486, 515, 524, etc. In addition to the matters appealable under this chapter, it should be noted, that an order under ss. 517 or 518 or 519 regarding the disposal of property before a Criminal Court, may be considered by a Court of Appeal, solely with reference to such order, although no appeal might have been presented in the case in which such order was passed, 9 M. 448, for, it may often happen that the question of the propriety of such an order may in no way concern the convicted person, 3 C. 379 = 1 C. L. R. 339. Such an order may be passed when the accused is acquitted or discharged and application should be made to the Court of Appeal, before an application for revision can properly be made to the High Court, 2 A. 276. See also 29 C. 724 overruling 25 C. 630.

9. Appeals under other Acts.—(1) Cattle Trespass Act—A complaint under s. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act is now included in the term "offence," see s. 4, cl. (a), therefore a person, against whom an order is made under s. 22 of Act I of 1871, is "a person convicted on a trial," and an appeal lies from an order of a second class Magistrate awarding compensation for illegal seizure of cattle 29 M. 517. The Rulings in 10 B. 230; 11 M. 359; 15 C. 712 and 19 M. 238 are now superseded. See Weir I, 712. See Note 9 at p. lxvi, Appx vi.

(2) Bengal Excise Act—Section 84 of the Bengal Excise Act V of 1909 which excludes the application of s. 191, Cr. P. C., provides ample indication that this Code is applicable to trials before a Magistrate, subject to specified restrictions 41 C. 694.

(3) Frontier Crimes Regulation III of 1901—See 19 P. R. 1910.

(4) Workman's Breach of Contract Act, 1859—See Notes 25 and 26 at p. lxxxix of the Appendix.

10. Appeals under the Letters Patent.—See Notes under s. 15 of the Letters Patent at p. iv of the Appendix and Note 176 at p. 275, Note 221 at p. 476.

11. Appeals to the Privy Council.—See Notes to s. 41 of the Letters Patent at p. iv of the Appendix as to the conditions and circumstances under which appeals might be allowed to the Privy Council, 32 C. 1. Before granting the certificate that the case is a fit subject for appeal to the Privy Council, the High Court must be satisfied that there is reasonable ground for thinking that grave and substantial injustice may have been done by reason of some departure from the principles of natural justice, 33 B. 221 at p. 239. An order under cl 10 of the Letters Patent dealing with professional misconduct is not a matter of criminal jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 273. In Louis Ea (1914) 11 Cr. L. J. 306.

The Privy Council held, that though the proceedings taken were unobjectionable in form, justice had gravely and injuriously miscarried and the sentence pronounced against the appellant formed such an invasion of liberty and such denial of his just rights as a citizen that their Lordships felt called on to interfere.

12. In revision High Court may exercise all powers of Appellate Court.—In a case in which the law allows no appeal, the High Court as a Court of Revision may exercise under s. 439, the powers of an Appellate Court, when exceptional grounds exist as where the conviction is not in any degree supported by the evidence, 8 B. 197; 14 B. 331; 22 C. 998. The proper course for a person to follow when he finds that his petition of appeal has been rejected on the ground that no appeal lay from the order, is to file a petition of revision, 1898 A. W. N. 147, see also 9 C. 813 = 12 C. L. R. 500 and 2 A. 53.

13. No appeals from High Court to High Court—from single Judge to Division or Full Bench—The powers of a single Judge in a matter which he has jurisdiction to deal with are the powers of the Court and cannot in any way be controlled by a Bench or Full Bench of the Court. As no appeal lies, no revision lies. Both procedures imply subordination which does not exist, 1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 306.

14. Disqualification for hearing appeals.—No Judge or Magistrate shall hear an appeal from any judgment or order passed or made by himself. See s. 556 and Notes thereunder, where a District Magistrate as executive head of the District is actively concerned in the institution of proceedings against a person under Chap. VIII, he is debarred from hearing an appeal under s. 406 without the permission of the Sessions Judge under s. 556, 1 B. L. R. 98 = 8 Cr. L. J. 358; 23 C. 328 referred to. A Magistrate who takes cognizance of a case under s. 190 (1) (c) cannot hear an appeal in the case, 12 C. W. N. 438 = 7 Cr. L. J. 224. He must follow the procedure laid down in s. 192. But mere directing the issue of a summons does not make the Magistrate incompetent to hear the appeal, 36 C. 869. See Note 8 at p. 427.

15. Proceedings of Magistrates not empowered to hear appeals, void.—If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law decides an appeal, his proceedings shall be void, s. 530 (r).

16. Proceeding of Judges not empowered to hear appeals, void.—In Criminal Reference No 130 of 1906 (Allahabad High Court), a Sessions Judge erroneously entertained an appeal from the conviction of a second-class Magistrate and acquitted the appellant. Held, the order of the Sessions Judge disposing of the appeal was ultra vires. See also Ratanlal 17, where it was held that an accused person acquitted and discharged by a Sessions Judge on hearing an appeal which he was not entitled by law to hear, may be re-arrested even after the expiration of the period to which he was originally sentenced and made to undergo the remaining portion of the sentence. But in 4 L. B. R. 49 = 6 Cr. L. J. 287, it was held that an appellate judgment of a Sessions Judge not competent to hear the appeal, is not to be treated as a nullity till it is set aside.

17. Appeal is a continuation of the case and accused cannot be put on oath.—A criminal appeal is a continuation of the criminal case, and except so far as there is a provision to the contrary, the appellant has the privilege of the accused, and cannot be punished for making a false verification or statement 12 M. 451. See Note 3 to s. 423.

405. Any person whose application under section 89 for the delivery of property or the proceeds of the sale thereof has been rejected by any Court, may appeal to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the sentences of the former Court.

Note.—Appeals 'ordinarily lie,' i.e., in the majority of cases, 11 B. 433. See 25 M. 636 (F.B.) and see Notes under Heading XXII at pp 470-473.

406. "Any person who has been ordered under section 118 to give security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour may appeal against such order—

(a) if made by a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court,

(b) if made by any other Magistrate, to the Court of Session

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the Local Official Gazette direct that in any district specified in the notification appeals from such orders made by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate shall lie to the District Magistrate and not to the Court of Session

Provided, further, that nothing in this section shall apply to persons the proceedings against whom are laid before a Sessions Judge in accordance with the provisions of sub-sec. (2) or sub-sec. (3-A) of s 123¹

Notes.—1. See ss. 124 and 125 for powers of District Magistrates in security matters distinct from powers on appeal. And see Note 14 to ss 404 and 556 as to disqualification of District Magistrates to hear appeals.

2 Change.—Considerable change has been effected by the new amendment of this section. Under the old law an appeal was allowed to the District Magistrate against the orders under s. 118 in cases of security for good behaviour passed by Magistrates other than the District or Presidency Magistrates. Under the new Amendment all orders under s. 118 whether to give security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour are made appealable and an appeal ordinarily lies to the Court of Sessions against an order of any Magistrate except the Presidency Magistrate in which latter case the appeal lies to the High Court.

Under the proviso the Local Government is authorized to direct by notification that in any particular district appeals from such orders made by a Magistrate other than a District or a Presidency Magistrate shall lie to the District Magistrate and not to the Court of Sessions

So the following cases viz 27 A. 523 = 11 Bom L. R. 740; 25 C. W. N. 383 have owing to the new changes in the section become obsolete

3. Under s. 406 an Appellate Court is competent to order a re trial. Where the applicants were bound over by a Magistrate to keep the peace and on appeal the Sessions Judge directed that the Magistrate's order be reversed and that proceedings subsequent to the stage of the issue or notice under s. 107 be cancelled and that the Magistrate should proceed from the stage of the issue of the notice held that the order of the Sessions Judge was an incidental order which he was authorized to make 24 A. L. J. 555

Appeal from order refusing to accept or rejecting a surety

 406-A. Any person aggrieved by an order refusing to accept or rejecting a surety under section 122 may appeal against such order —

(a) If made by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court

(b) If made by the District Magistrate to the Court of Session or

(c) If made by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate to the District

Magistrate

407. (1) Any person convicted on a trial held by any Magistrate of the second or third class or any person sentenced under section 349† or in respect of whom an order has been made or a sentence has been passed under section 380 by a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the second class may appeal to the District Magistrate

(2) The District Magistrate may direct that any appeal under this section or any class of such appeals shall be heard by any Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him and empowered by the Local Government to hear such appeals and thereupon such appeal or class of appeals may be presented to such Subordinate Magistrate or if already presented to the District Magistrate may be transferred to such Subordinate Magistrate. The District Magistrate may withdraw from such Magistrate any appeal or class of appeals so presented or transferred

Transfer of appeals to first-class Magistrate.

Appeal from sentence of Magistrate of the second or third class

Referring to the enactment of this section, the Select Committee say—

"We note that there has been considerable criticism on this clause which provides for an appeal against an order refusing to accept a surety. But we think that if no appeal is provided most cases are bound to be taken up in revisions and we would retain the clause. We have made a slight amendment consequential on our proposals regarding s. 122.

We do not agree that all appeals under ss. 406 and 406-A should lie to the Sessions Judge, Sayid Raza Ali dissents from this view."

Notes.—1. S. 349 relates to procedure when a Magistrate cannot pass a sentence sufficiently severe

2. Section as amended.—The words 'may be presented' were substituted for the words 'shall be presented.' The District Magistrate is still competent to hear appeals filed in his Court even when he has taken action under sub-sec. (2).

3. Appeal from second-class Magistrate invested with first-class powers during trial.—Where a trial was held by a Magistrate holding second-class powers, the fact that he was appointed a Magistrate of the first class before the conclusion of the trial was held to make no difference, with reference to the question of appeal, which, therefore, was held to lie to the District Magistrate, 4 L. B. R. 239 = 8 Cr. L. J. 48.

4. Appeal against conviction by Bench of Magistrates.—An appeal lies under this section from a conviction by a Bench of Magistrates invested with second or third-class powers see s. 15 (2) 9 M. 36. But not from a Bench invested with first-class powers, 9 C. 96 = 11 C. L. R. 423.

5. Validity of wholesale delegation by District Magistrate.—Where a District Magistrate directed an Assistant Collector under him to perform "the routine work of the Collector's office, including the Criminal Appellate and Revisional work," and it was contended that the order was invalid being a wholesale delegation of appellate and revisional power not contemplated by sub-sec. (2) of this section held that as regards revisional powers, it was ultra vires, as the section does not refer to work of that kind, but as regards appellate powers the order was valid whether it included all the appeals of the district or the appeals which in the ordinary course of procedure came to the District Magistrate's office, 2 Bom. L. R. 836.

6. District Magistrate has powers to withdraw part-heard appeals.—A District Magistrate has jurisdiction to withdraw a part heard appeal to his own file from the file of a Sub-Divisional Magistrate. When such Sub-Divisional Magistrate had issued summons for the examination of certain witnesses as Court witnesses, it is not incumbent on the District Magistrate on the withdrawal of the case to his own file to examine those witnesses, 31 M. 377, where 23 M. 314 and L. R. 29 L. A. 196 are referred to. The Court to which an appeal is transferred for disposal, and on which the responsibility for correct disposal rests, is not bound by any opinion as to the necessity for further evidence formed by the Court from which the appeal was transferred.

7. Order as to disposal of property under s. 520 can be passed in an appeal under s. 407.—A Sub-Divisional Magistrate hearing an appeal under s. 407 (2) has power to pass orders under s. 520 regarding the disposal of property, 48 M. 182.

 408. Any person convicted on a trial held by an Assistant Sessions Judge, a District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class or any person sentenced under section 349† "or in respect of whom an order has been made or a sentence has been passed under s. 380" by a Magistrate of the first class may appeal to the Court of Sessions

(a) † * * * *

(b) When in any case an Assistant Sessions Judge or a Magistrate specially empowered under section 30 passes any sentence of imprisonment for term exceeding four years, or any sentence of transportation, the appeal "of all or any of the accused convicted at such trial" shall lie to the High Court,

* As to appeals from sentences of District Magistrates Upper Burma in cases other than those affecting European British subject see the Upper Criminal Burma Justice Regulation of 1892, Sch. an. X and XVII as to similar appeals in British Baluchistan, see s. 13 of the British Baluchistan Criminal Justice Regulation of 1896. As to appeals from decisions under the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation of 1891 see Chapter III of that Regulation.

† The words in inverted commas were inserted by Act XVIII of 1923.

‡ Cl. (a) of the proviso was omitted by Act XII of 1923.

(c) When any person is convicted by a Magistrate of an offence under section 124-A of the Indian Penal Code, the appeal * "of all or any of the accused convicted of such trial" shall lie to the High Court

Notes.—1. Scope of section.—Section 408 lays down the general rule and s. 413 is an exception. Section 415 is explanatory and apparently was entered in the Code to remove all possible doubts which might arise in the cases mentioned therein, 33 A. 510.

Appeal to Sessions Court when accused has pleaded guilty.—The mere fact that the appellant pleaded guilty before the trying Magistrate is not by itself a sufficient reason for a Sessions Judge to reject his appeal. An appeal to the Court of Session lies on fact as well as on law, and it should be disposed of in a legal manner, Ratanlal 954 and 877. These decisions were under the old Code, but now see s. 412 which limits the right of appeal even to Sessions Court.

2. Joint trials.—How far s. 413 limits appeals.—When more persons than one are convicted at one trial by a Magistrate of the first class and an appealable sentence is passed on anyone of them, s. 413 does not take away from the other convicts, their right of appeals conferred by s. 408, even though the sentence passed on anyone of such persons may not be an appealable one under s. 413 if they had been tried singly, 4 L. B. R. 334 = 9 Cr. L. J. 356 (F.B.), 15 O. C. 386 = 14 Cr. L. J. 170; 30 P. R. 1915 = 17 Cr. L. J. 27. See also 14 A. L. J. 518. Contra MADRAS and BOMBAY, see Note 1 to sec. 413

3. Jurisdiction of Sessions Court how determined, where district has two Sessions divisions and Magistrate has jurisdiction throughout the district.—Under s. 435, the Sessions Judge may call for and examine the records of any inferior Criminal Court "situate" within the local limits of his jurisdiction. The word "situate" means fixed or located, and when applied to a Court, it must be taken to refer to the place where the Court ordinarily sits. In the absence of any indication to the contrary in the Code, the principle thus laid down in regard to the analogous powers of revision under s. 435 should be followed in the case of appeals also. Thus, where a Magistrate against whose decision appeals are preferred, has his head-quarters, within the limits of one or two Sessions Divisions in the district (Malabar) though he is authorized to try offences throughout the whole district, including cases arising within the other Sessions Division, appeals lie to the Sessions Court within whose jurisdiction the head-quarters of the Magistrate are situate, irrespective of the place where it was committed, 30 M. 136. This case is distinguished in 23 M. L. J. 670. See next Note.

4. Appeal from Magistrate in Agency Tracts does not lie to Sessions Judge but to Agent.—The Magistrates of the Agency District are not as such in any way subordinate to the Sessions Court of a Non-Agency Sessions Division, nor does the fact that the same person is a first class Sub-Divisional Magistrate in both districts, make him subordinate to the Sessions Court in regard to the Magistrate's jurisdiction in the Agency District. See Note 5 at p. 29. An offence was committed within the limits of the Ganjam Agency Tracts. The case was transferred by the Agent to the first-class Magistrate, Gumsur, who had local criminal jurisdiction over certain Agency as well as certain Non-Agency Tracts. The Sessions Judge of the Non-Agency Sessions Division set aside the conviction. Held, that the proper form of appeal was the Agent and not the Sessions Judge as the Magistrate tried the cause as an Agency Magistrate, 23 M. L. J. 670 = 12 M. L. T. 601 = 13 Cr. L. J. 880 where 30 M. 136 distinguished.

5. "Convicted on a trial"—Conviction without a sentence under s. 562.—This would include the case of a person released under s. 562, 24 P. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 1098; followed in 10 Bar. L. R. 321 = 1 Cr. L. J. 543 and 5 L. B. R. 129 = 11 Cr. L. J. 152. Just as a sentence passed by a first-class Magistrate under s. 349 is appealable to the Sessions Court, so a sentence by a first class Magistrate under s. 380 must, also be held appealable to the Sessions Court, 17 Bom. L. R. 895 = 3 Bom. Cr. Ca. 107 = 16 Cr. L. J. 733. See also 29 C. W. N. 151.

6. Order under s. 123 is no sentence.—No appeal lies to the High Court from an order passed by a District Magistrate under s. 123 and on reference by the Magistrate confirmed by the Sessions Judge, as such an order is not a sentence, 9 C. 878, 15 P. R. 1900. See Notes 135—137 at p. 214

7. Proviso (b)—appeal lies to High Court in case where anyone of the accused jointly tried is sentenced to imprisonment for more than four years, etc.—Under proviso (b) when any sentence of over four years' imprisonment is passed by an Assistant Sessions Judge in any case the appeal lies to the High Court. The language of the proviso requires that an appeal by any person convicted in a case in which an Assistant

* The words in inverted commas were inserted by Act XVIII of 1923

Sessions Judge has passed a sentence of imprisonment of four years or upwards, on anyone of the accused, whether he be appellant or any other person tried with him in the same case, shall be only to the High Court and the Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the persons sentenced to less than four years in the same case, 17 M. L. J. 245 = 5 Cr. L. J. 495; 13 A. L. J. 272 = 16 Cr. L. J. 333. The appeal lies to the High Court even though the accused against whom the sentence of imprisonment exceeding four years was passed has not appealed, 37 A. 471. Similarly, when a Sessions Judge has confirmed the sentences passed by an Assistant Sessions Judge on some of the " " " preferred by anyone of the prisoners in the Court irrespective of the length of the sentence " " "

8 Sentences in a case must be aggregated for purposes of appeal.—See s. 35 (3) at p. 59 12 P. R. 1900; 161 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 236 Where the accused was convicted by a District Magistrate under s. 124 A, I P. C., and sentenced to two years rigorous imprisonment, and also under s. 153-A, and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment, held having regard to s. 35 (3) that the aggregate sentence of three years should be considered as one sentence for the purposes of appeal and taking into consideration proviso (c) it is a reasonable inference that the appeal against the single sentence of three years under both the sections should lie to the High Court 35 C. 214. In this case the accused filed one appeal in the High Court against the conviction under s. 124 A, and one appeal against the sentence under s. 153 A to the Sessions Court, but the latter appeal was called up by the High Court and the two were heard together See also 5 P. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 299 See now cl (3) to section 35

9 Can concurrent sentence be added together for purposes of appeal?—See Note 36 When the sentences are to run concurrently each being four years or less the appeal lies to Sessions Judge, 17 Cr. L. J. 265.

10. Appeal lies to Sessions Court from District Magistrate vested with powers under s. 30 acting under s. 349 —Appeal lies to Sessions Court even where a District Magistrate vested with powers under s. 30 sentences accused to five years imprisonment in a case sent up under s. 349 The sentence is ultra vires and having regard to the last clause of s. 349 appeals from conviction in all cases sent up for enhanced sentence under s. 349, will lie to the Court of Session 4 L. B. R. 53 = 6 Cr. L. J. 299. See Note 13 to s. 349 In 5 P. R. 1916, it was held that no appeal lies against the sentence of a first-class Magistrate exercising enhanced powers under s. 30 to the Court of the Session but such an appeal lies to the High Court, and see 2 R. 386.

11. An order awarding compensation and repayment of fines, etc. under s. 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, is appealable under s. 408 of the Code. The compensation so awarded is not a fine and consequently the restrictive provisions of s. 413 of the Code do not apply 46 B. 58

Appeals to Court of Sessions how heard. 409. An appeal to the Court of Session or Sessions Judge shall be heard by the Sessions Judge or by an Additional Sessions Judge

*" Provided that an Additional Sessions Judge shall hear only such appeals as the Local Government may, by general or special order, direct or as the Sessions Judge of the division may make over to him "

Notes—1 Competency of Assistant Sessions Judges to hear appeals—The word 'case' in s. 193 (2) does not include appeals therefore that clause does not confer on the Sessions Judge any power to transfer appeals to the Assistant Sessions Judge 37 A. 286 where 9 B. 164 and 2 A. L. J. 876 are referred to and 7 A. 661 not followed.

2 Competency of Additional Sessions Judge to hear application under s. 195 (6).—Under s. 409 read with s. 9 an Additional Sessions Judge is competent to hear and determine applications under s. 195 (6) transferred to him by the Sessions Judge A Magistrate is subordinate to the Additional Sessions Judge under s. 195 (7) 14 Cr. L. J. 193 (C) See Note 182 at p. 536

Appeal from sentence of Court of Session 410. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Sessions Judge, or an Additional Sessions Judge may appeal to the High Court

Notes.—1. May appeal—This section gives right of appeal, as distinguished from an indulgence to be heard or not to be heard, 1891 A. W. N. 48.

2 This section does not give right of appeal from appellate judgment merely because fresh evidence is taken on appeal—See Note 13 to s 428

3. High Court to which appeals by European British subjects lie.—Where an accused is dealt with as an European British subject and convicted by the Sessions Court the appeal lies to the High Court as defined in s 4(1) vide p 20 The High Court in reference to proceedings against European British subjects in Oudh is the High Court of Judicature for the North Western Provinces and not the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh 13 O G. 335 = 11 Cr L J. 723.

4 Appeal to High Court in a case of insult under s. 228, I P. C.—See s. 48d. An appeal lies to the High Court against an order of the Sessions Court imposing a fine upon a witness under s. 228, I P. C., for intentional insult offered to the Sessions Judge, 4 M H. G. R. 148

5 Special exclusion of appeal to High Court.—In 27 C 654, it was held that having regard to s. 1 of Act XXII of 1860 Chittagong Act no appeal lies to the Calcutta High Court from a conviction for any offence committed within the Chittagong Hill Tract

411. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate may appeal to the High Court, if the Magistrate has sentenced him to imprisonment for a term exceeding six months or to fine exceeding two hundred rupees

Appeal from sentence of Presidency Magistrate
Act IV of 1877 s 167

Notes — 1 Principle of combination does not apply to sentences of Presidency Magistrate.—No appeal lies from a sentence of six months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 200 or a further period of three months simple imprisonment passed by a Presidency Magistrate, that is to say that a combination of punishment does not give a right of appeal under this section though it does so under ss. 413 and 414 (see s 415), 2 M 30, 16 C 789, 20 B 145, 10 Cr L J 235 (B). The words 'to imprisonment etc two hundred rupees' are confined in their meaning to substantive sentences and cannot be extended to include an award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine the operation of which is contingent on the fine not being paid The ruling in 8 C 575 = 8 C. L. R. 250 to the effect that where for two offences the accused were sentenced to three and six months imprisonment respectively, no appeal lay under this section is no longer law having regard to the provisions of s 30(3) relating to aggregate sentences

2. Concurrent sentences cannot be added together for purposes of appeal.—See Note 30

3 No appeal from order of discharge—There is no appeal against an order of discharge made by a Presidency Magistrate but the High Court has under s 423 embodied in s 439 power to set aside the order of discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate 36 C 994 See Notes under ss. 423 and 437

412. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, where an accused person has pleaded guilty and has been convicted by a Court of Session or any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class on such plea, there shall be no appeal except as to the extent or legality of the sentence

No appeal in certain cases when accused pleads guilty

Where a person has been convicted under (s 167 Act IV of 1877) on the charge that he is a previous convict though the Magistrate has sentenced him to imprisonment for a term exceeding six months or to a fine exceeding Rs. 200 5 B 85 See Note 2 to s 408 Similarly where a charge has been framed against an accused person under s. 221 (7) Cr P. C., and such person has pleaded guilty to the charge that he is a previous convict the Appellate Court under s 412 is precluded from opening the question whether the accused is a previous convict 4 N L R. 163 = 9 Cr L J 56

2 Plea of guilty is a waiver of the right to appeal.—The plea of guilty is regarded as a waiver of the right to appeal except as to the severity or legality of the sentence 5 B 85, 20 P W R 1917 (Cr) Hence where an appeal is allowed in a case in which the accused person has pleaded guilty the Court should satisfy itself that such plea was properly made after the nature of the offence was explained and understood by the person under trial so as to amount to a confession of guilt and this is conclusive evidence against him 22 B. 769

3. Scope of the section.—The inclusion in this section of the Magistrate of the first class practically overrules 22 B. 759 and Ratanlal 954. See Note 1 to s. 422.

4. Conviction based on admissions obtained improperly illegal.—See 13 A. 343; 2 C. W. N. 702; 27 M. 238 and Notes 12—15 to s. 342.

413. Notwithstanding anything heretofore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person, in cases in which a Court of Session* passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only or † "in which a Court of Session or District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence" of fine not exceeding fifty rupees only ‡

Explanation—There is no appeal from a sentence of imprisonment passed by such Court or Magistrate in default of payment of fine when no substantive sentence of imprisonment has also been passed

Note.—Under the new amended section right of appeal is given in all cases of sentences of imprisonment passed by a District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class even though the period of imprisonment be one month or less. Under the old law in such cases an appeal lay only when the sentence passed exceeded one month. It should be noted that a sentence of whipping is appealable under the new amended section.

"We consider that outside the Presidency towns in the case of all persons, both European and Indian, there should be an appeal against any sentence of imprisonment passed by a Magistrate. This involves a substantial modification in the general law of the kind and will, to certain extent, increase the work of the Sessions Court. Nevertheless we are of opinion on general grounds that apart from the particular case of European British subject, that an appeal should lie against any sentence. It is to be noted that short sentences of imprisonment should where possible be avoided and the number of sentences of one month and under passed by District Magistrates and first-class Magistrates should not as far as we can judge, be very large. In the case of a sentence passed in a trial by a Court of Session we would allow no appeal in respect of a sentence of one month or under" Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee

1. Is right of appeal in a 'case' in which two or more are convicted, regulated by sentence passed on each or anyone of the sentences?—Where several prisoners were tried together, and some of them were sentenced to a fine of Rs. 50 only while others were more severely punished, held, that the existence of the latter fact does not give jurisdiction to an Appellate Court to take cognizance of appeal as regards the sentence of fine of Rs. 50, 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 35; 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 24; 7 M. H. C. R. App. V; 9 M. L. T. 322 = 12 Cr. L. J. 63; 39 A. 293; 10 S. L. R. 156; 16 M. L. T. 33 = 15 Cr. L. J. 371 where it was held, that 17 M. L. J. 248 = 5 Cr. L. J. 496 which was decided on the interpretation of s. 408 (b) throws no light on the construction of s. 413. Contra—In 4 L. B. R. 354 = 9 Cr. L. J. 356 (F.B.) the above ruling was dissented from and it was held that the word "case" in this section includes a trial at which two or more persons are convicted, and the grammatical meaning of the section is that there shall be no appeal in a case in which no sentence exceeding any of those described in the section is passed on any of the persons convicted and therefore where more persons are convicted at one trial, and an appealable sentence is passed on anyone of them this section does not take away from the others convicted, their right of appeal under s. 408. This case was followed in 15 O. C. 386 = 14 Cr. L. J. 170 and in 30 P. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 27. S. 143 applies only to cases in which the only sentence passed is imprisonment of one month or less or fine of Rs. 50 or less or whipping. In 14 A. L. J. 818 = 38 A. 395 and 28 P. W. R. 1916, it was held that each one convicted in a trial in which an appealable sentence is passed is entitled to appeal even if the sentence against him is not appealable. But in 40 M. 591 it is held that s. 413 of the Code prohibits an appeal by a person against whom a non-appealable sentence has been passed even though appealable sentences have been passed against others jointly tried with him. It was further held that though for convenience a joint trial of several accused persons under certain circumstances might be allowed, on conviction each accused must be deemed to have been convicted in a separate case of his own for the purposes of s. 413 of the Code. 38 A. 395 = 14 A. L. J. 518 not followed. It should be noted that in 15 A. L. J. 136 the ruling in 14 A. L. J. 518 is dissented from and 40 M. 591 is followed. But the doubt and conflict is set at rest now by the addition of the new section 415-A. And the Legislature does not seem to follow, 40 M. 591. S. 415-A adopts the view expressed in 38 A. 395.

* The words "or the District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class" were omitted by Act XII of 1923

† Words in inverted commas were inserted by ibid

‡ The words "or of whipping only" were omitted by ibid

2 Order to pay costs of Court-fees is not an order of fine.—An order under s. 31 of the Court-fees Act to pay to the complainant the cost of the Court fees is no part of the sentence so as to make it a sentence of fine within the terms of this section, therefore an order sentencing the accused to 14 days' imprisonment and to pay the costs of Court fees is not appealable, 20 C. 837; Weir 1, 724 = 15 M. 423; 31 M. 547.

3. Compensation awarded under s. 22, Cattle Trespass Act, is not fine.—An order awarding compensation and repayment of fine, etc., under s. 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act 1871, is appealable under s. 408 of the Code. The compensation so awarded is not a fine and consequently the restrictive provisions of s. 413 of the Code do not apply, 48 B. 58.

4 Aggregation of separate sentences in one trial.—See Note 9 to s. 408 and s. 35 (3). Where a person is charged with two separate sentences in one trial, the amount of the whole punishment must be regarded as one sentence for the purpose of determining whether an appeal lies, 3 C. L. R. 511; 1 B. 223.

Right of appeal is not taken away merely because Magistrate makes addition to sentence to make it appealable.—A Magistrate passed a non appealable sentence at first and shortly afterwards at the request of the accused added to the sentence passed so as to make it appealable, on appeal the Sessions Judge struck out the added sentence which being done, he declined to go into the merits of the case on the ground that the original sentence passed was not open to appeal, held that from this section it is clear, that where a Magistrate passed a sentence exceeding one month, an appeal lies whether that sentence was passed legally or illegally. The Sessions Judge being once seized of the appeal, the whole appeal becomes open to his Court and the Sessions Judge is bound to hear the appeal on the merits also, 35 B. 418; 13 Bom. L. R. 503 = 12 Cr. L. J. 402. Cf. Note 1 to s. 422.

6. Further restriction on appeals in Upper Burma.—In Upper Burma except the Shan States, the Upper Burma Criminal Justice Regulation V of 1892, Sch. XI, provides that an appeal shall not lie in any case in which a District Magistrate or Court of Session passes a sentence for a term not exceeding six months or of fine not exceeding Rs. 500 or of whipping or of all or any of these punishments combined. But this does not affect the right of European British subjects under the Code. See Sch. XVII.

414. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a

No appeal from convicted person in any case tried summarily in which a Magistrate empowered to act under section 260 passes a sentence* of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees only.†

Notes—1. Under the new amended section even in the case of summary convictions all sentences of imprisonment or of whipping are now made appealable. Under the old law only European British subjects enjoyed this privilege of appeal.

2 An appeal lies over an order under 562.—An appeal will lie to the Sessions Judge from an order of a Magistrate under s. 562 of the Code passed in summary trial, 46 A. 823.

415. An appeal may be brought against any sentence referred to Proviso to sections in sections 413 or 414 by which any two or more of the punishments therein mentioned are combined, but no sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal, shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace.

Explanation.—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence by which two or more punishments are combined within the meaning of this section.

Notes—1. Section does not restrict power of appeal when security for good behaviour is ordered under Rangoon Police Act.—Where two persons were jointly tried at a summary trial under s. 30 of the Rangoon Police Act, one was further ordered for good behaviour under s. 31 A, since (1) s. 415 has no reference to security for good behaviour (1) there is no corresponding provision in the Rangoon Police Act restricting the right of appeal, 4 L. B. R. 359 = 9 Cr. L. J. 368.

* The words "of imprisonment not exceeding three months only" were omitted by Act XII of 1923.

† The words "or of whipping only" were omitted by s. 12.

2 That accused was not sent to jail does not take away right of appeal—The accused was sentenced to one day's rigorous imprisonment and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 50 by a Magistrate. The Sessions Judge on appeal held that as the accused were in fact neither sent to jail nor actually imprisoned there was no confinement as contemplated by s 415. Held the Judge was wrong and an appeal by 33 A 510

415-A. Notwithstanding anything contained in this Chapter when more persons than one are convicted in one trial, and an appealable judgment or order has been passed in respect of any of such persons all or any of the persons convicted at such trial shall have a right of appeal

Note—It has been pointed out that even with the amendment proposed there will be still anomalies in that the cases of persons who will have a right to appeal under s 415 and who do not appeal will not be covered. We think, however, that the Legislature has gone as far as it can in giving a right of appeal in the cases referred to. And if injustice results the powers of remission can always be exercised under s 401. Report Set Com 1922.

By the addition of this section the conflict in law is once for all set at rest. The Legislature does not follow the ruling in 40 M 591. The ruling in 38 A 395 is adopted by the present section. See Note 1 to s 413 (supra)

416. (Omitted by Act XII of 1923)

417. The Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original or appellate order of acquittal passed by any Court other than a High Court

Notes.—See s. 423 (1) (a) for powers of Appellate Court in acquittals and s 427 for powers of arrest pending appeal.

1 Limitation—Appeal must be preferred within six months see Note 1 to s 404. But it is highly desirable the appeal should be preferred as expeditiously as possible 5 A 253 at p 255 and 2 C 438 (F B). Section 5 of the Limitation Act however allows the High Court to admit for sufficient cause shown an appeal against an acquittal after the prescribed period of limitation. But where there has been unexplained delay in taking the necessary steps to present the appeal the discretion allowed by that section will not be exercised. Weir I, 791, II, 462. See Note 2 to s 404.

2 What amounts to "an order of acquittal"—The acquittal need not be an absolute acquittal. On a trial by a jury of a person on a charge of murder the jury found the accused not guilty of the offence of murder but convicted him under s. 304 f i C. The Sessions Judge declined to submit the case to the High Court although he disagreed with the verdict. Against this decision Government appealed. Held that the appeal was duly made and that the judgment passed by the Court of Sessions following the verdict of a jury acquitting the prisoner of murder is a judgment of acquittal within the meaning of this section 2 C 273. The words an order of acquittal include also all judgments of an Appellate Court by which a conviction is set aside 24 W R 31.

3. Right to appeal restricted to Local Government.—The High Court has no authority to entertain an appeal against an acquittal except upon an appeal by Local Government 19 W R 35, 6 C L R. 245, 14 M 363, 1 A 139. This is the construction most favourable to liberty of the subject and it is not likely that the power should have been given to reverse an acquittal without a right on the part of the accused to be heard by the High Court 3 R 156, but see 2 A 443.

4 Only Public Prosecutor may present appeal under this section—See s. 4 (f) for definition of Public Prosecutor and s 492 for his appointment. A private complainant cannot seek to set aside the acquittal involved and an appeal is sought to be preferred instructed and full compliance with its provision is directed to present an appeal does not involve his appointment as Public Prosecutor. An appeal presented by the Legal Remembrancer of Bengal at the instance of the Government of Behar and Orissa was held not properly presented 41 C 425. Contra 46 C 544.

5 No Court except High Court can entertain appeal against acquittal—A District Magistrate entertained an appeal from an order of acquittal by a Subordinate Magistrate under s. 247 and reversed it and directed a re-hearing on the ground that the complainant and his vakil had appeared at the Court shortly after the case has been dismissed by the Subordinate Magistrate. Held, that the order of the District Magistrate was illegal, as cl. (1) (a) of this section applies only to a High Court, 7 M. 213 24 C. 523. The High Court has the same power under cl. 28 of the Letters Patent of 1865, 26 C. 745. A difference of opinion was expressed in 27 C. 128 as to the authority under which such powers are exercised by the High Court.

Neither Sessions Judge nor District Magistrate can set aside acquittal and direct further inquiry.—A Sessions Judge has no power to order further inquiry under s. 423(1)(a), when the accused is acquitted by a Magistrate. Such power can only be exercised by the High Court in revision under s. 439, 20 C. 533 followed in 23 M. 225. A Sessions Judge has no such power even if the case be, according to his judgment, exclusively triable by the Sessions Court, 2 C. W. N. 256. See contra 24 M. 135 (F.B.), nor has a District Magistrate, 7 M. 213. See Note 17 to s. 437.

7. Restrictions on right of appeal.—(i) No appeal on questions of fact in jury trials.—See ss. 418 and 423(2). No appeal at the instance of the Local Government lies from an order of acquittal in a case which has been tried by a jury when the questions involved are purely questions of fact, 10 C. 1029; for under this Code the Local Government have the same right of appeal against an acquittal, as a person convicted has of appealing against his conviction and sentence, and there is no distinction between the mode of procedure and the principles upon which both classes of appeals are to be decided, 17 C. 435. See 9 A. 420; 11 C. L. R. 23; 23 C. 347 and Notes to s. 423.

(ii) No appeal because additional evidence has been discovered after acquittal.—The accused was tried under s. 304, I P. C. He was acquitted of that charge, but convicted under s. 304, I P. C. The Local Government appealed against the acquittal, the main ground of appeal being one that went entirely beyond the record. It was to the effect that the evidence of the Civil Surgeon one of the witnesses, was incorrect as to facts and affidavits were filed in support of this ground. Held, that the affidavits could not be accepted for the reason that, although under the provisions of s. 428, an Appellate Court is competent to admit additional evidence, yet the necessity for taking such additional evidence must be apparent from something on the record and cannot be derived from external information, and in an appeal from an acquittal, the fact that fresh evidence against the accused has been discovered subsequent to the acquittal, is not a sufficient reason for setting aside the acquittal or ordering a new trial 3 L. B. R. 115, where U. B. R. (1902-03), p. 9 is referred to. In 33 M. 1028, MILLER, J., doubted whether the High Court can in revision or appeal set aside an acquittal because fresh evidence is available which would not be produced at the trial or because the complainant shows sufficient reasons for his absence. See Note 2 to s. 428.

(iii) Refusal to add new charges is no ground for appeal.—It is not open to the Government under this section to appeal to the High Court on an interlocutory order, e.g., on the ground of the Sessions Judge's refusal to add new charges, 16 B. 414.

(iv) No appeal where case is withdrawn by Public Prosecutor under s. 494.—There is no appeal against an acquittal or a withdrawal by the Public Prosecutor in the Sessions Court acting under s. 494, 18 M. L. J., (Sb. N.) 57.

(v) Appeal ought not to be preferred to obtain abstract opinions.—In 14 P. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 65 and 26 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 523 it was said that the object of s. 417 is not to obtain the opinion of the High Court on abstract points which do not arise in the case. See also 10 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 354 (F.B.).

8. Principles which should guide Local Government in directing appeals from orders of acquittal.—The Local Government will not direct an appeal (1) where the case is trifling in itself and the acquittal involves no erroneous principle of law, the correction of which is of public importance, (2) where, however, serious or otherwise important the case, the legal guilt of the accused is fairly questionable or the evidence admits of any reasonable doubt, and the Court has considered and weighed it with impartiality, intelligence and care, (3) merely on account of the production of the fresh evidence after the acquittal, (4) when there is no distinct probability that appeal will result in an order or re trial at the least, Pun. Ref. and Ord., p. 377, Pun. Cir., Chapter LXXVIII (A). Appeal by Government should be made only in cases of some importance, 19 P. R. 1933; 10 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 354 (F.B.), 22 C. 164, or where there has been a miscarriage of justice of a very grave nature 25 M. 1, 10 P. R. 1897, 4 A. 143, 9 A. 528 (F.B.).

Court's power to convict on appreciation of evidence.—The Code makes no distinction between an appeal from an acquittal and an appeal from a conviction. In an appeal from an acquittal if the Court thinks the Lower Court has taken an erroneous view of the evidence it has no jurisdiction to refuse to convict, 26 Bom. L. R. 113.

The discretion to appeal is not subject to control of any Court—The power of appeal is one that should be sparingly exercised by Government. But the discretion to exercise that right of appeal appertains to Government and is not subject to the control of the Court, 9 B. L. R. 17 = 16 Cr. L. J. 604. The Legislature has allowed by this section an appeal by the Local Government in the widest terms and without any limitation whatever, 2 C. 273, per SPENCER, J., in 33 M. 1025. It has to be noted that 2 C. 273 was decided under the Code of 1872.

9. Procedure and principles guiding the High Court in deciding appeals against acquittals.—See Notes under Headings V and XI to s. 423

10. High Court does not ordinarily interfere with acquittals in exercise of the powers of revision.—See Notes under Heading VIII to s. 439

11. Complainant cannot move High Court under s. 15; Charter Act—The only course to be pursued where it is sought to set aside the order of discharge made by a Presidency Magistrate is that laid down in s. 168, Act IV of 1877, and as by that section there is no appeal allowed to a complainant, who is a private individual, it is not open to him by invoking the aid of the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Act to obtain under the Court's extraordinary powers that which he might obtain had he a right of appeal, 7 C. 447, but now see 36 C. 994. See 3 C. 573; 1 A. 139, as to when the High Court is likely to interfere, if at all under s. 439, at the instance of a private complainant, 6 A. 434; 188 P. R. 1833.

12. On admission of appeal Appellate Court may order arrest of accused.—See s. 427 The admission of an appeal under this section has the effect of revising the proceedings against an accused person who has been acquitted, and the Appellate Court can order the arrest of such person, pending the appeal, 2 A. 340 (F.B.), 1 C. 231. Where the accused so arrested is convicted, the sentence will run, not from the date of arrest, but only from the actual date of the commitment of the accused to jail 6 C. L. R. 349

Government must apply for arrest of accused—In capital cases, where the Local Government appeals under this section, from an order of acquittal, it is, generally speaking, undesirable that the prisoner's fate should be discussed while he remains at large, and the Government should, in such cases, apply for the arrest of the accused under s. 427 Per EDGE, C.J., 9 A. 523. See 1 C. 231, 2 A. 340 and 386.

13. Procedure when Magistrate in the United Provinces opines that appeal should be filed.—When ever the Magistrate of the District is of opinion that an appeal should be filed from an order of acquittal, he will prepare a brief narrative of the facts of the case and a statement of the reasons why he considers an appeal advisable, and will forward them with the original record to the Commissioner. That officer will forward the case to Government (with whom the ultimate decision rests) whatever may be his opinion as to its worth. Magistrates are held responsible for addressing Government on good and sufficient grounds only, and should be careful to refrain from urging an appeal solely because the judgment which it is sought to set aside happens not to be in harmony with that of the Lower Court.—Reg. and Rul., N.W.P. s 10 para. 33, p 223

14. In exceptional cases Government to be allowed access to original documents.—When Government desires to make an appeal under s. 417, it is ordinarily sufficient that the Public Prosecutor or other officer appointed by Government should have an opportunity of taking copies of the record. But in exceptional cases, in which Government may consider it essential to see any original documents, such documents may be given into the possession of the officer appointed by Government to receive them under such precautions for securing their safe keeping and return as the Court may deem necessary.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Gr., p 64

15. Procedure when Police desire to appeal against acquittals.—If it is considered advisable to appeal against an order of acquittal in a case where a Police-officer prosecutes in his capacity of general prosecutor on behalf of or at the instance of his own department, the proposal to appeal should be submitted to Government through the Inspector General of Police or his Deputy, in other cases, through the head of the department concerned.—Pun. Rul. and Ord., Chapter XXIV, p 377 When Superintendents of Police wish for an appeal on behalf of Government against judgment of acquittal, they should report on the subject, without loss of time, to the District or Sub-Divisional Magistrate after judgment is passed.—Bom. Pol. Mun., p 88.

Appeal on what matters admissible.

*418. (1) An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in which case the appeal shall lie on a matter of law only.

*“(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-sec. (1) or in s. 423, sub-sec. (2), when, in the case of a trial by jury, any person is sentenced to death, any other person convicted in the same trial with the person so sentenced may appeal on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law.”

Explanation.—The alleged severity of a sentence shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a matter of law

Note.—Sub-sec. (2) is newly added to remove an anomaly: “this clause provides that when in the case of trial by jury one person is sentenced to death and another to a lower punishment, the second accused may appeal on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law. This is intended to remove the anomaly under the existing law that a High Court acting under s. 374 could consider the facts of the case as regards the former accused, but on an appeal of the second accused could only intervene on a point of law” (Statement of Objects and Reasons)

Notes.—1. Where case triable with assessors is tried by jury, appeal lies on matters of law only.—The word “where the trial was by jury” mean where the trial in fact was by jury and not where the trial should have been, as a matter of law, by jury. Where the accused is tried and convicted by a jury for an offence which is triable by the Judge with the aid of assessors, it was held by the Full Bench that no appeal lay on a matter of fact, 25 B. 680 (where 24 W. R. 30, 3 C. L. R. 405; 4 C. L. R. 405; 25 C. 555; Ratanlal 600 and 961; 23 B. 696 are referred to). In the rulings reported in 26 M. 243 and footnote thereto, the accused was tried by a jury for an offence under s. 397, 1 P. C. (jury case), but the jury returning a verdict of not guilty on that charge, found him guilty of the minor offence under s. 325, 1 P. C. (assessor case). Held per BENSON, J., that the conviction was not by a jury, but the Judge ought to have treated the finding of the jury as the opinion of the assessors, and therefore following 3 C. 785, an appeal lay on the facts. PER BHANUJAN AIN SAGAR, J., “the trial was in fact by a jury and that under s. 238 (1), the jury had authority to find as an incident to the trial of an offence triable by jury, that certain facts only are proved in the trial which constitute a minor offence and return a verdict guilty of such offence, though such offence be not triable by a jury and therefore, according to the rulings in 4 C. L. R. 405 and 25 C. 555, an appeal will lie from such judgment only on a point of law”. See also Note 6 to s. 307

2. Powers of Appeal Court in cases tried by jury.—In cases tried by jury an appeal under this section lies on matters of law only and the Appeal Court has no power to try the accused on matters of fact. Where the Appeal Court goes into the facts in such a case, it would be substituting the decision of the Judges of that Court for the verdict of the jury who have had the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses and weighing the evidence with the assistance which this affords, whereas the Judge of the Appeal Court can only arrive at a decision on the perusal of the evidence, 21 C. 935, dissented from in 23 C. 711. This section gives finality to the verdict of a jury, when there has been no error of law nor misdirection and when the Judge has concurred with the verdict of the majority, Ratanlal 790. All that this section says is, that in a case of an acquittal by a jury, an appeal shall lie, i.e., shall be heard and supported on a matter of law only, an erroneous verdict on a matter of fact will not support such an appeal. But the section does not prohibit the Court in a case where an appeal lies on a question of law, from deciding questions of fact which other sections require the Court to decide in order to decide the case, e.g., ss. 423, 537, 26 M. 1. See Note 75 to s. 299, Notes 14 and 15, Notes 37, 100 and 101 to s. 423

3. In deciding on admissibility of rejected evidence High Court may review whole case.—On point of law as to the admissibility of rejected evidence, the High Court has power to review the whole case and determine whether the admission of the rejected evidence, would have affected the result of the trial, 2 B. 61; 1 C. 207; 25 W. R. 36; 6 C. 247 = 7 C. L. R. 74; 10 B. H. C. R. 497; 9 B. H. C. R. 358; 19 B. 749, contra see 21 C. 935.

4. Every petition of appeal in cases tried by jury, should state distinctly in what respect the law has been contravened.—It is not for the Court to hunt through the record, and find out any illegality that may arise, 1 W. R. 21. Thus, a conviction based on no evidence, is bad in law, 15 W. R. 46; 16 W. R. 19; misdirection to the jury is a matter of law, 25 C. 230 so also omission or error in considering or stating material evidence, 7 C. 283 = 8 C. L. R. 449; 27 B. 626. Thus a non direction on a point of prime importance telling in favour of an accused, is a point of law 27 B. 644; 3 B. L. R. 102 = 11 Gr. L. J. 13. Also where material evidence which ought not to be admitted is admitted and the jury are placed in possession of it, there is an error of law in the trial, 27 B. 616 at p. 632; where a witness who is not an accomplice is treated as an accomplice, 28 M. 1. Misjoinder of charge is an incurable defect in law, 25 M. 61 (P. C.).

5. Effect of section 307.—The clear provisions of s. 307 are not in any way curtailed or cut down by this section and it is open to the High Court to go into the facts in a case referred under s. 307, 9 A. 420. The fact that the record is before the Court under s. 374 in regard to some of the accused jointly tried and that there fore the Court has to go into the facts in regard to those accused, cannot affect the case of an accused who has been sentenced in the same trial to any sentence other than death and the appeal of such an accused must be confined to matters of law in accordance with ss. 418 and 423 (2), (19 W. R. 57 approved), 2 C. W. N. 49. But see Note 5 A below

5-A. Effect of the newly added sub-sec. (3) to the present section.—By the addition of sub-sec (2), it will be observed that the anomaly existing in the law as pointed by 2 C. W. N. 49 is finally removed, and now under this clause in a trial by jury if one person is sentenced to death and another is sentenced to a lower punishment, the second accused may appeal on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law. This is intended to remove the anomaly that under ss. 374 and 376 the Court can go into questions of fact in a capital case while in the case of a person who is jointly tried and sentenced to a lower punishment, the Court cannot go into questions of fact if it happens to be jury case. In view of the amendment, 2 C. W. N. 49 has become obsolete

6. Appeal by Government on questions of fact.—See Notes 6-8 to s. 417

419. Every appeal shall be made in the form of a petition in writing presented by the appellant or his pleader, and every such petition shall (unless the Court to which it is presented otherwise directs) be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, and, in cases tried by a jury, a copy of the heads of the charge recorded under section 367.

Petition of appeal

Notes.—1. Scope of section.—This section prescribes the form of the petition of appeal which alone gives jurisdiction to the Appellate Court, in the same way as a complaint gives jurisdiction to the Court of First Instance. This section applies even while the accused is in jail, s. 420 dealing only with the mode of presentation, 1891 A. W. N. 48. For form of appeal petition, see Wilkins, 236 and also Note 6 to s. 420

2. Several convicts may appeal together when stamp is not required, i.e., when appellants are in custody.—See Note 5 to s. 404

3. Grounds of appeal should be distinct.—In cases tried by a Judge, every petition of appeal should state distinctly in what respect the law has been contravened, 1 W. R. 21.

4. One counsel should not file one appeal for two accused having conflicting interests.—H and L were accused of murder. Each of them made a confession partially exonerating himself, and attributing the principal offence to the other. Both were convicted and appealed by one and the same counsel. Held, that a single counsel could not with propriety file one appeal on behalf of and represent both the accused, 13 P. R. 1890.

5. Appeal petition containing scandalous allegations may be returned.—A petition containing scandalous allegations against the Magistrate, need not be entertained, but may be returned for representation after expunging the offensive portions of it, 15 B. 488.

6. Appeal petition need not be verified.—A criminal appeal being the continuation of a criminal trial, the appellant has all the privileges of an accused and cannot be punished for making a false statement in his appeal petition, 12 M. 451.

7. 'Presented.'—What is a proper presentation?—As regards presentation no special method is enjoined in the Code and therefore, the question is one of administrative convenience alone. So long as there is an actual presentation to an officer of the Court, such as a Bench Clerk, or to one of the Judges, there is a valid presentation, 29 M. L. J. 101 = 18 M. L. T. 95 = 16 Cr. L. J. 593. In this case the appeal was directly presented to a Bench of a High Court by the Public Prosecutor. No petition of appeal, on behalf of a person convicted by a Criminal Court, shall be admitted by a Criminal Court unless it is either submitted through the district or jail authorities or is presented by the convicted person himself or by some person authorized by power of attorney to present it on behalf of the convicted person. Petitions of appeal received by post other than through jail or district authorities shall if possible be returned bearing Pin Cir p 283. See also 1 M 304

(i) Depositing in a box intended for deposit of papers is not a proper presentation—Depositing a petition of appeal in a box kept for the convenience of parties (in the compound of a Court house) and intended for the deposit of papers for the Court is not a presentation within the meaning of this section, 19 M 354

(ii) Not sending by post—Nor is transmitting an appeal by post a proper presentation under this section Ratanlal 454. Though s 190 (c) seems to render it legal for a Magistrate to take cognizance of a complaint reported by post the practice of accepting appeal petitions transmitted by post otherwise than as provided in the next section is prohibited the transmission of an appeal by post not being a sufficient compliance with this section Welle II, 467; also 15 M 137; 19 M 354; Pin Cir p 283

(iii) Presentation of appeal by pleader's clerk or other person.—Presentation of petition of appeal by the clerk of the appellant's pleader is equivalent to a presentation by the pleader himself when it is signed by him and he is duly authorized 20 M 87, Welle II, 469 and 470, 6 B 14. But a petition of appeal is not duly presented when having been signed by a pleader it is handed in by a person who is not his clerk and over whose conduct and actions he has no control 21 M 114. But where a petition of appeal on behalf of three accused persons was signed under a Vakalat by their pleader and presented by another pleader who held a Vakalat only from the first accused it was held that the appeal on behalf of the other two should be treated as properly presented Welle II, 470

(iv) Legality of presentation of appeal by person authorized by appellant.—A petition of appeal in a criminal case may be presented to the Appellate Court by any person authorized by the appellant to present it 1 M 304; 6 B 14, Ratanlal 29. But having regard to the definition of the word "pleader" s. 4 cl. (r) the words "appointed with the permission of the Court" are very material to this Ruling but the fullest opportunity must be given to persons to execute powers of attorney to whomsoever they please and without reference to the mode or circumstances under which they might be influenced to do so 1 B N C. R. Cr. Ca. 18

(v) Unauthorized petitions of appeal presented by relatives etc. of prisoners cannot be recognized.—When a prisoner is in jail his petition of appeal if not forwarded by the officer in charge of the jail under s. 420 can be presented under this section only by his pleader whose appointment must be in writing signed by the prisoner whose signature must be attested by the Superintendent of the Jail. If this attestation should be wanting the document should be sent to the Superintendent of the Jail for verification. Unauthorized petitions of appeal presented on behalf of prisoners in jail by the relatives or friends cannot legally be recognized.—C P Cr Cir Part II No 44

8 Appeal may be entertained without copy of judgment.—The Appellate Court has a discretion to receive an appeal unaccompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against. Where injustice might result from a strict compliance with law a proper discretion should be exercised but in such cases before hearing the appeal the Court should have before it the judgment or order appealed against which it can obtain by sending for the record. In 3 Bom L R 704, three accused persons preferred a joint appeal with which one copy of the judgment appealed against was filed. On the District Magistrate insisting on their putting in separate copies of the judgment they tendered stamp requisite for copies. The District Magistrate however refused to dispense with separate copies and when such copies were ultimately produced rejected the appeals as out of time. Held that the District Magistrate would have exercised a sounder discretion if he had in virtue of this section dispensed with separate copies of the judgment appealed against. See Circular Order Bombay edition 1907 s 75 for procedure when copies of judgment are not available the records having been sent to High Court under s. 438

9 Section complied with if copy in accused's language is produced.—To comply with the requirements of this section which enacts that every petition of appeal shall be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against a copy furnished to the prisoner in his own language under s. 371 (1) is sufficient Ratanlal 82. In cases tried by jury the charge to the jury is under s. 371 (2) equivalent to the judgment 13 W R. 50

420. If the appellant is in jail, he may present his petition of appeal and the copies accompanying the same to the officer in charge of the jail, who shall thereupon forward such petition and copies to the proper Appellate Court

Procedure when appellant in jail

Notes.—1. Limitation—Presentation of appeal to jailer.—See Note 1 to s. 404

2. Every facility for making appeal should be allowed to prisoners.—Every facility, such as pen, paper and ink, and even a writer, should be allowed to prisoners to enable them to prepare their petition of appeal, 13 W. R. 69; 1 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 16. See also s. 60 (9), the Prisons Act IX of 1894, printed in Appendix XI

3. Appeal not to be summarily rejected until after seven days of its receipt.—Prisoners appealing from jail should be clearly made to understand that their appeals are liable to summary rejection, and that if they wished to be heard by pleader, an appearance must be put in within a limited time. No appeal forwarded from jail under s. 420 should be summarily rejected until seven days have elapsed after its receipt by the Appellate Court. In forwarding such an appeal the officer in charge of the jail shall invariably certify that the appellant has been informed that if he intends to appoint a pleader, an appearance must be put in within seven days from the date on which his petition may reach the Appellate Court. If the appellant or his pleader appear within seven days, the Appellate Court is not obliged to wait for full seven days. Madras G O No 1448, dated 28th October, 1909

4. Practice—Appeal to High Court.—Petitions of appeal against the sentences or orders of Sessions Judges, presented to officers in charge of jails, shall be forwarded by officers direct to the Registrar of the High Court of Judicature, intimation of the fact being at once given in each instance to the Judge whose sentence or order is appealed against. (Wilkins 121) If the petition of appeal be not accompanied by a copy of the Sessions Judge's judgment or charge to the jury the Sessions Judge shall at once forward to the High Court a certified copy of the record in the case—Bonn H C Cr Cir, p 46. On receipt from the Superintendent of the Jail of a petition of appeal, together with a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, the Deputy Commissioner will forward the papers to the proper appellate authority along with the magisterial records of the case. If the appeal lies to the Judicial Commissioner's Court from a judgment or order of the Court of Session, then the Deputy Commissioner will forward the papers (as above) through the Court of Session, where the appropriate records of that Court will be added and the whole will then be passed on, C P Cr Cir, Part II, No 44

5. Power to dispose of appeals in absence of appellant.—See 13 A. 171 (F.B) and Note 8 to s. 422 and Note 4 to s. 421

6. Jail appeal might be argued by counsel.—There is nothing in the provision of this section to indicate that it was intended to deprive appellants in jail of the opportunity of being heard on their appeal, Weir 11, 472.

7. Appeal dismissed for default may be re-admitted.—See Note 18 to s. 421

421. (1) On receiving the petition and copy under section 419 or 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same, and, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, it may dismiss the appeal summarily

Summary dismissal of appeal

Provided that no appeal presented under section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section, the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so

Notes.—1. Pleader, see s. 4 (r) at p. 16. As to right of mukhtyars see Note 8 to s. 340 at p. 866

2. Alteration in language of section.—It should be noted that the words 'dismiss' and 'dismissing' are substituted in sub-secs. (1) and (2) respectively, for the words, 'reject' and 'rejecting' in the same section of the old Code. Whether this change is made simply to bring the language of the sub-sections in harmony with that of the proviso where the word 'dismissed' is used or whether it implies an obligation on the Court to send for the record and hear the appellant or his pleader when the appeal is sent from the jail under s. 420, cannot be determined. See also 32 G. 178.

3. Difference between dismissals of appeal under this section and dismissal under s 423.—An order summarily dismissing an appeal under the provisions of this section does not amount to a judgment within the meaning of s 424. A judgment under s 424 implies a trial. The essential difference between rejection of appeal under this section and its dismissal under s 423 is that in the latter case the appeal is disposed of after a trial but in the former the Court refuses to try it at all. 5 C P Cr 24. Besides dismissal and rejection, the petition of appeal may also be withdrawn. 5 C L R 372. See 6 C L R 427. See also Note 14 below.

4. Dismissal of appeal merely for absence of appellant is not proper.—An appeal should not be dismissed merely because the appellant did not appear to support the petition but the Appellate Court should consider whether there was sufficient ground for interfering which would imply judicial consideration on the merits. Ratanlal 593, 21 P R 1896, 3 N L R 76 = 9 Cr L J 553, 12 C W N 243, 12 Cr L J 431. Where the appellant was represented by a pleader and the Sessions Judge, not knowing the fact disposed of the appeal in Chambers, the High Court set aside the order of the Appellate Court and directed the appeal to be reheard. Ratanlal 914. Such a miscarriage of justice would not have occurred if the Sessions Judge had followed the usual practice of having the appellant's name called out.

5. Appellate Court may send for appellant.—If an Appellate Court thinks it necessary for the purpose of disposing of an appeal to have the prisoner before it the Court has the same power to direct that the prisoner be brought before it as a Court of First Instance has when in pursuance of the direction of the Appellate Court it takes further evidence in the presence of a prisoner. Weir II, 473, 13 A 171 at p 176, MAHMOOD J dissenting contra see Ratanlal 22 and Note 6 under s 423.

6. Appellant should be allowed reasonable opportunity of being heard before summary rejection of appeal.—Before rejecting an appeal under this section the Court is bound to give reasonable opportunity to the appellant or his pleader whether the appellant be in jail or not. Where an appellant is confined in jail situated at the same station as the Appellate Court there is nothing to prevent an appellant from applying to be heard in person and in all cases a person so situated may apply that he shall be heard by a pleader, Weir II, 472. A Magistrate having rejected an appeal under this section without giving appellant an opportunity of being heard his order rejecting the appeal was set aside and he was directed to rehear the appeal petition following the procedure laid down in this section. Ratanlal 703. But where a District Magistrate heard the appellant's pleader in support of the appeal and then sent for the records of the case but disposed of the case without hearing the appellant's pleader a second time held that the Magistrate was within his right. 2 S L R 39 = 10 Cr L J 204.

7. Appellant's pleader should be heard.—Where a convict sent up an appeal from jail to the Court of Session and also presented a petition of appeal through a pleader held the Sessions Judge was not competent to dismiss the jail appeal summarily but should have heard the appellant's pleader. 1906 A W N 303 = 3 A L J 693 = 4 Cr L J 373, where 17 A 241 (F B) is followed. In Ratanlal 914, the appellant was represented by a pleader but the Sessions Judge, not knowing the fact disposed of the appeal in Chambers. The High Court set aside the order of the Appellate Court and directed the appeal to be reheard. Where a District Magistrate called on the pleader who presented a criminal appeal to argue it at once and on the pleader praying for a short adjournment to enable him to acquaint himself with the evidence in the case had not been given a reasonable opportunity for being heard. If the appeal is not admitted at once and the Court desires to hear the appellant before admitting it under this section he should be given the same notice as is given to the Crown. See the practice in the mofussil is to admit appeals which are supported by pleaders without any hearing except on a question of bail the only cases which are dealt with under section 421 of the Code being jail appeals. 36 C 385, see also 10 Cr L J 491 (M). 7 Bom L R 59 = 2 Cr L J 58. See also 29 M 236 where it was held that on presentation (while in camp) to a Court by the party in person of a memorandum of appeal signed by a pleader it is not competent to the Court to reject the appeal summarily.

7-A Dismissal of jail appeal when the accused also appears through a Mukhtyar.—Where a Sessions Judge, in ignorance of the fact that an appeal in the same case had been filed by a mukhtyar, dismissed a criminal appeal submitted from jail, it was held, that though the Sessions Judge could not review his own order, the High Court could set it aside in revision, and it was so done. 43 A. 208.

8. Hearing includes right of reply.—The section lays down that the appellant or his pleader should have a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the appeal and this must be taken to include the possible right of reply if necessary, for it is obvious that if the Crown in its reply raises any points or disputes in the opinion of the learned Judge, the points which were raised in the opening of the appellants or their pleaders will have reasonable opportunity of supporting their case unless they are allowed to reply (C. Rev No 874 of 1906 followed), 38 C 307.

9. Desirable that Judge goes through record.—The powers conferred by this section should be exercised sparingly and with great caution, and reasons however concise, should be given for rejecting an appeal, 8 A. 816, 9 C. W. N. 229. Where the appellant is content to leave the question of admission or rejection of appeal to be determined by the Sessions Judge on the papers the Judge is bound to peruse them and the appellant is not bound to appear a second time, either by counsel or in person Ratanlal 739. 'Although a Judge acts within his powers in rejecting an appeal without sending for record I think such a course is ordinarily very inconvenient and should not be adopted'—PER STRAIGHT, J. 1833 A. W. N. 145 Where there are in the memorandum of appeal allegations of withholding witnesses, or refusal to grant warrants and summonses to witnesses and of disregard of certain evidence filed in the case, it cannot be said that there are no sufficient grounds for interfering, Ratanlal 916. Similarly, where the grounds of appeal disclose reasons for discrediting the witnesses for the prosecution, the Appellate Court ought to call for the records, 29 M. 236.

10. Time for hearing appeal must be fixed in each case and notice given.—A general notice posted in a Sessions Court house that appeals will be heard for admission only on the first Court-day after the date of presentation of the appeal is not a compliance with the requirements of this section. A time is by law required to be fixed in each case 5 M. 11. If the appeal is not admitted at once, notice must be given, 36 C. 333.

Notice of appeal must be posted two days before the day fixed for hearing.—In the case of an appeal presented under s. 419 there shall be posted up in the Appellate Court, in place accessible to the public notice of the day appointed for considering the petition of appeal in order to afford the appellant or his pleader a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same. Such notice shall be posted two days at least before the day so appointed unless the appellant or his pleader consents to a shorter notice or to dispense with a notice. ROM H C Cr Cr, p 42

11. Disposing of appeal before day fixed for hearing is material error.—The disposal of an appeal before the day fixed for the adjourned hearing is a material error of procedure Weir II, 475, and the High Court in revision will set aside the order and order the Appellate Court to re-hear the appeal 7 P. R. 1891. The fact that the pleader of the accused is present in Court, when an order is made admitting an appeal does not relieve the Court from the necessity of giving notice to the appellant of the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal, 10 C. L. R. 57.

12. When notice to appellants in jail may be dispensed with?—The practice of sending notices to persons who have transmitted criminal appeals from jail may be discontinued when the Appellate Court considers, after perusal of the petition of appeal and judgment, that there is not sufficient ground for interfering, and resolves to reject the appeal summarily—M H C Pro, 11th and 27th Nov., 1884, Nos 3327 and 3465

13. Principles which should govern consideration of appeals.—See Notes to s 423 under Heading IV

14. Right of counsel to refer to certified copies of evidence at the hearing.—At the hearing of an appeal under this section, counsel for the appellant is entitled to refer to certified copies of the evidence. Where the Judge declined to allow this to be done and dismissed the appeal, the dismissal was set aside, 11 O. C. 360 = 9 Cr. L. J. 55.

15. Form of judgment—whether reasons to be given?—'Summarily' means 'in an informal manner and without delay of formal proceedings'—This would seem to show that a Judge is entitled to reject an appeal without any formality at all, therefore without the formality of either a recorded judgment or reasons of any description 21 C. 92; 20 B 540; 9 C. W. N. 623, Weir II, 473; 1906 U. B. R. 49 = 4 Cr. L. J. 384; 29 C. 726. Though every order passed in the exercise of judicial discretion should show the ground on which it is so passed, 6 C. P. 34; yet the order under this section need not comply with all the requirements of s. 367, 25 M. 584; or give any specific reasons for dismissal. It must be taken that if the Appellate Court dismisses summarily, it considers that there are no sufficient grounds for interfering, 9 C. W. N. 623 = 32 Cr. L. J. 344. Though it is not required by law that a Sessions Judge should write a regular judgment when exercising the powers of summary dismissal, it is very important that such discretion should be exercised upon sound and reasonable lines. But it would be advisable for Appellate Courts to state shortly in their order the reason or reasons which influence them in coming to the conclusion that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, in view of the possibility of such order being challenged by an application in revision, 17 A. 261, cf., the appeal is time-barred, it is manifestly groundless, or that no appeal lies. It is, however, advisable to give reasons for rejecting the appeal, 36 A. 436; 8 A. 514, 3 A. L. J. 693 = 1908 A. W. N. 303; 2 Pat. L. J. 695. See also 32 C. 178, where it was held, that the Court disposing of an appeal should either expressly state it has dealt with it under this section or the judgment must notice, though but concisely, what objections were urged on appeal and how they were disposed of. Even in a judgment under s. 421 the judgment should show that the judge has considered such points as whether the witnesses are or are not accomplices and such points as are particularly challenged by the appellant 39 C. 307. It should also show whether the appeal is rejected on perusal of the petition of appeal and the copy of the judgment of the Lower Court or after calling for the record of the case.—C. P. Cr. Cir., Part II, No. 24. See Note 29 at p. 930.

16 Effect of admission of connected appeal on summary power.—Where a Sessions Judge admitted the appeal of one of two accused and summarily dismissed under this section the appeal of the other, held, that the fact the Judge admitted the appeal of a co-accused, does not affect the power vested in him by this section to dismiss the appeal of the other accused against the same judgment, 5 C. W. N. 332.

17. Powers of Bench of High Court to admit appeal.—Under Rule 1 (1) (f) of the Madras Appellate Side Rules of Practice, applications for the admission of appeals from the judgment of any Criminal Court are ordinarily to be made before a single judge. But this does not in terms and is not intended to deprive, a Divisional Court, constituted for the disposal of criminal business, of the right to exercise its powers in special cases, in which convenience and the acquaintance which the Judges composing the Benches may have rendered their intervention advisable. The fact that a Court constituted by a single Judge was sitting as an admission Court does not determine the competency of the Bench to admit appeals presented to it, 29 M. L. J. 101 = 18 M. L. T. 95 = 18 Cr. L. J. 593.

18. Is order of summary rejection final?—No review—An order under this section by the Appellate

And therefore an order rejecting an appeal under it is final and being an order "on appeal," is not open to review, 19 B. 732. It has also been held that no appeal lies under s. 15 of the Letters Patent against the judgment of a single Judge of the High Court dismissing criminal appeal under this section, as it is a judgment in a criminal trial, 13 M. L. J. (Notes) 65, Weir I, 783 (A). See Note 3 to s. 430.

Appeal dismissed for default of appearance may be re heard.—Where an appeal is dismissed for default and it is proved to the satisfaction of the Appellate Court that an adequate excuse has been made for the pleader's non-appearance, the Appellate Court may re hear the appeal, on its merits, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXIX. Such an order is not a judgment and s. 369 offers no obstacle to the restoration of the appeal, 5 N. L. E. 78 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553, 10 C. L. G. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 287. See s. 369 and Note 11 at p. 813 and Note 7 to s. 439.

19. After rejecting appeal, sentence cannot be altered.—A Magistrate cannot after rejecting an appeal under this section diminish the sentence. He should either report the case to the High Court, or should hear the appeal as directed by s. 423, Ratanlal 304. An Appellate Court has no power to alter the conviction, when it dismisses an appeal under this section, Weir II, 475; Ratanlal 384. Nor to enhance the sentence, Ratanlal 74. If an Appellate Court proceeds to alter the sentence, it must give the notice prescribed by s. 422, Ratanlal 384. An Appellate Court cannot summarily set aside the sentence passed by the Court of First Instance, without giving notice of hearing to the respondent and calling for and perusing the records of the case as required by ss. 422 and 423 Weir II, 474.

20 Dismissal for bar by limitation not under this section.—An appeal presented after the expiry of the period of limitation, may be rejected without having resort to this section, if no sufficient reason is assigned to excuse the delay in presentation, Ratanlal 90.

21. Revision.—For a case where the Sessions Judge dismissed an appeal summarily, but the High Court finding on revision that the evidence was insufficient for the conviction and instead of remanding the appeal for re-hearing on the merits set aside the conviction and acquitted the accused, see 10 C. W. N. 448 = 3 Cr. L. J. 335. Though the practice usually is to send the case back to the Lower Appellate Court and ask for a judgment from that Court after a regular hearing, the High Court has a discretion to go into the case on its own account and, if necessary, even to consider questions of fact as if in first appeal, 13 O. C. 309 = 11 Cr. L. J. 531.

422. If the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, it shall cause notice to be given to the appellant or his pleader, and to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, of the time and place at which such appeal will be heard, and shall, on the application of such officer, furnish him with a copy of the grounds of appeal, and, in cases of appeals under section 417, the Appellate Court shall cause a like notice to be given to the accused.

Notes.—1. Appeal cannot be admitted for limited purpose.—If the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, the Appellate Court must hear the whole appeal, consequently all the grounds taken in the petition of appeal are open for consideration at the final hearing and the appellant cannot be restricted to any selected ground out of those specified in his petition. A restrictive order for admission is clearly not contemplated by s. 422 and must be deemed ultra vires, 51 C. 406. Cf. 16 C. L. J. 416 = 15 C. W. N. 921. Except where it uses express language in ss. 412 and 418, the Code does not provide for the admission of an appeal for the limited purpose of reversing only a part of the sentence. Generally if an appeal is admitted, the appellant has a right to have the whole merits dealt with by the Judge in solemn form Ratanlal 828. A Sessions Judge being once seized of the appeal, the whole appeal becomes open to his Court and he is bound to hear the appeals on the merits only 35 B 418, Note 7 to s. 413. 4 Patna 254.

2. Notice is obligatory.—(i) To Appellant.—Notice to the appellant of the time and place of hearing is obligatory under this section when notice of the appeal by the accused has gone to the prosecutor, Weir II, 475 (ii) To Officer appointed by Government.—In an appeal before a Joint Magistrate, notice ought to be served on the District Magistrate. If the Magistrate hears the appeal without the notice being served, the procedure is irregular, 1915 M. W. N. 510 = 16 Cr. L. J. 600. But the omission to serve notice is an irregularity and if the parties have not been prejudiced, the High Court will not interfere in revision. But in 24 Bom. L. R. 1150, the High Court did interfere as the objection was raised by the District Magistrate to the proceedings of the Appellate Court and in 25 Bom. L. R. 451 the High Court declined to interfere in revision at the instance of the complainant where the District Magistrate did not raise any objection to the procedure in the Appellate Court in acquitting the accused without notice to him.

Order for hearing made in presence of appellant's pleader does not relieve the Court from giving notice.—The fact, that the pleader of the accused is present in Court when an order is made admitting an appeal, does not relieve the Court from the necessity of giving notice to the appellant of the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal. In criminal cases the procedure laid down in the law must be strictly followed, 10 C. L. R. 87; 7 P. R. 1835. These cases were under the Code of 1872. The addition of the word "pleader" in this section is new. It seems that the mere presence of the pleader of the accused is not enough unless his attention is specially directed to the notice when it is given verbally.

3. Notice of change of place of hearing must be given.—When a Court issues notice to the agent of the accused, it ought not to hear the appeal at a different place without giving notice of the same to such agent, 7 P. R. 1891. Where notice is issued to an appellant in a criminal case to appear at headquarters on the date fixed, and when on that date, the Magistrate moves out into camp, it is not competent for him to dismiss the case for default of appearance even though there may be a general order made by him to the effect that parties ought to go to him in camp still less is such an order justifiable, when it is not even shown that the appellant was not even present in headquarters on the date in question, or that any order to follow the officer into camp was ever communicated to him. The proper course in such cases, is to fix a fresh date and issue fresh notice, 11 P. R. 1905 = 117 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 68 which follows 21 P. R. 1895. See also 5 N. L. R. 76 = 9 Cr. L. J. 553.

4. Particulars in notice.—(i) Notice should show whether appeal is to be heard under s. 423.—In every case in which a day is fixed for the hearing of an appeal, the order fixing the date should distinctly state whether or not the hearing is to be under s 423 This information not being given it becomes very difficult to distinguish between appeals rejected under s 421 and appeals confirmed after hearing under s 423—Pun. Cir., Chap LXVIII p 289

(ii) Notice must specify time of hearing, i.e., the particular date—In 1831 A. W N 45, a Magistrate of the district directed that an appeal to him would be heard in January, no particular date being specified. The appeal was heard and dismissed on the 6th January. The appellant had not received any information as to when his appeal was to be heard and only arrived in the Magistrate's Court to learn that the appeal had just been dismissed and could not be re-heard. SPARKIE, J., observed that the appellant should have been informed as to the date on which his appeal would be heard. The Magistrate was directed to take up the appeal fix a date for its hearing and determine it on the date so fixed. See also 5 M. 11

5 On whom notice must be served—(i) Notice of appeal may be left at the address given by accused—Notice of the hearing of an appeal was not given to an appellant as he could not be found at the address given by him and appeal was heard and decided in his absence. held that the Appellate Court might have been justified in doing what it did if the notice or a copy of it had been left at the address given or there had been anything to show that the appellant could by any diligence of his have got knowledge of the notice and as this was not done the appeal should be re-heard, Ratanlal 889

(ii) Notice of hearing to appellant in jail—If the Appellate Court decides to proceed under s 421 it is not legally bound to give notice to the appellant nor is it generally necessary to do so. When the Court means to proceed under s 422 the law requires that notice shall be issued to the appellant and the intimation given by the officer of the jail when forwarding the appeal petition is not sufficient for this purpose. See Rules 264 265 of the Madrās Criminal Rules of Practice

(iii) Notice to Railway authorities in cases of appeal by their servants—In all appeals from sentences passed on railway servants notice should be given of the time and place of hearing the appeal to the Head of the Railway Administration concerned as well as to the District Magistrate—Pun. Cir. No 17 of 1894 C P Cr Cir Part II No 45 Oudh Cr Dig., p 27

(iv) To such officer as the Local Government may appoint—(a) Madrās—In case of appeals to the Sessions Court and the High Court the Public Prosecutor is the officer entitled to notice (Fort St George Gazette 1887 Pt I p 30) but the District Magistrate is the proper person to direct whether there should be a formal appearance in support of a conviction (G O No 653 Judicial 24th March 1887). In cases of convictions for Railway offences the Agents of the Companies are the officers entitled to notice (G O No 1807 Judicial 7th September 1891). In appeals from convictions in cognizable cases the Assistant Superintendent of Police in the Nilgiri District and the Prosecuting Inspectors of Police in other districts are entitled to notice (G O No 1614 Judicial 7th August 1895). In Forest cases the District Forest Officers are entitled to notice (G O No 433 Judicial 2nd March 1896)

(b) Bombay—District Magistrates are to receive notice (Gazette 1833 Pt I p 182). See Bom. Bk. Cir. p 42, and for form of notice, see ibid., pp 117 and 118

(c) Bengal—In Bengal also the District Magistrate is the officer to receive notice 7 C. W N 80. See Gazette 1833 Pt I p 1200. In the Calcutta High Court, the Legal Remembrancer is the Public Prosecutor (Calcutta Gazette 30th June 1886 p 783)

(d) In the Punjab—Notices are to be sent to the District Magistrate (Punjab Gazette 1833 Pt I, p 13). See also Pun. Cir. Vol II p 274

(e) In the Central Provinces and Oudh to the District Magistrate (Central Province Gazette 1833 Pt II p 101) Oudh Cr Dig. p 27

6 Appearance of mukhtyar for appellant—An appellant in a criminal case has a right to appear and to be heard by a mukhtyar 6 B 14. This decision must be taken subject to s 4 cl (r) and see Note to s 340

7 Appeal cannot be dismissed for default—On receiving an appeal if the Appellate Courts proceeds under this section it can only dismiss the appeal on the merits and not on account of the absence of the appellants under 21 F. R. 1895, 11 F. R. 1905, 35 C 385, vote 3 to 2 421

8 Power to dispose of appeal in the absence of appellant—Where an appeal is admitted and the Appellate Court has sent for the record and perused the same, it is competent for that Court to dispose of the appeal though the Appellant is not present and is not represented by a pleader. The only limitation on the power of the Appellate Court is that, before disposing of the appeal, it must peruse the records, and, if the appellant is present or represented by a pleader, the appellant in person or the pleader must be heard, 13 A. 171 (F.B.), MAHMOOD J., dissenting

9 Complainant cannot as of right be heard in appeal —See Note 9 to s. 423

10 Notice on appeal by complainant against order under s 250—Where on the appeal of a complainant, an order under s 250 was reversed without notice either to the accused or to the Public Prosecutor, held, on revision, setting aside the appellate order, that though there be no express provision directing that notice should be given to the accused in such a case yet on the principle, audi alteram partem, the accused should be given notice of the appeal so as to afford him an opportunity of supporting the order passed in his favour. Also according to the letter of the law, notice should also be given to the officer, if any, appointed by the Local Government and referred to in Note 5 above. The safer course in such an appeal therefore unless it be summarily rejected, is to give notice to both the accused and the officer referred to 29 M. 187. See Note 34 at p 710

 423. (1) The Appellate Court shall then send for the record of the case, if such record is not already in Court. After perusing such record, and hearing the appellant or his pleader if he appears and the Public Prosecutor, if he appears, and in case of an appeal under section 417, the accused, if he appears, the Court may if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, dismiss the appeal or may—

(a) in an appeal from an order of acquittal, reverse such order and direct that further inquiry be made, or that the accused be re-tried or committed for trial as the case may be, or find him guilty and pass sentence on him according to law

(b) in an appeal from a conviction, (1) reverse the finding and sentence and acquit or discharge the accused, or order him to be re-tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to such Appellate Court or committed for trial, or (2) alter the finding maintaining the sentence, or with or without altering the finding reduce the sentence or (3) with or without such reduction and with or without altering the finding alter the nature of the sentence but subject to the provisions of section 106 sub sec (3) not so as to enhance the same

(c) in an appeal from any other order, alter or reverse such order,

(d) make any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorize the Court to alter or reverse the verdict of a jury unless it is of opinion that such verdict is erroneous, owing to a misdirection by the Judge, or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by him

Notes.—1. Changes in the section—Sub-sec. (d) is necessary to give effect to the amendment of s. 106—Statement of Objects and Reasons Sub-sec. (2) corresponds with clause (d) of s. 423 of the 1882 Code

2 Analogous law.—See the provisions of the (Criminal Appeal Act 1907 Edw VII, C.23) ss 4 and 5 for the powers of the Appellate Court in England Archbold pp 303—315 Compare s 543 of N Y Cr Pro Code which is as follows —Upon hearing the appeal Appellate Court may, in cases where an erroneous judgment has been entered upon a lawful verdict or finding of fact correct the judgment to conform to the judgment or finding, in all other cases they must either reverse or affirm the judgment appealed from, and in cases of reversal may, if necessary or proper, order a new trial

I—NATURE OF CRIMINAL APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

3 Power of Appellate Court is measured by power of Original Court.—(i) Appellate Court cannot pass sentence beyond original Court's power—Sec. 32 contains no word which makes it applicable to any Court, of Appeal or Revision nor is there any restricting proviso to be found in sec. 423 or any other section dealing with appellate jurisdiction such as sub-sec. (3) of s. 439. Nevertheless it is a rule underlying the whole fabric of appellate jurisdiction that the power of an Appellate Court is measured by the power of the Court from whose judgment or order the appeal before it has been made. This is equally so in the civil and criminal branches of the law of procedure. It is a fundamental principle that every Court of Appeal exists, for the purpose where necessary of doing or causing to be done, that which each Court subordinate to its appellate jurisdiction should have but has not done, or caused to be done and nothing further. Therefore the jurisdiction in appeal is necessarily limited in each case to the same extent as the jurisdiction from which that particular case comes. It is a proposition which cannot be disputed that all powers conferred upon an Appellate Court as such, must be interpreted as subject to the general rule above stated. All jurisdiction starts with the first Court and remains a constant factor throughout all subsequent stages of the suit or proceeding governed by it. Therefore where a District Magistrate in an appeal from a sentence of four months imprisonment altered the sentence to one of a fine of Rs. 300 only, held that the Appellate Court cannot, on appeal pass a sentence which the original Magistrate was not competent to pass and the sentence was reduced to a fine of Rs. 200, 7 N. L. R. 109—12 Cr. L. J. 444. See also 39 G. 197 and 1030, 12 M. 431.

(ii) Appellate Court cannot alter finding to an offence which Original Court is incompetent to try—See Note 84 (ii).

(iii) But Appellate Court cannot pass order which Original Court only can pass—See Notes 84, 85 and 88.

4 Court of Appeal is not mere Court of Error.—A Court of Reference or Appeal under this Code is not a mere Court of Error, but the Court as a Court of Appeal Reference or Revision is enjoined by s. 537 and s. 167 of the Indian Evidence Act not to reverse or alter the finding or sentence passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction on account of any error, omission irregularity, improper admission or rejection of evidence, unless in its judgment, such error omission or irregularity has in fact occasioned a failure of justice or unless independently of evidence objected to and admitted there was not sufficient evidence to justify, or that if the rejected evidence had been received it ought to have varied the decision.—Per BHASHYAM AIVANGAR, J., in 24 M. 523 at p. 551.

II.—PROCEDURE IN HEARING AND DISPOSING OF APPEALS.

5. Appellate Court may suspend sentence pending appeal and release on bail.—See s. 426

6 Can appellant be sent for from jail?—There is no provision of law which specifically authorizes a Sessions Judge to cause an appellant under a sentence of imprisonment to be brought before a Sessions Court

13 Rules as to execution of orders of Courts of Appeal, Reference or Revision.—When a sentence on a prisoner is reversed or modified on appeal by a Court other than the High Court, a fresh warrant will be issued by the Appellate Court to the officer in charge of the jail, and its order will be communicated to the Lower Court for record. Provide that when the Appellate Court order the retrial or committal for trial of a prisoner under this section, it shall communicate its order to the Court whose decision has been reversed and that Court shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the Appellate Court. In all cases in which a sentence or order is modified or reversed, whether in appeal or revision, a separate warrant should be issued as regards each prisoner whose sentence has been so modified or reversed.—Rom H C Cr Cir, para 81

III—GENERAL POWERS AND DUTIES OF APPELLATE COURT.

19 Judge personally interested in prosecution should not hear the appeal.—The words 'try any case' in s 556 are wide enough to include the hearing of an appeal, 23 C. 41; (1899) A. W. N. 74. Where, therefore, a Magistrate in his executive capacity after personally satisfying himself that a person is guilty directed a prosecution he ought not to hear the appeal, 9 N. L. R. 81 = 16 Cr. L. J. 335. See Note 14 at p. 482.

20 Appellate Court has no power to remand case directing trial Court to pass proper sentence.—Where the District Magistrate convicted the petitioner under ss. 411, 380 and 420 I. P. C., and sentenced him to six months imprisonment and a fine of Rs 100 under s. 411, I. P. C., no separate sentences being passed under the other sections and the Sessions Judge on appeal, set aside the convictions under ss. 411 and 420 and also the sentence under s. 411 and remanded the case to the District Magistrate 'for passing such sentence, if any, as he may consider fit under s. 380, I. P. C.' Held, setting aside the order of the Sessions Judge and the sentences passed by the District Magistrate, that the Sessions Judge had no power to remand a case for the Lower Court to pass a proper sentence. He was directed to dispose of the appeal by himself passing a proper sentence, 11 C. W. N. 254.

21 Appellate Court cannot send case back for proper judgment to be written.—An Appellate Court cannot, where the judgment of the Court below is defective, send the case back to the Magistrate to re-hear the parties and write out a proper judgment. It is the duty of the Judge on appeal to go into the whole facts fully and dispose of the case, 34 C. 1069. Where the record is such that the Appellate Court cannot form its own opinion on the evidence the conviction cannot be maintained 4 L. B. R. 349 = 9 Cr. L. J. 23.

22 Appellate Court cannot set aside conviction merely because locality of offence was not within jurisdiction of trying Court.—Appellate Court ought not to set aside a conviction because the offence had been committed beyond the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. The Appellate Court ought not to overlook the provisions of s 531, 35 C. 786, and see Note 7 to s. 404.

23 Appellate Court cannot make reference to High Court.—It is clearly the intention of the law that Sec. 423 does not sing in the appeal, pending before the Judge himself. See Note 6 to s 438. Where a Sessions Judge sitting on appeal is of opinion that the accused should be acquitted, he ought not to refer the case to the High Court. It is his duty to allow the appeal and acquit the accused, 13 A. L. J. 477 = 16 Cr. L. J. 433.

24 Can Appellate Court consider point not taken in grounds of appeal?—In a trial for cheating in which the prisoner was acquitted, the High Court, on appeal by Government, held that the accused might have been convicted for attempt and abetment of the offence and ordered a retrial, although in the petition of appeal this objection had not been taken, for, it was held that the accused had not been unfairly prejudiced and had not asked for time on the ground of surprise, 12 B. H. C. R. 1. Contra, see 19 B. 51 at p. 63; 63 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 78. The High Court, on appeal, set aside the acquittal.

convict that person of an offence entirely different from that charged against him and not even suggested in the grounds of appeal (19 B. 51 followed), 63 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 78. The Bombay High Court has, however, allowed a new objection to be taken in appeal, holding that the accused had not been unfairly prejudiced on the ground of surprise 12 B. H. C. R. 1.

25. Appellate Court should not refer to evidence not forming part of record—An Appellate Court will be in error if it refers to documents and evidence which did not form part of the record of the proceedings before the Magistrate, 6 C. L. J. 251 = 6 Cr. L. J. 357; 8 M. L. T. 81 = 11 Cr. L. J. 221. The Appellate Court may take fresh evidence under s. 424 after recording its reasons.

26. Appellate Court may make local inspection.—Where an inspection of the scene of the crime is material either to the case for the prosecution or that of the defence, it is desirable that the Appellate Court should also inspect the spot, 16 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 412. He should place on record any information which he may receive during such inspection if he intends to rely on the same. See 1896 A. W. N. 73.

27. In case of joint appeals, Appellate Court must devote judicial attention to case of each accused—The judgment of an Appellate Court, dealing with the case of several accused who were convicted in a joint trial, must show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration and should state reasons, as far as may be necessary, to show that the Appellate Court has devoted judicial attention to the case of each accused. An appellate judgment should be quite independent and stand by itself. It ought not to be read in connection with or as supplementary to the judgment of the Court of First Instance, 35 C. 138, 16 Cr. L. J. 496 (M). It has been a practice with all the High Courts to set aside a conviction where there are in the judgment whether Original or Appellate, no sufficient materials to support it. The first duty of a Court of appeal is to find whether the conviction had by the Lower Court against each of the accused person is sustainable. A general agreement with the Lower Court cannot be sufficient to uphold the conviction of each particular individual as each of them is entitled to a finding on the fact that he did or did not take part in the alleged offence and when there is no such finding the appeal must be re-heard, 12 Cr. L. J. 43 (C.). Especially in cases of rioting the evidence against each accused must be discussed, 2 Mad. L. W. 958 = 16 Cr. L. J. 734.

IV.—WHAT ARE SUFFICIENT GROUNDS FOR INTERFERENCE.

28. That judgment was obtained by fraud or concealment of material fact is a ground of appeal—An appeal from a conviction could be entertained if based on the concealment of a material fact from the Court which conducts the trial. Equally so an appeal from acquittal may be entertained where the acquittal was obtained by the fraud of the accused, e.g., by preventing the complainant from attending the Court in a summons-case, 38 M. 1028. See also 1891 A. W. N. 120 and Note 36.

29. Failure of appellant's counsel to refer to evidence does not relieve Judge of his duties.—Because no reference was made to the defence evidence by the counsel who appeared for the appellant and the defence evidence was practically ignored the Appellate Court did not think it necessary to consider and deal with the evidence adduced by the defence. Held that it was the duty of the Appellate Court to look into that evidence and after dealing with it come to a decision. The appeal was directed to be re-heard 40 C. 376.

A—APPEALS AGAINST CONVICTIONS.

30. Rule in trying criminal appeal is to consider whether conviction is right.—A convicted person when appealing is not in the same position before the Appellate Court as he is before the Court trying him, he must satisfy the Appellate Court that there is sufficient ground for interfering with the order of conviction, 5 A. 386. But this view has not been followed. No doubt an Appellate Court is bound to presume the decision of the Court of original jurisdiction to be correct until the contrary is shown and it is equally beyond all doubt that an Appellate Court is bound to give every reasonable weight to the conclusion which the Original Court has arrived at upon a question depending upon evidence. But the Appellate Court is also bound precisely in the same way as the Court of First Instance to test the evidence extrinsically as well as intrinsically. The Appellate Court is bound to inquire as thoroughly as the Court of First Instance whether the probabilities arising from all the surrounding circumstances of the case are such as to justify a reasonable mind in coming to the conclusion that the evidence is worthy of credit, 17 W. R. 59; 18 C. W. N. 1215 = 15 Cr. L. J. 686.

(i) Is the appellant bound to satisfy Court as in civil appeal that trial Judge was wrong?—The sound rule to apply in trying a criminal appeal where questions of facts are in issue, is to consider whether the conviction is right, and in this respect a criminal appeal differs from a civil one. In the latter case the Court must be convinced before reversing a finding of fact by a Lower Court that the finding is wrong. Per WHITE, J., 11 C. L. R. 2. If the Judge of the Appellate Court has any doubt that the conviction is a right one, whatever the Original Court has done, the Judge of the Appellate Court should discharge the accused. In this respect the duty of the Appellate Court in criminal cases is not similar to that in civil cases. In the latter case the Court must be satisfied before setting aside an order of the Lower Court that the order is wrong, 23 C. 347. If the evidence which came before him, whatever its shape, was not sufficient to reasonably satisfy him, that the prisoners had been rightly convicted he ought to have acquitted them, 20 W. R. 13 = 11 B. L. R. 33.

(ii) Appellate Court should consider facts of case independently and give benefit of doubt to prisoner — It is the duty of a Court of Appeal to exercise an independent judgment in reviewing the evidence, 1890 A. W. N. 148. It is the duty of an Appellate Court in every case to examine the evidence for itself and to give an accused person the benefit of a reasonable doubt which it may entertain after such examination. Doubtless, it ought not lightly to disturb the conclusions of the Court of First Instance, and should give due weight to the fact that the witnesses received credit from the Court of which their evidence was given, but in every case, it is the duty of an Appellate Court to arrive at an independent opinion. It is improper for an Appellate Court to record in its judgment grave imputations on the motives of an officer whose decision is under appeal, when such imputations on the motives of an officer whose decision is under appeal, when such imputations have no other foundation than suspicion, Weir II, 535. Though in criminal cases an Appellate Court should be guided in its estimation of the evidence of a witness by the remarks recorded by the first Court under s. 463, as to the demeanour of that witness, such Appellate Court is bound independently to consider the facts of the case, and the prisoner is entitled to the benefit of reasonable doubt in the Appellate, no less than in the first Court. Where therefore, the Sessions Judge admitted that he was 'perplexed by the difficulties and incongruities of the case,' but upheld the conviction on the ground that an Appellate Court should interfere with the finding of the first Court unless clearly convinced that it was erroneous, held, that the judgment of the Sessions Judge must be set aside and the appeal heard de novo 6 P. R. 1893 where 5 A. 386 was not followed, 5 P. R. 1876, Note 3 to s. 424.

31. Appellate Court cannot decline to interfere because the matter is a trifle, but must proceed according to law.—A first-class Magistrate convicted the accused under s. 480 and sentenced him to a fine of one pice. In appeal the Sessions Judge declined to interfere, observing that the matter was merely a trifle. It did not appear whether the Sessions Judge referred to the act of the accused or to the punishment as being merely a trifle. Held that the Sessions Judge had not heard the appeal as he was bound by law to do and come to a finding as to whether the conviction was legal or illegal therefore his order must be reversed and the appeal must be re-heard, Ratanlal 978

B — APPEALS AGAINST ACQUITTALS

32. In both appeals benefit of doubt must be given to accused.—Only one broad rule can be laid down with regard to the consideration of evidence in all criminal cases and that is that the innocence of the accused person must be presumed, 20 C. W. N. 128 = 17 Cr. L. J. 9. In an appeal against acquittal, the benefit of doubt is against the appellant, whereas in appeal against conviction the benefit is in favour of the appellant, 15 P. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 66.

33. Is no difference to be observed in dealing with appeals from acquittal and conviction ?—

(i) No special rules for dealing with evidence in appeal from acquittal — Only one broad rule can be laid down with regard to the consideration of evidence in all criminal cases, and that is that the innocence of the accused person must be presumed, and the burden lies upon the prosecution of completely rebutting that presumption. If after the consideration of the whole evidence any doubt is felt by the Court as to the guilt of any accused person he is entitled to the benefit of that doubt, and the verdict must be in his favour, of course due weight must be given to the decision of the Court below and the reasons advanced for that decision. Apart from this, however, an appeal from an acquittal must be considered in precisely the same manner as all other cases are considered and it must be determined whether the evidence is such as to warrant a conviction of the accused 20 C. W. N. 128 = 17 Cr. L. J. 9. In the appeal from acquittal if the High Court thinks the Lower Court has taken an erroneous view of the evidence, it has no jurisdiction to refuse to convict. The Code makes no distinction between an appeal from a conviction and an appeal from an acquittal, 9 S. L. R. 17 = 16 Cr. L. J. 604, where it was held that the view taken in 17 C. 435 and 19 B. 31 was the correct one. There is nothing in the language of s. 417 to limit appeals against acquittals to cases in which Courts have, owing to some error of law or misappreciation of evidence, come to a wrong decision on the evidence before them. There is no distinction in the Code between the right of appeal in an acquittal and the right of appeal against a conviction both being governed by the same rules and being subject to the same limitations 17 C. 435; 7 P. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 781, 33 M. 1023. There is no distinction in the Code between the right of appeal against an acquittal and a right of appeal against conviction. In both these cases the appellant has to satisfy the Court that there does exist some good and strong ground apparent upon the record for interfering with the deliberate determination by a Judge who has had all the evidence before him and has arrived at the determination with that great advantage in his favour, 20 A. 459; 36 A. 163, Weir II, 462; 17 C. 435. Sound principles of criminal jurisprudence require that the indications of error in the judgment of acquittal ought to be clearer and more palpable and the evidence more cogent and convincing in order to justify its being set aside than would be necessary in the case of conviction, 7 P. R. 1914 = 97 P. L. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 781. It is immaterial that the Appeal Court might have arrived at a different conclusion. The indications of mistake must be obvious or the evidence too strong to be rejected before the Appeal Court should interfere, 123 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 203. See also 7 P. W. R. 1916 = 47 Cr. L. J. 97; 27 P. W. R. 1914 = 123 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 203 and 17 Cr. L. J. 194 (Pun)

Contra—High Court will not usually interfere unless the Original Court has grossly blundered through perversity or incompetence—Unless the judgment of the Court below was wrong and perverse or without jurisdiction and based on obvious errors in procedure, the High Court should uphold the decision or the Magistrate though wrong, because it would be based at the most on a doubtful weighing of facts and not on any irregularity or negligence or other matter going to the jurisdiction or the regularity of the trial, 16 C. W. N. 666 = 15 Cr. L. J. 160. The High Court will not interfere in appeal from an acquittal unless the judgment of the Court was clearly wrong and the judgment either perverse or based on obvious errors of procedure, 30 M. 44; 16 Cr. L. J. 829 (M). It is not because a Judge or a Magistrate has taken a view of a case in which that of Government does not coincide, and has acquitted the accused persons, that an appeal from his decision must necessarily prevail, or that this Court should be called upon to disturb the ordinary course of justice by putting in force the arbitrary powers conferred on it by this section. The doing so should be limited to those instances in which the Lower Court has so obstinately blundered and gone wrong as to produce a result mischievous at once to the administration of justice and the interest of the public, 4 A. 143, followed in 9 A. 528 (F.B.) 1852 A. W. N. 64 and 16 A. 212, where it was held that when the judgment appealed from is based upon the facts and the conclusions of the Court are such as may be reasonably arrived at upon the facts found, an appeal on behalf of Government should not be entertained. See also 16 C. 310; 11 P. R. 1903 and 14 P. L. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 65 and 26 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 525. The Ruling in 4 A. 143 was dissented from by the Chief Court of Punjab. They said "Section 417 appeals to us to place the Local Government in no better or worse position in appealing from an acquittal than a convicted person in appealing from a conviction, and, it appears to us, legislating rather than interpreting the law, to weight a Government appeal with the necessity of showing that the Court below, 'obstinately' blundered or 'has so gone wrong as to produce result mischievous at once to the administration of justice and the interests of the public, unless every illegal acquittal be held to fulfil the latter description, while the former requirement would make the provisions of this section a dead letter in almost every conceivable case,' 29 P. R. 1885. (See, however, 7 P. R. 1904) Technically speaking, no doubt, the learned Judges are right, but appeal against an acquittal is an extraordinary remedy not recognized by any civilized country, introduced in this country for the first time by the Code of 1872 (see 14 W. R. 29) like many others of similar kind, viz, enhancement of punishment (by Court of appeal now partially abolished), differential treatment of European British subjects from the rest of the population, the rule for calling out and employing the military in aid of the civil power, etc. (See Dr WHITLEY STOKES remarks in the Note at the head of Chapter IX.)

(ii) In an appeal from an acquittal the High Court is a Court of Appeal on matters of fact as well as of law and must decide questions of fact from the whole of the evidence on record, 9 C. L. J. 378 = 10 Cr. L. J. 499.

34. High Court will not interfere with order of acquittal unless case is of sufficient consequence.—See Notes 4 to 12 to s. 417. The powers conferred by cl. (1) (a) of this section are exceptional and the High Court will not exercise its discretion by setting aside an order of acquittal unless it be satisfied that the case is of sufficient consequence. The accused were charged under s. 24 of the Sea Customs Act VI of 1863, and convicted upon appeal the Sessions Judge quashed the conviction on the ground that the offence of importation of salt did not fall under that section, but under s. 194. On appeal by Government the High Court said that in strictness of law, the Sessions Judge was right in saying that the offence was not made out, still they were inclined to think that, instead of acquitting the prisoners, he (the Judge) might properly have come to the conclusion that they had not really been prejudiced in their defence, and have allowed the conviction to stand for the offence of which they were manifestly guilty. On such a matter of discretion it would be a strong thing to re-establish the conviction even if so doing would be legal, 7 M. H. C. R. 339. In a similar case, the Bombay High Court ordered re-trial, 12 B. H. C. R. 1.

Y.—APPEALS TO HIGH COURT FROM ACQUITTALS—SUB-SEC. (1) (a).

35. Power of High Court to direct further inquiry.—High Court can direct Presidency Magistrates to make further inquiry in cases of acquittal, 7 C. W. N. 521 and in cases of discharge, 38 C. 994. Direction as to further inquiry can be made by the High Court under this section, only in the case of an appeal from an order of acquittal but not in the case of an order of dismissal or discharge, 27 C. 126 dissenting from 26 C. 748. See Note 44 under Heading VI to s. 439.

36. Where acquittal order resulted from fraud, re-trial is proper.—Where a Court of Session had been deceived, e.g., by alteration in a document, and fraudulently led to pronounce an order of acquittal, the High Court reversed such order and directed a new trial—M H C Pro, 24th April 1883; whereon an erroneous view of the law, the Sessions Judge on appeal acquitted the accused, the High Court, on the appeal to Government, set aside this order, and as the appeal had not been heard on the merits, ordered the re-hearing of the appeal by the Sessions Judge. 24 W. R. 41. See Note 23.

37. Powers of High Court in appeals against acquittal in jury trial limited to points of law.—See s. 418 and Notes thereto. The appeal in such cases will be limited to a point of law, 10 C. 1029. But where a real misdirection as to a material part of the charge is established, it was held the High Court was bound to consider the evidence in the case in order to determine if the misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice [s. 537 (d)] and if the verdict is erroneous [sub-sec. (2)], it may then convict or acquit the accused according to the view it takes of the evidence, or may if it thinks fit, order a re-trial [sub-sec. (1) (a)], 5 W. R. 80 (F.B.) = B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 459. The High Court is not bound in all cases to order a re-trial, except where it thinks that a different verdict is possible on any view of the evidence, 26 M. 1, where 21 C. 328 and 935 and 25 C. 230 are commented on and L. R. 1894, A. C. 57 distinguished and 14 B. 115 approved. In a case of misdirection the High Court can consider the evidence and if after so doing, it forms the opinion that the evidence cannot in any proper view of the case, support a conviction it will not alter or reverse the acquittal. The introduction of the words "in fact" in s. 537 (d), is to emphasize the duty of the Court to go into the merits, before interfering in consequence of a misdirection.—PER BENSON J in 26 M. 1.

38. Powers of High Court in other trials.—The High Court in appeals under s. 417 is a Court of Appeal on the facts as well as law and it is the duty of the High Court to consider whether as a matter of fact there is or is not sufficient evidence on the record, 9 C. L. J. 378 = 10 Cr. L. J. 499.

39. Reverse or alter.—'Reverse' means to set aside, to make null. To 'alter' means to substitute a finding of 'guilty' for 'not guilty' or vice-versa.—PER BENSON, J., in 26 M. 1 at p. 15.

40. Procedure where original trial illegal.—On an appeal under s. 417 from the order of acquittal of the Sessions Judge, passed an appeal from a conviction by a Magistrate, the High Court held that the original trial was illegal as it contravened the provisions of s. 233. PER BATTY, J. 'though it was open to the High Court under sub-sec. (1) (a) to reverse the order of acquittal and to order that the accused be re-tried, such an order was not necessary or possible in the present case. There had been no legal trial and therefore there had been no legal acquittal and hence no valid appeal from an acquittal. The High Court had therefore no acquittal to reverse, and the question whether, the accused should be tried legally, was a question not for judicial decision, but for the Government.' 29 B. 449 at p. 467.

(A) RE-TRIALS—SUB-SEC. (1) (b) (1)

41. Power to allow objections, not distinctly raised in the grounds of appeal.—See Note 24.

42. Appellate Court bound to see what possible object could be served by fresh trial.—Where all the evidence, on which a conviction for any offence could be sustained had been put before the Court of First Instance, the Appellate Court should before quashing a conviction and directing a new trial, come to a certain conclusion as to the offence which the accused is shown by the evidence to have committed, and should consider whether, if the evidence showed that the accused should have been convicted of another offence than that charged, he would be prejudiced by amending the conviction. Before ordering a re-trial, the Appellate Court is bound to see what possible object could be served by a fresh trial, WELF II, 430. Where a rule nisi was issued to show cause why the conviction should not be set aside and a re-trial ordered, and it appeared that the accused had already suffered the whole imprisonment, less one day, the Court in setting aside the conviction did not direct a re-trial, 3 C. W. N. 332.

43. Re-trial should not be ordered when there is no irregularity or defect.—Where the evidence recorded by the Magistrate was as full as the law required it to be, and where there was no irregularity of procedure or defect in the inquiry which made it necessary that the case should be re-tried, the Sessions Judge had no authority to order the re-trial of the accused on appeal. He should have considered, on the evidence given before the Magistrate, whether the conviction should be sustained, or whether it ought to be altered, or whether the accused was entitled to an acquittal, Ratanlal 530.

44. Re-trial should not be ordered to enable prosecution to fill up gaps in the evidence.—A re-trial should not be ordered where the charges fail not because they were deficient in form, but because the evidence adduced is not enough to support the charges, 17 C. W. N. 479 = 14 Cr. L. J. 219; 23 M. L. J. 379. A re-trial should not be ordered where the evidence is untrustworthy and discrepant, 20 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 131. A re-trial should not be ordered for the sole object of enabling the prosecution to reconcile discrepancies and fill up deficiency in their evidence pointed out by the appellant, 3 Bur. L. T. 9 = 11 Cr. L. J. 634. A re-trial should not be ordered where the prosecution of its own negligence failed to produce evidence which it was bound to. Per SUNDARA AIVAR, J., in 35 M. 457. But if the prosecution was ready to adduce evidence, e.g., the publication of a libel and the Magistrate intervened and held that it was unnecessary as it had already been proved by the production of the newspaper, held that the case was one in which a re-trial may properly be ordered, 35 M. 457. An Appellate Court should not order a re-trial on the sole ground that some additional witnesses ought to have been examined for the prosecution, especially when the prosecution was conducted by a pleader and it was not shown that he had exercised an improper discretion in not calling the witnesses, 31 C. 710. See 35 M. 1023, where it was held that an acquittal may be set aside on appeal when it has been obtained by fraud or trick of the accused. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 193 (N.).

45. Proper order when Magistrate has refused to take defence evidence.—Where the Magistrate had refused to take the defence for the accused, the proper order for the Sessions Judge to pass in appeal under this section is to set aside the conviction and sentence passed on the accused and direct the Magistrate to re-commence the proceedings against the accused from the stage when his evidence was refused. 28 P. R. 1884. An Appellate Court should not set aside a conviction on the ground that all the witnesses cited for the defence were not examined. The proper course in such a case is to have the evidence taken of the other witnesses before disposing of the appeal, Weir II, 431; 16 A. L. J. 323.

46. When re-trial may be ordered.—Re-trial may be ordered when trial was illegal, irregular or defective. Power not confined to cases where trial was held by Court having no jurisdiction.—A re-trial may be ordered where the trial is held to be illegal on the ground of misjoinder of charges. A re-trial would also be proper where evidence has been improperly rejected or where the accused was rightly acquitted of one offence, the Appellate Court comes to the conclusion that he ought to have been tried for another. Appellate Court should come to the conclusion that the trial was not properly held for one reason or other. 36 M. 457. In 27 C. 172, it was held, that the power of an Appellate Court to order a new trial conferred on it by sub-sec. (1), cl. (b) is not confined to the case where the conviction and sentence is set aside for want of jurisdiction in the Court that tried the case. A re-trial may properly be ordered where the original trial is void for want of jurisdiction or for misjoinder, or where the enquiry has been obviously superficial and material witnesses have not been examined, 3 Bur. L. T. 9 = 11 Cr. L. J. 634. But it is not in every case of error, that the High Court will direct a re-trial. In 7 W. R. 3, where the appellants had been wrongly convicted, as abettors, instead of as principals, the High Court declined to interfere. So, too, in 3 B. H. C. R. 42, where the accused was wrongly convicted of cheating by personation, when he should have been convicted of giving false information.

(i) When charge is defective and has misled accused.—Apart from the general power conferred by cl. (b) of this section, a Session Judge is empowered by s. 232 to direct a re-trial to be had upon a charge, framed in whatever manner he thinks fit, on the ground that the accused has been misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or a defect in the charge. Thus, where certain owners of land were convicted under s. 154 or s. 155, 1 P. C., for acts or omissions on the part of their agents and the charges framed by the Magistrate against them, referred only to the knowledge and belief and acts and omissions of the accused themselves, the Sessions Judge on appeal held that by reason of the omission to insert the words "or their agents or managers" in the charge, the accused had been seriously prejudiced in their defence and directed a re-trial upon charges as amended. It was contended that the words "order him to be re-tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction" in cl. (1) (b) were borrowed from s. 234 of the 1872 Code and they indicated that the Appellate Court had no power to order a re-trial except in cases where the previous trial was held by a Court having no jurisdiction. But it was decided that the power to order re-trial was not so limited, 7 C. W. N. 201, which follows 15 A. 203, 23 C. 975.

27 C. 172 and 23 C. 104 In the last quoted ruling, PRINSEY and HANDLEY, JJ, doubted whether an Appellate Court had, apart from s 232 a general power under this section to order a re-trial.

(11) Where trial bad for misjoinder of parties—An Appellate Court in discharging the accused on the ground of misjoinder of parties, has power to add to that order a direction that the accused should be re-tried. The Court is not bound to remain silent and leave further proceedings to the discretion of the Magistrate. A fresh trial can be had because the accused have not been acquitted. When the evidence before the Appellate Court is mixed up, it is not bound to see whether there was evidence on which a re-trial could properly take place, 29 C. 104; 9 N. L. R. 42 = 14 Cr. L. J. 230.

(12) Where proceedings have been irregular and the irregularity has prejudiced the accused—S and four others were prosecuted for an offence under the Indian Forest Act. All but S admitted their guilt, but were nevertheless kept as accused persons during the trial, their statements being used against S. All were convicted and S appealed. The Appellate Court being of opinion (inter alia) that S must have been seriously prejudiced by the irregular procedure followed in that the other accused, who pleaded guilty, were kept in the dock instead of being examined as witnesses, when S would have had an opportunity of cross-examining them, set aside the conviction and directed that S should be re-tried. Against this order S applied in revision, alleging that in the circumstances he should have been discharged. Held, that the order of the Appellate Court was proper one. Ratanlal 933. A second-class Magistrate having jurisdiction convicted the accused upon evidence which was not given in their presence and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on appeal, ordered that the accused should be re-tried and the District Magistrate, doubting whether the Sub-Divisional Magistrate had power under this section to pass such an order, referred the case to the High Court. Held, that the order of the Appellate Court was perfectly legal. Weir II, 431; 23 C. 63. When a Sessions Court consider that the proceedings have been irregular and the irregularity has prejudiced the accused, he is competent to order a re-trial of the accused without referring the case to the High Court, 1893 A. W. N. 99.

(13) Is order for re-trial proper where conviction is for minor offence by competent Magistrate?—1893 A. W. N. 11. Held, that the convicting Magistrate was competent to convict and sentence and order re-trial of the accused. The Appellate Court that the convicting Magistrate was not competent to punish the accused adequately, 16 P. R. 1895. Quare Why not report the case then to the High Court for enhancement of sentence? Compare 15 A. 205, 16 B 590, 23 C. 350; 17 C. P. L. R. 97. Again where the accused had been convicted of a minor offence and appeals from the conviction, the Sessions Judge can acting under cl. (1) (b) of this section set aside the conviction, and order a re-trial for the graver offence, even though the prosecution, at the previous trial, had adduced all the available evidence, 11 C. W. N. 100. Where, however, a second-class Magistrate convicted the accused under s 182 I P C., though he found that the facts constituted also an offence under s 211, I P C., which was triable by a first-class Magistrate and on appeal, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, though he considered the accused guilty under s 182 I P C., acquitted him on the ground that he should have been tried by a first class Magistrate for the graver offence under s. 211, I P C. Held, that the procedure of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate acquitting the accused was wrong. Weir II, 432. This ruling was followed in 2 M. L. T. R. 493, where it was laid down that the conviction for the minor offence is not to be set aside, especially where the interests of public justice may not require a fresh trial for the graver offence.

47. Is it necessary to order re-trial where original trial void for want of jurisdiction?—Where a Magistrate tried and convicted an accused for an offence triable exclusively by a Court of Session and on appeal, the conviction was set aside and the accused discharged. Held, that the Appellate Court could not order a re-trial as the proceedings of the Magistrate were void and could not in any sense be regarded as a trial. There was nothing to prevent fresh proceedings being taken, 29 C. 412, 12 C. W. N. 246. Where on appeal the conviction is set aside, the Appellate Court is not bound to hold the trial, but may direct the accused to be re-tried without such order, to hold an inquiry and commit, 29 C. 412.

43 Order of re-trial may be made subsequent to annulling conviction.—When a Sessions Judge on appeal annuls the conviction of a Magistrate for want of jurisdiction and omits to order a re-trial at the time under cl. (1) (b) of this section, he is not precluded by s. 369 from passing such an order subsequently, 3 M. 43; 23 C. 350.

43-A. Reversal of conviction by the Appellate Court on a preliminary ground is not an acquittal, the question of re-trial may be left to the Crown.—The reversal of the conviction and sentence by the Appellate Court on the ground of non-compliance with the provisions of s 380, leaving the question of re-trial to the District Magistrate is not an order of acquittal of the accused. The order of the Appellate Court leaving the question of re-trial to the discretion of the Crown authorities is legal, and the District Magistrate has power to direct the same. 53 C. 192.

49. Jury trials.—Power of High Court.—See Notes 37 and 101 and s. 417

50. Appellate Court can order re-trial by particular Subordinate Court.—When an Appellate Court reverses a conviction and sentence under this section, it can order re-trial of the appellant by a competent Subordinate Court, and there is nothing in the section which prevents the specification by the Appellate Court of a particular Subordinate Court, Ratanlal 367.

51. Is Appellate Court itself competent to re-try or must re-trial be by Subordinate Court?—An Appellate Court cannot, while reversing the conviction recorded against and the sentence passed upon the accused by Subordinate Magistrate, direct that the case should be tried by itself. Such a direction is plainly illegal and the re-trial under this section, if ordered, must be by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to the Appellate Court, Ratanlal 382. See 4 C. W. N. 576, where MACLEAN, C.J., expressed a doubt whether the High Court could itself re-try. But in 30 M. 228, it was held, following Weir II, 431, that where a conviction by a second class Magistrate is appealed against, the Appellate Magistrate may himself proceed to try the offender, although the offence is one within the ordinary jurisdiction of the Subordinate Magistrate, the Appellate Magistrate need not necessarily refer it to another competent Magistrate. The words "order him to be tried by a Court subordinate to such Appellate Court" are not words of limitation and do not exclude the Appellate Court from itself trying the offender, if the offence is one within the ordinary jurisdiction of the Appellate Magistrate, but if the Appellate Court happens to be the Court of Session except in cases in which it is expressly empowered to take cognizance of an offence as a Court of Original jurisdiction, it has no power itself to hold the re-trial, unless a valid commitment has been made by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf, 1907 A. W. N. 178 = 6 Cr. L. J. 7, where 22 G. 50 is referred to and see s. 193

52. High Court may direct re-hearing of appeal by Lower Appellate Court.—See Note 12 to s 424. In 43 P. W. R. 1912 = 7 P. L. R. 1913 = 13 Cr. L. J. 737 following 13 B. 866, it was held that the High Court has power under this section to order re-trial of an appeal by a Sessions Court. Where a Sessions Judge, as an Appellate Court reversed a conviction erroneously on a technical point and acquitted the accused, the High Court set aside his order, on appeal by Government, and directed the Sessions Court to hear the appeal on the merits, 24 W. R. 41

53. Re-trial may be directed on fresh charge framed on recorded evidence.—When an Appellate Court orders under sub-sec. (1) (b) that a convicted person be retried, it may, in a suitable case, direct at the same time that the new proceedings should commence with the framing of a proper charge on the evidence already on record, 8 N. L. R. 42 = 14 Cr. L. J. 230, 25 C. 863 explained

54. Where no express limitation stated, order of re-trial applies to all charges framed by Original Court.—Where an accused person is charged with and tried for various offences arising out of a single act or series of acts, it being doubtful which of those offences the act or acts constitute and where he has been acquitted by the verdict of a jury of some or such offences and convicted of others and appeals against such conviction, and where the Appellate Court reverses the verdict of the jury and orders a re-trial without any express limitation as to the charges upon which such trial is to be held, such re-trial must be taken to be upon all the charges as originally framed, and the acquittal by the jury on the previous trial upon some of such charges is no bar to the accused being tried on them again, as, having regard to the provisions of this section, s. 403 in that respect cannot apply to such cases, 22 C. 377. When a conviction is set aside and a re-trial is ordered the whole case is re-opened and the accused must be tried again on all the charges originally framed 13 Cr. L. J. 497 (C). The High Court has no jurisdiction in ordering a re-trial to uphold the conviction under one sentence and to order him to be re-tried under another, 15 C. W. N. 909 = 13 Cr. L. J. 715.

55. Evidence cannot be restricted when re-trial ordered.—Where an Appellate Court passes an order of remand under this section it cannot restrict the evidence to be taken to that mentioned in its order, but, it should refer the case to be retried in view of the instructions contained in its order. In such a case it is open to the accused person to adduce such additional evidence as he may desire, 3 C. L. J. 303 = 3 Cr. L. J. 304. See s. 428.

B—COMMITTAL FOR TRIAL.—SUB-SEC. (1) (b) (i)

56. Where Appellate Court orders committal, no preliminary inquiry needed.—Where a Sessions Judge on appeal acting under sub-sec. (1) (b) annulled conviction and directed the committal of the accused, it was held that there was no need of preliminary inquiry by the committing Magistrate before commitment, Weir II. 479. Where a Magistrate tries a case which is exclusively triable by the Court of Session and convicts and sentences the accused and such conviction and sentence are subsequently annulled by the Court of Session, but not the proceedings held at such trial, the Magistrate may commit the accused to the Court of Session on the record as it stands, i.e., on the evidence given before him at the previous trial without taking evidence de novo, 2 A. 910. Thus, where a Subordinate Magistrate convicted the accused under ss 323 and 379, I P C., and on appeal, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate having come to the conclusion, that the facts constituted robbery and that the Sub-Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the case, submitted the records to the District Magistrate for orders. Held, that the proper course was to follow the course laid down in sub-sect. (1)(b)(1) of this section and that if there was no Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to the Appellate Court to try the offence of robbery, it was competent to the Appellate Court to direct the committal of the case to the Court of Session, Weir II. 484.

57. Appellate Court can order commitment in cases not exclusively triable by Court of Session.—It is competent to a Session Judge acting as a Court of Appeal, having reversed the finding and sentence to order the commitment of the appellant to the Sessions for trial. There is nothing in this section to limit his power to do any of the acts which he as an Appellate Court is empowered to do by cl (1)(b), 15 A. 205 where 8 A. 14 and 1885 A. W. N. 288 were dissented from, 27 C. 172; 16 P. R. 1895; 18 B. 580; 23 C. 350. Such commitment is quite different from an enhancement of sentence, though as a result of trial at the Sessions, the appellant gets a heavier sentence. The power of ordering a new trial merely for the purpose of enhancing punishment is a power that ought to be very sparingly exercised, 13 A. L. J. 477 = 16 Cr. L. J. 433.

58. Commitment may be ordered when sentence required by law for the offence has not been and could not be passed by the Magistrate.—If a Magistrate ignores circumstances of aggravation, which show that an offence beyond his jurisdiction was in fact committed and tries and convicts on the same facts within his jurisdiction, his proceedings are not void. When the Magistrate convicts of an offence which he is competent to try, the Sessions Judge is not competent on appeal, to set aside the conviction and sentence and direct the accused to be committed for an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session on the ground the proceedings are void under s. 530. He should not direct the commitment to be made in such a case, unless he is of opinion that the accused had been prejudiced or that the sentence is inadequate, 24 M. 675.

59. Appeal Court cannot commit to itself.—The Sessions Judge has no power to commit the accused to his own Court 1907 A. W. N. 173. See Note 51.

60. Commitment may be made only after reversing conviction.—Appeal Court except High Court cannot set aside acquittal.—In a case where the accused were charged under ss. 143, 147, 323 and 379, I P C., the second class Magistrate acquitted them of theft and convicted them on the other charges. On appeal by the accused, the Deputy Magistrate holding that the offence of theft had been committed and that it amounted in essence, Held, that the words 'reverse the finding and on which the conviction is based and do not empower other than a High Court) to reverse or set aside any decision ignores the powers conferred by cl (b)(2) and was dissented from in 34 M. 556 and 35 M. 243. So also where the petitioners were tried for offences under ss 143 and 325 read with s. 149, I P C., and acquitted of those offences, but convicted under s. 323, I P C., and an appeal from conviction, the District Magistrate acquitted the accused of the offence under s. 323, I P C., and ordered re trial, and on the Subordinate Magistrate proceeding to try the petitioner under s. 147, etc., held, that the re-trial, cannot proceed, as the petitioners have been acquitted under ss. 147 and 325 read with s. 149 by the offences. Then cannot be re-tried

VII.—ALTERATION OF FINDING.

A—MAINTAINING THE SENTENCE

61. Appellate Court may alter finding of acquittal into one of conviction.—When an act or a series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, an appeal from a conviction for anyone of such offences must lay the whole case open to the interference of the Appellate Court, notwithstanding any order of acquittal in regard to any other of the offences, 21 C. 371.

In an appeal from conviction, the Appellate Court can under this section alter the finding of the Lower Court and find the appellant guilty of an offence of which he was acquitted by that Court, provisions of s 403 notwithstanding, 3 C. 975 followed in 27 C. 172. The charge against the accused was under ss. 148 and 325, 1 P. C. The Magistrate acquitted the accused under s 148, but convicted under s 325, 1 P. C. The accused then appealed to the Sessions Judge who was of opinion that the accused should have been convicted under s. 147, but thought he could not interfere with the acquittal, held following 23 W. 975 that it was open to the Sessions Judge under sub-sec. (b) (2) to alter the finding maintaining the sentence and there is nothing to restrict the finding which may be altered to a finding of conviction (26 M. 478 not followed) 34 M. 543, 8 A. L. J. 1239 = 12 Cr. L. J. 572; 35 M. 243; 37 M. 119; U. B. R. (1911) 4 Qr. 100 = 13 Cr. L. J. 457, 12 P. R. 1904; 34 A. 115. There is only one restriction on the powers of a Court of Appeal. It cannot enhance the sentence under appeal 24 C. 979; 15 A. 205, 22 C. 377; 23 C. 975 holds in general terms that under s 423, in an appeal from conviction the Appellate Court can alter the finding of acquittal into one of conviction. The reason given is that there is no reason to limit the meaning of the words 'alter the finding' in s 423 (b) (2) only to a finding of conviction. Therefore as long as the sentence is maintained without enhancement a Court of Appeal can convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction under s. 423 (b) (2).

In 26 M. 478 it was held that under s 423 a Deputy Magistrate has no power to reverse an order of acquittal. The words 'reverse the finding and sentence' in clause 1 (b) of that section mean reverse a finding upon which a conviction is based and do not empower the appellate tribunal (or at any rate an appellate tribunal other than a High Court) to reverse or set aside an acquittal. In this case 23 C. 975 was explained.

And in 35 M. 243 it is held that in cases not falling under ss 237 and 238 of the Code the Appellate Court cannot convict a person of an offence with which he was not charged in the first Court. But where he has been charged and the first Court has recorded a finding of acquittal on that charge there is no reason for holding that the Appellate Court can alter the finding provided the sentence is not enhanced.

In 27 C. W. N. 555 where the trial Court convicted the accused under s 143, 1 P. C., but acquitted them of the offence under s 379 1 P. C., and the Appellate Court while upholding the conviction under s 143, 1 P. C., and the sentence set aside the acquittal under s 379, held, that the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to set aside the acquittal of the petitioner when he upheld the conviction under s 143, 1 P. C. It was not a case of altering the conviction which was within his powers under s. 423 of the Code.

62. On appeal High Court may alter finding and enhance sentence.—The effect of reading ss. 423 and 439 together is that the High Court when hearing an appeal against a conviction may under cl. (b) of s. 423 alter the finding and then as a Court of Revision may under s 439 enhance the sentence so as to make it appropriate to the altered finding. S 439 (4) does not limit the powers of a Court of Appeal 37 M. 119. It is only the High Court that is given this power. In this case the High Court on appeal altered the finding from s 304 to s. 302 1 P. C. and enhanced the sentence. See 1 Rang 436. But See 27 Bom. L. R. 335 = 49 Bom. 450.

63. When Appellate Court may alter charge or finding and convict accused for offence which his acts properly constitute?—(s) When accused has met the new charge and is not prejudiced by alteration—If the prosecution establishes certain acts constituting an offence and the Court misapplies the law by charging and convicting an accused person for an offence other than that for which he should have been properly charged, and if, notwithstanding such error, the accused has by his defence endeavoured to meet the acquisition of the commission of these acts, then the Appellate Court may alter the charge or finding and convict him for an offence which those acts properly constitute, provided the accused be not prejudiced by the alteration in the finding. Such an error is one of form rather than of substance, and the alteration by an Appellate Court of the charge or finding would not necessitate a re-trial expressly on a charge of the offence, 26 C. 683. The exercise of this discretion must be regulated largely by a consideration of what was the nature of the evidence in respect of the charge upon which a person was convicted and whether the evidence reasonably supports the particular charge to which the former charge is to be altered, and whether the accused person will in any way be prejudiced or injured by the alteration of the charge (s 474 to s. 193, 1 P. C.), 1890 A. W. N. 86. The Appellate Court must look to the offence as charged and determine whether it is proved or not. It has nothing to do with the form the offence may take owing to subsequent events. A conviction for an offence for which the accused was tried, will not prevent his conviction, if guilty, of another distinct offence subsequently committed, 9 W. R. 65. Where the evidence showed that there were six robbers, but three were acquitted, the conviction of the rest under s 391, 1 P. C., was on appeal altered into one for robbery, s. 392, 1 P. C., 7 M. L. T. 345 = 1910 M. W. N. 52 = 11 Cr. L. J. 249. In (1912) M. W. N. 1110 = 15 Cr. L. J. 239, a conviction under s. 353, 1 P. C., altered into one under s. 183, 1 P. C. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 384 (M.).

(iv) Conviction for offence cannot be altered into conviction for abetment of that offence—Though under this section the Appellate Court has power to alter a finding, that power cannot be used arbitrarily but only in accordance with other provisions of this Code which are to be found in ss 237 238. When a person has been charged with a certain offence and has been convicted of that offence, the Appellate Court cannot on finding that the conviction is not sustainable, convict the accused of abetment of that offence, 41 Bom. H. C. R. 240 followed, 33 M. 284; 13 Cr. L. J. 203 (M.), 13 Cr. L. J. 223 (M.), 15 Cr. L. J. 694 (M.). See, however, Note 2 under s. 237 at p. 674. See also 42 C. 1094 = 19 C. W. N. 1239. See 26 Bom. L. R. 323, but see 3 Rang. 11 (contra).

(v) Conviction ought not to be altered into one for a more serious offence—As a general principle it would be improper and unfair to an accused person that on his appeal he should be convicted of a more serious offence to which he had never pleaded on his trial, especially if the offence, which the Appellate Court might consider to be established was not cognate to the offence of which he had been tried and convicted, if there were circumstances of aggravation of an offence to which the accused had not pleaded, 26 C. 63; 3 C. W. N. 367; 6 C. L. R. 427. For exceptions to this rule, see ss 236 237 and 238. It is not competent to an Appellate Court to find a prisoner on appeal guilty of a graver offence than that with which he was charged at his trial, unless an opportunity is afforded to the accused of defending himself against the charge so altered (e.g., from ss 143 to s 147, 1 P. C.), 6 C. L. R. 427. In 4 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 16 the accused was convicted of cheating. Though the facts found constituted criminal breach of trust, the conviction and sentence were maintained. See 7 W. R. 3.

63 Alterations which have been held to be illegal—(i) Alteration of ss 211 and 109 to s 193, 1 P. C.—In proceedings taken in a charge of abetment of an offence punishable under s. 211, 1 P. C., it would be improper to convict the accused of intentionally giving false evidence (s. 193) as the two offences are entirely of a different character, and in making a defence on a charge of the first named offence the accused could not be regarded as pleading to a charge of intentionally giving false evidence in regard to some particular statement 3 C. W. N. 367.

(i) Alteration of the charge illegal when the nature of the case is changed—A charge cannot be so altered by an Appellate Court as to make it necessary for an accused to meet an absolutely different case from that with which he is charged in the Court of the committing Magistrate. 23 A. L. J. R. 924.

(ii) Alteration of s 376 to s. 366, 1 P. C.—The alteration of the finding must be of an offence charged or of some cognate offence and not of an offence which should have formed the subject of a new and separate charge. Thus, where on appeal, the conviction under s. 376 1 P. C., was altered into one under s. 366, 1 P. C., the alteration was held to be improper, as the latter charge involved different elements and different questions of fact from the former, 8 Bom. L. R. 120; 3 Rang. 63.

(iii) Alteration of s. 379 to s. 143 1 P. C.—The appellate judgment altering a conviction under s. 379, 1 P. C., into one under s. 143, 1 P. C., was set aside on the ground that the latter was an offence with which the accused was never charged and regarding which he had never been called upon to enter upon his defence and moreover it was an offence of an entirely different character from theft for which alone the accused had been tried, 27 C. 860.

(iv) Alteration of s 323 to s 143—The accused were convicted of an offence under s. 323, 1 P. C.

(v) Charge under s 443, 1 P. C., ought not to be added—An addition by the Appellate Court to charges under ss. 451 and 426, 1 P. C., of a charge under s. 143, 1 P. C., is not permissible. The addition of this section would have the effect of enforcing a constructive responsibility for individual acts of all persons who were members at the time of the assembly, whereas it would be necessary to prove the guilt of each of the persons charged for his individual acts if the charges were only under ss. 451 and 426, 1 P. C., 15 Cr. L. J. 737 (M.).

(vi) Alteration of s 143 to s 223, 1 P. C.—Where a Magistrate convicted the accused on the only charge of rioting, and on appeal, the Sessions Judge acquitted them of rioting but convicted them of house-trespass and hurt. Held on revision that these latter offences were distinct and separate offences which should have formed the subject of separate charges, and as the accused were prejudiced by the omission of the charges the conviction could not be sustained, 30 C. 288. In 35 C. 233 and 18 C. W. N. 1276 = 15 Cr. L. J. 704 it was held that a conviction under s. 147 could not be altered into one under s. 323, 1 P. C. See also Ratanlal 353; 30 C. W. N. 528.

(vii) Alteration of ss 447 and 357 to s. 379, 1 P. C.—In 7 M. L. T. 202 = 11 Cr. L. J. 340, it was held that where an Appellate Court altered the conviction under ss. 447 and 357, 1 P. C., into one under s. 379, 1 P. C., the conviction was wrong as the accused had no opportunity of answering the charge of theft, 27 C. 660 and 36 C. 233 referred to (viii) Alteration of s 406 to s 417, I P C.—An accused charged under s 406, I P C, was convicted under s 417, I P C, without any charge framed against him of having committed any other offences. On appeal the Sessions Judge held that the Magistrate was irregular in convicting of offences under s 417, but he found the evidence recorded disclosed that the appellant had committed offences under s 406, I P C, and he accordingly altered the finding without giving however any opportunity to the accused of showing cause against being convicted by him of offences of which he had been acquitted by the Magistrate. Held, that the Sessions Court's order must be set aside and the appeal must be re heard, 3 L. B. R. 233 = 5 Cr. L. J. 420.

(ix) Different common object for an unlawful assembly.—It is not competent to an Appellate Court while disbelieving the common object of an unlawful assembly, to find out a different common object regarding which the accused were never called upon to plead nor tried, and then to affirm the conviction, 33 C. 295 which follows 27 C. 990; 11 C. W. N. 198, and see s. 215

(x) Conviction under s 411, alteration to s 379 or s 4112.—Where the accused was convicted of the offence of dishonestly receiving stolen property, and the Appellate Court altered the conviction to one under either s 379 or s 411 I P C, held, that the alternative conviction in appeal was illegal, the accused not having been charged with theft and having had no opportunity of meeting such a charge, Ratanlal 385.

66. Power of High Court on revision.—Under s 439, the High Court in its revision it jurisdiction may exercise all the powers given to it as a Court of Appeal by this section. See Notes to s 439

B—REDUCTION OF SENTENCE

67. Where conviction is partly annulled sentence ought to be reduced.—Where a second-class Magistrate convicted the accused under ss 147 and 379, I P C, but passed only a single sentence for both the offences and the Appellate Court while acquitting the accused of the offence under s 379, maintained the sentence in its entirety and also passed an order under s 106. Held, that the Appellate Court having acquitted the accused of one of the offences some reduction of the sentence must be made, unless the Court thinks that the sentence ought not to be reduced, in which case, it should refer the matter to the High Court for enhancement of the sentence, 30 M. 43, where Weir II, 497 (a). 24 C. 316 and 22 B. 780 are followed, 3 M. L. T. 312 = 7 Cr. L. J. 361, 12 Cr. L. J. 454. In 7 M. L. T. 81 = 11 Cr. L. J. 243 it was, however, held that sentence need not be reduced when the conviction for one of two offences charged is set aside by Appellate Court if the inference can be drawn that the Magistrate did not intend to pass any sentence for the offence set aside. Also an Appellate Court is not competent to make an order under s 106 unless the conviction was in the first instance by a Court of the description specified in the first paragraph of that section. See also 29 M. 190; 21 C. 322 and Note 69

68. When combined sentence is passed on conviction of two separate offences, Appellate Court cannot allot part of it to any particular offence.—When a Magistrate on conviction of an accused person of two offences (for which separate sentences ought to have been passed) passed a single sentence, combining imprisonment and fine, held, that the Appellate Court on reversing the conviction for one offence was not justified in treating the sentence of fine as the punishment for the one offence and the sentence of imprisonment as the punishment for the other (no such distinction having been made by the trying Magistrate) and retaining the full sentence of imprisonment, Ratanlal 409.

VIII.—ALTERATION OF NATURE OF SENTENCE SO AS NOT TO ENHANCE SAME.

69. Where conviction on one of several charges is reversed, sentence must also be set aside.—See Note 67. Where an accused is convicted and sentenced by the Lower Court on two separate charges, an Appellate Court has no power in appeal to retain intact the whole sentence when it reverses the conviction on one of the charges, is such a retention has virtually the effect of an enhancement of sentence, 22 B. 780; 45 P. R. 1837, 24 C. 316. It is not competent for a District Magistrate to enhance a sentence on appeal, which would be the case, if he maintains the whole sentence while annulling the conviction under one of several sections under which the Court of first Instance has convicted the accused, Ratanlal 518; Weir II, 497 (a). See also 10 M. L. T. 115 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 97 = 12 Cr. L. J. 454 and 3 M. L. T. 312 = 7 Cr. L. J. 361, where 30 M. 43 is followed. Thus, where a Magistrate had sentenced the accused separately for the two offences he found to be committed, the second offence being under s 221, I P C, and the Sessions Judge on appeal, when reversing the conviction under s 221, allowed both sentences passed by the Magistrate to stand as an aggregate sentence for the convictions substituted in his own Court for the other conviction pronounced by the Magistrate, held, this was virtually an enhancement of the sentence on altering the finding, and therefore in contravention of sub-sec. (1) (d) (3), 45 P. R. 1887. Where the offences are distinct, and require separate charges and separate sentences, then, no doubt, the reversal of one of the two or more convictions must carry with it the sentence appended to it, or in case of an erroneous combined sentence, might necessitate a fresh trial. But where only one offence has been committed, and the Magistrate erroneously splits it into two and passes either two sentences or a combined sentence, the joining up of the erroneous split—whether in conviction or in sentence—and the maintaining of the original sentence cannot be regarded as beyond the powers of the Appellate Court under this section, 3 N. L. R. 67 = 6 Cr. L. J. 43, where 24 C. 316; and 317 (Note), 22 B. 760, 45 P. R. 1887; 26 C. 863 and 8 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 23 are referred to.

70. Appellate Court cannot on appeal pass sentence which original Magistrate was not competent to pass.—See 7 N. L. R. 109 = 13 Cr. L. J. 445, Note 3 at p. 1004

71. If conviction is confirmed, some sentence, though nominal, must be passed.—When an Appellate Court confirms a conviction, but reverses the sentence, it should, if it disapproves of the sentence, pass some other sentence, even though a nominal one Ratanlal 545. But see s. 401 (5) s. 562, Note 89 and 1884 W. R. 27.

72. Is whipping more severe than imprisonment?—We have no data from which the comparative severity of the two sentences of whipping and rigorous imprisonment can be determined, and it is impossible to say how many lashes would be equivalent to a sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a specified period, 6 B. L. R. Appx. XCV = 15 W. R. 7. Thus when the first Court in addition to a sentence of imprisonment passed a sentence of whipping which was contrary to law, and the Appellate Court in setting aside the sentence of whipping, substituted for it a sentence of an additional term of imprisonment, the additional term of imprisonment was cancelled as illegal. Conversely where the Appellate Court reduced the sentence of imprisonment but awarded whipping, it was held the latter sentence was illegal as it virtually amounted to enhancement of sentence. See also Ratanlal 131 and Weir II, 487.

73. Reduction of imprisonment with fresh imposition of fine, whether an enhancement of sentence.—Alteration of a sentence of four months' rigorous imprisonment to one of three months' rigorous imprisonment, and a fine of Rs. 10 or, in default a further term of six weeks' rigorous imprisonment, is practically an enhancement of the sentence, because if fine were not paid, the sentence to be undergone would be four months and two weeks' rigorous imprisonment. Such a sentence, was in excess of the powers of the Appellate Court, having regard to this section, 17 A. 67, 23 A. 497. When an Appellate Court alters a conviction under s. 323, I P. C., punishable with imprisonment or fine into one under s. 335 punishable with imprisonment and fine and sentences accordingly, it practically enhances the sentence. The point was considered at length by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in 30 M. 103, and it was held, the mere fact that a fine was imposed by the Appellate Court would not in law be an enhancement of sentence, if the aggregate period of imprisonment which the accused would have to undergo is to any extent less than the period of the original sentence. But where such an alteration of the sentence, has the effect of rendering it in the circumstances of the case excessive and inappropriate, the interference in revision of a superior Court may be called for. See also 23 B. 439 and 27 C. 175. In Criminal Revision Case 35 of 1906, the Madras High Court held that where the sentence of the first Court is imprisonment and fine, if the Appellate Court resolves to set aside the sentence of imprisonment, it cannot impose a fine in lieu of that imprisonment, as this would be virtually an enhancement of the sentence, Weir II, 487 is virtually overruled by the above Full Bench Ruling. An alteration of sentence by the Appellate Court from simple imprisonment for one month to a sentence of simple imprisonment for three weeks and a fine of Rs. 50 and further an imprisonment of one week in default of payment is an enhancement of sentence and is consequently illegal, 3 N. L. R. 90 = 6 Cr. L. J. 100, where 27 C. 175 and 23 B. 439 are followed and 23 B. 439 dissented from.

(1) Modification of three months' rigorous imprisonment into two months and fine of Rs. 30 is not an enhancement.—A prisoner was sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment for cheating. On appeal the sentence was modified into one of two months' rigorous imprisonment and Rs. 30 fine. On reference it was held, that though the sentence would be an altered one, it would not be called an enhancement of the sentence, 1 M. L. J. 194 (Note). In 7 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 603 an alteration of a sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment to one month's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100 or in default one month's rigorous imprisonment was not considered to be an enhancement because the fine was paid and the appellant did not wish to have the original sentence restored.

(11) Reduction of imprisonment with increase of fine—PICGOTT, J., in 25 A. 485 though he declined to interfere with the sentence in that case, stated that he was inclined to prefer the ruling in 27 C. 175 to the rulings in 23 B. 439 and 30 M. 103 and held that no general rule can be laid down to determine what is or what is not an enhancement of sentence, when only a portion of the sentence is altered to a punishment of lesser degree of severity. In this case a sentence of one month's imprisonment and Rs 5 fine was altered by the Appellate Court to three days' imprisonment and Rs 100 fine, but the total imprisonment including the imprisonment in default of fine was less.

74. Fine considered to be less severe than imprisonment.—Altering a sentence of fine into one of imprisonment is an enhancement of the sentence within the meaning of cl. (1) (b) (3) and a Sessions Judge in appeal has no power to alter a sentence in this way, 18 B. 751; 18 A. 301. S. 402 follows human sentiment and commonsense in regarding the substitution of fine for imprisonment as a merciful commutation of punishment, 7 N. L. R. 109 = 12 Cr. L. J. 444. But altering a sentence of nine months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 1,000, or in default of its payment rigorous imprisonment for three months, is not an enhancement of sentence. A sentence of fine is always considered lighter than a sentence of imprisonment. A sentence therefore of fine of Rs 1,000, would not be so severe as a sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment, and the substitution of the former for the latter would not be an enhancement. The sentence of three months' rigorous imprisonment in default of payment of fine did not make the whole sentence of imprisonment larger than it was before, 23 B. 439, where 17 A. 67 is distinguished.

Quare—But if the accused were unable to pay the fine, and had therefore to suffer imprisonment still his liability to pay the fine would remain and it could be realised from his estate, would not the sentence be then an enhancement? 27 C. 175 seems to leave it for the determination of the Court of Revision, whether the substitution of a heavy fine for imprisonment is or is not an enhancement of sentence. In 5 P. W. R. 1916, alteration of a sentence of one week's imprisonment only to Rs. 50 fine or one week's imprisonment was held to be an enhancement as the accused had already undergone several days' imprisonment.

75. Adding imprisonment to sentence of fine is enhancement of sentence.—When an Appellate Court alters the conviction of an offence (hurt) punishable with imprisonment or fine into one (grievous hurt) punishable with imprisonment and fine and to make the sentence legal, passes a nominal sentence of one day's imprisonment (in addition to the fine already imposed), it practically enhances the sentence. In such a case the proper course is to let the conviction for the former offence stand or to refer the case to the High Court, Weir II, 485. The correctness of this seems open to doubt because the enhancement of a sentence presupposes that the sentence was a legal sentence.

76. Transferring sentence.—Where an accused is charged with two separate offences and distinct sentences are passed for each of them, an Appellate Court cannot transfer the sentence given for the offence of which the accused was acquitted to the other offence, conviction regarding which was upheld. The effect of such transference of sentence is to enhance the punishment which such Appellate Court has no power to do under sub-sec. (1), cl. (b) (3) of this section 24 G. 316 following ibid 317 (Note). See Ratanlal 618; 3 M. L. T. 312 = 7 Cr. L. J. 361. But where a Magistrate finds an accused person guilty of acts which in law constitute a single offence, but by erroneously splitting them convicts him of two distinct offences and passes either two distinct sentences or one combined sentence, the Appellate Court if it concurs in the finding, is competent to alter the two convictions to the proper one for the single offence committed while maintaining the aggregate of two sentences or the whole of the combined sentence inflicted by the Magistrate. Such an alteration is one of form only and does not involve an enhancement of sentence in violation of this section, 3 N. L. R. 67 = 6 Cr. L. J. 43. Under the sub-sec. (1) (b) (3) the only restriction on the power of an Appellate Court in an appeal from a conviction, is that it cannot enhance the sentence. On an appeal from a conviction of two accused under ss 323 and 325 I P C, respectively, the Appellate Court, finding that the accused were guilty of rioting and grievous hurt, convicted both of them under ss 147 and 325, I P C, taken with s. 149. Held that the alteration of the finding was in no way prohibited by this section.

77. Order as to payment of costs, whether an enhancement?—On conviction of the accused, a Magistrate passed an order to the effect that out of the fine Rs 2 should be paid to the complainant for his expenses. On appeal the Appellate Court confirmed the conviction, and directed the accused to pay a further sum to complainant. Held, that the order was illegal as it was virtually an enhancement of the sentence, 22 M. 153, 5 M. R. Cr. Appx. XXVIII. But these rulings have been overruled in 29 M. 188 where it was held following 20 G. 687 that an order passed by an Appellate Court directing an accused person to pay the costs of the complainant under s 31 of the Court fees Act, correcting omission of the Court below to order, such payment, does not amount to an enhancement of such sentence, the order under the Court fees Act forming no part of the penalty or sentence passed in the case. Such an order is perfectly legal under sub-sec. (1) (d), see 26 M. 421, where on the acquittal of one of two accused ordered to pay court and process fees to the complainant in equal proportions, the other was directed to pay the whole of the costs by the Appellate Court, such an order was upheld as legal. See also 47 M. 914.

78. Requiring security to keep the peace is not enhancement—The power of the Appellate Court to order the accused to furnish security to keep the peace is new, 16 C. 779, 21 P. R. 1834 and 23 P. R. 1833; but does not amount to an enhancement of the sentence, 21 P. R. 1905.

79. Inadequacy of sentence should be reported to High Court for revision.—Though Appellate Court are no longer able to enhance sentences themselves, the power of Sessions Judges and District Magistrates to refer inadequate sentences to the Chief Court for enhancement has not been altered. When a sentence comes before a Subordinate Court on appeal which is manifestly inadequate, the Judge should, if a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, report the case for revision, and if a Subordinate Magistrate, bring the case to the notice of the District Magistrate, with a view to its being reported. Pun Cr, Chap LXVIII, p. 289. The High Court may, in revision, enhance a sentence so as to alter its nature, 6 A. 622 (F.B.), 11 C 530.

IX.—ALTERATION OF SENTENCE ON PRISONER WHO HAS NOT APPEALED

80. Appellate Court not competent to alter sentence of prisoner who has not appealed.—An Appellate Court (other than the High Court) has no authority to alter the sentence of a prisoner who has not appealed and whose sentence is not appealable 8 M. H. C. R. App. VII, nor to reverse it. The proper course is to report the case to the High Court Ratanlal 358. Where of two persons jointly tried one is convicted and the other acquitted and the convicted appeals the Appellate Court in dealing with the appeal has no jurisdiction to pass any order which would affect the order of acquittal of the other accused 8 A. L. J. 1129 = 12 Cr. L. J. 375.

81. Only High Court may alter sentence of prisoner not appealing.—Where on an appeal by one of several accused, the High Court disbelieves the entire evidence for the prosecution and sets aside the conviction of the appellant, it has jurisdiction to set aside the convictions of the other accused who have not appealed, s 439 (5) does not affect such jurisdiction, 5 C. W. N. 330; 14 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 89; 4 Bur. L. T. 87 = 12 Cr. L. J. 250. In 1893 A. W. N. 51 three persons were jointly tried and convicted on the same evidence for an offence. Two of them appealed and were acquitted. The third did not appeal, but it appeared that it was by mistake that his name had been omitted from the Memorandum of Appeal and that reasons for the acquittal of the others applied also to him. Held that under the circumstances, it was competent to the High Court, to acquit or order the release of the third accused on a reference made to it by the Appellate Court.

X.—POWER TO MAKE ANY AMENDMENT OR CONSEQUENTIAL OR INCIDENTAL ORDER.—Sub-sec. (1) (d).

82. What is a consequential or incidental order?—Section 423 (1) which defines the powers of an Appellate Court in disposing of an appeal, begins by setting forth those powers in precise terms, and concludes with clause (d), which enables it to 'make any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper'. Now, in a Criminal Court, this phrase cannot be construed so liberally as to embrace any and every ancillary order which is capable of being described as "consequential or incidental". Otherwise an Appellate Court, affirming, for instance a conviction of kidnapping a woman, might add and enforce, a direction that the offender should pay her by way of maintenance, a monthly allowance. This can hardly be it would seem, there fore that "consequential or incidental" orders within the purview of the provision, must fall under one or other of two heads.

'First, there are orders which follow as a matter of course being the necessary complements to the main order passed, without which the latter would be incomplete or ineffective. Such are directions as to the refund of fines realised from acquitted appellants, or, on the reversal of acquittals, as to the restoration of compensation paid under s. 250, and for these no separate authority is needed.

'Secondly there are orders which, though ancillary in character, require more than the support of a Criminal Court's inherent jurisdiction, and could not be passed without express authority.'

If this be so, then the clause can be relied upon only if it be sufficient to extend to an Appellate Court, to be exercised by it, mutatis mutandis the special power given to an original Magisterial Court alone by s. 250. But it falls short of this, and, so far as appears, it never occurred to the learned Judges who decided,

3 Bom L. R. 311 that it could be appealed to in this connection. It does not like s. 2 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Jurisdiction) Act, 1833 (37 and 53 Vict., clause 16), or O. XLI, R. 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1903 invest an Appellate Court with authority "to make any order which ought to have been given or made" by the Court below, nor does it like s. 107 of the latter, confer upon Appellate Courts "the same powers" as Courts of original jurisdiction. It does not amplify the powers of Appellate Courts, but what it does is to modify the exhaustive character which, without it, s. 423 (1) would apparently have, and so to prevent any conflict between its special provisions and the general provisions of, e.g., s. 517 or s. 522, 39 C. 157. See also 39 C. 1050.

33. Order under s. 106.—Appellate Court competent to require security for keeping the peace—Clause (3) of s. 106 giving power to Appellate Courts to demand security is new and 16 C. 779 is now superseded. The Bombay, Allahabad, Madras and Oudh Courts hold that this power may be exercised whether the original Court was competent or not to pass such an order, 33 B. 33, 33 A. 43; 37 M. 153 (F.B.), 16 O. C. 231 = 14 Cr. L. J. 592, but the Calcutta and Punjab Courts, in 21 C. 622; 35 C. 434; 21 P. R. 1905; 7 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 309 (5 P. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 275 approved) have held that in conviction by second and third-class Magistrates the Appellate Court cannot require security. See Notes 24 to 26 at pp. 133-154.

May cancel order under s. 106—An order in appeal, setting aside an order requiring security to keep the peace made by the first Court under s. 106 is an incidental order, and therefore an Appellate Court can pass such an order even when upholding the conviction, 30 C. 101. See Note 27 to s. 106. See also 6 C. W. N. 422 and 424.

34. Cannot order compensation under s. 250.—An Appellate Court is not empowered to grant compensation under s. 250. In view of the express terms, "the Magistrate by whom the case is heard" in that section, sub-sec. (1) (d) of this section cannot be taken to confer such power, 23 A. 623; 39 C. 157 (F.B.). See Notes under s. 250.

35. Power to allow parties to compound.—See s. 345 and Notes thereto. When an Appellate Court alters the sentence to one of those mentioned in s. 345, it may allow the parties to compound, 13 O. C. 101 = 11 Cr. L. J. 496. See also 3 O. C. 314. The power to sanction to compound is given by s. 345 (5). Quære whether sub-sec. (d) of s. 423 covers such powers, see 11 A. L. J. 13 = 14 Cr. L. J. 48 where 32 A. 153 is doubted. In 29 M. L. J. 521 = 16 Cr. L. J. 750 it was held that an order allowing composition of an offence is not an incidental order and 32 A. 153 was dissented from.

36. Order committing accused to Lunatic Asylum, s. 47 (1), is an incidental order.—An order under s. 47 (1) is clearly an order which the acquitting Court, whether original or appellate, not only has power to make but is bound to make, under s. 423 (d), 16 Cr. L. J. 670 (Bar).

37. Power to order restoration of property, ss. 517—520.—See s. 520 which specially deals with powers of Appeal Court. Orders under ss. 517 or 522 are consequential or incidental orders within the meaning of sub-sec. (1) (d), 6 C. W. N. 424. Any order passed under s. 517 may be amended under cl. (d) by an Appellate Court, 18 C. W. N. 959 = 15 Cr. L. J. 184. Even where the accused while preferring an appeal against their conviction omit to appeal against the order under s. 522 owing to want of notice the Appellate Court may make any order for the consequential relief, 14 Cr. L. J. 172 (C). The order directing restoration of property which was found to have belonged to the complainant, but the restoration of which was not ordered by the Court of first instance, is therefore a proper order for the Appellate Court to make. It may also cancel or modify an order passed by the Lower Court under s. 517, and even extend such an order to property which it did not previously include, 1906 A. W. N. 256 = 3 A. L. J. 770 = 4 Cr. L. J. 370. In this case the Appellate Court extended the order of restoration made by the first Court to property which it did not previously include.

38. Order restoring possession of immovable property, s. 522.—(i) Appellate Court may amend orders made by first Court under s. 522—In 29 C. 723 it was held that the Appellate Court in dealing with an appeal has power to interfere with an order made by the first Court under s. 522 and 23 C. 630 was declared obsolete. See also 19 C. W. N. 990 = 16 Cr. L. J. 607. In a case in which the accused had been convicted under ss. 352 and 448, I. P. C., the prosecutor had obtained an order under s. 522, from the convicting Magistrate, restoring possession of the property, the subject matter of the offence under s. 448, I. P. C. The accused having been acquitted on appeal, applied for restitution and the Appellate Magistrate referred the case to the High Court. On a preliminary objection that the High Court had no power to order restoration of property, held, reading together sub-sec. (1) (d) and s. 522, the High Court had power to order restitution, 27 A. 415 followed in 36 C. 44, where it was held that the High Court can revise an order made under s. 522, see also 7 O. C. 23 = 1 Cr. L. J. 697.

(ii) Appeal Court cannot for first time make such order—In 39 C. 1050 referring to 39 C. 157 (F.B.), it was, however, held that where the first Court did not pass an order under s. 522, it was not open to the Appellate Court for the first time to pass an order under s. 522. It is clear that the confirming of a conviction on appeal where the Magistrate had not thought it necessary to act under s. 522 cannot make such an order a consequential relief or an order ancillary in character for which no separate authority is needed. Separate authority under s. 522 is distinctly needed before any Criminal Court could have such extraordinary powers as are given thereby. It is one certainly not inherent in the ordinary Courts of criminal jurisdiction and it certainly could not be exercised by any person other than the Court which convicts the accused.

89 May suspend sentence and give appellant benefit of s. 562—Under sub-sec. (1) (d), in an appeal from a conviction, the Appellate Court is competent to suspend the sentence passed by the Court of First Instance and in lieu thereof make an order under s. 562 provided it is satisfied on taking evidence or otherwise that the case is covered by that section, 24 A. 306; 29 M. 567. See also 2 Bom. L. R. 817.

90 Power to order removal of cause of obstruction—In 5 C. W. N. 432 it was held that on a conviction for wrongful restraint, an order for removal of the cause of obstruction could properly be made, and under sub-sec. (1) (d), the Appellate Court ought not to make an amendment by way of setting aside the order so that would make the entire proceeding intractable and absurd. But this Ruling was overruled in 31 C. 691 (F.B.) where it was held that the powers of an Appellate Court to make such an order, would depend on the power conferred by law on the original Court, and this is limited to matters regarding which a Court is expressly empowered to make an order. So on a conviction for wrongful restraint by erecting a hut or other means of obstruction an order cannot be issued for the removal of the obstruction.

91 Cannot order confiscation under the Indian Forests Act—An order of confiscation under s. 54 of the Indian Forests Act VII of 1878 is not incidental on a conviction under that Act. It is regarded as a punishment in addition to the sentence passed. Hence an Appellate Court is not competent to make such an order of confiscation, 27 C. 430, 4 A. 417.

92 Cannot set aside order for payment of costs—An Appellate Court is not competent to set aside the order of the trying Magistrate under s. 31 of the Court-fees Act as the order directing the accused to repay to the complainant the fee on the complaint is not a part of the sentence, 31 M. 547, 29 M. 189 followed.

93 No power to direct expunging of portion of Lower Court's judgment—An Appellate Court has no power to issue orders to a Lower Court to expunge any portion of a judgment of another Court which comes before it on appeal, Weir II, 534. But see 2 C. W. N. 256. See Note 39 to s. 367. But in 44 A. 401 the case in 2 C. W. N. 256, was distinguished and it was held that where certain witnesses against whom certain remarks were made by the trial Magistrate preferred an application to the High Court for expunction of these remarks and that the High Court had no power to expunge from judgments of Lower Court remarks reflecting unfavourably upon the credibility or the character of witnesses, in cases in which the effective orders of the Courts are not before the High Court either in appeal or in revision. But see now s. 561 A (newly added) and the Select Committee Report thereon. See section 439, Note 67 (c).

93-A Power to order judgment to be returned for being signed by one of the members of the Bench who had omitted to sign—A District Magistrate, on an appeal from the decision of a Bench of Honorary Magistrates found that although the case had apparently been heard by a Bench of two Magistrates, the judgment was signed by only one member of the Bench and accordingly returned the judgment to be signed by the other Magistrate who had heard the case, held that this procedure was in no way opposed to s. 423 of the Code 41 A. 217.

93-B Order to accused to repay Court-fees to complainant under sec. 31 of the Court-fees Act is no enhancement—An order passed by the Appellate Court directing the accused under section 31 of the Court-fees Act to repay to the complainant the Court fee paid on the complaint does not amount to an enhancement of sentence, but is only an incidental order which an Appellate Court can make under section 423 (d), 47 M. 914.

XI.—LIMITATION ON APPELLATE COURT'S POWER TO INTERFERE WITH VERDICT OF JURY.—Sub-sec. (2).

94 Power of High Court to interfere with verdict of jury under s. 307 are wider than powers conferred by s. 423—See s. 307 and Notes thereunder. Under s. 307 the High Court is authorized to go into facts, 31 C. 935 at p. 957.

3 Bom. L. R. 841 that it could be appealed to in this connection. It does not like s. 2 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Jurisdiction) Act, 1894 (57 and 58 Vict., clause 16), or O. XLI, R. 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 invest an Appellate Court with authority "to make any order which ought to have been given or made" by the Court below, nor does it like s. 107 of the latter, confer upon Appellate Courts "the same powers" as Courts of original jurisdiction. It does not amplify the powers of Appellate Courts, but what it does is to modify the exhaustive character which, without it s. 423 (1) would apparently have, and so to prevent any conflict between its special provisions and the general provisions of, e.g., s. 517 or s. 522, 39 C. 157. See also 39 C. 1050.

83. Order under s. 106.—Appellate Court competent to require security for keeping the peace—Clause (3) of s. 106 giving power to Appellate Courts to demand security is new and 16 C. 779 is now superseded. The Bombay, Allahabad, Madras and Oudh Courts hold that this power may be exercised whether the original Court was competent or not to pass such an order, 33 B. 33; 33 A. 43; 37 M. 153 (F.B.), 16 O. C. 281 = 14 Cr. L. J. 592, but the Calcutta and Punjab Courts, in 21 C. 622; 35 C. 434; 21 P. R. 1908; 7 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 809 (6 P. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 275 approved) have held that in conviction by second and third-class Magistrates the Appellate Court cannot require security. See Notes 24 to 26 at pp. 153-154.

May cancel order under s. 106—An order in appeal, setting aside in order requiring security to keep the peace made by the first Court under s. 106 is an incidental order, and therefore an Appellate Court can pass such an order even when upholding the conviction, 30 C. 101. See Note 27 to s. 106. See also 6 C. W. N. 422 and 424.

84. Cannot order compensation under s. 250.—An Appellate Court is not empowered to grant compensation under s. 250. In view of the express terms, "the Magistrate by whom the case is heard" in that section, sub-sec. (1) (d) of this section cannot be taken to confer such power, 28 A. 625; 39 C. 157 (F.B.). See Notes under s. 250.

85. Power to allow parties to compound.—See s. 345 and Notes thereto. When an Appellate Court alters the sentence to one of those mentioned in s. 345, it may allow the parties to compound, 13 O. C. 161 = 11 Cr. L. J. 498. See also 3 O. C. 314. The power to sanction to compound is given by s. 345 (5). Quare whether sub-sec. (d) of s. 423 covers such powers, see 11 A. L. J. 13 = 14 Cr. L. J. 46 where 32 A. 153 is doubted. In 29 M. L. J. 521 = 16 Cr. L. J. 780 it was held that an order allowing composition of an offence is not an incidental order and 32 A. 153 was dissented from.

86. Order committing accused to Lunatic Asylum, s. 47 (1), is an incidental order.—An order under s. 47 (1) is clearly an order which the acquitting Court, whether original or appellate, not only has power to make but is bound to make, under s. 423 (d), 16 Cr. L. J. 670 (Bur).

87. Power to order restoration of property, ss. 517-520.—See s. 520 which specially deals with powers of Appeal Court. Orders under ss. 517 or 522 are consequential or incidental orders within the meaning of sub-sec. (1) (d) 6 C. W. N. 424. Any order passed under s. 517 may be amended under cl. (d) by an Appellate Court, 18 C. W. N. 599 = 15 Cr. L. J. 184. Even where the accused while preferring an appeal against their conviction omit to appeal against the order under s. 522 owing to want of notice the Appellate Court may make any order for the consequential relief, 14 Cr. L. J. 172 (G.). The order directing restoration of property which was found to have belonged to the complainant, but the restoration of which was not ordered by the Court of first instance, is therefore a proper order for the Appellate Court to make. It may also cancel or modify an order passed by the Lower Court under s. 517, and even extend such an order to property which it did not previously include, 1906 A. W. N. 256 = 3 A. L. J. 770 = 4 Cr. L. J. 370. In this case the Appellate Court extended the order of restoration made by the first Court to property which it did not previously include.

See also 19 C. W. N. 990 = 16 Cr. L. J. 607. In a case in which the accused had been convicted under ss. 352 and 448, I. P. C., the prosecutor had obtained an order under s. 522, from the convicting Magistrate, restoring possession of the property, the subject matter of the offence under s. 448, I. P. C. The accused having been acquitted on appeal, applied for restitution and the Appellate Magistrate referred the case to the High Court. On a preliminary objection that the High Court had no power to order restoration of property, held, reading together sub-sec. (1) (d) and s. 522, the High Court had power to order restitution, 27 A. 415 followed in 38 C. 44, where it was held that the High Court can revise an order made under s. 522, see also 7 O. C. 23 = 1 Cr. L. J. 697.

(ii) Appellate Court cannot for first time make such order—In 39 C. 1050 referring to 39 C. 157 (F B), it was however, held that where the first Court did not pass an order under s 522 it was not open to the Appellate Court for the first time to pass an order under s. 522. It is clear that the confirming of a conviction on appeal where the Magistrate had not thought it necessary to act under s 522 cannot make such an order a consequential relief or an order ancillary in character for which no separate authority is needed. Separate authority under s. 522 is distinctly needed before any Criminal Court could have such extraordinary powers as are given thereby. It is one certainly not inherent in the ordinary Courts of criminal jurisdiction and it certainly could not be exercised by any person other than the Court which convicts the accused.

89 May suspend sentence and give appellant benefit of s 562—Under sub-sec. (1) (d) on an appeal from a conviction the Appellate Court is competent to suspend the sentence passed by the Court of First Instance and in lieu thereof make an order under s 562 provided it is satisfied on taking evidence or otherwise that the case is covered by that section 24 A 306, 29 M 567. See also 2 Bom L R 817.

90 Power to order removal of cause of obstruction—In 5 C. W N. 432 it was held that on a conviction for wrongful restraint an order for removal of the cause of obstruction could properly be made and under sub-sec. (1) (d), the Appellate Court ought not to make an amendment by way of setting aside the order as that would make the entire proceeding infructuous and absurd. But this Ruling was overruled in 31 C. 691 (F B.) where it was held that the powers of an Appellate Court to make such an order, would depend on the power conferred by law on the original Court and this is limited to matters regarding which a Court is expressly empowered to make an order. So on a conviction for wrongful restraint by erecting a hut or other means of obstruction an order cannot be issued for the removal of the obstruction.

91 Cannot order confiscation under the Indian Forests Act.—An order of confiscation under s. 54 of the Indian Forests Act VII of 1878 is not incidental on a conviction under that Act it is regarded as a punishment in addition to the sentence imposed. Hence an Appellate Court is not competent to make such an order of confiscation 27 C. 430, 4 A 417.

92. Cannot set aside order for payment of costs.—An Appellate Court is not competent to set aside the order of the trying Magistrate under s 31 of the Court fees Act as the order directing the accused to repay to the complainant the fee on the complaint is not a part of the sentence 31 M 547, 29 M 133 followed.

93. No power to direct expunging of portion of Lower Court's judgment.—An Appellate Court has no power to issue orders to a Lower Court to expunge any portion of a judgment of another Court which comes before it on appeal, Weir II, 534. But see 2 C. W N 256. See Note 39 to s 367. But in 44 A 401 the case in 2 C. W N 256, was distinguished and it was held that where certain witnesses against whom certain remarks were made by the trial Magistrate preferred an application to the High Court for expunction of these remarks and that the High Court had no power to expunge from judgments of Lower Court remarks reflecting unfavourably upon the credibility or the character of witnesses in cases in which the effective orders of the Courts are not before the High Court either in appeal or in revision. But see now s. 561 A (newly added) and the Select Committee Report thereon. See section 439 Note 67 (c).

93-A Power to order judgment to be returned for being signed by one of the members of the Bench who had omitted to sign.—A District Magistrate on an appeal from the decision of a Bench of Honorary Magistrates found that, although the case had apparently been heard by a Bench of two Magistrates the judgment was signed by only one member of the Bench and accordingly returned the judgment to be signed by the other Magistrate who had heard the case held that this procedure was in no way opposed to s. 423 of the Code 41 A 217.

93 B. Order to accused to repay Court fees to complainant under sec. 31 of the Court fees Act is no enhancement.—An order passed by the Appellate Court directing the accused under section 31 of the Court fees Act to repay to the complainant the Court fee paid on the complaint does not amount to an enhancement of sentence but is only an incidental order which an Appellate Court can make under section 423 (d), 47 M 914.

XI—LIMITATION ON APPELLATE COURT'S POWER TO INTERFERE WITH VERDICT OF JURY—Sub sec (2)

94. Power of High Court to interfere with verdict of jury under s. 307 are wider than powers conferred by s. 423.—See s 307 and Notes thereunder. Under s. 307 the High Court is not bound by facts 21 C. 953 at p. 957.

95. To enable High Court to interfere with verdict of jury, there must be misdirection or some error in law.—See 3 W. R. 13. The High Court is not authorized, by s 423 to alter or reverse the verdict of the jury unless it is of opinion that that verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by the Judge, 32 M. 179; 4 M. L. T. 433 = 9 Cr. L. J. 93. If it comes to that opinion, then it has the power to reverse the verdict, but that power ought not to be lightly exercised. It is manifestly the intention of the Legislature that the power of interference conferred on the High Court should be exercised on occasions, 10 Bom. L. R. 565 = 8 Cr. L. J. 33. See Notes 3 and 5 to s 518 at p 863.

96. Meaning of 'misdirection'.—Technically 'misdirection' means 'an error of law made by a Judge in charging the jury' (WHARTON) or 'an error of a Judge in charging the jury on a matter of law' (MOZLEY and WHITELEV). In England where procedure is not the subject of statute, a mere omission in a summing up would not be termed an error of law. But, in India, where a Judge is bound by statute law to sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, any omission, however slight, is at least an irregularity and may not unfairly be termed an error of law inasmuch as there has been a failure to conform with the law. Hence, in India 'misdirection' is an appropriate term to apply to an omission in a summing up. But to treat every failure to conform to the Procedure Code as a matter of law would lead to absurdity and the test laid down therefore is "whether or not the omission was in the opinion of the Court of such importance as to have led to an erroneous verdict by the jury. 3 S. L. R. 102 = 11 Cr. L. J. 13; 5 B. H. G. R. 85 followed. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 353 (Patna) as to the duty of those who allege misdirection.

97. Non-misdirection to direct jury to reconsider their verdict when they were confused.—See s 302 and Note 2 to s 301. A Judge is not wrong in directing a jury to reconsider their verdict when it appears that they were confused and failed to understand the remarks of the Judge. Also, the act of a Judge in giving a jury who are not intelligent men in a complicated case, a paper in which the different counts against each prisoner and the witnesses whose testimony bore upon each count are noted, is not objectionable, Weir 11, 514.

98. Allowing jury to pronounce verdict before calling on accused to enter on his defence is in effect a misdirection.—To allow the jury to pronounce their verdict before the accused is called upon to enter on his defence is in effect a misdirection though the Judge omits to charge the jury at all. In such a case sub-sec. (2) does not stand in the way of the Appellate Court's interfering with the verdict of the jury, 23 C. 252. Where a Judge required a jury to give a finding on one of two questions of fact constituting the proof in the case, before he concluded his charge with reference to the other question of fact. Held, that the course adopted by the Judge was irregular if not illegal, and was calculated to embarrass the jury in arriving at a proper verdict as to the character of the offence, if any, proved, Weir 11, 499. See Notes 72 and 73 at p 706.

99. Misunderstanding of expressions used by Judge in his charge to jury.—Here misunderstanding on the part of the bystanders in Court or Counsel engaged in a case of expressions used by a Judge in charging a jury (where it appears that the expressions used by the Judge were such as ought to have been understood by any reasonable man having regard to what was proved in the case, and what was said to the jury afterwards) will not constitute misdirection, 10 C. 1079. Where the Judge charged a jury for the acquittal of one of several accused on the ground that the witnesses had deposed falsely as against him. Held, that he ought to have also made it clear to them that if they disbelieved the witnesses, on whose testimony the case hinged, in regard to anyone of the accused that was a circumstance to be carefully weighed by them in estimating the credibility of the testimony as it affected the other accused, and that his omission to do so and directing the jury in language capable of being understood in a contrary sense, amounted to a misdirection, Weir 11, 501.

100. "If it is the opinion of the Court that the verdict is rendered bad by reason of misdirection or that the verdict has been vitiated and rendered bad or defective by reason of misdirection or error of law. The effect of the clause is evidently to prevent the Appellate Court from reversing the verdict of a jury on account of any misdirection by the Judge or any misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by him unless such misdirection or misunderstanding of the law is on points material to the verdict, so that the verdict can be said to be tainted with error in the process by which it has been arrived at. It throws upon the Appellate Court the duty no doubt, of ascertaining whether the process or method which the Judge directed the jury to follow, as to the acceptance or discarding of evidence or as to the view taken of the law, was erroneous on any material point, but not certainly the duty of determining for itself whether the verdict, as a conclusion of fact, was right or wrong. To hold otherwise would be tantamount to holding that an appeal would lie upon the facts from the verdict of a jury in the face of the provisions of s. 418, and that the Legislature intended to give the High Court the same powers in respect to an appeal from the verdict of a jury as it has in respect of a judgment by the Sessions Judge in a trial with assessors. Per BEVERLEY and BANERJEE, JJ., 21 C. 955 at p. 977.

101. Power of High Court in jury trials.—(a) When verdict of jury is set aside for defective summing up, High Court not bound to direct retrial, but may go into the evidence and decide the matter finally itself. See Note 75 under s. 299, and Notes 14 and 15 to s. 307. "It would defeat and not promote justice, if a verdict were set aside and a new trial granted for a defective summing up with reference to the weight of evidence in a case in which the High Court would, upon evidence given in a trial, have affirmed a conviction if instead of a trial by jury, the trial had been before a Judge and assessors. It appears to us that the question to be considered is not whether upon a proper summing up of the whole evidence, a jury might possibly have given a different verdict, but whether the legitimate effect of the evidence would require a different verdict. If the Court is of opinion that the evidence would not, on any proper view of the case, support a conviction, it would be worse than useless to send back a case for a new trial, in order that a jury may have the opportunity of convicting on such evidence upon a proper summing up." 5 W. R. 80 at p. 80 = B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 459 (F.B.) followed in 29 C. 782, 12 C. W. N. 80. See also 9 W. R. 51; 15 W. R. 17. When the verdict of a jury is reversed on the ground of its being erroneous owing to misdirection, the power of the Courts is not limited to directing a new trial, but they can deal with the case in any of the ways provided in this section, and therefore the Court may, in an appeal from a conviction under cl. (1)(b) of this section, either reverse the finding or sentence and acquit or discharge the accused or order him to be retried, etc., sub-sec. (2) restricts the grounds on which the verdict of the jury can be reversed or altered, but once the verdict is out of the way, there is no restriction on the powers of the Court to deal with the case of which it has complete seisin in any of the manner provided in that section. Nowhere does the Code lay down that when the verdict of the jury is set aside, the Court must necessarily direct a new trial. The principle laid down in Makin v. The Attorney-General for New South Wales, L. R. (1894) A. C. 57 is of considerable importance, but it seems the policy of law in this country is different and that the Legislature has, with a distinct purpose, vested the Appellate Court with large powers, 25 C. 711 where 21 C. 955 is disputed from. See 25 M. 1; 25 M. 38; 30 M. 44; 9 B. H. C. R. 358; 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 47; 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 65; 2 B. 61, 5 B. 63; 6 B. 34; 19 B. 749; 6 C. 247; 22 C. 276; 15 C. W. N. 493 = 11 Cr. L. J. 96, 1 C. 207; 17 C. W. N. 42; 29 C. 782; 34 C. 696.

Contra—Accused in trial by jury is entitled to verdict of jury on questions of facts—Where a verdict vitiated owing to misdirection by the Judge, the Appeal Court has no option but to set aside the verdict and direct a retrial. Were the Appellate Court to go into the facts in such a case, it would be substituting the decision of the Judge of that Court for the verdict of the jury, who have the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses and weighing the evidence with the assistance which this affords, whereas the Judges of the Appeal Court can only arrive at a decision on the perusal of the evidence, 21 C. 955. In a case of misdirection, viz., that the Judge had wrongly put the onus on the accused, the High Court was asked to deal with the case itself and not send it for retrial when MACLEAN, C.J., referring to Makin v. Attorney-General for New South Wales, (1894) L. R. Ap. Cas. 57 held as follows—"I am very doubtful whether we have under s. 423, power to retry the case ourselves, but if we have, this is not a case in which we ought to exercise it. I entertain personally a strong opinion that when a case has been tried before a jury and the conviction has been set aside on the ground of misdirection, the accused is entitled to have his case retried before a jury and that as a matter of procedure and in justice to the accused this course should be adopted," 4 C. W. N. 576. Where there was a misjoinder of charges and the charge to the jury was defective in so far as the heads of the charge did not set out the facts of the case, what the evidence was, or what the evidence on record

Court cannot go into

sec. (2) and s. 537 do

a verdict is actually erroneous on the facts, 25 C. 330. See also 16 C. 184; 35 C. 561. Where there was evidence tending to show that the object of the offender may have been in the first instance revenge, and the charge of the Judge to the jury failed to show that the Judge guided the jury to the necessity of discriminating between the offences committed by the several prisoners, in determining whether all acted in pursuance of a common object or that the law applicable to the facts before them, the verdict was set aside and

(11) When charge bad for misjoinder—Where a person is convicted by a jury on an indictment which is in contravention of the provisions of s. 234 and therefore illegal the conviction must be set aside. It cannot be amended by arranging afterwards what might or might not have been properly submitted to the jury. The effect of the multitude of charges before the jury cannot be averted by dissecting the verdict afterwards and appropriating the findings of guilty only to such parts of the written accusations as ought to have been submitted to the jury. It would in the first place leave to the Court the functions of the jury and the accused would never have been really tried at all upon the charge afterwards arranged by the Court 23 M 61 (P C).

(12) Procedure when jury improperly discharged in midst of trial—In a Sessions trial after the evidence of the prosecution witnesses had been given and the statements of the prisoners read, the Judge thinking that the jury would not be likely to convict upon the evidence that had been given asked the jury if they wished the case to go further and desired to hear the defence of the prisoners. The jury misunderstanding the reason of the question replied that they found certain prisoners 'guilty' and the others 'not guilty'. The Judge thereupon dismissed the jury and tried the case again with a fresh jury and convicted some of the accused. Held that the action of the Judge in recommencing the trial with the aid of a fresh jury was not authorized by law and that the whole of the proceedings of the second trial were ultra vires and must be set aside. have heard whatever the prisoner has to urge before them in his defence.

(12) In an appeal from an acquittal the High Court is a Court of Appeal on matters of fact, as well as of law and must decide questions of fact from the whole of the evidence on record 9 C. L. J. 378 = 10 Cr. L. J. 499

102 High Court may direct re-trial by different jury—It is competent to the High Court in setting aside the verdict of a jury on the ground of misdirection to order a re-trial before a new jury. Thus where a Judge in his direction to the jury informed them that he would after commenting on the evidence ask them whether they considered that the prisoner had been guilty of any crime or whether he is the unfortunate victim of a most cruel fabrication of false evidence and that he would then explain the law and take their verdict as to what offence the prisoner had been guilty of. Held that the procedure adopted by the Judge was unwarranted and that there should be but one charge both on the facts and on the law and that the Judge acted illegally in dividing the charge into two parts. W 11, 493.

103. When inadmissible evidence has been admitted High Court may direct re-trial or deal with case itself—In case of wrongful admission the Appellate Court has apart from s. 418 power under s. 167 of the Evidence Act to inquire into the merits of the case. Reading sub-sec. (2) of this section and s. 418 together it is clear that before the High Court can interfere with a verdict on the ground that some evidence has been wrongly admitted it must be satisfied (1) the verdict was erroneous (2) that this erroneousness was caused either by the Judge's misdirection to the jury as to that evidence or by a misunderstanding on their part of the law as to it. As laid down by the Judge and this has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. Where material evidence which ought not to be admitted is admitted and the jury are placed in possession of it there is an error in law in the trial within the meaning of s. 418 and there is a misdirection in law when the Judge tells the jury that it is evidence which they can consider and on which they can if they think proper convict the accused. The fact that after putting the jury in possession of the inadmissible evidence the Judge in his charge points out circumstances which would justify the jury in disbelieving the wrongly admitted evidence, does not make the misdirection any the less a misdirection since the presumption is that the jury are well aware that it is for them to appreciate the evidence and they are at liberty to take or not the Judge's view of it. Where evidence which the law says shall not be admitted is let in with other evidence which is legally admissible and where the former is of a material character it would be mere speculative refinement to hold that the jury must have in convicting the accused relied upon the latter and rejected the former 27 B 626 at p. 632. If in a case tried by jury the Court finds that inadmissible evidence has been received but that after setting it aside there is other evidence on record on which the jury may find a verdict of guilty, but which evidence does not seem to the High Court to be conclusive as to the guilt the High Court may reverse the conviction and sentence and order a new trial 10 B H C R 497. In such a case it is impossible to know the exact amount of weight which the jury attached to the particular evidence in question. In so far as that evidence was wrongly admitted and treated in the Judge's charge the verdict of the jury is invalidated and the Appellate Court cannot any longer accept it as conclusive decision on the facts. It is competent to the High Court in such a case to consider whether after excluding the evidence wrongly admitted, the rest of the evidence is sufficient to sustain the verdict and to determine the appeal, 27 B. 626 at p. 636. See Note 16 at p. 707 to s. 299, also 27 B. 644; 31 M. 127; 26 C. 49, and Notes under Heading V to s. 299 at pp. 693-694. If the High Court considers that the improperly admitted evidence was so trivial that it could not have occasioned a failure of justice, it should not order a re-trial but should make the inquiry contemplated by s. 167 of the Indian Evidence Act, 16 C. W. N. 493 = 11 C. L. J. 301 = 11 Cr. L. J. 96; 15 Cr. L. J. 43 (C).

In a case of misreception of evidence it is the duty of the Judge to tell the jury to totally disregard it. The charge to the jury must contain a special warning against the taking into consideration by the jury of such wrongfully admitted evidence. And if such evidence cannot be wiped off it is the duty of the Judge to discharge the jury and begin the case de novo 28 Bom. L. R. 281.

104 Verdict means 'entire verdict.'—In cases where an accused person is tried for various offences arising out of a single act or series of acts as contemplated by s. 236, the word verdict in sub-sec. (2) of this section means the entire verdict, and is not limited to the verdict upon a particular charge upon which an accused person may have been convicted and appealed against, 22 C. 377; 12 P. R. 1904. Thus, where the appellants were convicted by the jury of grievous hurt and acquitted of murder, it was held that on re-trial, they could properly be tried for murder, 16 C. W. N. 909 = 13 Cr. L. J. 715 and Note 77 at p. 707.

Judgments of Subordinate Appellate Courts.

424. The rules contained in Chapter XXVI as to the judgment of a Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court.

Provided that, unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused shall not be brought up, or required to attend, to hear judgment delivered.

Notes—1. See s. 367 and Notes thereunder at pp. 802-810.

2. Judgment when appeals dismissed must comply with this section and s. 367.—In dismissing an appeal under s. 423, a Judge must comply with the provisions of this section and s. 367, 1 Bom. L. R. 223; 1 Rang. 301; but when an appeal is dismissed under s. 421 summarily no reasons are necessary. See Note 15 to s. 421 at page 868 as such an order of dismissal does not amount to a judgment. Cf. 29 M. 128 (F.B.), 4 C. W. N. 26.

3. Appellant entitled to have explicit opinion of Appellate Court on questions of fact.—Where the law allows an appeal, the appellant is entitled to have from the Court of Appeal that has to deal with them an explicit opinion on the questions of fact involved in the case, 22 C. 261. In a case of receiving stolen property, on appeal the Sessions Judge recorded that "if the evidence was of the usual type and it was impossible for the Court to say which side spoke the truth the first Court which had the evidence before it must be the best Judge and bear the responsibility of conviction." Held that the Appellate Court was the Judge of the facts as completely as the Court which originally tried the case and that as the Sessions Judge's judgment showed that he was doubtful the accused must get the benefit of doubt and be acquitted, 5 P. R. 1876; 6 P. R. 1898. Note 4 to s. 423. The Appellate Court ought to take its own view of the evidence which is before it, and not merely accept without question, the opinion of the Court of First Instance, 1890 A. W. N. 148. The accused in their grounds of appeal to the Sessions Judge challenged the evidence for the prosecution on various relevant grounds. The judgment of the Sessions Judge was as follows:—I have gone through the case, but I see no reason to interfere. The witnesses for the defence would not support the accused and after the evidence of two was taken, the rest were withdrawn by the counsel for the accused.—Held, that the judgment did not comply with the provisions of s. 367 and this section, 31 P. R. 1884. See also 32 C. 178, where it was held that an Appellate Court should notice briefly but clearly the objections urged on an appeal and how they were disposed of. Where the judgment of a Criminal Appellate Court is of the nature of a stereotyped one, which might answer for any case, it is not in accordance with s. 367 and this section, but where the judgment, though not a long and elaborate one, affords a clear indication that the Court duly considered the evidence it is a good judgment and should not be set aside, 1 C. W. N. 169; 1 Rang. 301.

4. Section 537 does not cure absence of judgment.—Where the order made by the Appellate Court merely stated that the appeal is dismissed under s. 423, held, that s. 537 (a) did not apply as there was an absence of a judgment and not merely an omission or irregularity in a judgment, 17 Bom. L. R. 1035 = 16 Cr. L. J. 832.

5. What an appellate judgment should contain.—See Note 30 at p. 807. Judgment should contain among other things the point or points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons of the decision, 33 C. 91. A judgment is not legal unless it contains at least (1) the point or points for determination raised by the Memorandum of Appeal, (2) the decision thereon, and (3) the reasons for the decision 8 N. L. R. 81 = 13 Cr. L. J. 559; U. B. R. (1913), 2 Qr. 169 = 14 Cr. L. J. 870. It is difficult to lay down any rule with precision as to what judgment of an Appellate Court complies with and what judgment does not comply with requirements of this Code. The object, no doubt, of the Legislature in formulating rules as to judgments was partly to insure that a Criminal Court should consider the case before in its different bearings and should on such consideration arrive at definite conclusions and also one object may have been that the judgment should show that in fact the Criminal Court had considered the evidence in a case of first instance or in a case of appeal and had found in case of a conviction, that the facts proved to the satisfaction of the Court, brought an offence home to the accused person whom the Court convicted, 19 A. 506. The judgment should contain a clear finding as to the common object, 22 C. 276; 33 C. 295,—but if the accused have not been prejudiced the judgment will not be upset, 36 C. 158; 12 C. W. N. 88.

6. Judgment when there are several accused, must deal with case of each accused.—An appellate judgment should show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration and reasons should be given as far as may be necessary, to indicate that the Court has directed judicial attention to the case of each accused. The appellate judgment cannot be read in connection with and as supplementary to the judgment of the Court of First Instance, but must be quite independent, and stand by itself, 35 C. 138, applied in 14 C. W. N. 49 = 11 Cr. L. J. 23 followed Mad. Cr. R. C. 599 of 1909 = 20 M. L. J. (5b. N.) 13; 17 Cr. L. J. 496 (M.), 22 C. 241; 37 C. 81, and see also 12 Cr. L. J. 43 (C), 15 A. L. J. 279 and Note 5 under s. 423 at p. 875. Especially in a case of rioting the judgment must deal with the evidence against each accused, 16 Cr. L. J. 735 (M.), 48 M. L. J. 504.

7. Judgment must be written by the Court.—See Note 15 under s. 367 at p. 804. The Magistrate should not get it written by a clerk, Ratanlal 545. See also 6 M. 386, 4 C. L. J. 411.

8. Delay in passing judgment improper.—Delay in delivering judgment in criminal cases is not only unjust to the accused as it prevents them from appealing at once, but it is opposed to the principles of law, 5 C. P. Cr. 24. See also 14 A. L. J. 327; 20 C. W. N. 1296. See 33 A. 393 as to what a judgment in an appeal from a case under s. 110 should contain.

9. Judgments not in accordance with law.—The following judgments were held not to be in accordance with the provisions of s. 367 and this section—

‘Read proceedings. I see no reason for interfering with the decision or sentence, appeal dismissed, 1898 A. W. N. 280.

“I see no reason to distrust the finding of the Lower Court. The sentence passed, however, appears harsh. I reduce the term of imprisonment to fifteen days. The fines and terms of imprisonment in default will stand.” 13 C. 110.

Where a Sessions Judge pronounced judgment as follows—“If believed, the prosecution evidence is sufficient to warrant the conviction. I decline to interfere.” Held, that the judgment would have been proper on appeal to the High Court against a conviction by a jury, but it does not satisfy the requirements of this section and s. 367. The Sessions Judge has to decide not whether the evidence, if believed, is sufficient, but whether, being sufficient, it is also worthy of belief, Weir II, 556.

A District Magistrate in disposing of an appeal recorded the following judgment—“The affray was a faction fight between members of the two parties into which the society of D was split up. There is no ground for doubting the justice of the Magistrate’s finding that the two appellants took part in the affray and that the party to which they belonged were the aggressors. The appeal is dismissed and the conviction and sentence are confirmed.” Held that this was not a judgment in accordance with s. 367 and this section. From the judgment as it stands the High Court is unable to say that the Magistrate has duly considered the evidence in the case. He does not for instance, refer at all to the material circumstance that the complainant M, when first complaining to the Police patrol, did not mention the applicant as taking part in the affray, although the applicant seems actually to have been present when the complaint was made, 15 B. 11.

A Sessions Judge upon hearing in a case of conviction under s. 392, I P C, recorded the following judgment—“Upon reading the record and grounds of appeal, and after hearing Mr K, pleader for the accused, I see no sufficient grounds for interfering with the conviction or sentence and dismiss this appeal.” Held setting aside judgment and directing the re-hearing of appeal, that as the appeal was heard under s. 423 and not under s. 421, the Lower Appellate Court had no power to dismiss the appeal summarily, and that under the circumstances it had failed to comply with the requirements of this section and s 367 of the Code, 1 Bom. L 225; 23 C. 420. See also 8 A. 514; 20 C. 333; 9 C. W. N. 23, 13 C. W. N. 167 and 192; 37 C. 194; 14 A. L. J. 2

A judgment of the Appellate Court in the words "I find no reason to interfere and no ground of appeal requires particular notice, this appeal is dismissed," does not comply with the provisions of this section s. 267, 2 P. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 279.

10. Power to order re-trial, after delivery of judgments—Notwithstanding the terms of s 369 which prevent an Appellate Court after signing its judgment from altering or reviewing it, except to correct a clerical error, it can by a subsequent order remedy an omission to order a new trial when it has merely set aside proceedings, as held without jurisdiction without making such order, 3 M. 48. See Note 47 at p 881

11. Whether section applies to judgments under s. 123?—It may be open to doubt whether the provisions of ss 367 and 424 which apply to judgments in trials and appeals, govern orders under s. 123, sub-sec. 37 C. 91. See Note 11 at p. 160 and Note 2 at p 802.

12. Where appellate judgment defective, High Court may direct re-hearing of appeal.—It is the duty of the Judge hearing the appeal to state the facts and give the reasons for the conclusion he arrives at. The High Court will not, in revision make up for the deficiencies in the appellate judgment by having recourse to that of the Court of First Instance. Where the appellate judgment is not in accordance with law, the High Court may remand the appeal for re-hearing and delivery of a proper judgment, 7 C. W. N. 30; 37 C. 194; 13 C. W. 187 and 192; 35 C. 138. Under the wide powers conferred by s. 423 (a) the High Court has power in such cases to direct the Lower Appellate Court to rehear the appeal. 43 P. W. R. 1912 = 7 P. L. J. 111. The High Court may direct the re-hearing of an appeal as such omission is prejudicial to the prisoners, 15 B. 11; Ratanlal & Dey v. State, 9 C. W. N. 23.

425. (1) Whenever a case is decided on appeal by the High Court under this Chapter, it shall certify its judgment or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order appealed against was recorded or passed. If the finding, sentence or order was recorded or passed by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate, the certificate shall be sent through the District

Order by High Court on appeal to be certified to Lower Court

Magistrate

(2) The Court to which the High Court certifies its judgment or order shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the High Court and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith

Note.—Practice—When a case is decided on appeal or revised by the High Court, the Court or Magistrate to which the High Court certifies its order will proceed under the provisions of this section or s. 442, issue, when necessary, a fresh warrant or order to the jailor.—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cir., p 54

Suspension of sentence pending appeal. Release of appellant on bail.

426. (1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended and, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of any appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto

(3) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced

Notes.—1. Power under this section confined to the Appellate Court.—The Appellate Court may exercise the powers conferred by this section irrespective of the offence for which the accused is confined be bailable or not. In the absence of an appeal, the Sessions Judge has no authority to suspend a sentence

5 M. H. C. R. Appz. I. Where a Sessions Judge suspended the operation of a sentence passed by a second class Magistrate, held, that his action was illegal and that the time during which the sentence was suspended should not be excluded under this section in computing the term of the sentence. Though the result of illegal action of the Sessions Judge was to enable the accused to escape undergoing the greater portion of the sentence the High Court in setting aside the illegal order of the Sessions Judge, had no power to enhance the punishment, unless it were shown that the original order passed was inadequate, Welle II, 537.

2. Appellate Court cannot direct appellant to be treated as under-trial prisoner.—Under s 426 the Appellate Court has no power to pass an order that the prisoner who has been tried, convicted and sentenced in due course of law by a Subordinate Court should be tried as an under trial prisoner pending the disposal of his appeal, 16 Cr. L. J. 134

3 Order for detention in a Reformatory is not a sentence.—Sections 8, 10 and 30 of the Reformatory Schools Act 1897, make a distinction between an order for detention and a sentence, s 53 I P C, does not include such orders among punishments. An Appellate Court has therefore, no power to suspend the carrying out of the order of detention passed in lieu of a sentence of imprisonment, 16 Cr. L. J. 134.

4 Sentence of imprisonment cannot be suspended, to take effect at a future period, but must commence from the time that the sentence is passed. Where a Magistrate postponed the execution of a sentence of imprisonment for a stated period, at the request of the accused to allow the accused to appeal, held, that the sentence was bad in law, and could not be carried into execution, 12 W. R. 47 = 3 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 80.

427. When an appeal is presented under section 417, the High Court may issue a warrant directing that the accused be arrested and brought before it or any Subordinate Court, and the Court before which he is brought may commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal or admit him to bail.

Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal

Note.—See Note 1210 s 417. It is not necessary to give the accused notice before issuing warrant cf 16 Cr. L. J. 870 (B)

428. (1) In dealing with any appeal under this Chapter, the Appellate Court, if it thinks additional evidence to be necessary, shall record its reasons, and may either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate, or, when the Appellate Court, is a High Court, by a Court of Session or a Magistrate

Appellate Court may take further evidence or direct it to be taken

(2) When the additional evidence is taken by the Court of Session or the Magistrate, it or he shall certify such evidence to the Appellate Court, and such Court shall thereupon proceed to dispose of the appeal

(3) Unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused or his pleader shall be present when the additional evidence is taken, but such evidence shall not be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors

(4) The taking of evidence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter XXV, as if it were an inquiry

Notes.—1 Powers conferred upon Criminal Appellate Courts by s 428 are not analogous to those conferred on Civil Appellate Courts by the Civil Procedure Code.—A Civil Court has ordinarily no jurisdiction to take evidence of its own motion, it has to decide the action on the evidence adduced by the parties. But a Criminal Court stands on a different footing. Section 540 gives power to the Magistrate at any stage of the inquiry or trial to examine any witness he may find necessary to come to a proper conclusion. Section 428 also in general terms gives power to the appellate tribunal to take additional evidence and before taking such evidence the Court must record its reasons for so doing. 8 M. L. T. 413 = 11 Cr. L. J. 571; 8 M. L. T. 428 = (1910) M. W. N. 829 = 11 Cr. L. J. 734

2. Scope of section.—When Appellate Court ought not to take further evidence.—This section contemplates further inquiry by taking additional evidence, when the conviction by the Lower Court has been based upon some evidence which might legally support it but which in the opinion of the Appellate Court is not quite satisfactory. It does not empower an Appellate Court so to act in a case where there is no evidence legally capable of sustaining the charge, 9 B. L. R. Appx. XXXI = 18 W. R. 31. The section does not appear to be applicable when the prosecution having had ample opportunities to produce evidence, has failed to do so. Per SUNDARA IYER, J., in 38 M. 457. When, however, the prosecution has preferred to adduce evidence and the Magistrate prevented them by holding that it was unnecessary, the case is one in which a retrial may be ordered or fresh evidence called for under this section, 38 M. 457. The powers conferred by this section are not intended to be exercised in cases in which the prosecution having had ample opportunities to produce evidence, have done so and the entire evidence falls short of sustaining the charge, 5 A. 217 at p. 221. See also 6 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 84. The necessity for taking additional evidence must be apparent from something on the record and cannot be derived from external information, 3 L. B. R. 114. (See Note 7 to s. 417.) See also 19 M. 375. Appellate Court ought not to allow fresh evidence to be adduced merely because it is alleged to have been discovered after filing of the appeal, 31 M. 114 followed, 9 M. L. T. 323 = (1911) M. W. N. 136 = 12 Cr. L. J. 40.

Under s. 428 an Appellate Court cannot act upon any additional evidence which was not taken in the Lower Court unless the provisions of s. 429 of the Code are complied with, 21 A. L. J. 869.

3. Section limited to appeals under Chapter XXXI.—The power to take or call for further evidence, given by this section is expressly limited to appeals under this Chapter XXXI.

4. Appellate Court cannot call for a finding nor act upon it.—This section empowers an Appellate Court to merely call for evidence and not to call upon the Lower Court for finding. When an Appellate Court passes such an order, the proper order for the High Court to make is to set aside his judgment and direct him to restore the appeal and dispose of it according to law, 9 M. L. T. 406 = 12 Cr. L. J. 240; 16 Cr. L. J. 767 (M.). The Appellate Court cannot act upon such finding, 1914 M. W. 778 = 16 Cr. L. J. 79; but must come to its own conclusion upon the evidence taken by the Magistrate, 16 Cr. L. J. 767 (M.). See also 1 Pat. L. J. 99 = 17 Cr. L. J. 332.

5. Appellate Court cannot direct further inquiry by Police.—This section does not warrant an Appellate Court sending a case to the Police for investigation, it having been originally started by complaint in Court, 1900 A. W. N. 130.

6. Reasons for taking additional evidence must be given.—See 6 M. L. T. 418 = 11 Cr. L. J. 571; 8 M. L. T. 428 = 11 Cr. L. J. 736; but failure to do so would be merely an irregularity cured by s. 531, 9 M. L. T. 406 = 12 Cr. L. J. 240.

7. Presence of accused may be dispensed with when additional evidence is recorded by High Court itself.—Chapter XXX refers to the mode of taking and recording evidence in inquests and trials. Under this section and s. 375 the High Court could dispense with the presence of the accused, when additional evidence was recorded by itself. Criminal Appeal 52 of 1906 Allahabad High Court. The same procedure was adopted by the Madras High Court in hearing the appeals connected with the Ranga Reddi Murder Case.

8. It is only as an Appellate Court, or when additional evidence is called for by Appellate Court, that a Court can record such evidence in absence of jurors or assessors.—Where a Sessions Court in a trial by assessors for murder, relied on a statement by the deceased, and the evidence necessary to prove that statement was not recorded until after the close of the trial and the discharge of the assessors, it was held that the evidence was recorded coram non judge, 15 A. 135. See also 19 M. 375.

9. Practice—date for re-hearing must be fixed.—Whenever a criminal appeal is sent back for further inquiry, the Appellate Court should invariably fix a date for the re-hearing of the case, taking care that the date so fixed is in each instance sufficiently remote to allow of a return being made to the order of remand.—Per Cr. p. 240

10. Accused is not a witness.—This section does not seem to authorize the examination of the accused as a witness and it does not empower any Appellate Court to take evidence regarding proceedings before a Magistrate, such as to depose to the truth of an allegation, that the Magistrate had refused to examine some witness. A prosecution regarding the falsity of this statement is therefore bad. A criminal appeal is in reality a continuation of the criminal case, 12 M. 431 at p. 433.

11. Court asked to record evidence, not entitled to find.—If the Court that takes the additional evidence is not the Appellate Court itself, it should merely certify the evidence to the Appellate Court and has no power to express any opinion on it or to record any judgment as the case then stood on the record. This is the function of the Appellate Court, 3 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 62.

12. Subordinate Court taking fresh evidence can sanction prosecution.—When an Appellate Court directs further evidence to be taken by a Subordinate Court under this section it is competent for the latter Court before which such evidence is given if any offence against public justice as is described in s. 195 is committed before such Court by a witness whose evidence is being recorded therein to send the case for investigation to a Magistrate under the provisions of s. 476 15 W. R. 64 = 6 B. L. R. 699 (F. B.).

13. Taking additional evidence and finding upon it gives no right of further appeal.—On appeal from the conviction of a Deputy Magistrate the Sessions Court got additional evidence taken and on considering the same dismissed the appeal. It was contended that the prisoner had a further right of appeal. Held that no appeal lay for under the present Code the Appellate Court is directed to dispose of the appeal and not pass sentence judgment etc. as under the Code of 1861. The Appellate Court is not competent to pass a fresh sentence and it has no power to consider and determine a new case disclosed by the additional evidence except in so far as to affirm or modify or set aside the sentence under appeal or to act otherwise as provided by s. 423 (1) (b) under s. 430 the appeal judgment is final 27 C. 373 which practically overrides 2 W. R. 13 and explains the changes in the law as laid down by the previous codes. Where an Assistant Magistrate decided a case without examining the witnesses for the defence the Sessions Judge on appeal ordered the evidence of those witnesses to be taken by the Assistant Magistrate and on the depositions being returned to him dealt with the case and confirmed the conviction and sentence of the Assistant Magistrate held that the judgment of the Sessions Judge though in form confirming the Assistant Magistrate's judgment and sentence was in substance an original judgment and that an appeal lay from it to the High Court upon the merits, 2 W. R. 13, 8 W. R. 59 See also 6 B. L. R. 453 = 15 W. R. 33, 6 W. R. 39 and 6 B. E. G. R. Cr. Ca. 64.

14. When action under this section preferable to re-trial?—Where an Appellate Court found that three material witnesses had not been examined and making that one of the grounds, ordered a re-trial held that the proper procedure for the Appellate Court to adopt was to proceed under sub-sect. (1) of this section 31 C. 710.

15. Distinction between directing further evidence, further inquiry or re-trial.—See ss. 437 and 423. A Sessions Judge or District Magistrate acting under s. 437 (otherwise than as an Appellate Court) can only direct further inquiry and has no power to take evidence or direct the taking of further evidence. The High Court alone as a Court of Revision under s. 439 has all the powers of an Appellate Court including the power under this section 8 C. L. J. 251 = 6 Cr. L. J. 337. Where an Appellate Court directs a re-trial under s. 423 it cannot restrict the evidence to be taken to that mentioned in its order but should refer the case to be tried in view of the instructions in its order when it is open to the accused to adduce such additional evidence as he may desire 3 C. L. J. 303 = 3 Cr. L. J. 304.

429. When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion the case with their opinions thereon shall be laid before another Judge of the same Court and such Judge after such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit shall deliver his opinion and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Procedure where Judges of Court of Appeal are equally divided

Notes.—1 For similar provisions.—See s. 38 and 36 of the Letters Patent and 15 B. 452, 27 C. 501 and 692.

2. Whole case referred to and not merely points of difference.—Where on a difference of opinion between two Judges the case is laid before a third Judge the whole case is referred to the third Judge and not merely the point or points on which the Judges differed and it is the duty of the Judge to whom the case is referred to consider all the points involved before he delivers his opinion and it will be according to the opinion of such Judge that the judgment will follow 35 C. 202.

3. Where Judges agree as to one and disagree as to another accused.—I am not now concerned with the question of the trial of two prisoners with regard to one of whom the Judges composing the Court of Appeal may be agreed in their opinion while as regards the other the Judges may be equally divided in opinion. In such a contingency it is quite possible to maintain the view that, upon a reasonable interpretation of the term case what has to be laid before another Judge is the case of the prisoner as to whom the Judges are equally divided in opinion. Per MOOKERJEE, J. 35 C. 202.

4. Section does not apply to hearing of application under s. 195 (b).—The section does not apply to the hearing of application under s. 195 (b) to revoke a sanction granted by the Lower Court or to give a sanction refused by it. If the Judges are equally divided, the case is governed by s. 36 of the Letters Patent that is the opinion of the senior Judge prevails 22 M. L. J. 419 (F. B.) = 13 Cr. L. J. 209.

Finality of orders on appeal

430. Judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final except in the cases provided for in section 417 and Chapter XXXII

Notes.—1 Section 417 gives a right of appeal to Government against acquittal Chapter XXXII deals with reference and revision.

2 Finality of judgments and orders.—See s 369 and Notes thereunder at pp. 934—938 Where a Sessions Judge erroneously dismissed an appeal on the ground that it was barred by limitation but on discovering the error, admitted the appeal and acquitted the accused the High Court held the order of acquittal and not open to review 19 B 732; 24 P R 1887
421 for non appearance of appellant it is open to
G. R. Appx. XXIX, 5 N L R. 76 = 9 Cr L J 553.

Such an order of disposal without hearing on the merits is not a judgment 10 C. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr L J 287
As to finality of judgment in Sonhat Pergannas see 12 C. 538 An appeal judgment on a sanction application is final 23 B 50 See also Note 3 to s 428 and Notes 18 to 20 to s 421

3. Section applies to High Courts.—An order rejecting an appeal summarily and without calling for records is final. It is immaterial whether such order is made before or after the papers are called for 4 B 101 distinguishing 7 Bom H C. R Cr Ca 67 See also 14 C. 42 and Note 8 to s 434 and Notes 12 to 14 to s. 369 and Note 7 to s 439

431. Every appeal under section 417 shall finally abate on the death of the accused and every other appeal under this Chapter (except an appeal from a sentence of fine) shall finally abate on the death of the appellant

Abatement of appeals.

Notes —1 Reason for the exception —We think that an appeal against a sentence of fine should not abate by reason of the death of the accused because it is a matter which affects his estate We have accordingly excepted this case.—See Com Rep

2. Result of the death of one of several appellants —Two persons were tried and convicted by a Sessions Judge of criminal breach of trust and sentenced each to one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1000 Both appealed to the High Court against the conviction and sentence and one of them died pending the decision of the appeal. The conviction and sentence on the living appellant were reversed but no order was passed as regards the dead one On the application of his nephew for reversal of conviction held that the appeal of the deceased appellant abated on his death but that his representatives had their remedy by application to the Governor in Council 19 B 714. Even the High Court cannot call for and examine the record of such a case with a view to revision and rectification 6 P R 1893. See contra 2 B 564 The words newly introduced meet the above Rulings.

3. Abatement of revision proceedings.—By analogy to s. 431 all applications by way of revision abate on the death of the applicant 6 P R. 1893 contra 2 B. 564.

4. Appeals against compensation directed under s. 250, do not abate.—Where compensation has been awarded under s. 250 and an application for revision against this order has been made pending which the petitioner dies the application does not abate also but can be prosecuted by his legal representatives, 24 P R. 1905 = 9 Cr L J 103.

CHAPTER XXXII *

OF REFERENCE AND REVISION

432. A Presidency Magistrate may, if he thinks fit refer for the opinion of the High Court any question of law which arises in the hearing of any case pending before him or may give judgment in any such case subject to the decision of the High Court on such reference and pending such decision may either commit the accused to jail or release him on bail to appear for judgment when called upon Reference by Presidency Magistrate to High Court.

* An order under s. 4 cl (1) of Act XXXVII of 1901 sent for an accused person, is not open to revision, under this Chapter as all sentences passed in criminal cases are final, 12 C. 536.

Notes—1 Reference before hearing of case cannot be made.—A Presidency Magistrate cannot make reference under this section before the hearing of a case, 1 Bom L R 821

2 Reference to High Court must be on a question of law.—A reference to the High Court under this section must be on a question of law as distinguished from one of fact Ratanlal 838, e.g. whether the words stand to ply for hire in s 22 of Bombay Act VI of 1863 include walking or driving slowly along the road for a fare is a question of fact and as the Act contains no definition of the expression stand to ply and in the absence of any definition extending the meaning of the word stand it should be understood in its popular sense Ratanlal 539

3 Practice of High Court on reference.—Upon a reference under this section the High Court only deals with the particular points of law stated for its opinion but not with the facts of the case nor any other objection to the validity of the proceedings referred 33 C. 193. The order passed is conclusive both as to the merits of the case and as to the quantum of punishment 1890 A W N 225

4 Right to begin.—In a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court as to whether on the facts stated any offence has been committed by any accused person it lies on the prosecution to make out that an offence has been committed and under the circumstances the prosecution must begin 19 C. 380

5 Except Presidency Magistrate no other Magistrate can refer for opinion.—A District Magistrate has no power to make a reference. He can only bring a case before the High Court by way of revision. This section gives power only to a Presidency Magistrate 18 L R. 4—9 Cr L J 213. A Sessions Judge cannot refer a case to the High Court on a point arising in a pending appeal 13 A L J 477—16 Cr L J 433. See Notes 6 and 7 to s 438

433. (1) When a question has been so referred the High Court shall pass such order thereon as it thinks fit and shall cause a copy of such order to be sent to the Magistrate by whom the reference was made who shall dispose of the case conformably to the said order

Direction as to costs (2) The High Court may direct by whom the costs of such reference shall be paid

Notes—1 High Court sitting in appeal cannot review.—The High Court sitting in appeal cannot review an order passed by it under this section Ratanlal 638. See Note 7 under s. 439. But when the Magistrate does not dispose of the case conformably to the order of the High Court an appeal will lie under s 411 against the decision of the Magistrate

2 Power of High Courts to grant costs under this section.—The High Court has no jurisdiction to grant costs in criminal cases except in those cases where the Code of Criminal Procedure makes express provision. The maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius applied 45 M 913.

434. (1) When any person has in a trial before a Judge of High Court consisting of more Judges than one and acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction been convicted of an offence the Judge if he thinks fit may reserve and refer for the decision of a Court consisting of two or more Judges of such Court any question of law which has arisen in the course of the trial of such person and the determination of which would affect the event of the trial

Procedure when question reserved (2) If the Judge reserves any such question the person convicted shall pending the decision thereon be remanded to jail or if the Judge thinks fit be admitted to bail and the High Court shall have power to review the case or such part of it as may be necessary and finally determine such question and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction and to pass such judgment or order as the High Court thinks fit

Notes.—1. Analogous provisions.—(i) Chartered High Court.—See cls. 25 and 26 of the Letters Patent printed in the Appendix

(ii) Chief Court of Lower Burma.—See ss 11 and 12 of the Lower Burma Courts Act VI of 1900

(iii) Punjab.—See Act XVIII of 1884

2. Reference purely discretionary.—It is in the discretion of the single Judge constituting the High Court whether or not he will reserve a point of law for the opinion of the High Court consisting of two or more Judges, 10 B. H. C. R. 75. In 22 B. 112 (Tilak's Case) the application was refused. The statement of the Judge who presides at a trial as to what has taken place at it is conclusive. Neither the affidavits of by-standers, nor of jurors, nor the notes of counsel, nor of shorthand writers are admissible to controvert the notes or statement of the Judge.

3. Point of law must be one arising in course of 'trial'.—When a point of law is raised before the accused is called upon to plead, it cannot be referred under this section to the Full Bench, even if the presiding Judge wished it, 28 C. 211.

4. Prisoner's counsel has the right to begin.—Where, on the application of such counsel, a question of law has been reserved for the decision of the Court under this section, the counsel for the accused must begin, 8 B. 200.

5. Power exercised by High Court is a power of review.—The power exercised by a Court sitting as a Court to decide questions of law reserved in criminal cases under this section is the power of review and the Court is a Court of reference and revision, 8 B. 200. This is the High Courts power of review referred to in s 369. See Note 12 at p 936 and 7 A. 672; 5 W. R. 61, 10 B. 176 (F.B.), 19 B. 732; 23 B. 50.

6. Power of High Court on point of law reserved, to consider merits of case.—The High Court on a point of law reserved under this section has power to review the whole case and to determine whether the admission of the rejected evidence would have affected the result of the trial, 1 C. 207 = 25 W. R. 38; 2 B. 61; 9 Bom. H. C. R. 353; 10 C. L. J. 13 = 10 Cr. L. J. 193, 32 B. 111; 17 C. 642; 25 M. 61; 4 C. W. N. 433. The question of appreciation of evidence is not one of law, 5 Bom. L. R. 686.

7. High Court is competent to dispose of case finally.—The accused being upon his trial for murder, two principal witnesses for the prosecution G and M, were tendered pardon by the committing Magistrate under s. 337, and were accepted by them. The Judge read to the jury statements (which had not been admitted in evidence) made by G and M, purporting to have been taken under s. 361, Ald, that the improper reception of such evidence constituted a decision erroneous in point of law calculated to prejudice the prisoner. Under s. 167 of the Indian Evidence Act and s. 537, the High Court went into the merits of the case quashed the conviction and acquitted the prisoner, 17 C. 642. See also 4 C. W. N. 433 and 23 M. 61.

8. Except under this section a Division or Full Bench of High Court cannot revise judgment of single Judge exercising criminal jurisdiction.—The powers of a single Judge in a matter with which he has jurisdiction to deal are the powers of the Court and cannot be in any way controlled by a Division or Full Bench of the Court. As no appeal lies, no revision lies, 1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 308; 4 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378. In 32 B. 111 (F.B.) it was held (in a case arising under the Letters Patent) that in the absence of any reservation of the point by the trying Judge as provided by cl. 25 or of any certificate from the Advocate-General under cl. 26 the Court was precluded from re-opening a question which was decided by the Judge presiding at the trial. See also 35 M. 397.

435. (1) The High Court or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, or any Sub-

Divisional Magistrate empowered by the Local Government in this behalf may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court situate within the local limits of its or his jurisdiction for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceeding of such inferior Court "and may, when calling for such record direct that the execution of any sentence be suspended and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond pending the examination of the record" *

Power to call for records of inferior Courts

Power to call for records of inferior Courts

* These words in "—" were inserted by Act XXIII of 1913 s. 116

* ' Explanation—All Magistrates whether exercising original or appellate jurisdiction shall be deemed to be inferior to the Sessions Judge for the purposes of this sub-section and of section 437

(2) If any Sub-Divisional Magistrate acting under sub-section (1) considers that any such finding sentence or order is illegal or improper or that any such proceedings are irregular he shall forward the record with such remarks thereon as he thinks fit, to the District Magistrate

† (3) * * * * *

(4) If an application under this section has been made either to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate no further application shall be entertained by either of them

Note—The old clause (3) stood as follows—

(3) Orders made under ss 143 and 144 and proceedings under Chapter XII and s. 176 are not proceedings within the meaning of this section

By the omission of this clause orders under ss 143 144 and 145 to 148 and 176 are now subject to revision 43 C 522 holding that the High Court has jurisdiction to set aside proceedings under s. 145 in consonance with the law as now amended. After the amendment by the omission of clause (3) of s. 435 it does not now seem necessary to have recourse to s. 107 of the Government of India Act (5 and 6 Geo. C. Y. 61) to set aside a proceeding under s. 145

I—NATURE AND SCOPE OF REVISIONAL JURISDICTION

Notes—1 Scheme of revisional jurisdiction, ss 435 to 439—General revisional jurisdiction is conferred by ss 435 438 and 439 Under these sections the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate cannot themselves interfere except to suspend the execution of a sentence or grant bail but can only report to the High Court and the High Court may in its discretion exercise any of the powers referred in s. 439

(1) As regards dismissals of complaints under ss 203 and 204 (3) and orders of discharge there is no appeal as there is in cases of acquittal and conviction and the Legislature has not thought it sufficient to leave these orders to be dealt with under the general revisional jurisdiction already mentioned and has conferred special powers in regard to these orders on the High Court itself as well as on the Sessions Judge and District Magistrate Section 438 empowers Sessions Judges and District Magistrates to commit for trial direct in cases exclusively triable at Sessions In less serious cases not triable at Sessions it is open to the High Court Sessions Judge or District Magistrate to make an order for further enquiry 32 M 220 at p 233. Ss 435—438 prescribe the method by which the records of any criminal case come to the High Court and the power to deal with the record is prescribed by s 439 Ss. 435—438 provide the machinery and s 439 the power to deal with the record 36 M 275, 17 O C 25 = 15 Cr. L J 217 Ss. 435—439 must be read together 15 C. 608 at p 617; 50 C 477 (F B) and see Note 11 to s 436 Note 4 to s. 437 and Note 3 to s. 439

2 This Chapter does not affect original jurisdiction of Magistrates—Revisional powers conferred on superior Courts cannot be regarded as in any way implicitly restricting the jurisdiction conferred on Magistrates to inquire into offences—Per WHITE C J 29 M 126 (F B). See also Note 26 at p 586 Note 13 to s 436 and Note 3 to s. 437

3. Calling for record not a stage of any judicial proceeding—The call for the records of a case under this section by a District Magistrate etc. is not a judicial proceeding so as to give him jurisdiction to make an order under s. 476 in respect of a case disposed of by a Magistrate subordinate to him 15 M L J 459 = 3 Cr. L J 115; 11 N L R 36 = 18 Cr. L J 289 In 25 M 659, the Court refused to decide whether an order passed after and as the result of an examination of records under s 435 was a judicial proceeding See Note 21

II—COURTS IN WHOM REVISIONAL POWERS ARE VESTED

4 High Court.—See s 439 and Notes thereunder as to the revisional powers of the High Court

5 Sessions Judges.—All Magistrates including the District Magistrate and a District Magistrate acting under s 30 are inferior to the Sessions Judge for purposes of revision—The Magistracy are

* This explanation was added by Act XVIII of 1923 s 116

† Sub-section (3) was omitted by 16 d.

subordinate to the Sessions Court, only for the purpose of reference to the High Court in cases in which revision is required. See s. 17 (5) and Notes thereto. It will be the duty of Sessions Judges carefully to peruse the judgments and orders of the sub-divisional and first class Magistrates submitted to them by District Magistrates and to report to the High Court, without delay, any case which, in their opinion, calls for revision or any doubtful case. They will not themselves issue proceedings criticising those of Magistracy except on appeal. District Magistrates should comply with all requisitions for records, returns and information made by Sessions Judges with regard to any case referable by them to the High Court. They should also render any explanation which Sessions Judges may require from them or from Subordinate Magistrates in such cases—Mad. H. C. Rul., 17th December, 1884. The duty of criticising the proceedings of the Subordinate Magistracy, is a duty devolving upon the superior Magistracy and not on the Sessions Judge, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXVII.

(a) Additional Sessions Judge—Except the power conferred by s. 438 (2), an Additional Sessions Judge would ordinarily appear to have no power to act under Chapter XXXII. The expression 'Sessions Judge' was substituted 'for Court of Session' by the 1898 Code. See s. 438 (2).

(b) Assistant Sessions Judge—Looking to the terms of ss 17, 193 (2), 409 and 438 (2), an Assistant Sessions Judge is not competent to exercise any of the powers conferred on Sessions Judges by Chapter XXXII. See 9 B. 164 (Joint Sessions Judge), and 37 A. 286 (power of Assistant Sessions Judge to hear appeals).

(c) Joint Sessions Judge—Under the old Code it was held that a Joint Sessions Judge had no power to act under Chap XXXII, 23 W. R. 21; 9 B. 164; 9 B. 352. The present Code does away with the office of Joint Sessions Judge.

6. District Magistrate—All Magistrates appointed under ss 12 13 14 and 15 are subordinate to the District Magistrate, see s. 17 (1) and Notes thereto.

Additional District Magistrate—An Additional District Magistrate appointed under s. 10 (2) is also subordinate to the District Magistrate. see Note 4 to s. 10 and Note 15 (ii).

7. Sub-Divisional Magistrate specially empowered.—In Madras and the Punjab, all Sub-Divisional Magistrates have been empowered to act under this section.—Fort St George Gazette, 1883, p. 13, Punjab Gazette, 1883, p. 52. In Upper Burma (with the exception of the Shan States), all Sub-Divisional Magistrates are by Reg. V of 1892, Act V, empowered to call for records under s. 435. The power, however, is limited by sub-sec. (2), e.g., they cannot sanction a prosecution, 7 W. 580. In perusing the calendars under this section, these judicial officers are merely acting within its provisions which are, to satisfy themselves as to the correctness of any finding, sentence or order, etc. They are not then acting in any stage of a judicial proceeding. If a District Magistrate thinks that an order of a Sub-Divisional Magistrate is not legal or proper, he can act under this section, report the matter to the High Court, 26 M. 190.

8. Proceeding of Magistrate not empowered, void.—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law in that behalf, calls under this section for proceedings, his proceedings shall be void. S. 530, cl. (m).

III.—CONCURRENT JURISDICTION OF SESSIONS JUDGES AND DISTRICT MAGISTRATES UNDER THIS CHAPTER.—SUB-SEC. (4).

9. Powers of Sessions Judges—

(i) Sessions Judge incompetent to act either "suo motu" or on application after District Magistrate has been moved under s. 435—In 17 M. L. J. 163 = 2 W. R. 111 = 11 Cr. L. J. 123. A Sessions Judge is competent to entertain an application or act suo motu to call for the record of a case in which an application has been made to the District Magistrate under s. 435 and refer the District Magistrate's order to the High Court, the prohibition in sub-sec. (4) being as applicable to such an application the object of which was that the Sessions Judge should not revise the order passed by the District Magistrate in revision, 10 R. P. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 134. A Sessions Judge has concurrent jurisdiction with the District Magistrate under this section, therefore, where an accused, charged with murder is discharged by a first-class Magistrate and his order is upheld by the District Magistrate, a Sessions Judge cannot direct the first-class Magistrate to commit the accused to Court of Sessions, Ratanlal 837. See Note 2 to s. 436.

(iii) Sessions Judge cannot direct further inquiry after District Magistrate has dealt with case under s 435—See 22 C. 873; 17 C. W. N. 451 = 14 Cr. L. J. 123 and Note 6 to s. 437

(iii) Sessions Judge can refer proceedings of District Magistrate under s 438 to High Court—In the matter of reporting a case to the High Court for orders, both the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate have concurrent jurisdiction, but the Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to review an order made by the District Magistrate under s 437 refusing a further inquiry. It is open to the Sessions Judge to refer the matter to the High Court under this section, 22 C. 873; 17 M. L. J. 153 = 8 Cr. L. J. 132.

(iv) Sessions Judge can refer proceedings of District Magistrate exercising appellate jurisdiction—Under the old section it was held that a Sessions Judge has no power to refer to the High Court the judgment of a District Magistrate given in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction as he is not then an inferior Criminal Court to the Sessions Judge within the meaning of s. 435, 14 C. W. N. 206. But now under the amendment of sub-sec. (1) by the addition of the explanation that all Magistrates whether exercising original or appellate jurisdiction shall be deemed to be inferior to the Sessions Judge for the purposes of the sub-section, 14 C. W. N. 206 is no longer good law. It may be also noted that 3 Lah. 23 holds the same view as is embodied in the new explanation to sub-sec. (1).

(v) Power of Sessions Judge to revise orders of District Magistrate under s 193 (6)—In 30 A. 109, it was held that a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to revise an order of a District Magistrate setting aside an order of a third-class Magistrate refusing to sanction a prosecution under s. 211, I P. C. on the ground that the only Court to which an appeal lies from an order of a third-class Magistrate is the District Magistrate. See, however, the recent Full Bench Ruling in 30 M. 332 and Note 215 at p. 541.

(vi) Sessions Judge competent to revise proceedings of a District Magistrate acting in the exercise of his original criminal jurisdiction—See 12 C. 473 (F.B.), 15 P. R. 1904 and Note 1 to s. 436.

10. Powers of District Magistrate—

(i) District Magistrates cannot either on application or 'suo motu' act after Sessions Judge has dealt with case under this Chapter—After the Sessions Judge had refused to interfere with an order of discharge by a second-class Magistrate the District Magistrate acting suo motu directed the committal of the accused. Held the committal was invalid. What the District Magistrate might not do on application he could not do suo motu by dispensing with an application. The fact that the District Magistrate passes the order of commitment without the knowledge of the Sessions Judge's refusal does not make it less illegal. The reason for the prohibition is the avoidance of a conflict between the orders of two district authorities having co-ordinate powers, 26 M. 477, Ratanlal 837 is no longer law, having regard to sub-sec. (4). But see 17 Cr. L. J. 497.

(ii) District Magistrate cannot direct further inquiry under s 436 when Sessions Judge has already passed orders under that section—See Note 5 to s. 436.

(iii) District Magistrate cannot under s 438 refer proceedings of Sessions Judges to High Court—He must move the High Court through the Public Prosecutor—A District Magistrate has no power to call for the record of a Sessions Court under this section as the District Magistrate is subordinate to the Sessions Judge, and the High Court will not interfere on a report under s. 438 made by a District Magistrate who is dissatisfied with the proceedings of a Sessions Judge. 2 N. L. R. 149 = 4 Cr. L. J. 422 where 23 C. 230 is followed and 9 A. 362; 13 W. R. 42 and 8 B. 307 are referred to. A District Magistrate has no power to refer the proceedings of a Sessions Judge acquitting an accused person, who had been convicted by a Bench of Magistrates, to the High Court, 6 C. L. R. 243; also 18 C. 186; 8 C. 875; 14 W. R. 25. If he considers that there has been a miscarriage of justice in the Court of Sessions, he should communicate with the Public Prosecutor as to the case in which he thinks such miscarriage has occurred, and invite his assistance to move the High Court with regard to it. (9 A. 362; 10 A. 146, 12 A. 534, 24 A. 348 followed; 25 A. 128, 1 B. L. C. 40 = 8 Cr. L. J. 151; Mad H C Pro, 27th September, 1885, 12 M. L. T. 170 = 1912 M. W. N. 812 = 23 M. L. J. 732 = 13 Cr. L. J. 716; 28 A. 91; 2 N. L. R. 149 = 4 Cr. L. J. 422; 23 C. 249; Ratanlal 601 and 623; or to take steps for an appeal against the order of acquittal by the Sessions Judge, Ratanlal 212, followed in 6 Bom. L. R. 1099, where it was held that when a District Magistrate finds that the sentence passed by a first-class Magistrate and confirmed in appeal by the Sessions Judge is inadequate, he is not competent to report the matter to the High Court under this section, but should bring the fact to the notice of the Local Government to have the High Court moved through the Public Prosecutor. In 10 A. 146 and 25 A. 91, the Allahabad High Court observed that, as a general rule, it would not entertain a reference from a District Magistrate which had for its object the enhancement of a sentence passed by a Sessions Judge as a Court of appeal; see also 5 Lah 11. So also 5 Bom. L. R. 1099 = 1 Cr. L. J. 1115. In 36 A. 378, CHAMBER, J., held that it was very doubtful whether the District Magistrate is entitled as a matter of law to make a reference for the enhancement of sentence passed in a trial held by the Sessions Court, but assuming that he is so entitled it is extremely inconvenient that the District Magistrate should be allowed to criticise an order of a Court superior to him in this way. He should however, do so only in very special cases, 10 A. 148, 15 M. 36. A District Magistrate has no power to criticise or refer to the High Court, the proceedings of a Court, like the Sessions Court, superior to his own Weir II, 563 and 568; nor is he competent to report to the High Court under this section an order passed by his predecessor in office. But the fact that the reference was improper need not necessarily prevent the High Court from passing the appropriate order under the circumstances of the case, as it has ample powers under s. 439, Ratanlal 652, 14 W. R. 25, 41 Bom. 47; 24 A. L. J. 224.

(iv) District Magistrate cannot withhold order of Sessions Judge even if wrong—The District Magistrate must forward the orders of the Sessions Judge to the Magistrates to whom they are addressed. He has no right to withhold the order because in his opinion it is not a legal order if he desires to obtain a revision of such orders, he should move the High Court through the Law Officers of the Government 9 A. 362 and 18 C. 188 referred to, 8 M. L. T. 88 = 11 Cr. L. J. 327.

IV.—OVER WHAT COURTS AND PROCEEDINGS REVISIONAL JURISDICTION MAY BE EXERCISED.

11. No revisional jurisdiction under this Chapter over proceedings of Courts other than 'criminal'.—The power to revise proceedings under this Chapter is confined to proceedings of inferior Criminal Courts and does not extend to the proceedings of Civil or Revenue Courts. A Sessions Judge or a High Court has therefore no power to call for the records of Civil Court. A Criminal Bench of the High Court cannot, therefore interfere with the proceedings of a Civil or Revenue Court under s. 195 or s. 476. See 28 A. 219 (F.B.), 1904 A. W. N. 170; 1902 A. W. N. 202; 28 A. 554; 31 A. 38; 8 C. W. N. 73, 40 C. 477 (F.B.) 26 M. 139; 36 M. 72, Weir II, 541 and 602; 4 L. B. R. 339 = 9 Cr. L. J. 24; 4 L. B. R. 238 = 7 Cr. L. J. 416; 7 L. B. R. 76 = 6 Bur. L. T. 144 = 14 Cr. L. J. 498; 1915 U. B. R. 411, 83 = 17 Cr. L. J. 82, 19 C. W. N. 447 = 21 C. L. J. 198 = 16 Cr. L. J. 286, 17 O. C. 25 = 15 Cr. L. J. 217 (where 40 C. 477 is approved, 6 O. C. 216, dissented from and 13 O. C. 198 = 11 Cr. L. J. 514 distinguished), nor over a Magistrate exercising civil powers, 9 Bom. L. R. 1347 = 6 Cr. L. J. 425. In 26 B. 785 the point was raised but not decided.

Contra.—In PUNJAB and CENTRAL PROVINCES it is held that it is competent to the High Court under ss. 435 and 439 to revise the orders made by Courts other than criminal in any proceeding under this Code, e.g., under ss. 476 and 195, 5 P. R. 1908 = 7 P. W. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 281 (F.B.) 4 N. L. R. 160 = 8 Cr. L. J. 331.

12 Courts held to be not criminal—

(i) Income-tax Officer is a Revenue Court and not a Criminal Court.—An Income-tax Officer adjudicating upon a petition for reduction of income-tax or hearing an appeal under the Income-tax Act II of 1886 is a Court and competent to sanction prosecution under s. 476, but the High Court has no power to interfere with such order under s. 435 as the Income-tax Officer is not a Criminal Court, 26 M. 72, 35 B. 642 (F.B.), 44 P. R. 1903 = 3 Cr. L. J. 428; 3 B. L. R. 66 = 10 Cr. L. J. 395 and 15 Cr. L. J. 2.

(ii) District Registrar not a Criminal Court.—District Registrar is not a Criminal Court within the meaning of this section and an order by him granting sanction cannot be revised, 16 Bom. L. R. 970 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 216 = 13 Cr. L. J. 843; 33 A. 109. Cf. 30 M. 326 and Note 44 at p. 502.

(iii) Settlement Officer under the Bengal Tenancy Act.—An order made under s. 476 by an Assistant Settlement Officer under the Bengal Tenancy Act cannot be revised under s. 439, as it is not an inferior Criminal Court, 40 C. 477 (F.B.).

(iv) Magistrate acting under s. 80 of the Bombay District Municipality Act.—Under s. 80 of the Bombay District Municipality Act, III of 1901, a Magistrate hearing an appeal under that section is merely the appellate authority having jurisdiction to deal with the question of a civil liability. He is an inferior Criminal Court to which alone the revisional jurisdiction under this section is given. L. R. 3 Cr. L. J. 425, but see Note 14 (vii).

13. Cases where revisional jurisdiction is specially prohibited—

- (i) Press Act, s 22—See Note 40 to s 439¹
- (ii) Extradition Act XV of 1903—See Appendix and Note 41 to s. 439.
- (iii) Reformatory Schools Act—See Appendix and Note 39 to s 439

14. Courts and proceedings which have been held to be within the revisional jurisdiction—

(i) Order under Eastern Bengal and Assam Disorderly House Act—A Magistrate making an order under Act II of 1907 (E B and A Code) is an inferior Criminal Court and the High Court has jurisdiction to revise such order, as the information which lies at the root of the proceedings thereunder by virtue of s. 2 is to be received by a first class Magistrate, who is an official whose character is determined by this Code, 37 C. 237

(ii) Order under s 293 of the Cantonment Code, 1899—An order purporting to have been made under s 293 of the Cantonment Code, 1899, is judicial order and not merely an executive order and therefore subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court, 9 P. R. 1909 = 30 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 17. See also 1 P. R. 1908; 23 P. R. 1905

(iii) Orders under the Calcutta Municipal Act III of 1899—The orders of a Magistrate under ss 449-450 of the Calcutta Municipal Act are open to revision by the High Court, 33 C. 287; 34 C. 341; 29 C. 491. Where the Legislature by express enactment (s 645) vested a discretion in the General Committee, the High Court will not interfere if the acts done are within the provisions of law, 34 C. 30.

(iv) Inspector-General of Police—Act V of 1861—Under ss 4 and 5 of Act V of 1861, the Inspector General of Police is a Magistrate and if he gives sanction his proceedings may be revised, 9 P. W. R. 1903 = 7 Cr. L. J. 291.

(v) Proceedings under Indian Railways Act—A Magistrate's proceedings under s. 113 of the Indian Railways Act IX of 1890, are open to revision by the High Court under this section and s. 439, 13 P. R. 1891.

(vi) Forest Act VII of 1878—The terms of s. 58 of the Forest Act do not exclude the revisional powers of the High Court over a subordinate tribunal in the exercise of its criminal jurisdiction where there has been material error in a judicial proceeding, 4 A. 417.

(vii) Bombay District Municipalities Act III of 1901—In a case instituted under s 151 (2) of the Act, viz, the using of a place in a certain manner after notice has been given under s 151 (1) the mere fact of a notice being given is not conclusive evidence of the user of the place contrary to the notice. All the necessary ingredients of the offence must be proved as in any other criminal trial 8 B. L. R. 238 = 16 Cr. L. J. 235

(viii) Workmen's Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859—The High Court has power under ss 435 and 439 of the Cr Pro. Code to revise an order passed by a Magistrate directing either return of the advance or specific performance of the contract under para. 1 of s. 2 of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859, 43 B. 807.

15. Powers of revision limited to proceedings of "inferior Courts"—Within the territorial jurisdiction of a High Court, all other Courts are inferior to it, in a Sessions Division the Sessions Court is superior to all other local Criminal Courts, and all such other Courts are inferior to it, and in a district all other Magistrates are by s. 17 subordinate to the Magistrate of the District, and consequently inferior to him and inferior as much for the purpose of s 435 as in any other respect, 12 C. 473 (F B)

"Inferior," i.e., statutorily incompetent to hold or exercise equal powers. It carries with it the idea of subordination, which latter means inferior in rank" 9 B 100. It is more comprehensive than the word subordinate, 8 M. 15 (F.B). There may be inferiority without subordination as in the relation of a second or third-class Magistrate to the Court of Session, 12 C 473; 10 C. 263 and 351, 7 A. 134. A Magistrate is not competent to refer the proceedings of a superior Court to the High Court on the ground that they were improper, 6 C. L. R. 245 and 8 C 376. A Bench, Full or Divisional, of a High Court cannot revise orders of a single Judge of the High Court as there is no inferiority, 4 P. R. 1509 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378; 5 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314; 14 C. 42.

(i) All Magistrates including District Magistrate inferior to Sessions Judge—See 12 C. 473 (F.B.). 1859 A. W. N. 100. Even a District Magistrate acting under s 30 is inferior to the Sessions Judge, 15 P. R. 1904. See Note 1 to s. 436 and Note 5.

(vi) First-class Magistrate inferior to District Magistrate—The Court of a Magistrate of the first class is inferior and subordinate to that of the District Magistrate, who is superior in respect of executive as well as judicial functions to all other Magistrates, 9 B. 109; 8 M. 13 (F.B.), 7 A. 853 (F.B.), 12 C. 473 (F.B.), 33 P. R. 1835. The District Magistrate can therefore call for and examine the record of a proceeding before a Sub-Divisional Magistrate of the first class, even if the first-class Magistrate has been appointed an Additional District Magistrate under s. 10 (2) 23 P. R. 1903 = 9 Gr. L. J. 104.

(vii) No revisional jurisdiction to Sessions Judges and Magistrates outside the limits of their Division or District—Where sanction was granted and confirmed on appeal by the Magistrate of the District of South Arcot and a complaint laid before a Magistrate in the District of Chingleput, the Sessions Judge of Chingleput is not competent to revise the sanction proceedings or to report such proceedings to the High Court and to stay proceedings before the second-class Magistrate of Chingleput pending the result of the revision, 25 M. 137. See also 30 M. 136 in Note 4 to s. 403 as to the significance of the word 'situate' in sub-sec. (1).

16. Revision limited to proceedings of 'Courts' as such and does not extend to extra-judicial proceedings—

(i) When a Magistrate acts as such, his proceedings will be liable to revision whatever he may call them—When an illegal order is passed and action taken which involves matters coming within the purview of Law and Justice and within the scope of authority of the Courts, such authority cannot be ousted by the mere ipse dixit of the officer, that he was not acting as a judicial officer but in his executive capacity and the High Court can interfere by way of revision, 4 P. R. 1903 = 1 P. W. R. 1903 = 86 P. L. R. 1903 = 7 Cr. L. J. 202 and the validity of such an order may be tested on a prosecution for its disobedience, 11 C. W. N. 256. An order passed by a District Magistrate cannot be supported as an executive order in the absence of any statutory authority which would justify the making of it, 170 C. 263 = 15 Cr. L. J. 663. See Notes 10 and 11 to s. 439. In 7 A. L. J. 983 = 11 Cr. L. J. 476 it was held that when a Magistrate deals with the case as a Magistrate the Sessions Judge may proceed under this section. In this case the Collector who alone was empowered to levy a fine under s. 2 of Bengal Regulation VI of 1825 made over the case in his capacity as District Magistrate to the Joint Magistrate who levied a fine. Under s. 4 an appeal lay to the Board of Revenue. Held, the Sessions Judge was competent to deal with the case under s. 435 and the High Court set aside the sentence of fine. See Note 58 at p. 235, Note 58 at p. 264, Note 11 to s. 439 and Notes under s. 476.

(ii) Judicial and executive order distinguished—The scope of this section is very wide and the powers under it are not confined to calling for the records of judicial proceedings alone. The distinction however between a judicial and an executive proceeding is very simple.—The essence of a judicial proceeding is a declaration of the law on the particular case which has to be arrived at as the decision of certain legal relations 'est enim judicium lex ad factum singulare aptata' (Grotius de pure praeiud. C. I.). The essence of an executive proceeding is an act to be done under such and such circumstances and inquired into when necessary with a view to determine whether in the particular case they call for or justify some particular. This distinction being borne in mind, the cases in which the superior may departmentally overrule the orders of his subordinate are easily discriminated from those in which a judicial review is necessary, Ratanlal 129. See also 29 M. 100; 4 P. R. 1903 = 7 Cr. L. J. 202. The test for deciding whether a particular officer is a Court, does not depend upon whether he is empowered to take evidence but whether he has been given jurisdiction by the constituted authorities to deal out justice in any particular defined class of cases. Per SADASIVIER, J., SUNDARA IYER, J., is of opinion that the true test is laid down in 24 M. 121 refers to Rex v. Woodhouse, (1906) 2 K. B. 501, where the test adopted appears to be 'whether there was a lis before the officer,' 38 M. 72. See Notes 35—44 under s. 195 and Notes 6—12 to s. 476.

(iii) Extra-judicial orders not subject to revision—The High Court cannot revise an extra-judicial order passed by a Magistrate, 1833 A. W. N. 25; nor can it give such opinion on questions submitted by the Lower Courts. The Lower Courts must instead of applying for instructions in such cases, pass orders and submit their proceedings for revision, 8 M. 13. Thus a Magistrate's order directing the observance of Municipal bye-laws which prohibit the slaughter of votive animals in private houses is not revisable under this section, 1833 A. W. N. 255. So a general circular prohibiting uncertificated pleaders from practising in the Criminal Courts in his District by a District Magistrate is an administrative matter. The particular pleader who has been refused may apply by revision, 19 M. L. J. 566 = 11 Cr. L. J. 69. In 1902 A. W. N. 173 the High Court declined to interfere with an order passed by a District Magistrate when he revised the lis of petition writers who were allowed to practise within the precincts of the Court. A Collector as such is not subject to the judicial jurisdiction of the High Court in criminal matters and where in certain butz ara proceedings he fines a mukhtar under s. 182, I P. C. for making false statements in support of a petition presented to him, he is not competent to deal with such order, 10 L. R. 457. The rules framed by Government under s. 182, I P. C. are subject to revision by the High Court, 29 A. 583. In 18 P. R. 1914 = 266 P. L. R. 1914 = 13 Cr. L. J. 601, it was held that neither the Civil nor the Criminal jurisdiction of the High Court can be invoked for the purposes of revising orders under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act and 21 A. 131; 31 A. 59; 11 Cr. L. J. 513; 12 M. L. T. 411 and 41 P. R. 1833 were referred to.

(a) Orders under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act.—The High Court cannot interfere under s. 439, 11 P. R. 1909. See also 21 A. 181; 6 A. L. J. 22; 22 P. R. 1904; 1892 A. W. N. 238. See Note 9 (iv) to s. 476.

(b) Orders of Magistrate vested with quasi-judicial functions not open to revision.—A Presidency Magistrate authorized under Rule 5 of the rules framed by the Local Government in pursuance of the powers given to it by s. 413 of the Madras City Municipal Act, III of 1904, to declare the inclusion of a certain person as a candidate for Municipal election by the President of the Corporation was illegal does not act as a Court. He is in the position of a referee between the President and the candidate (11 M. 26 (P.C.), 21 B. 279; 33 C. 547; 30 M. 326, and (1892) 1 Q. B. 431, referred to). These authorities show that when quasi-judicial functions are delegated to an officer whose decisions are ordinarily subject to the revisional powers of the High Court, he is not with reference to the delegated power necessarily subject to its appellate or revisional authority, 33 M. 581.

(c) Order under s. 3 of Sindh Frontier Regulation V of 1872.—An order under s. 3 of the Sindh Frontier Regulation is an executive order and is not open to revision by the High Court. The Magistrate of the District acts in his executive capacity and not as an inferior Criminal Court, 3 B. L. R. 34 = 12 Cr. L. J. 563. But orders under ss. 20 and 21 declaring forfeited a bond may be revised, 7 B. L. R. 194 = 15 Cr. L. J. 544, where 5 B. L. R. 105 = 12 Cr. L. J. 588 was distinguished on the ground that the order made by the Magistrate was not covered by the regulation.

(d) Orders made under s. 43 of Bombay Act IV of 1890 are executive orders and cannot be revised under this Chapter.—A Court of Session should not call for the proceedings of a District or Sub-Divisional Magistrate under this section when the order is duly made by such Magistrate under s. 43 of Bombay Act IV of 1890. The proper course for a person feeling aggrieved by Magistrate's order is to petition the Governor in Council under whose control the prerogative of keeping the peace is worked by the Magistracy, Ratanlal 892 and 850. An order made or purporting to be made by a District Magistrate under s. 44 of the Bombay District Police Act IV of 1890 is not a judicial order made by a Court. It is a mere executive order made by the District Magistrate as Head of the Police with which the High Court cannot interfere under this section, 12 Bom. L. R. 1029 = 11 Cr. L. J. 705. See also Ratanlal 540 where it was held that the High Court has no jurisdiction to interfere with an order under s. 43 of that Act.

Y.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF INFERIOR REVISIONAL COURTS.

17. Points to be borne in mind in revising proceedings of inferior Courts.—Some of the points to which the attention of the Sessions Judges and District Magistrate should be particularly directed in the exercise of their powers of supervision are noted below —

- (1) the rash issue of process,
- (2) the dealing with disputed claims of right under colour of a charge of criminal trespass or mischief and convictions Acid of the former offence without a finding as to the criminal intent,
- (3) the indiscreet imposition of fines beyond the means of offenders,
- (4) the light punishment by inferior Courts of offences requiring severe punishments in cases which ought to have gone up to a superior Court for enhanced punishment,
- (5) the imposition of heavy fines in addition to imprisonment with a view, in default of payment, to extend the term of imprisonment beyond the ordinary powers of the Magistrate to inflict,
- (6) the exaction of excessive bail or excessive security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour;
- (7) unnecessary delay in the trial of cases — Mad. H. C. Rul., 17th December, 1834, para. 17.

18. Powers limited by ss. 436, 437 and 438.—The powers conferred by this section are limited to reporting under s. 438 and to the specific powers conferred by ss. 436 and 437. The Sessions Judge cannot himself issue proceedings criticising those of the Magistrates except on appeal, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXVII.

19. Referring authority not entitled to record fresh evidence.—A Sessions Judge making a reference, after calling for records under this section, cannot take fresh evidence, 1882 A. W. N. 148, and neither can a District Magistrate, 3 Bom. L. R. 677; 12 A. L. J. 461 = 15 Cr. L. J. 575.

20. Records may be called for at any stage of proceedings.—See 22 G. 131 and 24 W. R. 4. Records may be called for even after the prisoner has served out his sentence, 7 A. 135 and where the accused is dead, 2 B. 564. But there is no provision in the Code which enables a Judge to stop a trial already commenced and to refer to the High Court any question or questions of law arising on the merits in that case, Ratanlal 214. In exceptional cases, where a bare statement of the facts without any elaborate argument is sufficient to convince the Court that the case is a fit one for interference at an intermediate stage the High Court will exercise its discretion in interfering, 2 B. L. R. 25 = 10 Cr. L. J. 237. Cf. Note 42 to s. 439.

21. No power to accord sanction on perusing calendar.—A Sub-Divisional Magistrate, acting under this section, has no authority to sanction prosecution on perusing the calendar, 7 M. 560 and 189; 15 M. L. J. 439 = 3 Cr. L. J. 118, as calling for an examination of proceedings under s. 435 does not constitute a judicial proceeding, 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 239. In 1908 A. W. N. 74 = 5 A. L. J. 562 = 7 Cr. L. J. 304, the first class Magistrate who discharged an accused, refused sanction to prosecute the complainant for an offence under s. 193, I P C. An application was then made to the District Magistrate who accorded sanction for prosecution under s. 211 I P C. Held the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass such an order either under this section or s. 195 (6). The revisional powers of a District Magistrate do not include the powers conferred on a Court of appeal under sub-sec. (6) of s. 195. All that he could have done was to make a report to the High Court under s. 438, submitting the result of his examination of the record.

22. District Magistrate cannot take cognizance of case by way of revision against prisoner who has not appealed.—I and M were tried together and convicted of the same offences by a second-class Magistrate. I alone appealed, and in hearing his appeal, the District Magistrate took cognizance of the case against M and set aside the convictions and sentences against both the accused, and ordered their retrial. Held that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to reverse the conviction and sentence against I or to take cognizance of the case against him, except by reporting it to the High Court, Ratanlal 358; 3 Bom. L. R. 677.—M H C Pro, 19th April, 1879, ibid, 20th February, 1879. Also if the applicant for revision has the right of appeal, the High Court will not act, but will refer him to the exercise of the right before the proper Court, 1885 A. W. N. 295. See Note 47 to s. 439.

23. District Magistrate cannot direct trial of persons not before him.—When once the District Magistrate makes a case over for disposal to a Subordinate Magistrate it is out of his hands and he is not competent to pass any order relating to it, other than an order which might be made under this Chapter. Therefore, where in a case transferred by a District Magistrate, the Deputy Magistrate refused to order the trial of certain persons complained against, the District Magistrate was held not competent to order the trial of the said persons, 30 G. 449. See also 27 G. 798 and 979, and Notes 4 and 5 at pp. 580-581.

24. Decision of jury under s. 133, not liable to revision.—The decision of a jury under s. 133 is not a proceeding in a Criminal Court which the District Magistrate could call for and examine and refer to the High Court under this section Ratanlal 358; see Note 22 at p. 246. A District Magistrate may refer a case under s. 133 to the High Court under s. 438, 14 C. W. N. 85.

25. Power of Sessions Judge or District Magistrate to call for record of proceedings under s. 143.—When a Court has acted without jurisdiction in proceedings under Chapter XII, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate can call for the record and report to the High Court under s. 433 because the powers under this section of the High Court, Sessions Judge and District Magistrate are the same, 5 C. W. N. 71. PRINSEP, J., in 5 C. W. N. 71 remarked that in such cases, it was the duty of the Sessions Judge and District Magistrate to refer the case to the High Court, because it would save the parties the expense of coming up to the High Court and the ratio of this decision cannot be too highly recommended, see also 4 C. W. N. 778; 3 C. W. N. 49 and 3 C. W. N. 593. If, however, the Magistrate was duly empowered to institute proceedings under s. 133, the District Magistrate cannot call for the record, 23 C. 416; 14 C. W. N. 247. But see Preliminary Note to s. 435. The old subsec. (3) to this section has now been omitted, and therefore orders under s. 145 can be revised now.

26. Power to stay proceedings.—Whether a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate can stay proceedings or not, the call for records under this section, would virtually act as a stay of proceedings because while the record is with the superior Court the case before the Magistrate cannot proceed, not for want of jurisdiction but because the necessary papers are with the superior tribunal 9 C. W. N 829. See Note 20

27. District Magistrate cannot quash proceedings.—A Subordinate Magistrate being of opinion that no sanction under s 197 was necessary, proceeded to try a case. On an application under s 435 the District Magistrate, holding that sanction was necessary quashed the proceedings of the Sub Magistrate. Held, that the order quashing proceedings was clearly made without jurisdiction, as there is no provision of law which gives a District Magistrate power to interfere in this way, and that the proper course for him was to report the case for the orders of the High Court, if interference was considered necessary. 23 M. 540.

28. Power to order further inquiry upon mere consideration of evidence on record—It is open to a Sessions Judge or District Judge under s. 437 to order further inquiry on the mere consideration of the evidence, 32 M. 220 (F.B.) overruling 31 M. 133. See Note 33 (v) to s. 437.

VI.—PRACTICE.

29 Parting with judicial records.—No Court is at liberty to part with its judicial records, except when called for by an Appellate Court or on the demand of a superior Court under this section. They must be retained in order to meet the contingency of such legal requisitions being made. For the purpose of any reference or report to the executive Government, copies of proceedings are sufficient, but for purposes of appeal or revision by superior Courts, the originals are indispensable. Ratanlal 123: 28 A. 268; 1904 A. W. N. 235; 30 A. 116

30. Reference to be accompanied with explanation of inferior Court.—A Sessions Judge calling for the records of an inferior Court is, before referring the case to the High Court for orders, bound to call upon the inferior Court for an explanation of the order passed and should submit such explanation together with the rest of the record to the High Court, 8 C. 645 But the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate has no power to record any fresh evidence before making a reference. Such evidence must be disregarded 3 Bom L R. 677; 1908 A. W. N. 74 and see Note 19. The only case in which a District Magistrate can take further evidence is set out in s. 437.

31 Copy of order in appeal to be forwarded with proceedings to High Court.—When proceedings are called by the High Court from any Magistrate, the copy of any order made by the Appellate Court and transmitted to the Lower Court shall be forwarded to the High Court with the record and proceedings of the Magistrate.—Bom H C Cr Cr. p 47

32 Practice—Cases simultaneously called for by Appellate and High Courts.—When the High Court calls on a Magistrate for the record of a case, which record has already been sent to the Sessions Court in

When a case is called for at the same time, all comply with the order of the Court of

33. That Judge previously declined to interfere 'sue motu' is not a sufficient reason to refuse to re-open case when complainant applies for revision. See Note 37 to s. 437

34. Affidavit of accused is useless—Where a Magistrate has recorded that an accused person has pleaded guilty, an affidavit to the contrary sworn to by the accused is not admissible in evidence, on revision by the High Court. If there is any mistake about the matter, it is the vakil and not the client who ought to make an affidavit, 19 M. 209. See also 12 M. 451; 19 A. 200; 1906 A. W. N. 42 = 3 A. L. J. 98.

33. Order passed in revision in criminal proceedings.—An order passed by a single Judge of the High Court in the exercise of its criminal jurisdiction is one passed in a criminal trial, if the proceedings which give rise to the revision are a criminal trial. 27 W. 810; 2 L. W. 383 = 18 Cr. L. J. 488.

* 436. On examining any record under section 435 or otherwise, the High Court or the Sessions Judge may direct the District Magistrate by himself or by any of the Magistrates subordinate to him to make and the District Magistrate may himself make, or direct any Subordinate Magistrate to make, further inquiry into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203 or sub-section (3) of section 204, or into the case of any person (accused of an offence) † who has been discharged ‡ "Provided that no Court shall make any direction under this section for inquiry into the case of any person who has been discharged unless such person has had an opportunity of showing cause why such direction should not be made"

Notes.—1. Terms explained—

(i) Inquiry—See definition, s 4 (k) and Notes at pp 12 13

(ii) Complaint—See definition, s 4 (h) and Notes at pp 6—10 and see also Notes under Heading II to s 190 at pp 472—476

(iii) Discharge has two meanings, one, non technical as in s. 119 where it is merely equivalent to 'permitted to depart' and the other as in ss. 209, 253 and 259 'Discharged' in s 437 ought to be read as equivalent to 'discharged within the meaning of ss 209, 253 and 259 and a discharge under s. 199 is not within the scope of the section.' 33 M. 85 In 35 A. 167, it was again held that a wide interpretation may be put upon the word 'discharged' so as to include an order under s. 119 and see Notes 21 and 22 below. See ss. 119, 209, 219 (2), 259, 259, 305 (3) and (4), 308, 333, 423 484, 494 (a), 495 (2) for orders of discharge.

(iv) 'Accused' means 'a person accused of an offence' and not a person against whom proceedings are taken under s. 110, 27 C. 662, 33 C. 8; 33 M. 85. Contra 25 A. 143; 35 C. 163

2. Section does not control powers of Magistrates to entertain fresh complaints after previous dismissal or discharge.—This section is only an enabling section and an order under it is not necessary for fresh proceedings being taken up on the same facts by the same Magistrate discharging an accused whether under s. 253 or s. 259 or the complaint is dismissed under s. 203 or s. 204, or by a Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction, 29 C. 728; 29 C. 652; 29 M. 128 (F.B.) overruling 23 M. 255; 16 Cr. L. J. 73 (A.). See also 31 M. 543; 28 C. 103 and 211; 1 B. 64; 1 C. W. N. 57; 4 C. W. N. 26 and 46; 23 M. 310, 26 P. W. R. 1903 = 8 Cr. L. J. 249; 1 N. L. R. 18; 9 A. 85; 1906 A. W. N. 245 = 4 Cr. L. J. 89; 1899 A. W. N. 86; 16 Cr. L. J. 73 (A.), 30 A. 53; 8 B. L. R. 196 = 16 Cr. L. J. 174 or a successor of the Magistrate, 35 A. 129 distinguishing 22 A. 106. A Magistrate may revise a dismissed complaint even when the District Magistrate has refused to make a further inquiry 35 C. 415; 10 P. R. 1911 = 24 P. W. R. 1911 = 305 P. L. R. 1911 (F.B.) which overrules 23 P. R. 1894. Though such further inquiry is not actually illegal it should be only undertaken in exceptional cases and for good reason shown. In 11 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 347, however, it was held that when a complaint has been dismissed by a Magistrate and the dismissal has been upheld by the Sessions Judge the successor of the Magistrate has no right to entertain a fresh complaint. The complainant's remedy is by application to the Chief Court and not by presenting a fresh complaint. Though the Magistrate may have jurisdiction to entertain a renewed complaint, the appropriate remedy for complaints wrongly dismissed is under s. 437, 4 B. L. R. 33 = 11 Cr. L. J. 332. See Notes 27 to 30 to s. 203 and Notes 14, 16 to 18 at pp. 1058 and 1059

I.—WHAT COURTS MAY DIRECT FURTHER INQUIRY.

3. Power of High Court under this section.—"It was the intention of the Legislature that the High Court should have a freer hand in interfering under s. 437 than under s. 439 and the powers of the High Court and the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate are co-extensive under this section," 32 M. 220 (F.B.) at p. 233. Though the High Court has under this section, concurrent jurisdiction with the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge, yet where a District Magistrate dismissed a complaint under a 203 the High Court declined to entertain an application by the complainant under this section when no application had been made to the Sessions Judge, 25 A. 265 where 1904 A. W. N. 252 is followed. The reason or the mention of

* This section originally numbered 437 but was re-numbered 436 by Act

† These words were substituted for the words "accused person" by Act XVIII of 1923.

‡ Previous was added by Act.

the High Court in this section is obvious. Though s. 439 gives to the High Court all the powers of an Appellate Court under s. 423, the power mentioned in this section is not included in it (9 A. 52 at p. 55). See Note 43 to s. 439. 23 A. L. J. 20.

4. Power of High Court to direct further inquiry in case of discharge by Presidency Magistrate.—The High Court has power, under s. 439 read with s. 423 of this Code, to revise an order of discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate and to direct a further inquiry, if there are good reasons for doing so, although no question of jurisdiction arises in the case (15 C. 608; 26 C. 745; 28 C. 632; 27 B. 84 followed, 7 C. W. N. 521 referred to, 27 C. 126; 8 C. L. J. 705 = 6 Cr. L. J. 490 and 33 C. 1282 discussed and dissented from (36 C. 994). The High Court acting under s. 439 may order the commitment of a person whom a Presidency Magistrate had discharged. Sub-sec. (4) of s. 439 points to the conclusion that all other powers under s. 439 not expressly excluded by that sub-section may be exercised by the High Court as a Court of Revision, 27 B. 84; 15 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529 and Weir II, 255, where it was laid down that the fact the Superior Court might be disposed to take the view that the Magistrate discredited the prosecution evidence for insufficient reasons and discharged the accused without committing him for trial, is no ground for interference by it. See also 20 C. W. N. 1128.

5. Sessions Judge and District Magistrate should not review each other's orders.—See Notes 9 and 10 to s. 435. Both the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge are competent to order further inquiry, but when further inquiry is refused by one of these officers, it would be an unseemly proceeding, to say the least, that it should be ordered by the other. If either the District Magistrate or the Sessions Judge thinks that the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate is wrong he should refer the matter to the High Court under s. 438. He has no jurisdiction himself to review an order made by a Court having concurrent jurisdiction with himself, 22 C. 573. See now sub-sec. (4) to s. 435 and also Note 2 to s. 436, and the recent amendment of sub-sec. (1) of s. 435 and the new explanation added thereon making all Magistrates in their original as well as appellate jurisdiction subordinate to the Sessions Judge for purposes of sub-sec. (1) of ss. 435 and 437.

(i) District Magistrate not competent to act when Sessions Judge has passed orders under this section—Where a Sessions Judge has passed orders under this section, the District Magistrate acting under the same section should not pass orders of a contrary kind, but if he thinks that the Judge's orders are wrong, he should submit them to the High Court through the medium of the Public Prosecutor, 12 A. 434; 9 A. 362; 10 A. 146; 18 C. 186.

(ii) Sessions Judge not competent to direct further inquiry when District Magistrate has dealt with the case under s. 435—A complaint was made to a Deputy Magistrate who after considering a Police report on the matter ordered—'Enter mistake of law'. The complainant put in another complaint before the District Magistrate who sent the complaint to the Deputy Magistrate for judicial inquiry and report and after considering his report, decided that the case should be entered as false. The complainant then applied to the Sessions Judge who ordered a further inquiry under s. 437. Held following 6 C. W. N. 633 and 8 C. W. N. 456 = 1 Cr. L. J. 356 that the Deputy Magistrate's order must be regarded as an order dismissing the complaint and therefore the District Magistrate in directing further inquiry acted under s. 435 and the Sessions Judge was not competent to direct a further inquiry in view of sub-sec. (4) of s. 435, 17 C. W. N. 451 = 14 Cr. L. J. 123.

(iii) Court of Session cannot refer applicant to District Magistrate—When an application is presented to a Court of Session under this Chapter, it has no power to refer the applicant to the District Magistrate whose Court is one not of inferior, but of concurrent jurisdiction, with the Court of Session for the purposes of this Chapter, Ratanlal 525.

6. Additional Sessions Judge may act under this section.—See s. 438 (2).

7. Deputy Magistrate cannot direct further inquiry.—A Deputy Magistrate in charge of the current duties of a District Magistrate is not thereby invested with jurisdiction under this section, 11 C. 236.

8. District Magistrate may direct further inquiry when case discharged by himself.—Where a District Magistrate has passed an order of discharge, he is competent to revise his own order upon a fresh complaint and direct a further inquiry, 9 P. R. 1902. This section is not confined to cases in which the original inquiry was held by a Magistrate subordinate to the District Magistrate. A case originally discharged by himself the District Magistrate may under this section, make over to any Magistrate subordinate to himself for further inquiry, 28 C. 102. A District Magistrate, who on application under this section, refused to interfere with an order of discharge, may subsequently suo motu direct a further inquiry, on looking into the Police diary, 11 C. W. N. 11. See Note 37.

9. District Magistrate may order further inquiry when discharge made by specially empowered Magistrate.—Where a Subordinate Magistrate of the first class specially empowered under s 30 makes an order of discharge in a case which is triable exclusively by a Sessions Court, such order is open to revision by the District Magistrate under ss 436 and 437, 12 N. L. R. 94 = 17 Cr. L. J. 245.

10. Court which sanctioned prosecution not competent to order further inquiry.—The words 'try any case' in s 556 are wide enough to include any stage of the judicial proceeding in which the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused is finally adjudicated on. Where, therefore, a District Magistrate as President of a Municipality presided at the meeting of the Board which directed the prosecution of a Municipal servant, hck, the District Magistrate was disqualified to direct further inquiry under s 437, 8 S. L. R. 137 = 13 Cr. L. J. 30 where 27 A. 25 is distinguished.

II.—WHO MAY BE DIRECTED TO MAKE FURTHER INQUIRY.

11. District Magistrate.—The language of this section shows that a District Magistrate, though exercising the enhanced powers under s. 30, may be ordered by the Sessions Judge to make the further inquiry directed under this section, 15 P. R. 1904. The Legislature appears to have contemplated that the Magistrate of the district should exercise a discretion as to the selection of any Magistrate subordinate to him and this discretion seems to have been vested in the District Magistrate and not in the Sessions Judge.—Per FIELD, J., in 10 C. 207. But in 8 M. 336, the High Court expressed the opinion that the further inquiry should ordinarily be made by the same Magistrate as made the first inquiry. The power conferred by this section is, however, purely a discretionary one, 15 C. 633; 6 A. 143 and where this discretion is not properly exercised the High Court may set aside the order for further inquiry, 11 C. 81.

12. Subordinate of first-class Magistrate to District Magistrate.—A Magistrate of the first class is subordinate to the District Magistrate for purposes of this section 7 A. 853 (F.B.), 10 B. 131; 6 M. 18 (F.B.); 12 C. 473 (F.B.), 33 P. R. 1835.

13. Case specifically made over by District Magistrate cannot be withdrawn by Sub-Divisional Magistrate.—A Sub-Divisional Magistrate cannot properly withdraw a case specifically referred to by his superior, the District Magistrate, to a Subordinate Magistrate for further inquiry under this section, Ratanlal 318. But a Sub-Divisional Magistrate who is directed by the District Magistrate acting under this section to hold a further inquiry, is competent under s 192 to transfer the case to a second-class Magistrate subordinate to himself, Weir II, 563.

14. When further inquiry should be entrusted to discharging Magistrate?—When a further inquiry involves the taking and weighing of additional evidence, the function will generally be best performed by the same Magistrate who made the previous inquiry, though peculiar or prejudiced views, or even the possibility of them, may make it more desirable to bring a fresh mind to bear on the facts, Ratanlal 328; 4 L. B. R. 233 = 7 Cr. L. J. 493.

15. When further inquiry should be entrusted to a different Magistrate?—This section contemplates that further inquiry may be made by another Magistrate and the unsatisfactory way in which a Subordinate Magistrate has dealt with the case would be a good ground for ordering further inquiry by another Magistrate and such Magistrate may, if necessary, retake the evidence taken before the first Magistrate, 82 M. 210 (F.B.). SANKARAN NAIK, J. dissenting. When the further inquiry is into the effect of the evidence already on the record, or the testimony of the witness already examined, it will usually be desirable that the fresh consideration of the complaint should be entrusted to a different Magistrate from the one who has already formed an opinion on the case, Ratanlal 323. Contra see 8 M. 296 at pp. 299 and 335. Where a Magistrate discharged the accused without hearing all the evidence, expressing an opinion that "to affix the guilt to the accused is an impossibility" and that "there is a certain mystery about the whole proceeding, which it appears impossible to clear up," the High Court in revision directed further inquiry to be made by another Magistrate who had nothing to do with the case, Ratanlal 926. But ordinarily the further inquiry should not be by a different Magistrate, 8 M. 296.

15-A. Further inquiry should not be entrusted to Magistrate of rank lower than first Magistrate.—When a District Magistrate orders further inquiry into a case tried by a first class Magistrate specially empowered he should not order further inquiry by another Magistrate not so empowered, 17 Cr. L. J. 245 = 12 N. L. R. 94.

III.—IN WHAT CASES FURTHER ENQUIRY MAY BE MADE.

16. Further inquiry may be made only when complaint dismissed or accused discharged.—This section does not apply to a case in which the complaint has not been dismissed under s 203 or under sub-sec (3) of sec, 204, or in which no accused has been discharged, 27 C. 638. See Note 8 to s 436. Where after the issue of warrant against certain persons the Magistrate does not think it proper to proceed further, the termination of proceedings against them is in effect an order of discharge, and it is therefore subject to revision under this section, 4 C. W. N. 242. An order directing further inquiry without regard to what is really the material consideration in such cases, the prospect of any public advantage from the case being re-opened, is one passed without jurisdiction and is liable to be set aside by the High Court in revision, 43 M. L. 1. 835.

(1) Complaint which has not been dismissed cannot be revised—Where one of the accused is tried for one offence only and is convicted of that offence, the complaint cannot be said to have been dismissed in regard to other offences for which the accused was not tried at all, 27 C. 638.

(2) Order directing a case to be struck off cannot be revised—A Magistrate's order directing a case reported to him by the Police to be struck off is not a judicial order dismissing a complaint or discharging an accused person which can be reviewed by the Sessions Judge, Ratanlal 521. Where a Subordinate Magistrate made an order, as regards one of several accused that he should not be proceeded against and that the warrant and other processes against him should be withdrawn. Held, that though the order of the Magistrate was bad in law, the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction under this section to set aside the order and direct a re-trial, 12 C. W. N. 88. 'Discharged' must be read as equivalent to discharged under ss 209, 253 and 259, 33 M. 85.

17. No further inquiry in cases of acquittal.—A Sessions Judge has no power to order further inquiry where the accused is acquitted by a Magistrate, 20 C. 633, nor a District Magistrate when the accused is acquitted by a Subordinate Magistrate under s. 245, 19 P. R. 1900. Such power can only be exercised by the High Court in revision under s 439. See 8 M. 236 and 24 M. 136 which latter case dissents from 20 C. 633 and overrules 23 M. 225. This section does not authorize the High Court to set aside an order of acquittal even when it is illegally and improperly passed, 21 W. R. 21. Nor is a Sessions Judge competent to set aside an order of acquittal, although such order might have been passed without any charge having been framed or evidence for defence taken, 1 A. L. J. 415. In 7 C. W. N. 493, a number of persons were charged under ss 143, 342 and 323, I P. C., but the Police did not send up several persons as the case against them was weak and the others were tried and acquitted by the Magistrate on the ground that the case was false. The District Magistrate sent for the records and directed that the acquitted persons and the others should be placed on trial, as he did not consider the case of sufficient importance to move the Local Government and the High Court. Held, that the District Magistrate did not rightly exercise his discretion in directing the re-trial of the acquitted persons and if he thought it necessary, it was his duty to have moved the Local Government to have the acquittal set aside, and that he erred in directing the re-trial of persons not sent up, as the facts of the case had been before a Court and that Court held the case to be false and that judgment had not been set aside. But see 14 C. W. N. 167 and Note 12 to s 403. When the acquittal is by a Court having no jurisdiction it need not be set aside, 31 A. 217. See also 7 C. W. N. 711; 1 C. W. N. 650; 2 C. W. N. 290; 4 C. W. N. 346; 23 C. 983; 24 C. 286; 15 P. W. R. 1393. But see contra 24 C. 528; 23 C. 211; 23 C. 632; 29 C. 728.

So also when instead of adopting, wrong order of discharge is passed—If a Magistrate trying a summons-case, whatever procedure he adopts, finds no case made out against the accused and lets him go unconditionally, he acquits him though he may style his order of acquittal an order of discharge and tack on to it the number of some section of the Code which deals with discharge. The acquittal is none the less an acquittal and no order may be passed under this section for further inquiry, 8 M. L. T. 75 = 11 Cr. L. J. 330. When, after framing of charge, the trial is recommended under s. 350, the second Magistrate cannot pass an order of discharge but must acquit under s. 258 and if by mistake he passes an order of discharge, there can be no order for further inquiry, 38 M. 585; 17 Cr. L. J. 89 (M.).

18. No further inquiry when persons have never been before the Court.—In regard to persons accused who have never been before the Court at all, it cannot be said that they have been discharged, and that it is in the discretion of the Magistrate to proceed against them or not, but it is not such a case in which an order under this section can be made by the Sessions Judge directing the Magistrate to proceed with the case as regards those persons. Therefore, where a Sessions Judge passed an order directing further inquiry into the complaint against the accused against whom the Magistrate did not choose to proceed, Held, that his order was without jurisdiction 27 C. 638. See also 4 C. L. R. 452; 11 C. W. N. 218; 12 C. W. N. 65. But see 22 C. 457; 32 C. 783. A Court has no authority to direct further inquiry in respect of a person when no complaint has been made against him and no other regular process has been issued against him, 39 C. 258. This section has no application to the case of persons accused of any offence who had never been before any Court. Therefore, where a Subordinate Magistrate, though competent to act upon a Police report against persons who were alleged in that report to have committed an offence, did not so act, held that it was not proper for the District Magistrate to pass an order directing proceedings to be taken against such persons unless he had withdrawn the whole matter from the Court of the Sub-Magistrate, 4 G. W. N. 342; 24 M. 136; 29 M. 126; 29 C. 457; 4 C. W. N. 346. But this section does not apply to a case in which a Magistrate has refused to proceed against some of the persons accused of an offence before the Police, as they never had been before him and had not therefore been discharged. The proper course for the District Magistrate to take would be to withdraw the case under s. 528, and deal with it on the evidence, as in the exercise of his discretion he thought fit and not to order a further inquiry under this section, 5 C. W. N. 488; 27 C. 979. Nor can the District Magistrate direct proceedings to be taken against certain persons in a case when he has transferred the case to the file of a Deputy Magistrate, 30 C. 449. See Note 28 to s. 203 and see also Note 7 to s. 190 at p. 471.

But it should be noted that in 30 C. W. N. 312 it is held that where on receipt of a complaint a Magistrate holds an enquiry under s. 202 of the Code and dismisses the complaint under a 203. The Sessions Judge under s. 436 can only direct a full and proper enquiry of the same nature as the Magistrate has already held and cannot direct a further enquiry after summoning the accused. The practice of allowing the accused to be represented in an enquiry under s. 202 has been condemned.

19. No further inquiry in cases of conviction.—A Sessions Judge who, on examining the monthly criminal return of a first-class Magistrate, sends for the record and proceedings in a case in which an accused person has been convicted cannot legally order any further inquiry to be made. If he thinks that any further inquiry is necessary he must report the matter to the High Court which alone has power to order such inquiry to be made in such a case, Ratanlal 407.

20. Power of District Magistrate to direct further inquiry into offences, some of which form component part of offence of which accused is acquitted.—The accused was tried for being a member of an unlawful assembly with the common object of assaulting the complainant and after a trial under s. 147, I P C., was acquitted. The District Magistrate on motion ordered further inquiry into the offences under ss. 323 and 342 I P C. Held, that the offence under s. 323 being one of the offences which formed the subject of former trial, this matter cannot be re-opened, until the order of acquittal has been set aside. Further that no order within the scope of this section having been passed regarding the offence under s. 342, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to order further inquiry with regard to that offence, 5 C. W. N. 72. Similarly, in 27 C. 858, the accused was tried and convicted of mischief, the only offence with which he was charged. The Sessions Judge being of opinion that the accused, had been lightly dealt with, ordered further inquiry against the accused and others for an offence under s. 144, I P C. Held such order was without jurisdiction, as none of the accused had ever been discharged of that offence nor was any complaint of any such offence made against them dismissed under s. 203 or s. 204 (3). See Note 2 to s. 403.

31. Further Inquiry in cases under Chapter VIII.—See Note 131 to section 123

(a) Security for keeping the peace—An application to take security under s. 107 does not amount to an accusation of an offence, 42 P. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 697, and the Magistrate in such cases does not pass any order of acquittal or discharge, 6 P. R. 1911 (P. R.) = 183 P. L. R. 1911 = 30 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 232; (1914) U. B. R. I. 3 = 15 Cr. L. J. 531; 6 P. R. 1911, 33 M. 83. See also 36 C. 163; 27 C. 656; 15 B. 661.

(b) Security for good behaviour—A person against whom proceedings are taken under s. 110 is an "accused person" within the meaning of this section. And if a person against whom proceedings are taken under Chapter VIII is discharged by a Subordinate Magistrate, the District Magistrate is competent to order further inquiry, 21 A. 107; 1859 A. W. N. 205; 24 A. 165 (dissenting from 1900 A. W. N. 206) and in 36 A. 147 the High Court refused to disturb the practice as laid down in the cases and held that the words of s. 437 do not prevent interpreting the word "discharge" in a large sense, 16 B. 661; 13 Bom. L. R. 505 = 13 Cr. L. J. 430; 33 B. 401. But in 27 C. 662 and 33 C. 8, it was held that proceedings under s. 110 cannot be regarded as on a complaint nor can they be regarded as a case in which an accused person has been discharged, for the terms "discharged person" and "discharge" in this section clearly refer to a person accused of an offence who has been discharged from a charge of that offence within the terms of Chapter XIX, 27 C. 662 was followed in 42 P. R. 1903. See also 13 C. W. N. 261. However, in 36 C. 163, it was held that a person against whom proceedings were taken under Chapter VIII was an accused person, to whom the provisions of s. 443 applied and the cases in 21 A. 107; 16 B. 661 and 33 C. 463 were followed. In 33 M. 85 it was held that s. 437 should not be applied to cases under Chapter

VIII, at any rate, where before making an order under s. 119 the Magistrate has called on the person into whose conduct the inquiry is made to establish his defence. It may be by analogy applied to a discharge made under s. 119 in circumstances resembling those in which a discharge is made under s. 253. The word "discharged" in s. 119 means only "permitted to depart." See also 38 M. 315. In view of the amendment of the new s. 436 by the insertion of the words "accused of an offence" after the word "person" it is submitted, that the Legislature has made it clear that to attract the application of s. 436 the person discharged must have been accused of an offence, and as in proceedings under s. 110 the person proceeded against, is not accused of an offence, therefore, this section cannot apply to such person. This amendment follows the rulings in 27 C. 662; 80 C. 163; and so the cases in 31 C. 163; 24 A. 107 holding to the contrary have become obsolete. See also 2 R. 30 which supports the above interpretation. See also 48 A. 235.

22. Further inquiry in cases under s. 133.—The section has no application to a proceeding under s. 133 which does not deal with any case of an offence. Therefore a Sessions Judge has no authority to direct a first class Magistrate to make a further inquiry where the Magistrate has dropped proceedings under s. 133 24 C. 395; 25 C. 425; 14 C. W. N. 85 and see Notes 60 and 61 to s. 133.

23. Further inquiry in any case under s. 145.—This section does not authorize the District Magistrate to order further inquiry in a case under s. 145 which is not directed to any offence at all, 20 C. 729; nor can the High Court, 80 C. 112. Thus, though a District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to revise the order of a Subordinate Magistrate striking off a possession case, yet when such Magistrate declined to take proceedings, the District Magistrate is perfectly competent to initiate proceedings acting on the same Police report, 6 C. W. N. 290. See also Notes 154 to 162 to s. 145.

24. Further inquiry in case dismissed under s. 247.—When a case against the accused who was absent at the trial of his co-accused is dismissed under s. 247 no order could properly be passed under this section against such absent accused, 4 C. W. N. 346. See Notes to s. 247.

25. Further inquiry when proceedings stopped under s. 249.—A District Magistrate cannot under this section set aside an order made by a Subordinate Magistrate under s. 249, 9 P. R. 1913 = 183 P. L. R. 1913 = 13 Cr. L. J. 860.

26. Order of discharge by High Court under s. 332 cannot be set aside.—When an order of discharge was passed upon the Advocate-General entering a nolle prosequi under s. 332 in a Sessions case before the Calcutta High Court, held it could not be aside by any tribunal, but it did not require to be set aside for initiation of fresh proceedings on the same charges, 16 C. W. N. 983 = 3 Cr. L. J. 488.

26-A. No further inquiry in maintenance cases, s. 488.—No further inquiry can be directed in respect of an order under s. 488 as an application for maintenance is not a complaint, 5 C. 536 as the defendant in such a case is not an accused, 17 C. P. L. R. 127 = 1 Cr. L. J. 864.

IV.—NOTICE TO ACCUSED.

27. Notice necessary before making order for further inquiry.—In a case of further inquiry notice should be given 20 A. 339, approved in 25 A. 375; 4 C. W. N. 100, 1 Bom. L. R. 762. Omission to do so is fatal to the validity of the order, 4 C. W. N. 100; 12 C. W. N. 622 = 3 Cr. L. J. 51; 44 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. J. 615. No order should be passed against an accused person without his getting an opportunity of being heard. Thus, where a rule was issued only on the District Magistrate to show cause why further inquiry should not be directed under this section, it was held the accused was entitled to be heard, 11 C. W. N. 316 = 5 Cr. L. J. 112; though the general rule is that the District Magistrate is the proper person entitled to be heard and not the private party interested in the result. See 25 C. 798; 31 C. 811. As to the question whether any notice to the accused to show cause is by law necessary if further inquiry is ordered under this section, it is now settled that no such notice is necessary in point of law, 18 C. 608; 10 B. 151 followed in 20 A. 339; 2 Bom. L. R. 586; 3 Bom. L. R. 703; 11 P. W. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 347; 11 O. G. 261; 13 O. G. 289 = 11 Cr. L. J. 829. But no Court would be exercising a proper discretion in such a matter if, before proceeding under this section, it were to order a further inquiry in a case in which the accused person may have been discharged, without giving him an opportunity, by service of a notice to show cause against such an order being made, 15 C. 603; 2 C. W. N. 196; 32 C. 1090; 12 C. W. N. 822; 6 Bom. L. R. 877; 6 Bom. L. R. 479; 3 C. W. N. 249; 2 Bom. L. R. 556; 3 Bom. L. R. 703; 3 C. W. N. 219; 12 Cr. L. J. 110 (Hindh), 8 Bur. L. T. 133 = 16 Cr. L. J. 696; (1914) U. B. R. 1. 3 = 15 Cr. L. J. 831; 10 P. R. 1911 = 24 P. W. R. 1911 = 205 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 364; 4 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 218. The High Court of Allahabad felt itself [in 6 A. 367 and 9 A. 82 at p. 58 (F.B.)] bound to impress on Sessions Judges and Magistrates that in exercising the powers conferred by this section, they should, in the first place, always allow the person who has been discharged an opportunity of showing cause why there should not be further inquiry before an order to that effect is made, and next that they should use them sparingly and with any reason why the general rule set forth above should not be followed, the order will be set aside, 26 M. 41 (F.B.), 16 M. L. T. 285 = 15 Cr. L. J. 619. In the earlier case it is said "Though the power conferred is wide, yet it must be remembered that it is a discretionary power confided only to the two principal tribunals in each district, and that the discretion is a judicial discretion to be exercised subject to the supervision and control of the High Courts," 14 M. 334 at p. 338 (F.B.) A question may be very clear to the superior Court acting under this section, but still it ought to give an accused already discharged an opportunity to be heard, 11 C. W. N. 173 = 5 Cr. L. J. 16. See also 3 C. L. J. 43; 14 P. R. 1891; 32 C. 1090; 17 P. R. 1895; 14 C. W. N. 284. Notice to show cause why commitment should not be directed under s. 436, is however sufficient notice for making an order for further inquiry under this section, 15 C. 75. Where there was however no manner of notice at all, the High Court might set aside the order for further inquiry as bad, 11 C. W. N. 35; 12 C. W. N. 322 = 8 C. L. J. 73 = 8 Cr. L. J. 51. S. 440 does not empower a Court to dispense with notice under s. 437, 39 C. 238; 15 Cr. L. J. 1 (C.), 5 Bar. L. T. 37 = 13 Cr. L. J. 301. And though the Code does not expressly require notice, it is but proper such notice should be given, especially where the further inquiry directed is for the purpose of reconsidering evidence already given, 5 Bom. L. R. 877; 19 Bom. L. R. 908. When a man has been through two inquiries and discharged, a third inquiry should not be ordered without notice, 12 A. L. J. 167 = 15 Cr. L. J. 39. The District Magistrate would exercise a sound discretion, if he gives such notice and hears the accused, Welf II, 245; 11 C. W. N. 316 = 5 Cr. L. J. 112; 2 Bom. L. R. 586; 5 Bom. L. R. 479; 3 S. L. R. 7 = 9 Cr. L. J. 419. In 8 Bom. L. R. 694 = 4 Cr. L. J. 329, Astor, J., remarked that whether notice should be given or not would depend on the circumstances of each case. See also 5 A. L. J. 74 = 7 Cr. L. J. 157; 15 A. L. J. 627; 16 A. L. J. 298.

28. Notice may be dispensed with, when complaint dismissed summarily.—When a complaint is dismissed under s. 203 or s. 204 (3) in the absence of any of the accused, notice to show cause might be dispensed with, 29 C. 457; 15 C. 608 at p. 624; 32 C. 1090; 20 A. 339; 2 Bom. L. R. 586; 11 P. W. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 347; 11 O. C. 261 = 8 Cr. L. J. 342; 1903 P. W. R. 23; 30 A. 52; (1903) A. W. N. 45 = 5 A. L. J. 74 = 7 Cr. L. J. 157; 12 Cr. L. J. 46 (A.), 35 A. 78. Where a Magistrate proceeded against a few only, of a number of persons complained against and refused the complainant's application for process against the others, it was considered the refusal amounted to a dismissal of the complaint under s. 203 and so notice, for acting under this section might be dispensed with. But see 11 C. W. N. 316 = 5 Cr. L. J. 112 and 11 C. W. N. 35; 40 A. 138; 47 A. 722 = 23 A. L. J. 451.

29. Procedure when accused cannot be found.—It is competent to any Court which had issued orders to issue notice to the accused to cancel that order, 15 P. R. 1893. In 12 C. W. N. 22, a person whose complaint had been dismissed, applied to the High Court for an order for further inquiry and obtained a rule nisi. Service of notice was, however, found difficult as the whereabouts of the accused were not known. The High Court, instead of making the rule absolute as it could have done, if it had followed 26 M. 41, discharged the rule giving the petitioner leave to move again when notice could be served on the accused.

30. Accused not bound to appear on notice.—A notice of this kind is for the benefit of the accused, and it is by no means an objectionable practice to give to an accused person an opportunity of upholding the order of a Subordinate Court before it is reversed by a superior authority, although the accused may not be entitled by right to such an opportunity. At the same time the accused is under no legal obligation to avail himself of the opportunity if he does not wish to do so, 15 P. R. 1893. When action is proposed to be taken under this section, it is not summons in terms of s. 68 that should be served on the accused, but a notice to show cause why an order for further inquiry should not be made, so that he is free to appear and show cause or stay away, 6 A. 357; 23 C. 573.

Y.—WHEN FURTHER INQUIRY MAY BE DIRECTED AND WHEN NOT.

31. Further inquiry may be ordered only where discharge is illegal or perverse or evidence is obviously incomplete.—It is not open to a District Magistrate to order further proceedings in any case under s. 437. This section is limited by the words "on examining the record under s. 435," and s. 435 lays down that a Court may call for and examine any record for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court. It cannot therefore be said that if a Magistrate finds no illegality, or impropriety or irregularity and nothing incorrect in the proceeding, that he is empowered to set aside an order of discharge upon other grounds or no grounds at all, 16 G. W. N. 1078 = 13 Cr. L. J. 754. 'Correctness, legality or propriety of any finding' is an express enactment (see s. 435). Every finding, sentence or order is liable to review, not only on the ground of illegality, or irregularity, but also on the ground of incorrectness, that is to say, on the ground that it is wrong on the merits, 15 C. 603. But the omission of the word unproperly before discharged at the end of the section would indicate that the powers conferred by this section are very wide and would embrace a case where the discharge is proper, but further inquiry is necessary, 9 A. 52 (F.B.) at pp. 57 and 58. It is, however, improper to interfere under this section with an order of discharge unless it is perverse or illegal, 295 P. L. R. 1902. This Court has often pointed out that where a man is discharged under circumstances which make the order of discharge equivalent to one of acquittal no further proceeding should be taken against him under s. 437 (8 P. R. 1900, 2 P. R. 1901 = 32 P. L. R. 1901, 8 P. B. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314 referred to). No invariable rule can be laid down but speaking generally, further inquiry after discharge is improper unless the order of discharge was manifestly perverse or foolish or was based upon a record of evidence which was obviously incomplete. 10 P. R. 1911 = 26 P. W. R. 1911 = 205 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 364 (F.B.), 4 P. W. R. 1915 = 15 Cr. L. J. 214. So also when the order of discharge was passed because the complainant declined to produce any evidence, 19 P. W. R. 1913 = 18 Cr. L. J. 862. Thus when the trying Magistrate has arrived at the conclusion that no prima facie case had been made out against an accused person, the High Court cannot command him to arrive at a different conclusion on the facts. If the complainant had a good case according to law against the accused he may make a complaint to another Magistrate who will not be prevented from inquiring and adjudging by the mere discharge of the accused in a warrant case, Ratanlal 209. See also 2 C. P. L. R. 82 and 17 Cr. L. J. 255 = 12 N. L. R. 94, 20 P. W. R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L. J. 161; 9 P. R. 1913 = 8 P. W. R. 1913 = 13 Cr. L. J. 860.

32 Power of ordering further inquiry should be used sparingly and with great circumspection.—When an accused person has been three times subject to the harassment of a magisterial inquiry on charges dividing in importance the series save in extraordinary circumstances, or the discovery of new and important evidence giving quite a different complexion to the affair, ought to close because it savours of oppression to send a man a fourth time before a Magistrate for inquiry into a serious charge on the evidence which has already been thrice pronounced insufficient or untrustworthy. As held by the Allahabad High Court in 9 A. 52 (F.B.) the power of ordering further inquiry should be used sparingly and with great circumspection. Ratanlal 328. See 4 A. 148; 11 G. W. N. 173 = 5 Cr. L. J. 16. Where a Magistrate, after taking the whole evidence and completing the inquiry, discharges the accused in a warrant case, there is only a technical difference between the discharge and an acquittal and so it could never have been intended that a discharged accused should be placed in worse position than one acquitted merely because the Magistrate considered the evidence so untrustworthy as not to furnish ground for a formal charge. Held that, where the Magistrate after taking all the evidence, discharges an accused person, this section does not empower the Sessions Judge to order a fresh trial in order that another Magistrate may consider the same evidence and pass an order, 2 C. P. Cr. 82. This case was approved in 31 P. L. R. 1900 and 100 P. L. R. 1901. See also 11 G. W. N. 173 = 5 Cr. L. J. 16; and the dissenting judgment of SUBRAMANIA Aiyar, J., in 29 M. 126 (F.B.). All Magistrates, and especially the one who formerly discharged the accused are bound to exercise due discretion, to take that discharge into account, and to avoid any such oppressive proceedings as may either expose them to punishment under s. 219 or s. 220 I P. C., or to a civil action on the part of the accused, Ratanlal 350.

33. When further inquiry may be ordered—

(i) Real test for interference by the High Court—The test for the interference of the High Court in revision with an order of discharge and for directing further inquiry under this section is, whether it would under similar circumstances have accepted an appeal from acquittal, if one had been preferred. Where the evidence for the prosecution was contradictory and insufficient for a conviction, and there was no suggestion that additional or further evidence was forthcoming the Punjab Chief Court in 1905 P. L. R. at p. 49 refused to interfere.

(ii) When Magistrate omitted to consider accused's admission in another case—When a Magistrate had wrongly omitted to take into consideration the admissions made by the accused in another case the High Court, in the exercise of its revisional powers, ordered further inquiry, as it held that those admissions had an important bearing on the case, 13 B. 376.

(iii) When on punishment of some accused, Magistrate refused to try others who had absconded.—

A complaint was made against several persons under ss. 147 and 323, I P. C. Some of them were tried and convicted, while others were reported to be absconding. One of these latter was arrested, but afterwards the warrants against all the absconding accused were withdrawn and the arrested accused released. The complainant then applied to the District Magistrate to revive proceedings, but he refused to interfere. Held, that if a body of men committed an offence, the Magistrate cannot say that he considers the punishment of some of them to be sufficient in regard to others who may be equally guilty, though probably in a different degree. The order of the District Magistrate is therefore wrong, and there should be further inquiry in such matter, 4 C. W. N. 560.

(iv) Discharging summons-case without recording plea.—When process was issued against the accused for an offence under s 506, I P. C., and he was tried under that section, but the Magistrate without recording his plea to that charge discharged him of an offence under s 500, I P. C., held the proceedings were irregular as the plea of the accused ought to have been taken, s. 242 and a further inquiry was ordered, 13 Cr. L. J. 433 (C).

(v) Further inquiry can in case of discharge be directed upon same materials when no fresh evidence is forthcoming.—The question, whether, after an inquiry by a first-class Magistrate and discharge of the accused, a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to order "further inquiry" or a re-hearing upon the same materials which were before the first-class Magistrate, se, when no further evidence is forthcoming has been a subject of much difference of opinion among the several High Courts. See 10 C. 207 and 1027, 12 C. 522; 6 A. 367, 21 A. 122, 1833 A. W. N. 150, 8 M. 296 and 336; 10 B. 131, but now the High Courts of Calcutta (see 15 C. 608, by a majority of 6 to 2), Allahabad 9 A. 52 (F.B.) and Madras, 14 M. 335 (F.B.) have come to agree with the decision of the Bombay High Court 10 B. 131, that a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to order further inquiry in cases of discharge under s. 253 or s. 259. "The intention seems to be to give revisional jurisdiction to the Sessions Court and District Magistrate in cases of improper discharge concurrently with that of the High Court, and to include an incorrect finding among the matters liable to revision and thereby to obviate the expense and inconvenience which the necessity to resort to the High Court might in such case entail."—PER MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J., in 14 M. 334 at p. 338. See also 13 B. 376; 17 P. R. 1898. The Chief Court of the Punjab expressed its agreement with the cases reported in 12 C. 522 and 8 M. 336 (now partially overruled) but it did not decide what was the actual meaning of the words "further inquiry," 63 P. R. 1837. See 14 P. R. 1891. In 2 P. R. 1901 it was held on the authority of 15 C. 608 that there may be cases in which an order for further inquiry, may be a re-hearing and re-consideration of the evidence already taken eg where the order of discharge is manifestly perverse or foolish and not in all cases a taking of fresh evidence but following 8 P. R. 1900 they also held that when a Magistrate has gone into the evidence and dealt with the case carefully an interference with his order of discharge would virtually be the conversion of the finding of an acquittal into one of conviction. See also 8 P. R. 1909 = 17 P. W. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314; 18 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 110, 10 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 384; 24 P. R. 1903.

by any other provi

Sessions Judge may direct further inquiry when the discharge is due to misappreciation of evidence. There is nothing in this section to suggest that misappreciation of evidence in the Lower Court is not a ground of interference. The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate is not bound to re-try the case to the High Court in case of difference of opinion with the Lower Court on the mere appreciation of evidence, but would be justified in ordering a reconsideration of the same evidence, 32 M. 220 (F.B.) overruling 31 M. 183; 15 C. 608 dissented from so far as it held that a reference to the High Court was necessary, SANKARAN NAIR, J., contra—Where the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate differs from the conclusion of the Subordinate Magistrate on the evidence, the only question is whether there should be a re-trial and no useful purpose is served by a further inquiry. The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate must, in such cases refer the matter to the High Court under s 438 and cannot order further inquiry under s 437. The powers conferred on District Magistrates and Sessions Judges by s. 437 are not wider than the powers conferred on High Courts by s. 439. It is only when the case requires reconsideration on some grounds other than in mere appreciation of evidence for reasons which have been held to justify the High Court interfering in revision that he can order further inquiry. See also 9 Cr. L. J. 386 (M.), 2 A. L. R. 25 = 10 Cr. L. J. 337. See also 17 Cr. L. J. 240 (S); 19 Bom. L. R. 350.

34 No reference to High Court necessary in case of improper discharge.—When a District Magistrate considers that a Subordinate Magistrate has improperly discharged an accused person under s. 253, Ratanlal 213 and 290, or that he was wrong in not waiting later in the day before discharging the accused and doubted the legality of the order passed in his absence, he should not refer the case to the High Court, but should himself order further inquiry under this section, Ratanlal 933, though it may involve re-consideration of the evidence already taken without any additional investigation of facts, 1 Bom. L. R. 222; or when the Magistrate had made a very material error as to the law applicable and the inference to be drawn from the evidence for the prosecution which only had been heard, 33 F. L. R. 1900. But when a District Magistrate being of opinion that the Sessions Judge gave sanction for a prosecution on a mistaken view of the evidence referred the case to the High Court, the latter declined to interfere on the ground that questions of fact must be dealt with by the Court which might try the case Ratanlal 473. The proper function of a District Magistrate is criticism. He ought to point out to the Subordinate Magistrate, the reasons which may have led him to an incorrect conclusion, see reasons which may have been held to justify the High Court in interfering with a finding of fact to enable the Magistrate to come to a right conclusion and not dictate to him the decision to be pronounced, 31 M. L. 133 overruled by 32 M. 220 (see Note above). See also 1 C. 282 = 25 W. R. 30; 4 C. 647 and 1 C. L. R. 83; 32 M. 214.

35. When further inquiry should not be ordered—

(i) On the mere strength of a Government resolution—A District Magistrate passed the following order directing a retrial of the accused after a perusal of the papers referred to in G. R. 1208 of 1900—“This Court orders that the discharge of accused G in cases 91—96 be set aside and that he be put on trial before the Cantonment Magistrate for the offence of being in possession of stolen property, etc., under s. 411, I. P. C., with reference to the articles produced before the Court in these six cases.” Held, that it was not competent to the District Magistrate to order retrial by merely acting upon a resolution passed by Government on the representation of the Legal Remembrancer, and if he wanted to make use of the arguments in the resolution, he should have supplied the accused with the copy of the same, to enable him to meet if he could the arguments against him 2 Bom. L. R. 886.

(ii) When question between parties is of a civil nature—When a Subordinate Magistrate finds that the essence of the matter between the contending parties is of a civil nature, and that the question is in reality one to be fought out in a Civil Court, the District Magistrate is not authorized in such a case to order further inquiry under this section, 1 Bom. L. R. 852.

(iii) When it is likely that Courts may take different views of the evidence—When the nature of the case is such that Courts are liable to take different views of the evidence and of the probabilities, such a case is not one in which further inquiry ought to be ordered especially when a Civil Court and a Magistrate have disbelieved the evidence for the prosecution, 8 A. L. J. 45 = 12 Cr. L. J. 45. That it was conceivable another Magistrate might reasonably see the facts and probabilities on other mutual proportions is no reason for further inquiry. The District Magistrate must apply his own view to the case and come to a decision, 12 Cr. L. J. 110 (Slidh).

(iv) When order has been made under s. 476 for prosecution of complainant—As Sessions Judge has no power to direct further inquiry when an order has been made under s. 476 for the prosecution of the complainant under s. 21, I. P. C. If he is of opinion that the order is wrong he should refer the matter to the High Court for revision, 15 Cr. L. J. 1 (C.) followed, 15 Cr. L. J. 16 (C.). But now see ss. 476 A and 476-B.

(v) Simultaneous order of commitment and further inquiry bad—An order to make further inquiry and an order of commitment cannot be passed simultaneously, for, before the accused is committed, it would be necessary to consider the value of the entire evidence including the evidence taken on further inquiry—Cal. H. C. Pro., 4th March, 1886, 13 C. 121.

(vi) Where complainant declines to produce evidence—Further inquiry should not be ordered where the order of discharge was passed because the complainant declined to produce any evidence 19 P. W. R. 1915 = 15 Cr. L. J. 662.

36. Reasons for further inquiry must be given—In passing an order under this section, it is not ordinarily necessary that the Court should make a detailed examination of the evidence and give elaborate reasons because that might prejudice the trial afterwards, but it is desirable that the Court should give enough in the shape of reasons to show that its order is a proper one 32 C. 1090, 15 C. 603 (F. B.), 5 Bar. L. T. 37 = 13 Cr. L. J. 801; (1913) M. W. N. 638 = 14 Cr. L. J. 872. The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate should give some reasons for his order. Otherwise, it is not possible for the High Court to exercise such supervision over the Magistrate's proceedings as is necessary, 3 C. L. J. 43. Where the order of the Sessions Judge did not state any proper grounds for directing a further inquiry it was set aside on revision 8 C. W. N. 438; 3 B. L. R. 7 = 9 Cr. L. J. 445; but see 4 L. B. R. 233 = 7 Cr. L. J. 493. The mere fact that the petitioner was one of the accused would not be sufficient to direct a further inquiry as regards the petitioner, simply because there was such a direction as regards the other accused, 13 C. W. N. 78 = 9 Cr. L. J. 303.

37. Can Court declining further inquiry, comply with fresh application for same?—A District Magistrate is competent to order further inquiry, although he may have declined to do so on a previous occasion in the same matter, Ratanlal 322. But where further inquiry is refused by the District Magistrate, his successor should not make such order in opposition to his predecessor's order. Under such circumstances the Sessions Judge is the proper person to make such order if he thinks fit to do so, 4 C. W. N. 100. Where a District Magistrate has once decided under this section that there is no case for further inquiry, he cannot subsequently order further inquiry. Such an order is an order reviewing the earlier one and is prohibited by s. 369, 5 Bar, L. T. 37 = 13 Cr. L. J. 301. But where a Sessions Judge suo motu called for the records of a case where the accused was discharged and returned the records as no order was necessary and subsequently the complainant applied to have the case re-opened, held the Sessions Judge was not prevented from entertaining such application and he could not refer the complainant to the High Court on the ground that he had passed orders before, 16 Cr. L. J. 711 (Bar). See Note 9.

VI.—DUTIES AND POWERS OF COURTS DIRECTING FURTHER INQUIRY.

38 What Court directing further inquiry cannot do—

(i) No re-trial can be ordered.—A District Magistrate cannot set aside an order of discharge and direct that the accused be put on his trial. All that he can do is to direct further inquiry leaving it entirely to the inquiring Magistrate to determine whether or not the evidence justified the accused being charged and put on his trial. The District Magistrate is not entitled to order re-trial under this section. The use of the word re-trial may probably prejudice the accused with a Subordinate Court, 1905 P. L. R. at p. 65; 2 Bom. L. R. 886.

(ii) No power to direct fresh evidence being taken.—This section does not authorize a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate to take evidence or to direct evidence being taken, supplementing the evidence given in the Lower Court. The High Court alone has such powers acting under s. 499, 11 C. W. N. 275 = 6 C. L. J. 231 = 6 Cr. L. J. 357. See also 4 L. B. R. 42 = 6 Cr. L. J. 279.

(iii) No power to direct that evidence should be taken and records returned.—This section does not authorize a District Magistrate to direct the trying Magistrate to simply take down the evidence and return the records to him. The prosecution lawfully revived must be proceeded with according to law, 4 L. B. R. 42 = 6 Cr. L. J. 279.

(iv) District Magistrate cannot direct re-issue of warrants.—A District Magistrate has no power under this section to direct a Sub-Divisional Magistrate who has cancelled warrants, to re-issue the same, 1 C. W. N. 650, nor has he power to set aside an order of his predecessor in effect dismissing a complaint, 2 C. W. N. 290. See, however, Note 37.

(v) No charge can be framed or directed to be framed.—A Sessions Judge or District Magistrate cannot in the exercise of the power under this section himself frame the charge or order the Magistrate to frame the charge and try the accused. The District Magistrate might of course make the further inquiry himself and frame the charge in course of it, 32 M. 220 (F.B.), SANKARAN NAIR, J., dissenting.

(vi) Fettering discretion of Subordinate Magistrate in further inquiry.—A District Magistrate who refers a case to a Subordinate Magistrate for further inquiry has no authority to fetter him in the exercise of his judicial discretion as to the question whether the case should or should not be committed to the Court of Sessions, 15 M. 39. Where the accused were discharged of offences under ss. 342 and 357, I P. C., the Judge cannot direct an inquiry into an offence under s. 467 I P. C., 10 Cr. L. J. 554 (A.). In making an order for further inquiry it is improper for the superior Magistrate to write a judgment which is practically a mandate to a Subordinate Magistrate, 12 M. L. R. 94 = 17 Cr. L. J. 245, referring to 32 C. 1090.

(vii) No power to direct the Police to reconsider.—Where a District Magistrate in setting aside the order of discharge concluded his order by observing "The case, therefore is re-opened and the Police are now at liberty to re-consider the whole position' Held, such an order is not contemplated by s. 437 and the proper order should have been to order the Sub-Magistrate to make further inquiry, 37 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 596.

39. When directing further inquiry, complainant may be required to furnish security for costs of accused.—In 8 A. L. R. 196 = 16 Cr. L. J. 174, the High Court refused to order further inquiry unless the applicant (1) paid into Court the expenses incurred by the Government under s. 514 in respect of a previous complaint and (2) executed a bond with one surety undertaking to pay the reasonable costs of the accused in the event of his being acquitted or discharged and such acquittal or discharge not being reversed in appeal or revision. S. 528 (5) was cited as a precedent for the latter condition.

40. In making further inquiry, complainant may be taken 'de novo'.—Further inquiry does not mean proceeding on the evidence already taken. It means that evidence or other evidence, if there be any, should be taken de novo by that Magistrate who holds the further inquiry, 9 A. L. J. 310 = 13 Cr. L. J. 235. When for valid reasons, further inquiry is ordered to be conducted by another Magistrate, the inquiry should commence de novo 6 A. 367; 22 C. 573, 4 L. B. R. 233 = 7 Cr. L. J. 493.

Can a complaint be dismissed again after order for further inquiry?—An order for further inquiry directed to a Subordinate Court means that the case should be taken up again and that the question of dismissing the complaint, or charging the accused, as the case may be should again be considered and an appropriate order made as the result of such fresh consideration. Per WALLIS, J., 32 M. 220 (F.B.) at p. 234. See also 15 C. 608. When further inquiry is ordered into a complaint dismissed under s. 203, the Magistrate cannot again act under s. 203 but must proceed to enquire into or try the case under s. 204 11 C. W. N. 316.

41. In further inquiry, accused might be tried for any offence established by evidence.—A prosecution lawfully revived must be dealt with in accordance with law in the same way in which a prosecution originally instituted is dealt with. Therefore, when a Magistrate is to make a further inquiry, it was held that he was competent to try the accused for such offence as might be established by the evidence, 7 M. 451. He is not bound to try him for the very offence for which he was originally discharged. See 1 C. L. R. 83, 2 P. R. 1901.

42. No difference between fresh and further inquiry.—There is no substantial distinction intended to be denoted by the words 'fresh inquiry' in s. 436 and 'further inquiry' in s. 437, 15 C. 608. See also 14 M. 334; 8 M. 336.

437. * When on examining the record of any case under section 435 or otherwise, the Power to order commitment. Sessions Judge or District Magistrate considers that such case is triable exclusively by the Court of Session and that an accused person has been improperly discharged by the inferior Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, may cause him to be arrested, and may thereupon, instead of directing a fresh inquiry, order him to be committed for trial upon the matter of which he has been, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, improperly discharged

Provided as follows —

(a) that the accused has had an opportunity of showing cause to such Judge or Magistrate why the commitment should not be made,

(b) that if such Judge or Magistrate thinks that the evidence shows that some other offence has been committed by the accused, such Judge or Magistrate may direct the inferior Court to inquire into such offence

Notes —As to the scope of this section, see 32 M. 220

1. Sessions Judge competent to direct commitment in cases of discharge by District Magistrate.—If the case be exclusively triable by the Court of Session the Sessions Judge may direct commitment even where the District Magistrate himself discharges the accused 7 A. 833; 12 C. 473, 8 M. 18; 9 B. 100. In 17 Cr. L. J. 223 (Oadh) the case in 9 B. 100 was followed

* This sect on which was originally numbered 436 was renumbered 437 by Act XVIII of 1923

2. Sessions Judge cannot act where District Magistrate has confirmed order of discharge.—See Note 9 (a) to s. 435

3. District Magistrate with special powers under s. 30 can direct further inquiry.—The expression District Magistrate used in this section, includes a District Magistrate possessing the extraordinary jurisdiction conferred by s. 30, 1904 P. L. R. 234.

4. Court of Session and District Magistrate can direct commitment without intervention of Magistrate.—There is nothing in this section to show that when the Court of Session or the District Magistrate directs a discharged person to be committed for trial the commitment thereupon must necessarily be made by the discharging Magistrate, whilst the first proviso to it shows that it may be made by the Sessions Court or District Magistrate as the power happens to be exercised by the one or the other, 10 B. 319; 23 C. 397. Under this section it is competent to a District Magistrate to make a committal himself or to direct a Subordinate Magistrate to make a committal. The words "order him to be committed" in this section do not mean more than pass an order for his committal, 31 M. 40; 10 B. 319 and 23 C. 397; (but see 4 W. R. 4). Where, however, the Magistrate is directed to commit he cannot be asked to record the defence evidence also, 4 N.W. P. H. C. R. 50. See also 12 N. L. R. 94 = 17 Cr. L. J. 245.

5. Section limited to offences triable exclusively by Court of Session.—To give the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge jurisdiction to act under this section, the accused must have been charged with an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session i.e., an offence shown to be so triable in the 8th column of Schedule II, 1904 P. L. R. 234; 1 A. 413 (F.B.). See also 3 P. R. 1897. Thus a Sessions Judge cannot direct commitment in respect of an offence under s. 411, I P. C., Ratanlal 42; 15 M. L. J. 373. In cases not covered by this section, if the District Magistrate thinks the Subordinate Magistrate has improperly discharged the accused he may either act under s. 437 or report the matter to the High Court under s. 439 & M. 336. The High Court can commit, in any case without any restriction.

Charges of offences not exclusively triable by Sessions Court may be added—Where a District Magistrate committed the accused on charges of ss. 408 and 477 A, I P. C., in respect of which the accused had been previously discharged, it was contended (1) that the District Magistrate was not competent to make the order under s. 436 as the case against the accused was primarily one under s. 408 I P. C., an offence not exclusively triable by a Sessions Court, and (2) that the District Magistrate was not competent to add a charge under s. 403 to the one under 477 A; held, that the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order as the falsification of accounts was a substantial part of the affair, and it was open to the District Magistrate to consider that the case was triable exclusively by the Court of Session and next that once a proper order of commitment is made, it opened up the whole case and the District Magistrate is competent to add other charges intimately connected with the charge under s. 477 A and forming part of the same transaction 16 Bom. L. R. 80 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ga. 179 = 15 Cr. L. J. 292

6. Section not applicable where accused acquitted.—Where the accused had been acquitted by a Magistrate, neither the District Magistrate nor the Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to proceed under the section or s. 437, 20 C. 633. But the acquittal must be one in substance and not merely in form. Thus, where a Magistrate used the words "acquitted and released" when he intended only to discharge, the Court of Session was held competent to direct a commitment under this section, 8 W. R. 41; 35 M. 136. See Note 17 to s. 437

7. Conviction for minor offence no bar to order of commitment for major offence.—Where an accused appears to have committed culpable homicide, his conviction by a Magistrate for a minor offence does not prevent his trial for murder, etc. The Sessions Judge, if he thinks there is a prima facie case, may call on the accused to show cause why a commitment should not be ordered, and may thereafter order his commitment if satisfied that there is sufficient cause for it, Ratanlal 337.

8. What amounts to 'discharge'.—The fact that no formal order of discharge for the graver offence has been passed is immaterial, for if the Magistrate convicts only for the minor offence, its effect is a discharge for the graver offence, by his declining to take action in respect of such graver offence, 15 C. 608. See 24 M. 138 which overrules 223 M. 225 and dissents from 20 C. 633. The refusal of a Magistrate to proceed against certain persons mentioned in the report of the investigating Police-officer, was held to be in effect an order discharging them, 4 C. W. N. 242. But until the Magistrate has so refused to act, a District Magistrate is not competent to proceed under this section or s. 437, 33 C. 783; 35 M. L. J. 967. See Note 46 to s. 403

9 Points to be considered in directing commitment.—An order by a Sessions Judge directing a Magistrate to commit an accused person who has been discharged by him simply because the offence is triable exclusively by the Court of Session is bad in law. Weir II, 260. The fact that a superior Court might be disposed to take the view that the Magistrate discredited the prosecution evidence for insufficient reasons and discharged the accused without committing him for trial is no ground for interference by it. Weir II, 233, 31 M 133. Nor does a case come within the purview of this section merely because in the opinion of the District Magistrate the offence alleged to have been committed could not be adequately punished by a Magistrate, 1903 A W N 189 = 8 Cr L J 47. It is the duty of the superior Court in considering whether an accused person has been improperly discharged within the terms of this section, so as to require him to be committed to the Sessions Court to consider all the grounds upon which such an order of discharge has been passed including a consideration of evidence which has not been believed or held to be sufficient to establish a prima facie case. Without doing so it would be impossible for the superior Court to find that the order of discharge was improper. Where the Magistrate had discharged the accused and the Sessions Judge refrained from considering the evidence of the witnesses whom the Magistrate considered to be unreliable because he thought he could hardly deal with all those questions without prejudging the case and without making it difficult for him to hear it with a jury but directed a committal held that the order must be set aside as it had not been made on full consideration of the merits of the case as disclosed by the evidence taken before the Magistrate. 7 C. W N 77, 13 B 376. See also 1 Pat. L J = 17 Cr L J 330.

10 When commitment should be made and when fresh inquiry—

(i) When on the evidence already taken there is a clear case commitment should be made—In a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session if the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate is satisfied that on the evidence taken there is a clear case for committal and there is no reason for desiring a further consideration by the Magistrate it would ordinarily be his duty to commit under this section without ordering a further inquiry. 15 C. 608.

(ii) Where trial Magistrate omitted to take evidence District Magistrate may himself take that evidence and commit—A Subordinate Magistrate having dismissed a case under s. 380 I P C. without taking certain evidence which in his opinion would have been of little value the Magistrate of the district, on the application of the complainant took such evidence and committed the accused for trial before the Court of Session. Held on reference to the High Court that as further evidence in addition to that taken by the Subordinate Magistrate, was forthcoming the District Magistrate's action was sustainable on the principle laid down in 2 C. 405, 4 C. 15.

(iii) Where fresh evidence has since come to light, fresh inquiry must be held—Where a District could not be sustained, as the accused had not an opportunity of cross-examining on the fresh evidence and that the proper order under the circumstances would be to have directed a fresh inquiry under this section leaving the discretion of the Magistrate unfettered to commit or not. Weir II 550, 15 M 39.

(iv) After issuing notice for commitment may direct further inquiry—A District Magistrate who had issued a notice to an improperly discharged accused as to why he should not be committed to the Court of Session is also competent on cause being shown to direct further inquiry. 18 C. 75. See also 14 M 334 at p. 337.

(v) Commitment cannot be made for offences which the accused was not charged—An order by a Judge directing a Magistrate to commit an accused person who has been discharged at a preliminary inquiry to take his trial in a Court of Session must specify the particular acts constituting the offence charged. The Judge cannot direct a committal for offences with which the accused was in no way charged before the Magistrate, for otherwise a man might be committed for trial in respect of an offence of which he had never been accused or never even heard a word until apprehended under the commitment. 10 B. L. R. 235 = 19 W. R. 30, 21 W. R. 41. See also 10 Cr L J 554 (A). An order of commitment may however, be made without a charge both under this section and s. 370. 27 M. 54.

11 Scope of the words 'under s. 433 or otherwise'—The words 'or otherwise' do not mean in any other way whatsoever but in any other way provided by the Code. 10 C. 263. On the other hand if we put a wide and general construction the whole of the limitation necessarily implied in s. 433 would become unnecessary and such a result would suppose in the Legislature an absence of all intention, which ought not to be imputed or presumed. See Note 3 to s. 439 and Note to s. 448. The reasons for exercising the power conferred by this section are reasons which should arise upon the materials to be found on the record and not upon extraneous matter, 1890 A. W. N. 147.

12. Notice to accused absolutely necessary before acting under this section.—The opportunity to show cause referred to in proviso (a) does not mean any opportunity, but the accused must have a special opportunity, Ratanlal 593. Pro. 150 (a) being an exception to s. 440, notice to the accused is absolutely necessary, 1 C. L. R. 93; 24 W. R. 70; 1 B. 64. The order is liable to be reversed when no notice is given, on the ground that the order of committal and the commitment made thereunder are illegal, 6 M. 372, 22 W. R. 67. But where the Magistrate is asked to make further inquiry under proviso (b), then there is no express provision for notice. Also where the trial has been held without any objection on the ground of want of notice, and the omission has not occasioned a failure of justice the High Court will not in revision interfere, 7 C. 662 = 10 C. L. R. 8. Where a District Magistrate being of opinion that an accused person is improperly discharged makes an order to commit him to the Court of Session, without giving any notice to the accused, but the committing Magistrate before so doing issues the notice the irregularity in the proceedings of the District Magistrate comes within the terms of and is cured by s. 537, Ratanlal 899 where 7 C. 662 is followed. In 15 M. L. J. 373, the District Magistrate directed a Sub-Divisional Magistrate to commit an accused person in regard to an offence not exclusively triable by the Court of Session, without giving the accused an opportunity to show cause before the District Magistrate himself. Held that not only the order was without jurisdiction, the opportunity to show cause, given before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate could not be regarded as a compliance with the law, though the Sub-Divisional Magistrate forwarded a statement of the accused to the District Magistrate. The order of the District Magistrate was therefore set aside. This case was followed in 28 P. W. R. 1913 = 312 P. L. R. 4913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 605.

13. Section does not preclude revival of proceedings by same or another Magistrate.—Fresh proceedings may be taken by the Magistrate who passed the order of discharge or by another Magistrate without any order from a superior Court provided he is competent to take cognizance of the offence, 29 C. 726, 29 M. 126 (F.B.) which overrules 28 M. 255 and follows 29 C. 726, 1 B. 64. Even if the order of the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge directing a further inquiry be set aside as wrong, proceedings held by a Subordinate Magistrate, as a result of such order, need not necessarily be void if the Subordinate Magistrate had jurisdiction even without the order for further inquiry, 38 W. R. 39, and even if the District Magistrate had refused to order further enquiry the Subordinate Magistrate may take fresh proceedings, 36 C. 415. The Police and the Magistracy are not precluded by a Magistrate's orders of discharge from reviving a charge against a person who was discharged if in their judgment there is sufficient reason for holding that the discharge was made on a wrong view of the facts Ratanlal 350; 36 C. 415. See Note 3 to s. 437 Notes 16—18 to s. 253 and Note 11 to s. 209.

14. Section does not apply to Presidency Magistrates.—The provisions of this section and s. 437 do not apply to Presidency Magistrates who can revive a complaint even after discharge 1 C. W. N. 49 followed in 5 C. W. N. 169, 28 C. 211; 23 C. 652; 33 C. 1223 and 29 C. 726. But the High Court can interfere with the orders of Presidency Magistrates under s. 439 read with s. 423 36 C. 994, 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529 (See Note 43 to s. 439, and under s. 15 of the Charter Act and s. 20 of the Letters Patent, 26 C. 746 and 27 C. 128.

15. Revision of order of commitment by High Court.—Difference between sections 215 and 439.—An order of commitment made under this section, can be quashed by the High Court acting under ss. 435 and 439, on points of law as well as of facts though not under s. 215, 27 M. 54, 12 C. W. N. 117 = 6 C. L. J. 760 = 6 Cr. L. J. 406, 15 Cr. L. J. 373 (M.) 1908 A. W. N. 189. S. 215 refers only to a commitment actually made, 7 C. W. N. 327; 14 M. 334 at p. 338 and 15 C. 608 at p. 621. It is open to the High Court in its revisional jurisdiction to consider whether the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate acting under this section has or has not exercised a proper the offence charged or where it is clear that the Court would not act on the evidence, 30 M. 224. It is evident from the words used in s. 436 that the fullest and widest discretion has been given to District Magistrates or Sessions Judges and when an order for commitment has been made, the High Court should be most unwilling to interfere and should require strong grounds before setting aside such an order, 26 A. 564, 13 A. L. J. 111 = 16 Cr. L. J. 139. See Note 45 to s. 439. But an order of committal, made by the High Court itself under s. 526 cannot be so revised, 27 M. 54.

16. High Court not to be moved ordinarily, where District authorities have power to grant relief.—Ordinarily the High Court will not be ready to exercise its revisional powers, where the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge have concurrent jurisdiction in the matter, 1837 A. W. N. 103, especially so as the order of the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge under this section or s. 437 is liable to be revised in its turn by the High Court, 15 G. 608 and p. 621, see Note 23 to s. 439

17. On fresh evidence Sessions Judge may grant relief once refused by High Court.—The District Magistrate having dismissed a complaint under s. 203, complainant's prosecution was ordered for an offence under s. 211, I P. C. The High Court refused to interfere with the order under s. 203 and the order directing prosecution. The Sessions Judge tried the complainant under s. 211, I P. C., and on acquitting him directed a further inquiry into his original complaint. Held, the order directing further inquiry was valid notwithstanding the previous refusal of the High Court, as the order now made by the Sessions Judge was upon materials totally different from those which were before the High Court when further inquiry was refused, 7 G. W. N. 80. Where however, a Sessions Judge acting under s. 476, sent an accused to be tried for an offence under s. 193, I P. C., the Magistrate discharged the accused. Then the Sessions Judge acting under this section, issued a notice to the accused calling upon him to show cause why he should not be committed for trial for an offence under s. 193, I P. C. Held, that his latter order should be set aside as it was open to the Sessions Judge if he thought proper, to have directed the accused to be committed for trial on the same evidence which was before him when he acted under s. 476 and that the accused having been discharged in the trial for the offence under s. 193, I P. C., it was not proper to order a prosecution for an offence under s. 193, I P. C., on the same facts, unless on exceptional grounds, Weir II, 549. See also 10 Cr. L. J. 554 (A.)

18. Witness should not be suddenly committed on information elicited in examination—Immediately after the petitioner's evidence had been recorded in the trial of certain persons, for giving false evidence, then being held in the Sessions Court, he was asked certain questions by the Sessions Judge as to his liability to be committed to the Court of Session on a charge of murder, and he was eventually so committed. Held, quashing the commitment, that the consequences to public justice would be very serious if a witness, during the course of his deposition, and before being absolved from his oath as a witness, were liable to be suddenly called upon to show cause why he should not be committed for some other distinct and serious crime of which a Magistrate had discharged him Ratanlal 889. See s. 351

438. (1) The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on examining Report to High Court. under section 435 or otherwise the record of any proceeding, report for the orders of the High Court the result of such examination, and, when such report contains a recommendation that a sentence be reversed or altered, may order that the execution of such sentence be suspended, and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond

(2) An Additional Sessions Judge shall have and may exercise all the powers of a Sessions Judge under this chapter in respect of any case which may be transferred to him by * or under any general or special order of the Sessions Judge "

Notes —1. Courts empowered to report.—In addition to the two principal officers in each district—the Sessions Judge and District Magistrate,—this section confers a similar power on an additional Sessions Judge, but restricts it to cases transferred to him by the Sessions Judge 1903 A. W. N. 23; but the powers of a District Magistrate can never be exercised by the Joint Magistrate of the district, 16 W. R. 25. The expression Joint Magistrate is nowhere employed in the present Code. A Deputy or Sub-Divisional Magistrate though in charge cannot act under this section. See Note 7 to s. 435

2. Scope of the words "or otherwise."—We think that these words being words of general import and following the particular words, 'under section 435' must be construed according to the usual rule and that they mean not 'in any other way whatsoever' but 'in any other way provided by the Code' 10 C. 268. The Court declined to accept the contention that the words 'or otherwise,' gave the District Magistrate a power quite independent of the power conferred upon him in cases in which he has proceeded under s. 435. That these words cannot of course, have reference to any power outside the Code is clear from the fact that the Code created the judicial officers whose powers are dealt with therein and their powers must necessarily be found within the four corners of the Code, 35 M. 273. The words 'or otherwise' were not intended to confer upon the District Magistrate the power to question the propriety of an order of a Sessions Court and refer the matter to the High Court, 25 A. 91; 23 C. 249; 2 N. L. R. 149 = 4 Cr. L. J. 422. See Note 11 to s. 436 and Note 3 to s. 439.

* The words in inverted commas were substituted for the words 'by the Sessions Judge' by Act XVIII of 1923

3. Limitations to powers of reference—

(i) Limited to proceedings of inferior Criminal Courts—s. 435 (1)—The power conferred by this section read with s. 435 upon a District Magistrate to make a reference to the High Court refers clearly to "proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court." By the words "or otherwise" in this section the Legislature never intended to give to a Magistrate the power to question the propriety of a judgment or sentence passed by a superior criminal authority such as a Sessions Judge 23 C. 249 and 250; 18 Bom. L. R. 796. It would be contrary to every principle to allow a District Magistrate to report against an order of the Sessions Court to which he is subordinate, 25 A. 91; 2 N. L. R. 149 = 4 Cr. L. J. 422; 23 M. L. J. 732 = 13 Cr. L. J. 714; 36 A. 378. This section does not empower a District Magistrate to refer to the High Court the proceedings of a Superintendent of Police, the latter not being a "Court subordinate to" Magistrate, Ratanlal 133. See Note 15 to s. 435 45 A. 851.

(ii) Limited to errors apparent on face of record—A reference to the High Court under this section should only be made for some reason specified in the section which appears from the inspection of the record, 1891 A. W. N. 80. But this interpretation seems to be too narrow. See 38 M. 1028 where MILLER, J., is of opinion that it is open to him to revise the proceedings of a Subordinate Court on grounds extraneous to the record as, e.g., where an order has been obtained by the trick or fraud of a party. He should also call for the explanation of the Subordinate Magistrate and embody such explanation in his report, 8 C. 644. See Note 30 to s. 435.

4. Cases of acquittal not to be reported under this section—If dissatisfied with an order of acquittal the proper procedure for a District Magistrate to adopt would be to move the Local Government to exercise its powers under s. 417 and not directly make a reference under this section 24 A. 346; 1902 A. W. N. 89; 15 M. 36. Any reference under this section, the object of which is to induce the High Court to set aside an acquittal, cannot be entertained on the revisional side, 25 A. 123. See also 19 W. R. 85, 13 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 438 (where 13 P. R. 1905 is overruled and 12 P. R. 1906 referred to), 5 N. L. R. 4 = 9 Cr. L. J. 211; 8 M. L. T. 380 = 1910 M. W. N. 517 = 11 Cr. L. J. 822; 12 A. L. J. 235 = 13 Cr. L. J. 304. "It seems to me that to entertain proceedings by way of revision on a District Magistrate's report in a case where an appeal would lie from an acquittal is contrary to the spirit if not to the letter of subsec. (5) of s. 439." Per MILLER, J., in 38 M. 1028; 44 C. 703; 5 L. 16.

5. Power of reporting discretionary and when it may be exercised.—The words "if he thinks fit" in this section indicate that the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge is not bound to refer every case in which he may detect an error, 20 W. R. 40.

(i) Reference must be made when order contrary to law or sentence too severe—When a Sessions Judge considers that a judgment or order is contrary to law or that the punishment is too severe, he may properly report the proceedings to the High Court, 20 W. R. 50. The District Magistrate should report to the High Court all cases in which he considers the orders of a Subordinate Magistrate to be illegal, leaving it to the High Court to determine whether or not the illegality requires correction, Welf II, 668. But the taking by the Sessions Judge, of a different view of the evidence from that taken by the Magistrate is no ground for a report or reference, 18 W. R. 7 and 39.

(ii) Reference should be made only when there is a failure of justice—If a punishable offence has been committed and a proper punishment has been inflicted he should abstain from further proceedings, unless from any irregularity, a failure of justice has been caused. Thus, where the recommendation would be merely to alter the conviction of an offence to another cognate offence no report should be made, 9 C. 847 = 12 C. L. R. 451.

6. When reference should not be made?—

(i) When reporting officer might dispose of the matter himself—Where an accused, charged with theft was discharged by a first-class Magistrate and District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court held, that the High Court need not interfere in a mere case of discharge, the District Magistrate being competent to take steps himself, should he deem it necessary, Ratanlal 290 (F.B.). Similarly, if a Subordinate Judge refuses to grant sanction for prosecution, the Sessions Judge to whom he is subordinate might himself grant it, without referring to the High Court, Ratanlal 937; 9 W. R. 5; 11 W. R. 24. An Appellate Court is incompetent to refer to the High Court in a case in which an appeal lies to it, 7 P. W. R. 1910 = 62 P. L. R. 1910 = 15 Cr. L. J. 435

(ii) Cannot refer when appeal or application pending—The Sessions Judge is not competent to refer a case for enhancement of sentence, unless he has heard the appeal filed against the conviction. He can only refer the case under the provisions of s 438, when he is satisfied as to the propriety of the conviction, 6 A. L. J. 421. Where a Sessions Judge hearing an appeal is of opinion that a person should be acquitted, he ought not to refer the case to the High Court, but he should himself dispose of the appeal, 13 A. L. J. 477 = 16 Cr. L. J. 433. S 438 was not intended to enable the District Magistrate to get the opinion of the High Court on a question of law arising in a case pending before him or to transfer the decision of a difficult case pending before him to the High Court. The Magistrate can refer only in a case where the proceedings are not themselves the subject of a revision case in an appeal case pending before him as it is his duty to pass a judicial order himself in that case, 15 Cr. L. J. 472 (M). Neither s 438 nor any other provision of the Code authorizes a District Magistrate to refer a point of law arising in an appeal pending before him. It is the business of the District Magistrate to dispose of the appeal before him and if he should so improperly refer his order can be revised at the instance of the party aggrieved 7 P. W. R. 1914 = 62 P. L. R. 1994 = 15 Cr. L. J. 464, 7 L. B. R. 251 = 15 Cr. L. J. 667.

(iii) Where trial void for want of jurisdiction—When an offence is tried by a Court without jurisdiction the proceedings are void under s. 530, and it is not necessary in case of an acquittal for the High Court to upset the acquittal before re trial can be had 8 B. 307; 31 A. 317, and see Notes 18 and 19 to s. 403

(iv) Magistrate should not make reference on mere representation of complainant—A District Magistrate reported the proceedings of the second-class Magistrate of A on the representation of the District Superintendent of Police who had himself been the complainant in the case before that Magistrate held that the District Magistrate acted irregularly in forwarding with his own incomplete report the communication addressed to him by the complainant protesting against the second class Magistrate's decision. The circumstance that the complainant holds office as District Superintendent of Police, can give him no right to make any representation to the District Magistrate in the form of an official letter or memorandum in a case in which he is personally interested nor can the High Court take such letter or memorandum into consideration when dealing with the case Ratanlal 340

(v) When an order has already been made under s 435—See 26 M. 477, 17 M. L. J. 153 = 5 Cr. L. J. 132, 10 P. R. 1912 = 14 Cr. L. J. 134 and see Note 9 under s 435

7. Provincial Magistrates not empowered to refer questions for opinion of High Court.—There is no provision in the Code which enables a Judge to stop a trial already commenced and refer to the High Court any question or questions of law arising on the merits in that case Ratanlal 214. In 2 A. 774, a Sessions Judge after having asked the assessors their opinion in a case which was being tried by him, suspended the trial of the case and made a reference to the High Court under this section on a question of jurisdiction which had arisen in the trial of the case. Held, that it was not intended that the section should be so used and that the Sessions Judge should have disposed of the question himself. The Code of 1861 like s 617 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 empowered the Sessions Court to send questions for the opinion of the High Court, but the present Code contains no such provision (except in the case of a Presidency Magistrate, see s. 432), 27 A. 23; Oadh H. C. 64 and 71; 5 O. C. 316 (1902). See Note 5 to s 432. Also the difference in the language employed by the old Code, viz. 'shall refer' and 'may report' of the present Code is noteworthy

8. Conditions for suspension of sentence and admission of accused to bail—Where the District Magistrate was not competent to refer a case under this section to the High Court he had no authority to admit the accused to bail, 18 C. 186; nor has he such power under this section in the report does not contain a recommendation that the sentence be altered or reversed, 23 W. R. 40, 3 C. L. R. 404. Also the District Magistrate cannot exercise the power of suspending the sentence and admitting the accused to bail on a mere application for consideration of a case. He can do so only after consideration and on making the report.

9. Power of Sessions Judge to stay proceedings pending revision by High Court—Criminal proceedings, supported by a sanction were instituted against the accused. The accused put in a revision petition under s. 435 to the Sessions Judge against the order according sanction. The Sessions Judge ordered proceedings to be stayed, pending the disposal of the reference by the High Court. Held, that the order was ultra vires and that the Sessions Judge had no power to stay a prosecution instituted in pursuance of the sanction in a Court which is not subordinate to the Sessions Judge. This section provides in what way he may take action in favour of an accused pending the disposal of his reference and recommendation to the High Court. Quare Whether he could stay proceedings even where the Magistrate is subordinate to him? 28 M 137. In 9 P. W. R. 1916 it was held down that a Sessions Judge has no power at all to stay criminal proceedings pending before a Magistrate subordinate to him. See however, 12 P. W. R. 1916.

10 Form and contents of reference—All references submitted to the High Court under this section are to be accompanied by the record of the case and by a statement of the case in English, giving—(1) a brief abstract of the case (2) the sentence or order of the Lower Court and the name of, and the powers exercised by, the Magistrate passing it (3) the particular portion of the finding sentence or order, which is considered incorrect, illegal or improper, or the particular portion of the proceedings which is considered irregular, (4) the grounds upon which it is proposed that the High Court should exercise the powers conferred by s. 439, (5) a state-be accompanied by a letter and statement referred to above. The fact of the reference and a copy of its terms should be communicated by the Court making it to the Lower Court.—Bom H C Cr Cir p 47 C P Cr Cir requires the following information in addition to the above—Subordinate Courts should whenever it may seem desirable to do so be called on to submit an explanation with regard to the point on which it is proposed to make the reference and the explanation should be sent with the statement of the case. In cases in which an appeal lies from the sentence or order in respect of which it is proposed to make a reference, the reference should not ordinarily be made until the period of an appeal has expired. It is important to observe that the provisions of s. 391 supra extending the period during which the execution of a sentence or whipping may not be carried out in the case of an appeal being referred do not apply to a reference under this section so that when a recommendation is made that a sentence of whipping be reversed the execution of such sentence should always be suspended by express order under the provisions of the latter section.—C P Cr Cir No 46

11 What the report should contain—The recommendation should contain a definite recommendation that the sentence be altered or reversed 27 A 25 The Magistrate ought to give a brief abstract of the case and the grounds upon which he recommends the order or sentence he considers to be incorrect should be set aside by the High Court 9 Cr. L. J. 502 (M). The order of reference should set forth the point on which orders are required when a case is referred to under this section Oudh S. Q. No 66

12 Referring Judge has no power to take evidence—S 439 does not empower the District Magistrate to take evidence and if he had power to take evidence it was only for the purpose of a recommendation to the High Court and the High Court cannot refer to such evidence to pass a final order in the case, 12 A. L. J. 481—15 Cr. L. J. 575 Neither s 435 nor s 438 nor any other section empowers a District Magistrate to take further evidence with a view to reporting the case 3 Bom. L. R. 617 See Note 19 to s 435

439. (1) In the case of any proceedings the record of which has been called for by itself or which has been reported for orders or which otherwise come to its knowledge, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by section * 423, 426, 427 and 428 or on a

of revision

Court by section 338 and may enhance the sentence and when the Judges composing the Court of Revision are equally divided in opinion the case shall be disposed of in manner provided by section 429

(2) No order under this section shall be made to the prejudice of the accused unless he has had an opportunity of being heard either personally or by pleader in his own defence

(3) Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which in the opinion of such Court, the accused has committed, than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

(4) Nothing in this section applies to any entry made under section 273, or, shall be deemed to authorize a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction

(5) Where under this Code an appeal lies and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed

*“(6) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section, any convicted person to whom an opportunity has been given under sub-sec (2) of showing cause why his sentence should not be enhanced shall, in showing cause, be entitled also to show cause against his conviction”

¹ Notes.—1. Sections of the Code indicating revisional jurisdiction.—Secs 108 (3).—Power to require security for keeping the peace on conviction. S 423.—Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal. S 428.—Power of suspending sentence and releasing appellant on bail pending appeal. S 427.—Power to order the arrest of the accused in appeal from acquittal. S 428.—Power of Appellate Court to take further evidence or direct it to be taken. S 338.—Power to direct tender of pardon. Under s 350, prov (b) the High Court may set aside any conviction passed on evidence not wholly recorded by the Magistrate before whom the conviction was had, if such Court be of opinion that the accused was materially prejudiced. See also ss 232, 437 and 520, which confer special powers of a revisional nature on the High Court

The changes effected in this section by the new amendment are few

Section 195 is omitted from sub-sec (1) because sub-sec. (6) of s. 195 giving power to revoke or grant sanction to the higher authority is omitted from s 195 under the present Code.

Sub-sec. (6) is newly added to this section. Under it an opportunity is given to an accused person of showing cause against his conviction when the High Court calls upon him to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced. See 27 Bom. L. R. 1343 for a judicial interpretation of the sub-section (6).

I—SCOPE OF REVISIONAL JURISDICTION OF HIGH COURT.

2 Revisional jurisdiction under the old and present Codes.—The powers conferred by this section in the present Code, are larger than any exercised by the High Court under the Code of 1872, Weir II, 533; 38 C. 44. Under the 1872 Code revisional jurisdiction was limited to material error committed in judicial proceedings; i.e., if such error had occasioned a failure of justice, 19 W. R. 28. The Code of 1872 limited the High Court's power of revision to cases of material errors committed in judicial proceedings, while the present Code gives it a wider latitude by allowing it to act in its discretion. Interference with findings of facts will be regulated in the same manner as interference with the verdict of a jury, 14 B. 331; Ratanlal 177; also 21 C. 931. As to meaning of the term “material error,” see 19 W. R. 23; 20 W. R. 40, 21 W. R. 88; 24 W. R. 80, 2 M. 38; 2 C. 110, 2 A. 336; 3 A. 555. But it should be noted that s 439 must be read along with and subject to s. 435. Under the present amendment by the omission of sub-sec (3) orders made under ss 163 and 144 and proceedings under Chap XII and s 176 have now become proceedings liable to be revised. So under the present Code as amended these proceedings are proceedings within the meaning of s 435, and to this extent the power of the High Court is extended

3. S. 439 must be read along with and subject to s 435.—“It is clear that ss 435, 439 must be read together as pointed out by WILSON, J., in 15 C. 603 at p 617. S 439 must, therefore, be read along with and subject to the provisions of s 435” It follows that an order made by a Civil or Revenue Court cannot be revised under s. 439, 40 C. 477 (F.B.). See also 28 A. 249. One of the referring Judges in 40 C. 477, IMAN, J., was however, of opinion that s 439 is much more general and much more extensive in its comprehension than s 435 and does not limit the powers of the High Court to proceedings of Inferior Criminal Courts. 'S 439 is not independent of s. 435.' The summoning of the record must be a necessary preliminary to any action which a High Court may take under s. 437 or s. 439. 'Ss 435—438 prescribed the method by which the records of any criminal case come to the High Court and the power of the High Court to deal with the record is in s. 439, ss 435—438 provide the machinery and s. 439, gives the power to dispose of the record.' It seems clear, therefore, that the language in s. 439 'the record of which has been called for by itself,' is not used in contradistinction to 'which otherwise comes to its knowledge' but as contrasted with 'which has been reported for orders' and that it has reference to the recognized channel by which the High Court becomes seized of the case, that is to say, either by calling for the record itself or by having the case reported to it under s. 438 by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate who has himself called for the records under s. 435, and whether it has called for the record itself or is dealing with it where the records has been called for by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate and reported to it, in either case the Court is acting both of its own motion and on petition. There is, therefore, no room for the reading of those words 'otherwise comes to its knowledge' as having reference to petition. It cannot be suggested that without those words or the word 'otherwise' in s. 437, the High Court, a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate could not act on petition. When once this is clearly understood, the difficulty raised by the omission of the Legislature to insert the words 's. 439' in the exception clause disappears. S. 435 is the initial power whether exercise by the High Court or the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate, and whether of their own motion or on petition. When the Legislature took away this power, it cut off the jurisdiction of the High Court at its fountain head. The machinery, by which the High Court became seized of the case under the Code being gone, it was unnecessary to forbid the exercise of powers which depended on such seizure. 36 M. 275.

The words 'otherwise come to its knowledge' cannot have reference to the power of the High Court under the Charter Act in the exercise of its superintendence to call for records and then proceed to exercise the powers under s. 439. A wider meaning should not be given to these words in s. 439 than what is attached to the same words in ss 437-438. If the words in these sections are limited to the powers to be found in the Code (see 10 C. 258—92) as they must be, the words in s. 439 should be similarly limited. They are not words which confer a power, but they are words which save any power which exist, 36 M. 275.

4. Revisional powers conferred by ss. 436 and 429 compared.—Under s. 436 the Legislature has conferred a special jurisdiction on the High Court as well as on the Sessions Judge and District Magistrate in cases of dismissal and orders of discharge as to which there is no right of appeal. It was, therefore, the intention of the Legislature that the High Court should have a free hand in interfering under s. 436 than under s. 439. When the Legislature is not satisfied that the general revisional jurisdiction established by it is sufficient to deal with a particular class of cases and creates a special revisional jurisdiction in such cases, the special jurisdiction should be exhausted before the general jurisdiction is resorted to, 32 M. 220 (F.B.). See Note 4 to s. 437.

5. Extraordinary jurisdiction of High Court under s. 15 of Charter Act and s. 23 of Letters Patent.—In 26 C. 188 it was held that the powers of the High Court under the Charter Act are not affected by s. 435. In 23 A. 144 it was laid down that s. 15 of the Charter Act does not override sub sec. (3) of section 435 so as to enable the High Court to interfere with an order duly passed by a Magistrate under Chapter XII, etc. In 38 M. 275 it was laid down that the power of supervision under the Charter Act was limited to question of jurisdiction, but the imposing of any such limitation was not approved of in 26 M. L. J. 208. See also 25 A. 837; 24 A. 315 and 443; 23 C. 852, 27 C. 892 and 918, 26 C. 625, 23 C. 416 and 709; 24 B. 527 and 36 C. 994. See also Notes at pp. 11 and vi of Appendix. But now sub-sec. (3) of s. 435 is omitted.

It is now laid down that clause 28 of the Letters Patent does not give the High Court jurisdiction in cases of appeal from the orders of the District Magistrate under the Criminal Code Act (Bengal) within section 435 of the Code and the High Court cannot interfere under section 439 in the case of a warrant issued under the Act. 51 C. 460.

6. Right of Chartered High Court to issue writ of certiorari sending for proceedings of Inferior Courts.—In 35 M. 72 it was contended that a Superior Court like the High Court of Madras had inherent jurisdiction to issue a writ of certiorari to quash all proceedings of a judicial nature wheresoever and by whomsoever held within the ambit of its jurisdiction and such a power is not confined to the limits of its original jurisdiction, SUNDARA IYER, J., held that the right of superintendence is confined to Court subject to its appellate jurisdiction and does not extend to all judicial proceedings held by Courts not subject to its appellate jurisdiction and that the High Court of Madras had no jurisdiction to quash on return to a writ of certiorari, the proceedings of a Divisional Officer in the mofussil deciding an appeal under the Income Tax Act while Sadasivier J. was of opinion that the power to issue the writ of certiorari to quash Judicial Proceedings passed by persons in the mofussil does belong to the Madras High Court though of course the power should not be invoked excepting very extraordinary cases, see also 29 C. W. N. 593.

7 High Court cannot revise its own judgments.—The first four lines of s. 439 show beyond all possibility of doubt that the record which is referred to in that section is the record of some Court other than the High Court. 14 C. 42 (F.B.). See Notes 15 to s. 39 and Note 3 to s. 43. The High Court has no power to review an order of one of its Judges, 7 A. 672.

(i) Passed on appeal.—When the High Court has dealt with a case as a Court of Appeal it will not afterwards deal with the same case as a Court of Revision, except possibly to cure a very manifest error. The Code nowhere allows a review of an order of the High Court in a criminal proceeding. Weir J., 573 whether appellate or revisional, 10 B. 176 (F.B.), 19 B. 732, 23 B. 59, 3 C. 63, 1925 U. B. E. (Cr. P. C.) 35 = 2 Cr. L. J. 463, 8 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 318, 5 W. R. 61, 17 W. R. 2, 4 B. 101, 10 B. 176. Even the discovery of fresh evidence will not give the power of review. Ratanlal 453.

(ii) Passed by single Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction.—There is neither appeal nor revision against the judgment of a single Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction to a Division or Full Bench. 1 P. R. 1909 = 6 P. W. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 306, 4 P. R. 1909 = 10 P. W. R. 1909 = 41 P. L. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378. See also 3 C. 63, 10 B. 176, 27 A. 92, 14 C. 42.

(iii) Passed by single Judge exercising revisional jurisdiction.—1 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 376, 4 P. R. 1909 = 10 P. W. R. 1909 = 41 P. L. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378, 8 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 318, 19 B. 732, 3 C. 63, 14 C. 42, 7 A. 672, 3 A. 543, 13 A. 61, 14 A. L. J. 61.

7-A. Exceptions.—

(i) Appeal against a single Judge's order.—See also the Letter Patent at p. iv of the Appendix. As revised under s. 439 a matter of discretion, it would require a very strong case to allow a Letter Patent appeal to succeed against the decision of a single Judge. The High Court passed in revision, 24 M. L. J. 233 = 13 M. L. T. 230 = 15 Cr. L. J. 382.

(ii) Order made summarily without notice.—High Court can set aside an order of dismissal on appeal on application made in default of appearance. 10 C. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 257, see also 23 M. L. J. 374 = 12 M. L. T. 350 = 13 Cr. L. J. 710 it was held that the High Court has no power to review an order made by it in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction even when the application had been denied and set aside. 7 M. H. C. R. 29 was authoritative. The power to rehear a person once dismissed is not inherent in a Court. See also 1 to 439, and also 7 A. 672. In 15 W. R. 33 = 9 B. L. E. 342, the High Court cancelled its order passed without notice in the Mofussil Court in the ex officio. See also 7 Bom. H. C. Rep. 27 and 13 B. 33 and 7 A. 672.

Where the High Court under s. 439 enhanced sentence without giving the accused sufficient opportunity to be heard, the High Court order was without jurisdiction and its order is void ab initio. It is therefore open to the High Court, in revision or by previous order, to quash the case on the merits and grant a new order to the accused. For when an order is passed in a criminal matter without notice to the accused, it becomes null and void and the Court has no power in the Court to review or alter the decision. 47 M. L. J. 425 = 45 M. L. J. 425.

(iii) Order made without notice.—After a summary conviction the High Court cannot leave to appeal to the District Court or make an order granting sentence in a proceeding under s. 439. The Letter Patent the High Court reviewed its own order and set aside the order granting leave to appeal. 47 C. 734. See also an unreported case reported in 3 C. 63, 3 A. 672.

(iv) Order made under s. 439.—See 7 M. 34 order passed under s. 439 in 18 C. 42 order passed under s. 439 in 3 C. 63, authoritative in revision.

(v) Order made under s. 439.—See 2 A. 672. When the order granting the revision is signed by the District Judge, the High Court has order 21 A. 672, 14 A. L. J. 61. See also 13 B. 33 = 9 B. 33 = 15 M. H. C. R. 29 = 25 Cr. L. J. 67.

8. Limits to the local jurisdiction of the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts.—

(i) 24 B. 671 was held that the District Court of Bombay has no criminal jurisdiction over the persons of the District Court, which is a criminal court of the District Court.

(ii) 24 B. 671 was held that the District Court of Bombay has no criminal jurisdiction over the persons of the District Court, which is a criminal court of the District Court. A sentence passed by the District Court of the District Court, which is a criminal court of the District Court, is a sentence passed by the District Court of the District Court, which is a criminal court of the District Court.

II.—WHEN HIGH COURT WILL EXERCISE ITS POWERS OF REVISION.

9. Power of revision is discretionary and ought not to be fettered.—In dealing with an application under s. 195, JENKINS C.J., as one of a Bench laid down the principles which should guide the use of a discretion vested in Court by law as follows:—“Not one jot or one tittle can be taken away from or added to the plain and express provisions of the Legislature by any decision of the Court, nor can this discretion vested by the section in a Court be crystallised or restricted by any series of cases, it remains free and untrammelled, to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each case. When a tribunal, it has been said, is invested by Act of Parliament or by rules with a discretion, without any indication in the Act or rules of the grounds upon which the discretion is to be exercised, it is a mistake to lay down any rules with a view to indicate the particular grooves in which the discretion should run, for if the Act or rules did not fetter the discretion of the Judge, why should the Court do so, Gardener v. Jay (29 Ch. D. 50 at p. 58). And in the same spirit we find LINDLEY, L.J., declaring:—“It appears to me wrong in principle for any Court or Judge to impose fetters on the exercise by themselves or others of powers which are left by law to their discretion in each case as it arises” Saunders v. Saunders, (1897) P. 89 at p. 93. There are, however, certain rules of procedure to which any Court exercising its discretion would pay regard, and pre-eminent among them, possibly a compendious statement of all, would be the rule that the Court will be astute to see that there should be no abuse of administration of criminal justice. No one, therefore, would be permitted to use a penal law merely to satisfy his private ends or personal spite. “That would be to misuse it, 41 C. 446. In 28 B. 533 at p. 566, the same learned Judge remarked:—“If we have been entrusted with the responsibility of a wide discretion, we should be the last to attempt to fetter that discretion, and whenever it is argued that judicial decision has deprived us of the power that the Legislature has given us, I recall the words of an eminent English judge ‘I desire to repeat’ he said ‘What I have said before, that this controlling power of the Court is a discretionary power, and it must be exercised with regard to all the circumstances of each particular case, anxious attention being given to the said circumstances, which vary greatly. For myself I say emphatically, that this discretion ought not to be crystallised, as it would become in course of time, by one Judge attempting to prescribe definite rules with a view to bind other Judges in the exercise of the discretion, which the Legislature has committed to them. This discretion like all other judicial discretions, ought as far as practicable, to be left untrammelled and free so as to be fairly exercised, according to the exigencies of each case. These weighty words appear to me to breathe the spirit, that should guide as in the exercise of our discretionary powers of revision. Thus may perhaps increase our responsibilities and add to our labours, but no one would shirk the one or grudge the other’ This decision was followed in 2 B. L. R. 23 — 10 Cr. L. J. 237; 5 N. L. R. 4 — 9 Cr. L. J. 211, 11 P. R. 1903 — 27 P. W. R. 1903 — 8 Cr. L. J. 230; 16 C. L. J. 453 — 13 Cr. L. J. 897. The revisional jurisdiction of the High Court can always be exercised, to see whether there has been any error of law, any irregularity, any abuse of, a failure to exercise judicial discretion, such as would justify interference in revision, 10 N. L. R. 177 — 16 Cr. L. J. 181.

Code, to act on findings of fact embodied in the judgment of the Lower Court. In criminal cases on the other hand, there is no such statutory restriction to the exercise of our jurisdiction,” 16 C. L. J. 453 — 13 Cr. L. J. 897, per MOOKERJI, J., matters which are not urged before the first Court of Revision may be urged in moving the High Court, 40 C. 41.

(11) High Court will not necessarily revise every order which may be illegal or irregular—Though according to the Privy Council Ruling in 25 M. 61, it must be held that a trial which is not warranted by the provisions of the Code is altogether illegal and void, and not merely irregular and within the purview of s. 537, yet it would be entirely inconsistent with the letter and spirit of this section to hold that in every case of illegal trial, the High Court is necessarily obliged to interfere without due regard to the circumstances of the particular case. The illegality of a trial is no doubt prima facie good and strong ground for the exercise of revisional jurisdiction, but it is not imperative on the Court to take such action in every case, however small and scant, may be the necessity or reason for adopting such a course, so as to interfere with the conviction in every such case, especially where no prejudice is shown to have been caused by such illegality, 3 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 73; 4 L. B. R. 315 (F B) = 9 Cr. L. J. 15, where the fact that the accused did not apply for revision was stated as a ground for not interfering. See also 29 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 699 where following 19 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 389, it was held that the High Court is not always bound to interfere under s. 439 even if the Court below is wrong in law where the accused has not been prejudiced. To justify interference it must be shown that there exists an error in law, and that the accused has been prejudiced by that error, 4 Bom. L. R. 688.

The power of revision should not be so exercised as to make one portion of the Code conflict with another, as would be the case were the High Court to permit the practice to grow up of invoking its interference in revision so as to give a right of appeal where such right is definitely excluded by other provisions of the Code, 36, A. 403.

10 There is no species of injustice which the High Court is powerless to correct.—"I would be strongly inclined to hold that no hard-and-fast limitation should be placed on the exercise of our powers of superintendence over the proceedings of inferior Courts. I would hold with WOODROFFE, J., in 12 C. W. N. 678 = 7 Cr. L. J. 499, that there is no species of injustice which this Court would be powerless to correct under the Charter where its interference is called for, 27 C. 126; 27 M. 223; 31 M. 510; 35 M. 28, 21 M. L. J. 484 = 9 M. L. T. 273 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 369 support the view that the High Court has plenary powers of interference under the Charter, where it is needed to correct injustice. See also 33 C. 63, 13 C. L. R. 275, 23 C. 709, although a narrower construction was adopted in 27 C. 892 and 6 C. L. J. 705 = 6 Cr. L. J. 490." Per SUNDARA IYER, J., in 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529. Ss. 435 and 439 give the High Court power to control the propriety as well as the legality of a finding, sentence or order of any inferior Criminal Court, and that necessarily imports power to regulate or revise the proceedings leading up to such finding, sentence or order. If, therefore, a sentence has been passed or confirmed by a Court which could not legally try, or should not have properly tried the case, the High Court has a discretion to interfere, 9 N. L. R. 81 = 14 Cr. L. J. 355. It was contended that the Legislature did under s. 435 empower the High Court only to send for a record of a criminal case with a view to satisfy itself of the correctness, legality or propriety of any order passed therein and not to interfere with such order even Court should be in a position to rectify cases of injustice or illegality when the person affected is unable to appeal 27 C. 126 dissented from 45 P. R. 1935 distinguished 42 P. R. 1885 (25 C. 233, 22 C. 131, 2 A. 398, 20 B. 843, 6 P. R. 1906 = 1 Cr. L. J. 514 followed) 33 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 20.

11 If proceedings are not bona fide or are manifestly illegal, High Court will interfere in spite of statutory prohibition.—If it is established to the satisfaction of the High Court that the proceedings are not bona fide and that in substance their continuance would mean an abuse of the statutory provisions on the subject it is not only competent to the High Court but it is its obvious duty to interfere with the proceedings of a Magistrate even at the initial stage when the Magistrate has before him a Police report sufficient to justify the commencement of proceedings under s. 110 17 C. W. N. 238 = 16 C. L. J. 457 = 16 Cr. L. J. 8. When an illegal order is passed and action taken which involves matters coming within the purview of law, justice and within the scope of authority of the Courts, such authority cannot be ousted by the mere ipse dixit of the officer that he was acting not as a judicial officer, but in his executive capacity. The High Court will interfere, 4 P. R. 1903 = 7 Cr. L. J. 202; 17 O. G. 283 = 13 Cr. L. J. 663. Proceedings which merely purport to be under some provision of law which is not open to revision, but are not really so and do not conform to the statutory requirement will be dealt with in revision, see 26 A. 144; 24 B. 527; 26 C. 183 and other cases noted under Heading V below. The High Court will revise an order of a Magistrate made without jurisdiction in spite of a provision that a conviction under the particular Act shall not be open to appeal or revision, 2 B. L. R. 20 = 10 Cr. L. J. 233. It is true that s. 15 of the Extradition Act XV of 1903 ousts the jurisdiction of the High Court to inquire into the propriety of a warrant issued under Chapter III, but when the order of the Magistrate is sought to be justified under an authority supposed to be derived from the law but is, in fact, without jurisdiction not being sanctioned by it, we cannot but assume that the Magistrate has acted in his general jurisdiction and as such his order is revisible by the Court and is liable to be set aside at the instance of the party whose liberty is affected by it 14 Cr L J 673 (C) where 7 Bom L R 453 = 2 Cr L J 439 and 21 P R. 1896 are referred to See Note 16 to s. 435

12. There can be no waiver as to defect of jurisdiction.—A plea of want of jurisdiction may be taken at any time even in the High Court on revision though not to may have consented to the jurisdiction will not cure the defect. Neither ignorance of parties nor silence on their part can vest give him. See 10 Cr L J 432 = 11 Cr L J 1. No waiver on the part of the Magistrate authority to act in a manner not prescribed by the Legislature. See also 13 M L J 330 = 3 M L T. 407 = 8 Cr L J 151, 9 N L R 81 = 14 Cr L J 335; 18 L R. 95 = 8 Cr L J 335, 9 Bom L R. 355 = 5 Cr L J. 332, 12 Cr W N 140 = 6 Cr L J 434; 9 A L J 51 = 13 Cr L J 163 and Note 21 to s. 233. But see 4 B R. 315 (F.B.) = 9 Cr L J 15, where it was held that though the trial was vitiated by misjoinder of charges not curable by s. 537 the conviction should not be set aside as the accused had not personally applied for revision as he pleaded guilty and as no injustice seemed to have resulted.

13. Consent of prisoner does not cure defective proceedings.—Procedure prescribed by law must be followed.—Criminal proceedings are bad unless they are conducted in the manner prescribed by law and if they are substantially bad in themselves the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent of the prisoner. When the irregularities are all unfavourable to the prisoner it is impossible for any Court to consider a waiver or consent as binding on him. It is the duty of Magistrate and all Criminal Courts to follow the procedure prescribed by law and there is no law which sanctions their intentional departure from that procedure and then attempting to protect themelves against the consequences of such departure by getting the accused person to say he consents to it. In the majority of prisoners not properly defended would probably assent to a very irregular trial which the Judge or Magistrate trying him choose to suggest. There would be an end to all procedure if such an assent were held to warrant material and important irregularities.—Per MACPHERSON J in 2 C. 23 at p. 30, 25 W R 57, see also 6 C. 83 and 96 and 12 W R 3 = 3 B L R. 4p Cr 20, which citing 36 L J 51 (P.C.) lays down that a prisoner on his trial can consent to nothing 4 Lah 376, see also 46 M 117

14. Powers of revision are not limited by death of accused or expiry of sentence.—The High Court is competent in revision under this section to interfere with a conviction even after the expiry of the sentence 7 A 135 or the abatement of appeal where justice to the deceased convict's family requires that the sentence should be altered.—Dr STOKES Anglo-India Codes Vol II p. 26. In many cases a man's status is altered by conviction and his future prospects in life may depend on the existence or annulment of the conviction. See 2 B 564 and Note 34. In 16 Cr L J 272 (M) the Court however refused to revise an order under s. 144 which had ceased to be in force by efflux of time

15. As a rule of practice powers of revision are limited by errors appearing on the record.—It has always been regarded as a sound rule of practice not to interfere when there is no error in law or on the face of the record 4 P J D 202 and 203 and 204. In which Gover if an order was for it at fault even if it was a Sessions Court on appeal took into consideration a decision of a Settlement Court made after the appeal judgment of the Sessions Court as to the possession of the parties to the case and reduced the sentence through the finding of the Settlement Court was contrary to the finding of the Sessions Court. See Notes 20 and 73 below

16. High Court though competent to deal with evidence in revision will not as a rule do so, except to prevent miscarriage of justice.—The High Court has jurisdiction to revise findings of facts in the case of findings of Courts of Appeal as well as of original Courts and the law imposes no limit to this jurisdiction except the decision of the Judges who have regulated the discretion by rules which in practice limit its jurisdiction. Per JARDINE J 14 B 331, 10 C 1057, 10 B. 131. It is usual in revision to interfere with a finding of fact unless it is one so uncorrected 6 Bom. L R. 1096. Code gives us no power to go into as a matter of practice held that in circumstances or where there is an error of law.—Per CHANDAMARKAR J 28 B 333 at p. 545. The rule of

may be the necessity or reason for adopting such a course, so as to interfere with the conviction in every such case, especially where no prejudice is shown to have been caused by such illegality, 5 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 73; 4 L. B. R. 315 (F.B.) = 9 Cr. L. J. 15, where the fact that the accused did not apply for revision was stated as a ground for not interfering. See also 29 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 399 where following 19 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 389, it was held that the High Court is not always bound to interfere under s. 439 even if the Court below is wrong in law where the accused has not been prejudiced. To justify interference it must be shown that there exists an error in law, and that the accused has been prejudiced by that error, 4 Bom. L. R. 685.

The power of revision should not be so exercised as to make one portion of the Code conflict with another, as would be the case were the High Court to permit the practice to grow up of invoking its interference in revision so as to give a right of appeal where such right is definitely excluded by other provisions of the Code, 36. A. 403.

10. There is no species of injustice which the High Court is powerless to correct.—“I would be strongly inclined to hold that no hard and fast limitation should be placed on the exercise of our powers of superintendence over the proceedings of inferior Courts. I would hold with WOODROFFE, J., in 12 C. W. N. 678 = 7 Cr. L. J. 499, that there is no species of injustice which this Court would be powerless to correct under the Charter where its interference is called for, 27 C. 126; 27 M. 223; 31 M. 510; 28 M. 28, 21 M. L. J. 384 = 9 M. L. T. 273 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 369 support the view that the High Court has plenary powers of interference under the Charter, where it is needed to correct injustice. See also 33 C. 68; 13 C. L. R. 275; 23 C. 709, although a narrower construction was adopted in 27 C. 892 and 6 C. L. J. 705 = 6 Cr. L. J. 490.” Per SUNDARA IYER, J., in 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529. Ss. 435 and 439 give the High Court power to control the propriety as well as the legality of a finding, sentence or order of any inferior Criminal Court, and that necessarily imports power to regulate or revise the proceedings leading up to such finding, sentence or order. If, therefore, a sentence has been passed or confirmed by a Court which could not legally try, or should not have properly tried the case, the High Court has a discretion to interfere, 9 N. L. R. 81 = 14 Cr. L. J. 385. It was contended that the Legislature did under s. 438 empower the High Court only to send for a record of a criminal case with a view to satisfy itself of the correctness, legality or propriety of any order passed therein and not to interfere with such order even though the High Court found it illegal, incorrect or improper and further that the High Court has no power to interfere with orders in respect of which no appeal would lie under this Code and that it has only such powers as are conferred on an Appellate Court under s. 423. Held, that under s. 439 very wide powers of revision were intended to be conferred on the High Court. The meaning of that section is that in any case to which s. 435 or 438 is applicable, the High Court can with reference to any particular order (whether appealable or not) exercise all or any of the powers which under s. 423 an Appellate Court could exercise if that order happened to be one open to appeal, and it was not intended by the Legislature that the High Court's powers of revision were to be limited merely to orders from which an appeal would lie. Obviously the main idea is that the High Court should be in a position to rectify cases of injustice or illegality when the person affected is unable to appeal. 27 C. 126 dissented from 45 P. R. 1885 distinguished 42 P. R. 1885 (25 C. 233, 22 C. 131, 2 A. 398, 20 B. 843, 8 P. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 514 followed) 33 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 50.

11. If proceedings are not bona fide or are manifestly illegal, High Court will interfere in spite of statutory prohibition.—If it is established to the satisfaction of the High Court that the proceedings are not bona fide and that in substance their continuance would mean an abuse of the statutory provisions on the subject, it is not only competent to the High Court, but it is its obvious duty to interfere with the proceedings of a Magistrate even at the initial stage when the Magistrate has before him a Police report sufficient to justify the commencement of proceedings under s. 110, 17 C. The High Court will interfere, 4 P. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 202; 47 O. C. 283 = 15 Cr. L. J. 663. Proceedings which merely purport to be under some provision of law which is not open to revision, but are not really so and do not conform to the statutory requirement will be dealt with in revision, see 26 A. 144; 24 B. 527; 26 C. 183 and other cases noted under Heading V below. The High Court will revise an order of a Magistrate made without jurisdiction in spite of a provision that a conviction under the particular Act shall not be open to appeal or revision, 26 L. R. 20 = 10 Cr. L. J. 233. ‘It is true that s. 15 of the Extradition Act XV of 1903 ousts the jurisdiction of the High Court to inquire into the propriety of a warrant issued under Chapter III, but when the order of the Magistrate is sought to be justified under an authority supposed to be derived from the law but is, in fact, without jurisdiction, not being sanctioned by it, we cannot but assume that the Magistrate has acted in his general

12. There can be no waiver as to defect of jurisdiction.—A plea of want of jurisdiction may be taken at any time, even in the High Court on revision, though not taken in the Courts below, and the fact the accused may have consented to the jurisdiction will not cure the defect, 16 W. R. 69 (79), 23 W. R. 59; 28 B. 50 at p. 53. Neither ignorance of parties nor silence on their part can vest a Magistrate with powers which the law does not give him. See 10 Cr. L. J. 452 = 11 Cr. L. J. 1. No waiver on the part of the petitioners could confer on the Magistrate authority to act in a manner not prescribed by the Legislature. See also 18 M. L. J. 330 = 3 M. L. T. 407 = 8 Cr. L. 13. Consent of prisoner does not cure defective proceedings.—Procedure prescribed by law must be followed.—Criminal proceedings are bad unless they are conducted in the manner prescribed by law, and if they are substantially bad in themselves the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent of the prisoner. When the irregularities are all unfavourable to the prisoner, it is impossible for any Court to consider a waiver or consent as binding on him. It is the duty of Magistrate and all Criminal Courts to follow the procedure prescribed by law, and there is no law which sanctions their intentional departure from that procedure, and then attempting to protect themselves against the consequences of such 376, see also 46 M. 117.

14. Powers of revision are not limited by death of accused or expiry of sentence.—The High Court is competent in revision, under this section to interfere with a conviction even after the expiry of the sentence 7 A. 133 or the abatement of appeal where justice to the deceased convict's family requires that the sentence should be altered.—DR. STOKES, Anglo-Indian Codes Vol II p. 26. In many cases a man's status is altered by conviction, and his future prospects in life may depend on the existence or annulment of the conviction. See 2 B. 565 and Note 34. In 16 Cr. L. J. 272 (M) the Court however refused to revise an order under s. 144 which had ceased to be in force by efflux of time.

15. As a rule of practice powers of revision are limited by errors appearing on the record.—It has always been regarded as a sound rule of practice not to interfere when there is no error in law or on the face of the record, 4 B. L. R. 686; 22 C. 998, 6 B. L. R. 121 = 13 Cr. L. J. 771 and not to interfere in cases of acquittal in a Sessions Court on appeal took into consideration a decision of a Settlement Court made after the appeal judgment of the Sessions Court as to the possession of the parties to the case and reduced the sentence through the finding of the Settlement Court was contrary to the finding of the Sessions Court. See Notes 20 and 73 below.

16. High Court though competent to prevent miscarriage of justice.—The findings of Courts of Appeal as well except the decision of the Judges who have regulated the discretion by rules which in practice limit its jurisdiction. Per JARDINE, J., 14 B. 331; 10 C. 1057; 10 B. 131. It is unusual in revision to interfere with a finding of fact, unless it is one so manifestly erroneous, that a miscarriage of justice would result from its being uncorrected, 6 Bom. L. R. 1096. "It is not correct to say that the law as laid down in the Criminal Procedure Code gives us no power to go into evidence in revision. The High Court has this power, but this Court has, as a matter of practice, held, that it will not go into evidence as a rule, but will interfere only under special circumstances or where there is an error of law"—Per CHANDAVARKAR, J., 28 B. 533 at p. 545. The rule of practice is to refuse to disturb a conviction when there is legal evidence, oral or documentary, to sustain it.—Per ASTON, J., ibid. In 12 Bom. L. R. 21 = 11 Cr. L. J. 180, it is stated by CHANDALARAR, J., that it has been the settled practice of the Bombay High Court to refuse to interfere in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction in regard to findings of fact, except on very exceptionable grounds such as a mis-statement of evidence by the Lower Court, or the misconstruction of documents or placing by that Court of the onus of proof on the accused contrary to the law of evidence and, 8 B. 197, Ratanlal 244, 14 B. 331 are referred to. That in exceptional circumstances, the High Court may and should interfere on questions of fact is obvious, such as where there has been a conviction of a clearly innocent man, and but for the powers given to the High Court to interfere as a Court of Revision, the only remedy would be by petition to the Government to exercise its powers of prerogative.—Per ASTON, J., in 8 Bom. L. R. 851 = 4 Cr. L. J. 446, 20 A. L. J. 276

'In revision it is open to the High Court to consider whether there has been any misappreciation of evidence, and if the Court has power to do so and if a convicted person claims to be heard to show that the Lower Courts have misappreciated the evidence in the case and that he has been unjustly convicted, it is not in my opinion, open to a Judge to say that it is within his discretion to permit or refuse him to do so or not, no doubt the sections only say that the High Court 'may' interfere in revision, but I think the word 'may' is the only word that could be used in the sections.' Per SANKARAN NAIK, J., in 15 Cr. L. J. 283 (M.), but the other Judges did not concur with this view

(i) Revisional jurisdictions not confined to errors of law.—No doubt the High Court does ordinarily, when acting in revision take the facts as found by the Magistrate but, there is nothing in the Code to limit the Courts' power of interference to cases where the Magistrate has ignored or contravened an express provision of law. The High Court has power to revise an order whenever it is manifestly wrong, 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529. The words of this section are very general and empower the High Court to send for the record of the case not only when it wishes to satisfy itself about the correctness of any finding, sentence or order, but as to the regularity of any proceedings in Subordinate Courts, 20 B. 543 = 11 p. 543; 9 N. L. R. 81 = 14 Cr. L. J. 335. Under this section every finding, sentence or order is liable to review not only on the ground of illegality or irregularity, but also on the ground of incorrectness, i.e., on the ground that it was wrong on merits. An order of discharge is no exception to this rule, 15 C. 608; 31 M. 133. The High Court will interfere when the Lower Courts have erred in their inferences from facts as found and have found applicants guilty of offences which are not constituted by such facts, 8 B. L. R. 199 = 15 Cr. L. J. 230

(ii) Will not interfere when accused has pleaded guilty.—In a summary trial for an offence under the Cantonment Code, the Magistrate recorded in his order. Finally the accused admits his error in not having complied with the notice and throws himself on the mercy of this Court. Held, that this was equivalent to a plea of guilty and that the accused could not be heard in revision, except as to the extent or legality of the sentence, 1907 A. W. N. 204 = 6 Cr. L. J. 153, 4 L. B. R. 313 (F.B.) = 9 Cr. L. J. 15, but see 12 C. W. N. 140 = 4 Cr. L. J. 834

(iii) High Court may go into evidence even in non-appealable cases.—In cases in which the law allows no appeal, the High Court, as a Court of Revision, does not, except on the ground of an error of law or where the question is one of evidence except on exceptional grounds, exercise the powers of an Appellate Court. But where such exceptional grounds exist, the Court will exercise its discretion under this section and reverse the conviction and sentence.—Per CHANDALARAR, J., in 9 Bom. L. R. 706 = 6 Cr. L. J. 70. There is nothing in the statute law, which precludes the High Court from interfering in the exercise of its revisional powers with convictions and sentences whether the ground of that interference be what is commonly called a question of fact or whether it to be a question of law. The curious curio drawing a distinction between grounds of the former and grounds of the latter sort rests rather upon a principle of convenience than of law. The true rule is that the High Court will not interfere in revision unless it is satisfied that it is necessary to do so to prevent an otherwise irreparable injustice.—Per ASTON, J., ibid., see also 8 P. R. 1909 = 17 P. W. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314, 15 C. W. N. 835 = 12 Cr. L. J. 352.

17. When High Courts will not disturb findings of fact—

(i) Careful and deliberate weighing of evidence will not be set aside.—Where a Sessions Judge, after a careful and deliberate weighing of the evidence on the record, comes to a conclusion unfavourable to the accused, the High Court will not interfere, however much it might hold a contrary opinion as to the value of the evidence, 20 W. R. 61 = 12 B. L. R. 249. Where a Magistrate trying an accused person has dealt at considerable length with the evidence on the record and discharged the accused recording what appear to be sound reason for the conclusion arrived at by him, the High Court will not interfere with such order in revision on the ground that the guilt of the accused is established by the evidence already recorded, 8 P. R. 1900; 2 P. R. 1901, 8 P. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314; 11 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 217. Unless new and cogent evidence can be produced the High Court should not set aside the order of dismissal and direct further inquiry though there may be some irregularities, 13 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 110; 6 A. 434; 8 C. 693; 24 A. 346. The High Court acting in revision under this section is bound to accept the finding of the Lower Court unless there is any error of law or procedure vitiating that finding or unless there are any special circumstances apparent on the record to show that in arriving at its conclusion of fact, the Lower Court has misapprehended the evidence, 12 Bom. L. R. 21; 20 P. W. R. 1914 = 123 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 524.

(ii) That High Court would or might come to different conclusion on the facts is no ground—The High Court, as a Court of Revision, does possess the power of upsetting a finding of fact by the Lower Court on the ground of misappreciation of evidence. Such power, however, will not be exercised except for some very extraordinary reason. The circumstance that the Court itself might or would have come to a different conclusion is not such a reason, Ratanlal 177; 30 P. W. R. 1903.

(iii) The mere fact that Appellate Court takes a different view of the facts is no ground—A and B were convicted by a first class Magistrate who awarded them appealable sentences. B appealed to the Sessions Judge, who, holding that the evidence was not sufficient to establish his guilt, reversed the conviction and sentence. A did not appeal, but after B's release asked the Sessions Judge to refer his case to the High Court on the ground that the reasons for releasing B applied to his case also. Held that the mere fact that the Sessions Judge had taken a different view of the evidence from that which the Magistrate took, did not justify the High Court to interfere in revision, Ratanlal 977; 2 Bom. L. R. 334. When there is difference between the trying Magistrate and the Sessions Judge as to the credibility of certain witnesses the High Court will not interfere, as there is no point of law involved. 18 W. R. 7, also 18 W. R. 39, 2 Bom. L. R. 334.

18 Cases where High Courts have gone into facts—(i) Where by wrongly placing onus, injustice has resulted—The High Court will interfere in revision where a Court has taken a wrong view of the facts through an error in law, e.g. where it places the burden of proof on the accused contrary to the principles illustrated in s. 101 of the Indian Evidence Act, Ratanlal 794. See 66 P. L. R. 1916.

(ii) Where Courts have not properly applied the proper principles in dealing with accomplice evidence—Where the Lower Courts have not considered the evidence from the point of view that the witnesses were accomplices and hearsay evidence was improperly admitted on important points, the High Court will go into the facts and reverse the conviction based on them, 2 C. W. N. 672. The High Court will not interfere on the mere ground that the rule of practice that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars, has not been adhered to by the convicting Court, unless there are exceptional circumstances calling for the exercise of their jurisdiction in the interests of justice, 11 Bom. L. R. 558 = 10 Cr. L. J. 433. In 3 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 35, concurrent findings of fact were set aside by the High Court in revision as the Lower Courts had failed to scrutinize carefully the proof or corroboration of accomplice evidence.

(iii) Where judgment is manifestly defective and insufficient to maintain order made—Where a judgment is manifestly defective, and the findings contained therein are insufficient to sustain a conviction, the High Court on revision will examine the evidence in order to see whether the conviction may not be supported, 2 C. I. J. 418 (see Note below). If the Appellate Court =

Appellate Court though informal has appreciated the points which the prosecution had to establish and expressed opinion thereon 20 C. 333, but if it has failed to do so the High Court will interfere 13 C. W. N. 192 and 167; 14 C. W. N. 23.

(iv) Where evidence is very doubtful or discrepant or the Courts have omitted to consider material evidence—In 20 P. R. 1097 = 6 Cr. L. J. 263 and 13 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 87 it was held that where the evidence against an accused person is weak, suspicious and inconclusive the High Court on revision side can examine and discuss the evidence on record, upset the concurrent findings of fact by both the Lower Courts and set aside the conviction. See also 13 C. W. N. 267 where the High Court interfered to prevent a miscarriage of justice arising from the alteration of date in the charge. A conviction based on evidence having a serious discrepancy therein, of which no notice had been taken by both the Lower Courts was set aside, 8 P. W. R. 1912 = 113 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 483. In 23 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 712, a conviction was set aside as the case seemed ab initio improbable and on account of enmity between the parties there was a strong element of doubt and see also 22 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 333; 22 P. L. R. 1912 = 33 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 774; 23 P. W. R. 1914 = 163 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 591; 18 P. W. R. 1914 = 113 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 521; 21 P. L. R.

1914 = 12 P. W. R. 1914; 7 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 202; 23 P. W. R. 1915. In 12 P. W. R. 1913 = 66 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 143, a concurrent finding of facts was set aside as the evidence was insufficient. See also 5 P. W. R. 1913 = 152 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 320; 17 G. W. N. 294 = 14 Cr. L. J. 120; 43 P. W. R. 1913. An omission by an Appellate Court to consider certain earlier depositions of the prosecution witnesses containing statements different from or contradictory of statements made subsequently in depositions recorded at the trial, was held to amount to an error in law sufficient to warrant the setting aside of an Appellate Court's judgment, Weir II, 573. But the mere application of a party to examine the evidence in any case would not be sufficient ground for going into facts in revision. There must appear on the face of the judgment or order complained of or of the record, some ground to induce the High Court to think that the evidence ought to be examined in order to see that there has been no failure of justice. But no hard and fast rule can be laid down, each case will have to be dealt with according to its own circumstances. Where the judgment showed that the Magistrate was influenced by the evidence in a cross-case, the High Court in revision went into the evidence and acquitted the accused. The interference of the High Court in revision is not limited to matters of law, but it is fully competent to the High Court to enter into matters of fact, if it thinks fit. On the other hand, it is not bound to go into evidence, if it does not think fit, 22 G. 993 quoted with approval by ASTON, J., in 23 B. 533 at p. 549. In 25 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 423, the Chief Court discussed the evidence and reversed the concurrent findings of fact and acquitted the accused as the evidence was merely circumstantial and not conclusive. In 15 Cr. L. J. 721 (Oudh) an order under s. 120 was set aside, as the matter had been before only one Court below.

(v) Wrong construction of document—The Chief Court of Punjab in 12 P. R. 1905 laid down that in revision, it would not ordinarily go behind the findings of the Lower Courts, but where the findings upon the facts are inadequate, and the construction of a document on which the question of guilt or innocence largely depends, erroneous, it has power to go fully into the facts. The Ruling in 12 W. R. 47 proceeded, on a rather narrow view of the extent of the powers in revision. See also 1907 P. W. R. 20 = 6 Cr. L. J. 263; 13 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 97. The High Court can also interfere in revision, where there appear mis-reading of the documentary evidence and fundamental errors in principle, which vitiate the conduct and disposal of the case, 29 B. 479.

(vi) Where Courts have been misled by irrelevant matter—The power to go into the evidence is not limited, however, to a consideration of whether there was evidence to justify the finding of the Lower Court. If

(vii) When investigation has been defective—A defective investigation was held to constitute such material error, as would justify the High Court in setting aside a conviction, Weir II, 570; 12 B. 377.

(viii) Wrong exclusion of question to a witness—A party asking for redress at the hands of an Appellate or Revisional Court on the ground that the Court below has wrongly excluded a question which the party wished to put to a witness, must state the form and substance of the question proposed to be put, to enable the Appellate or Revisional Court, as the case may be, to determine whether the particular question in each case was so framed as to make it admissible under the Evidence Act, 9 Bom. L. R. 1335 = 7 Cr. L. J. 24. See also 9 Bom. L. R. 706 = 6 Cr. L. J. 70.

19. High Court will interfere where Lower Court has abused or misused its discretionary powers.—

(1) This section does not debar the High Court from interfering, where in cases which require the exercise of discretion it appears upon the face of the proceedings that the Magistrate has exercised no discretion at all, or has exercised his discretion in a manner wholly unreasonable, 2 C. 110, e.g., where a Magistrate declines to act on a complaint, 13 C. W. N. 103 or rejects sureties on private information without notice to them, 14 C. W. N. 138 or rejects them on unreasonable grounds, 35 C. 400; 14 C. W. N. 99; 37 C. 91. Thus, where an Appellate Court dismisses an appeal, and its order betrays little or no indication that it has examined the evidence or brought an independent judgment to bear on the main points, it becomes necessary to examine the case in greater detail than would ordinarily be justified, 16 P. W. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 137; 13 C. W. N. 192 and 14 C. W. N. 23. See also 25 M. 61; 24 A. 254 and 2 P. R. 1903. Although ordinarily the High Court does not go into evidence when exercising its power of revision yet it will do so when necessary in any particular case, for instance, to ascertain whether a re-hearing should be directed, 4 C. L. J. 232. In 10 C. W. N. 448 = 3 Cr. L. J. 385, an application was made to the High Court to set aside an order of the Sessions Judge summarily dismissing an appeal. The High Court went into the evidence and finding the evidence insufficient to sustain a conviction, instead of remanding the case for a re-hearing of the appeal on the merits, set aside the conviction and sentence and acquitted and discharged the accused. Where, however, the Legislature by an express enactment [s. 645 of the Calcutta Municipal Act III of 1899 (B.C.)] has vested a discretion in the General Committee the High Court under this section has no power to set aside or question acts done in the exercise of that discretion, if those acts have otherwise been done in accordance with the provisions of law, 34 C. 30.

(ii) Withholding witness from examination—Where a Sessions Judge did not allow a Police Inspector to be examined for the defence, and the accused was thereby prejudiced, and where the evidence taken by a Magistrate was admitted without the prisoner having an opportunity of examining an admittedly important witness, the High Court quashed the conviction and ordered a new trial, 34 W. R. 18.

20. High Court will interfere when Lower Court refers to matters not on record—An Appellate Court is in error if it relies upon document and evidence not forming part of the proceedings before the Magistrate, 6 Cr. L. J. 251 = 6 Cr. L. J. 357 referred to, but the High Court will not set aside the order if it is satisfied on a consideration of the case that the order is right, 8 M. L. T. 81 = 11 Cr. L. J. 221. Where a Magistrate based his decision not upon the evidence recorded, but upon unrecorded evidence taken verbally subsequently on the spot, the High Court quashed the conviction as it was impossible for the latter evidence to be seen in appeal, 24 W. R. 14, also 6 C. 184; 38 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 110; 14 C. W. N. 99. See Note 15

III.—PRELIMINARY CONDITIONS FOR EXERCISE OF REVISIONAL POWERS.

21. High Court will not interfere in revision, unless other legal remedies are exhausted.—The High Court, in the exercise of its powers of extraordinary jurisdiction cannot, in criminal matters, interfere, unless all other remedies provided by law have been previously exhausted. Therefore, where parties who had been convicted of not by a Magistrate, and who having a right of appeal to the Sessions Court instead of doing so, move the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Act, the Court would not interfere until that remedy had been resorted to, 3 C. 573; 2 A. 276, unless some illegality is shown in the proceedings of the convicting Court, 2 Bom. L. R. 334. Thus, where a Sub-Divisional Magistrate passed an order for taking security to keep the peace, the High Court declined to consider the merits of an application when the applicant had not applied to the District Magistrate under s. 125 for cancellation of the bond. Where the law provides a direct remedy, the High Court will not interfere in revision till such remedy has been availed of, 1905 A. W. N. 143. 2 Cr. L. J. 335; Ratanlal 826 and 977; 35 B. 233. See also 15 P. W. R. 1916 = 15 Cr. L. J. 279. 43 A. 497.

22. Generally no revision where appeal lies.—Sub-sec. (5) embodies the principle that the High Court, as a Court of Revision, will not interfere in the case of persons who could have appealed to the proper Court, but who have not done so, 3 C. 573; 1 C. L. R. 352; 2 A. 276; 1904 P. L. R. 1; 2 P. W. R. 1912; 35 B. 532. No doubt the High Court can interfere of its own motion as in cases where a person affected is debarred from moving it under s. 439 (5), but when the Court has not acted of its own motion in calling for the proceedings under s. 435, but at the instance of the applicant it would be a pure quibble to say that in spite of the provisions of s. 439 (5) the Court could do what the applicant wants of its own motion. This would be a mere evasion of the statute which the Court cannot permit 8 S. L. R. 329 = 16 Cr. L. J. 232. In 5 L. B. R. 129 = 11 Cr. L. J. 152, it was held the High Court will not in revision set aside the conviction of a person who has been released under s. 562 as it is open to such person to prefer an appeal under s. 480 against the conviction. If others, who were co-accused were acquitted on appeal, the proper course for those who have not appealed, would be to move the Local Government for the exercise of the prerogative of mercy under s. 401. Anyhow, no Appellate Court other than the High Court, can on the appeal of one prisoner, alter the sentence of another prisoner in the same case, who has not appealed. The High Court alone, may, acting on revision, set aside such a sentence Wele II, 570; 19 W. R. 57. The High Court has this power, subject to s. 431, even where the accused is dead, 2 B. 564. The rule in 3 C. 573 is applied even to cases of acquittal by a Subordinate Magistrate. If the Local Government does not appeal under s. 417, or the District Magistrate does not move the Local Government to appeal, the High Court will not as a general rule entertain a reference direct from the District Magistrate under s. 438 and interfere under this section, 1902 A. W. N. 89; 33 M. 1025. See contra 1904 L. B. R. 299, where it was held by the Chief Court of Lower Burma, that sub-sec. (5) of this section is no bar to dealing in revision with a case reported under s. 433 by the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate of his own motion and not on the application of the accused, who could have appealed but did not do so. In Allahabad, it seems to be the practice for the High Court to act as a Court of Revision on an official communication from Government regarding a judicial matter, 1937 A. W. N. 144; 2 A. 522. Order dismissing a case for want of jurisdiction is open to revision as the order does not amount to one of acquittal against which an appeal could lie under s. 417, 9 A. L. J. 51 = 13 Cr. L. J. 169; 44 M. L. J. 366

23. Usually High Court will not interfere where there exists Court of concurrent revisional jurisdiction.—The High Court will not entertain an application for revision in cases where the District Court or Magistrate has concurrent revisional jurisdiction with the High Court, save on some special ground shown, unless a previous application shall have been made to the Lower Court, but in cases in which concurrent jurisdiction, is not possessed by the Lower Courts, no such general rule exists, 14 C. 837; 1930 A. W. N. 161; 1939 A. W. N. 132; 1937 A. W. N. 105, 14 B. 331. It is not the practice of the High Court to entertain an application for revision on the criminal side, where there exists a Lower Court having concurrent revisional jurisdiction, unless a similar application has first been presented to the Lower Court and has been rejected. 1904 A. W. N. 232; 1937 A. W. N. 105; Ratanlal 499; 30 A. 116; 1905 A. W. N. 279; 1890 A. W. N. 164; 23 A. 263; 1904 A. W. N. 233. The High Court will interfere only as a Court of last resort, 17 C. P. L. R. 107 = 1 Cr. L. J. 764. This principle has been extended to cases where the Judge can refer the case to the High Court, but cannot pass a final order himself, 36 C. 643. But in 16 Cr. L. J. 794 (W.), it was held that the jurisdiction conferred on the High Court is wide and ought not to be fettered by any hard and fast rule and all that is laid down by 36 C. 643 and 30 A. 116 is that the High Court will not ordinarily interfere except on special grounds 43 C. 534, 17 A. L. J. 800.

23-A. High Court will not interfere when the applicant is in contempt.—An accused person against whom a proclamation has been issued until he has come in and surrendered, must be regarded as in contempt, and in 2 N. W. P. 441 (F.B.) the High Court refused to entertain an application from an absconding accused until they were informed that he had surrendered himself.

24 Delay in applying to High Court in revision.—Though the objection taken in an application for revision be valid yet if it be made with very great delay, e.g., nine months after the order of the Lower Court, the High Court will not interfere, 8 A. 514. If there is long delay in applying for revision unexplained by the applicant the High Court will exercise its discretion against interference in revision 27 A. 463; 1903 A. W. N. 63, 18 A. 203; 1907 A. W. N. 204 = 6 Cr. L. J. 153; 19 W. R. 39; 6 A. 434; 31 P. R. 1890; 1156 A. W. N. 83. By rules of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sindh, revision applications are not admitted unless presented within sixty days and the rule indicates that the High Court will not interfere in the case of a belated application, 3 B. L. R. 265 = 13 Cr. L. J. 531. In Bombay a Criminal Revision petition must be filed within sixty days, exclusive of the time taken for obtaining copies of judgment. In 8 B. L. R. 21 = 15 Cr. L. J. 602 refused to interfere with an order under s. 195 as no appeal had been preferred and the application was made at a late stage of the proceedings. See Bom. H. C. Rules, Appellate side, Ch. IV, R. 17 (2), (3).

25. Application by Government for revision—Delay.—It is not an inflexible rule that where either the Government on the one side or an accused on the other has a right of appeal but now (see contra sub-sec. 5) and does not exercise it, the powers of the High Court under this section cannot be exercised but in such cases, these powers should be sparingly used and, save in very exceptional circumstances, not at all in reference to questions of fact. Where an application was made by the Local Government for revision of an order of acquittal nearly ten months after a Sessions' trial and upwards of twelve months after the commission of the alleged crime, and where there was upon the face of the Judge's judgment, no error in law, and no appeal had been preferred upon a question of fact, held that under such circumstances the Court did not feel called upon to enter into the case at large, upon the merits, under a petition of revision 6 A. 534. See the remarks of STRAIGHT, J.

IV.—HOW POWERS OF HIGH COURT INVOKED—PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

26. Manner in which exercise of revisional powers is invoked immaterial.—The Court should act wherever it is desirable without regard to the way in which the information reached it, 4 S. L. R. 86 = 11 Cr. L. J. 593.

High Court may exercise its powers of revision upon information in whatever way received e.g.—Though the section gives the High Court power to call for cases not only judicial information but also to deal with a case "which otherwise comes to its knowledge," yet in most circumstances it is a right practice that Judges should be moved in open Court, Ratanlal 577; 2 B. 563; 16 B. 530 at p. 532. See also Note 4 to s. 493 and Note 81. See Resolution in the Fuller Case, Government of India Gazette 1887, p. 311.

(i) Petition of complainant.—Upon the petition of a private person occupying the position of a complainant, 2 M. 33, 1 A. 139; 24 W. R. 60; 2 A. 443; 24 A. 346; 2 B. L. R. 23 = 10 Cr. L. J. 237.

(ii) High Court may act suo motu.—The High Court has power suo motu to quash a conviction under s. 562 even though the convicts have not moved the High Court, 7 P. W. R. 1912 = 67. P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 476. The High Court may and frequently does exercise its power of revision, ex mero motu, 2 B. 564.

(iii) Revisional powers may be put in force on credible information—The powers conferred by this section are at all times to be exercised and they may be put in force not merely on matters coming before the Judge in Court, but also on matters coming to his knowledge on reliable information, Wells II, 533. The information upon which any of the authorities specified in this section might act may be of any character. But the proper course for the Government or a private party is to proceed by petition in open Court. Publicity is thus secured and a fuller hearing of the reason which move the Government in the interests of public order, or a private party in this own, 16 B. 580 at p. 582; 2 M. 38.

(iv) High Court may act on an official communication from Government to the Registrar—See 1887 A. W. N. 144; 2 A. 822.

(v) High Court's revisional powers not affected by want of jurisdiction of the referring authority—When a Sessions Judge, on appeal makes an order, and subsequently on discovering that the order was erroneous, reports the matter to the High Court, the reference is properly before the High Court, no matter whether the Sessions Judge had power to hear the appeal or not, 9 C. W. N. 549 = 2 Cr. L. J. 259. The fact that the reference is improper need not necessarily prevent the High Court from exercising its powers of revision under s. 439, Ratanlal 852; 14 W. R. 25. In 14 A. L. J. 156 the High Court set aside an order alleged to be under s. 145 on a reference by the Sessions Judge though they were of opinion that the Sessions Judge should not have called for the records under s. 435.

(vi) In case of inadequate sentence, District Magistrate may inform the High Court direct—See Note 81. In 1 B. L. R. 40 = 8 Cr. L. J. 161, the High Court refused to entertain a reference from the District Magistrate under s. 439 or a revision application by the Public Prosecutor under instructions from the District Magistrate which had for its object the enhancement of a sentence reduced by the Sessions Judge.

27. Does the issue of a rule open up the whole case?—Ordinarily the High Court will not hear the applicant on a point outside the rule, 6 C. W. N. 593; 33 C. 1287, 35 C. 133; nor the opposite party. In 31 C. 710, a rule had been granted at the instance of the accused to show cause why an order for a re-trial should not be set aside. Then the Crown for the first time came forward with the objection that there had been a misjoinder of charges at the first trial and therefore the conviction should be set aside and a re-trial ordered. Held, the objection for the Crown could not prevail. But the Court is not necessarily confined to the four corners of the rule either as to the points which it will consider or the form of its final order, 23 C. 347; 2 C. W. N. 81. If one good point of law is made out, records may be called for and the petitioner is entitled to argue at the hearing such other points of law and procedure as may be raised by the petition, 7 B. 126. A party may raise at the hearing a new point of law, though not mentioned in the rule, if the Judges granting the rule have directed that it will be considered at the hearing, 11 C. W. N. 567 = 5 Cr. L. J. 278.

28. The form in which rule is issued does not fetter discretion of Bench hearing it—Although rules to show cause are frequently granted on particular grounds the form of any rule granted would ordinarily be such as to leave the action which the Court should take in case the conviction is set aside to the discretion of the Court which hears the rule. Where a rule was granted to show cause why the conviction should not be set aside and the case sent back for re-trial and it came on for hearing before a Bench other than that which had granted it, held, that the terms of the rule did not prevent the Bench hearing it, from discharging the accused, 23 C. 347, 2 C. W. N. 81; 27 C. 820.

29. Proper functionary entitled to show cause—If a rule is granted against the order of a Sessions Judge, he is the proper person to show cause, 7 C. W. N. 80. Where a Magistrate wishes to show cause, he should instruct the Public Prosecutor, but should not address the Registrar of the High Court by letter, 4 C. 20 = 3 C. L. R. 93. In showing cause it is not open to the trying Magistrate to submit observations with a view to supplement or add to his judgment. He may, however, submit his remarks in answer to the grounds urged by the petitioner for revision, 7 C. W. N. 839. Where a rule is issued upon the Magistrate to show cause and the order sought to be set aside is one, for instance under s. 107, that is only intended to secure the peace of the district by binding down the petitioner, the Magistrate is the only person entitled to be heard. Any other party interested in the result of the order cannot appear, 25 C. 798. The same principle was observed where an application was made to revoke sanction granted, 31 C. 811. A Munsiff must show cause by counsel and not like a District Magistrate, 6 C. L. J. 713.

30. Notice must go to accused—See sub-sec. (2) and Notes 83. A High Court may by virtue of s. 427 order the arrest of the accused without previous notice to him under sub-sec. (2) as a warrant of arrest is not an order to the prejudice of the accused within the meaning of that sub-section, 16 Cr. L. J. 870.

31. It is optional with Court to hear parties or pleaders.—See s. 440 and Notes thereto

32. Can order made on default of appearance be restored?—A rule which had been discharged for the non appearance of the vakil for the petitioner, can be restored at any time before the order for the discharge had been drawn up, signed and sealed, 7 C. W. N. 7. An order dismissing an application for default of appearance is not a judgment and such an order may be set aside and the application may be heard and disposed of on the merits, 10 C. L. J. 80 = 10 Cr. L. J. 287. See also Note 2 to s. 439 and Note 11 to s. 369, but see Notes 7 and 7 A 32-A. After dismissal of petition, another petition on same matter cannot be entertained.—The decision in 23 M. L. J. 371 = 12 M. L. T. 350 = 13 Cr. L. J. 710 shows that the High Court has no power to restore a petition once dismissed for default. It is argued that that decision does not preclude the filing of a fresh petition for the same relief. Although the principle of res judicata is not applicable to criminal cases yet on grounds of justice and equity, Courts should discourage the agitation of the same matter once again before another Judge. If the dismissed petition cannot be restored, there is stronger ground for holding that a new petition will not lie. 1915 M. W. N. 786 = 16 Cr. L. J. 697 = 44 M. L. J. 27.

33. Abatement of revision application.—An application for revision must, by analogy to s. 431, abate on the death of the applicant, 6 P. R. 1893. But as s. 431 has been subsequently amended by the insertion of the words "except an appeal from a sentence of fine" a revision application against a sentence of fine does not abate and the principle applies to a case in which a compensation has been awarded under s. 250, 24 P. R. 1908 = 9 Cr. L. J. 103, 2 B. 564. See 16 Cr. L. J. 713 (M.) where it was held, that there can be no abatement of a criminal case on the death of the complainant.

Y.—POWERS OF HIGH COURT TO DEAL WITH PROCEEDINGS NOT EXPRESSLY CRIMINAL.

(34), (35), (36), (37), (38).—It should be noted that by the omission of sub-sec. (3) from s. 435 orders under ss. 143, 144 and proceedings under Chapter XII and s. 176 have now become proceedings liable to be revised under s. 439 and therefore the High Court can call for record of such proceedings under powers conferred by s. 439

It should also be noted that orders under s. 176, see, inquest proceedings are now liable to be revised. It is needless to refer to the various cases that have become now obsolete in view of the omission of sub-sec. (3) of s. 435

39. Orders under the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897.—See Notes 1—6 to s. 16 of the Act in Appendix IV

40. Orders for security or forfeiture under the Press Act, 1910.—An order under s. 8 of the Press Act I of 1910 for the deposit or security by the publisher of a newspaper is not revisable by the High Court, 17 C. W. N. 1245. Nor can the High Court question the legality of a forfeiture under s. 22 of that Act, 18 C. W. N. 1 = 14 Cr. L. J. 497.

41. Orders under the Extradition Act.—The High Court has no power to interfere in respect of a warrant issued by a Political Agent of a Native State under s. 7 of Act XV of 1903 in respect of an offence included in the first schedule, 36 P. W. R. 1908 = 3 P. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 3, 43 C. 793. If an order purporting to be passed under this Act by a Magistrate is illegal, the High Court will interfere, 14 Cr. L. J. 673 (C.)

41-A. Orders under s. 161 (2), Bombay District Municipal Act.—High Court has power to revise such an order 21 Bom. L. R. 755.

41-B. Power to Interfere with order passed under para. 1, s. 2 of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859.—The High Court has power, under ss. 435 and 439 of the Code to revise an order passed by a Magistrate directing either return of the advance or specific performance of the contract under para. 1 of s. 2 of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act, 43 B. 607.

41-C. Demolition order passed by a Municipal Magistrate appointed under s. 531 of the Calcutta Municipal Act is subject to revision.—Wherein it is further held, that the Municipal Magistrate appointed under section 531 of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923 is a Court of inferior criminal jurisdiction within section 6 of the Code and orders of demolition passed by such Magistrate are subject to the revision by the High Court under sections 435 and 439 of the Code, 29 C. W. N. 898

41-D Order by a District Magistrate to remove obstruction from a Municipal road under Bengal Municipal Act, ss 176, 178 and 202.—A proceeding under s. 202 of the Bengal Municipal Act is a judicial proceeding and the High Court has power to revise an order made thereunder, 52 C. 670.

VI.—GENERAL POWERS OF HIGH COURT IN REVISION.

42 High Court competent to interfere at any stage of case even without the record.—The High Court has jurisdiction to take cognizance of and revise the proceedings of a Magistrate while they are in an interlocutory state of pending investigation, and may suspend such proceedings without having the record before it, it may also in such a case order bail to be taken from the person accused. If the Court were altogether unable to take such a step without having the record before it, the non-existence or non-production of a record could really effect a nullification of the High Court's powers of revision in some cases which by their nature would be cases in which it was most necessary that this power should be exercised, but the High Court ought not, except in extreme cases, to interfere with a Magistrate until it has the record before it, 20 W. R. 23 = 11 B. L. R. Ap 8. A Court of Revision should be most reluctant to interfere in a pending case, but such interference is justified and necessary in order to prevent a clear abuse of the right of resort to a Criminal Court. Whereupon the admitted facts there is no justification for the charge against the accused he should not be left for a moment longer than is necessary in the position of a person accused of an offence and forced to defend himself against a charge for which there is no legal evidence to establish, 8 B. L. R. 143 = 16 Cr. L. J. 141 follow. 26 C. 786. See also 23 M. L. J. 505 = 16 Cr. L. J. 477. See 28 C. W. N. 23 where the Calcutta High Court interfered with magisterial proceedings in the preliminary stage under sections 107 or 110.

(i) May direct that complaint should be dismissed and further proceedings stayed—The High Court is competent to direct that a complaint should be at once dismissed as disclosing no criminal offence, 10 P. W. R. 1918 = 33 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 128. When a man has been once tried and acquitted, and subsequent proceedings are taken against him, though as a matter of law the accused might not be entitled to the benefit of s. 403, yet where the circumstances are such that it is inexpedient that further proceedings should be taken, the High Court, acting under this section, may stop such further proceedings, 1905 A. W. N. 233 = 2 A. L. J. 673. Similarly, where a Magistrate overruled an objection that the prosecution was barred by limitation specially applicable to the case, his order was set aside on revision, 20 B. 543. See also 22 C. 131; 1 P. W. R. 1909 = 38 P. L. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 151; 3 P. W. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 154; 23 M. L. J. 505 = 16 Cr. L. J. 477, where the High Court interfered and stayed an illegal prosecution. But see I. L. R. 2 Pat. 257, which holds that s. 439 of the Code does not authorize the High Court to direct a Subordinate Court to refrain from trying an accused person against whom such Court has issued process 2 Pat. 257.

(ii) May interfere with interlocutory proceedings—Very wide powers of revision were intended to be conferred on the High Court under s. 429 and it is with particular reference to non-appealable orders that the High Courts were empowered to act as Court of Revision. The High Court is competent at any stage of a case to interfere in order to exercise its powers of revision, 33 C. 65. Where, therefore, proceedings were instituted against a person under s. 110 for the third time, though on both the previous occasions he was acquitted and there was no fresh evidence and the original order was also defective, the Chief Court on the application of the accused quashed the proceedings at once, 33 P. R. 1910, 17 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 357 (where 45 P. R. 1885 was distinguished 27 C. 126 was dissented from and 25 C. 233, 26 C. 786, 22 C. 131, 1899 A. W. N. 212, 23 B. 533 and 8 P. R. 1904 followed). There can be little doubt that though the power has to be exercised with great care, the High Court has jurisdiction to interfere at any stage of the proceedings, if it considers that in the interests of justice it should do so, no hard and fast rule can be laid down as regards the class of cases in which the High Court will interfere, 23 M. L. J. 505 = 17 M. L. T. 398 = 16 Cr. L. J. 477. Where the notice and interlocutory order passed under s. 112 were defective and could not form the basis of a proceeding under s. 110, the Chief Court set aside the proceedings so far taken by the Magistrate, he being at liberty to take fresh action under Chapter VIII, 18 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 333. The High Court has jurisdiction to take cognizance and revise the proceedings of a Magistrate while they are in an interlocutory stage pending investigation, and may suspend such proceedings without having the record before it, 20 W. R. 23; 22 C. 131. It may also order bail to be taken from the person accused, 23 B. 543. But it will not interfere with interlocutory proceedings unless the case is of an exceptional nature. Sections 423 and 435 read with this section invest the High Court with power to be exercised whenever the Court thinks fit to correct errors in procedure, committed by Subordinate Criminal Courts, before the final order of acquittal or conviction is passed by such Subordinate Court 257 P. L. R. 1994; 10 A. L. J. 144 = 13 Cr. L. J. 413. In 23 M. L. J. 505 = 16 Cr. L. J. 477, the High Court set aside a charge on the ground that injury was likely to be caused by a vexatious and protracted trial. The words "any proceeding" at the commencement of the section make this clear. The Court can, therefore, pending trial, interfere with the interlocutory order of a Magistrate, refusing to summon certain witnesses for the defence, 130 P. L. R. 1901; 2 S. L. R. 25 = 10 Cr. L. J. 237. See contra 45 P. R. 1883. When a Subordinate Court improperly declines to record any evidence tendered, the High Court will interfere in any stage, 237 P. L. R. 1904; or if the Magistrate improperly declines to allow the cross-examination of prosecution witnesses, see Note 11 at P. 593 10 A. L. J. 144 = 13 Cr. L. J. 443. In 1 P. W. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 151, the Chief Court interfere in a pending criminal case and directed that the name of one of the accused should be struck out of the complaint and that no further proceedings be taken against him. Where proceedings are initiated upon the complaint of an unauthorized person they are ultra vires and liable to be set aside at any time during the pendency of the case. An order refusing to examine a pardanashin woman on commission was set aside, 11 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 3. The High Court has power to set aside an order of a Magistrate refusing to order the production of property alleged to be the proceeds of an offence under inquiry, 49 C. 52. The High Court has power to interfere with the order of a Magistrate charging the accused with an offence although no appeal lies in respect of the order. When once a Civil Court has adjudicated upon questions of right, save in exceptional cases, a Criminal Court ought not to go behind the finding of the Civil Court, 33 P. R. 1910 = 12 Cr. L. J. 50. When the High Court has stayed proceedings, the Magistrate is bound to stop the inquiry or trial, when credible information such as a letter or telegram from Counsel retained in the case, is shown to him, 2 G. W. N. 498; 5 G. W. N. 110, 19 M. 375. See 8 S. L. R. 238 = 16 Cr. L. J. 255, where the High Court set aside interlocutory order of a Magistrate refusing to let in evidence. See also 40 C. 84. In 14 A. L. J. 851, the High Court set aside an order calling upon a witness in a pending case to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for perjury. But see 20 M. L. T. 252; 16 A. L. J. 458 and 734; 23 A. L. J. 21; 47 M. L. J. 373.

(iii) It is only in exceptional instances that the High Court will interfere in a pending case.—It is only in very exceptional instances that the High Court will interfere in revision with the action of a Subordinate Court in respect of any pending case, and especially when such case has reached the stage when a charge has been drawn up and only the defence of the accused remains to be heard. No heard and fast rule can be laid down on the subject, but the interference of the High Court will be regulated by the particular circumstance of each case. But generally speaking, it seems inadvisable to interfere in a pending case, unless there is some manifest and patent injustice apparent on the face of the proceedings and calling for prompt redress. Where, therefore, neither the complaint nor the evidence for the prosecution made out any case against a person, the High Court quashed the proceedings against him, holding that it was most unfair to him that he should be called upon to rebut a charge which, upon the evidence was baseless, in so far as it affected him, 28 C. 786 concurrent in 1899 A. W. N. 212. No heard and fast rule can be laid down on this subject since it is impossible as well as undesirable to do so. But one safe practicable test would be this vis, that a bare statement of the facts of the case without any elaborate argument should be sufficient to convince the High Court that it is a fit one for its interference at an intermediate stage, 25 C. 233 followed in 2 S. L. R. 25 = 10 Cr. L. J. 237. The High Court will interfere with interlocutory orders only under exceptional circumstances, 25 C. 233; 1 S. L. R. 30 = 9 Cr. L. J. 270.

do not include that which no penalty

See also 3 P. W. R. L. J. 373, 47 M. 722.

43. Competent for High Court to direct further inquiry in cases of dismissal or discharge.—(i) By Mafussil Magistrates in the exercise of the original jurisdiction—See Note 4 to s. 436. The High Court has power under this section if it considers that an accused person has been improperly discharged, to order him to be committed for trial 19 W. R. 56; 24 W. R. 23, 6 A. 40. See also 9 A. 52; 15 A. 203 which dissent from 8 A. 14, 27 C. 172; 15 B. 530 followed in 23 C. 350. The power is so clear from the terms of this section that s. 437 cannot be taken to limit it to Mafussil cases only. The High Court is empowered to exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by certain preceding sections including s. 423. It may set aside an order of discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate and direct that the accused be arrested and forthwith committed for trial. This is one of the powers conferred by s. 423 and it is not necessary to exercise this power, that the Court should actually be hearing an appeal from acquittal. The section lays down that the High Court may exercise the same powers in revision, in any proceeding whatever, as it could have exercised in hearing an appeal from acquittal. It was the intention of the Legislature in framing this section to make its terms sufficiently wide and comprehensive to cover all cases not included in s. 436, 27 B. 84 which approves and follows 6 A. 40; 15 C. 603; 28 C. 746. The High Court has under ss. 435 and 439 all the powers of an Appellate Court which include a power to direct a re-trial or commitment, a fortiori it has power to set aside the order of a discharge, 35 C. 994 dissenting from 27 C. 126; 6 C. L. J. 705 and 33 C. 1232, where it was laid down that when a Presidency Magistrate dismisses a complaint the remedy is not either under s. 437 or this section, but under s. 15 of the Charter Act, though the question of the propriety or impropriety of the order does not strictly come within the authority vested by s. 15 of the Charter Act. See Note 5 to s. 436. High Court will not scrutinize orders of discharge if upon their face they bear token of careful consideration. The very language of this section shows that the object of the Legislature was to secure the setting right of a patent error or defect and not to give the High Court a roving commission either in the direction of stamping with approval the proceedings of a Lower Court, or in the direction of questioning about and looking to see if, possibly under a fair record, there lies some trace of possible error. In the absence of some well founded suspicion, it is inexpedient to scrutinize orders of discharge or other orders which upon the face of them bear token of careful consideration and appear good and lawful.—Per KNOX, J., 1899 A. W. N. 135; 8 F. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 314.

(ii) Presidency Magistrate.—See 36 C. 994; 27 B. 84; 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 519. The High Court has under ss. 439 and 423 all the powers of an Appellate Court which include a power to direct a re-trial or commitment, a fortiori it has the power to set aside the order of discharge and it is not necessary to have recourse to s. 15 of the Charter Act for the power of the High Court to revise the proceedings of Presidency Magistrate. See Note 5 to s. 436.

44. High Court can in revision exercise all powers of Court of Appeal.—The nature of the powers that the High Court has in revision is the same as that which a Court of Appeal has in the case of an appeal from any order against which an appeal is provided by the Codes, as in cases coming within ss. 405, 406, 14 M. L. T. 200 = 14 Cr. L. J. 529. Of all the Courts of Revision, the High Court alone has all the powers of an Appellate Court specified in s. 423, 20 C. 639; 23 M. 225, including the power to direct evidence to be taken which is not given to the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate under s. 437, 11 C. W. N. 275 = 6 C. L. J. 251 = 6 Cr. L. J. 357; and in addition, it has the power of enhancing sentence, which no Appellate Court has. The only limitation is that specified in sub-sec. (4) of this section. See also 36 C. 994. In cases in which the law allows no appeal, the High Court will not, in revision, except on very exceptional grounds, exercise the powers of an Appellate Court, but where such exceptional grounds exist, as where the conviction is not in any degree supported by the evidence, 8 B. 197; 14 B. 115, at p. 113; Ratanlal 244; 2 C. W. N. 81; 14 B. 331, or it is in the interests of justice, 10 C. 1047; 18 W. R. 7, or where the inquiry in the Lower Court is faulty, 12 B. 377, or when the conviction rests on the testimony of accomplices, 14 B. 331; the High Court will, in the exercise of its revisional powers, deal with the evidence itself, Ratanlal 908. See 19 W. R. 30 = 10 B. L. R. 235; 14 C. 169; 15 C. 603 at p. 818. The High Court can set aside an acquittal and order a re-trial or commitment, 7 C. W. N. 521.

45. May quash commitments whether made under s. 436.—It can quash a commitment made under s. 436 by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, on points of law as well as of facts 12 C. W. N. 117 = 6 C. L. J. 760; 30 M. 224. S. 215 is not a bar to such interference, 7 C. W. N. 327, but the High Court cannot revise an order made by itself directing a commitment under s. 526 (1) (sup), 27 M. 54. See Note 15 to s. 436 and Note 2 to s. 215. Though the High Court has power under this section to consider whether or not a Sessions Judge has exercised a proper judicial discretion under s. 436, in setting aside a Magistrate's order of discharge, and for this purpose, the High Court may consider the facts as well as the questions of law involved, yet it will only exercise this power where it is manifest that the Sessions Judge's order is improper, e.g. where there is no evidence to prove the offence charged, or where it is clear that the Court would not act on the evidence, 30 M. 224, where 7 C. W. N. 227; 14 M. 334 and 15 C. 621 are referred to.

But in 1 Rang. 525 it is held, that the High Court has no concern with the question of the credibility of the evidence, when there is in fact some evidence on the committal record which would justify the Sessions Judge in leaving the question of guilt or innocence to the jury. Credibility of the evidence is no question of law.

46. May consider the propriety of and revise any sentence.—The infliction of an inadequate punishment is undoubtedly an impropriety which the jurisdiction in revision is intended to remedy. Per JARDINE, J., 16 B. 580; 15 W. R. 83, decided under the 1861 Code, is no longer law. Where, therefore, in the absence of clear evidence of the damage done, the Magistrate passed the maximum sentence, the High Court reduced the same, 2 Bom. L. R. 335. The High Court can interfere wherever it finds the Court below, in passing sentence, has failed to exercise a sound judicial discretion, 2 C. 110.

Whipping.—See the Whipping Act, Appx. and ss. 391–395. Where a sentence of whipping has been carried out, no other punishment can be awarded even if sentence is inadequate, 15 Cr. L. J. 538 (Bar.)

Whether it will do so or not is a question not of law, but of expediency on the facts of the particular case, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. Y; Weir II, 589.

50 Power to order restoration of property.—Reading s 423 (1) (d) and s 522 together, the High Court acting under this section may order restoration of property, 27 A. 415, where 25 C. 630 is distinguished, 38 C. 41. The High Court may in the exercise of its revisional powers pass an order under s 517 to refund the money received by false pretences, 15 Cr. L. J. 555 (Bar.). Also the High Court is competent to revise orders passed by Magistrates under s 514 or by the District Magistrate under s 515 15 P. R. 1905. Orders under s 523 are also subject to similar revision, 4 Bom. L. R. 42. In 35 B. 253, the High Court held that it had no jurisdiction to interfere with an order as to disposal of property where the party aggrieved had a right of appeal.

50-A. Limitation.—In exceptional circumstances the rule that application for revision must be made within 60 days may be departed from, 43 C. 1029.

51. Power to take fresh evidence or direct it to be taken.—The High Court may at its discretion direct fresh evidence to be taken, while acting under this section, 3 Bom. L. R. 677. A High Court may while acting in revision by virtue of s 428 call for additional evidence upon which it can itself come to a conclusion, but the High Court has no power to call for a finding or act upon it, 16 Cr. L. J. 787 (M.). But a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge acting under s 437, has no such power to take additional evidence or direct it to be taken, 6 C. L. J. 251 = 6 Cr. L. J. 357 and see Note 15 to s. 428.

52. Stay of proceedings in Criminal Court pending result of civil litigation.—In Weir II, 248 the High Court refused to issue a Mandamus where a Magistrate had in the exercise of his discretion refused to proceed with a criminal charge pending a civil action in respect of the same matter. See also Weir II, 249. If a Magistrate on a consideration of all the circumstances exercises his discretion and either stays proceedings in the criminal case pending the disposal of the civil suit or declining to do so, the High Court, as a Court of Revision will not as a general rule interfere with the exercise of such discretion, Weir II, 418. The High Court will not ordinarily stay proceedings in a Subordinate Criminal Court, merely because the same facts are being litigated in a civil suit, 31 C. 858. See also 23 C. 610; 5 C. W. N. 44; 6 C. W. N. 469; 8 C. W. N. 31; 9 C. W. N. 262; 30 M. 226; 10 C. W. N. 185 and 121; 14 C. W. N. 131; 31 M. 510; 34 C. 845; but will not do so when the lower Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice that the trial should go on 35 C. 909; 26 B. 785; 8 S. L. R. 20 = 15 Cr. L. J. 861. In 23 C. 610 it was however laid down that ordinarily it is not desirable, if the parties to the two proceedings are substantially the same and the prosecution is but a private prosecution and the issues in the two Courts are substantially identical that both the cases should go on at one and the same time. The Magistrate might stay proceedings in his Court or the High Court might direct him to do so, if sufficient cause in that behalf, is made out. It is ordinarily a matter within the discretion of the Magistrate himself and it is doubtful whether the High Court has jurisdiction under the Code to quash pending proceedings. In all such cases the test is whether the accused would be prejudiced if the criminal proceedings are not stayed until the disposal of the suit and in this respect there is no difference between proceedings instituted in pursuance of a sanction and those instituted by a party when no such sanction is necessary, 16 Cr. L. J. 637 (M.). See also 15 Cr. L. J. 565 (M.); 8 S. L. R. 20 = 15 Cr. L. J. 661, 7 Bar. L. T. 73 = 15 Cr. L. J. 433. See also 18 B. 531 and 16 B. 729, where B. L. R. (F. B. Vol.) 426, Igen v. Ingham 14 Q. B. D. 318, and Rex v. Simmon 8 C. and P. 59 are referred to. See Notes under Heading XXIX at p. 546 and Notes under Heading IX to s. 476. See also 4, 8 and 9 F. W. R. 1915.

VII.—WHAT PROCEEDINGS UNDER THE CODE HIGH COURT MAY REVISE

53 Power of the High Court extends to "any proceedings"—See Notes 1 and 42.

54. Power to revise order granting bail.—The proceedings in which it has to be determined whether an accused person should be admitted to bail by a Magistrate is a judicial proceeding, and as such is cognizable by the High Court as a Court of Revision, 6 M. 63. If a Sessions Judge finding that there is no reasonable ground to believe that the accused is guilty, released him on bail under s. 497, the High Court will not interfere under this section or any other provision of law, 10 M. L. J. 411. Where DAVIES, J. seemed to be of opinion that the High Court had power to interfere under this section, if the Sessions Judge had passed an illegal order, but WHITE, C.J., doubted whether the High Court had any power at all, whether under the Code or the Charter Act, to interfere. See Note 7 to s. 497.

55. Power to revise order refusing to grant copies.—Where a Magistrate refused to grant the accused copies of papers which were necessary for defence, the High Court, in the exercise of the powers conferred by this section, set aside the conviction. The Court remarked that the Magistrate acted contrary to law when he determined whether the documents, of which copies were required by the accused for his defence, were necessary or not, 14 W. R. 77. In 15 C. W. N. 770, on a Presidency Magistrate refusing to furnish copies of the notes of evidence to a party, the High Court under s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act ordered the records of the case to be brought up to the High Court and left with the Registrar, and allowed liberty to the party to take copies.

56. Interference with sanction orders under s. 195.—It should be noted that under the new Code as amended the necessity of a sanction under s. 195 is done away with. Instead of a sanction, under the recent amendments offences mentioned in s. 195 can only be taken cognizance of, upon a complaint instituted under s. 476. S. 476-B provides expressly for an appeal in cases where an application for such a complaint is either granted or refused. Therefore the question as to the revision of sanction orders under s. 195 cannot now arise.

57. Order under s. 478.—See 15 M. 224.

58. Power to revoke sanction granted under s. 197.—Having reference to this section, the powers of the High Court, appellate and revisional are co-extensive, and s. 195 does not confer on an Appellate Court any authority in respect of an order made by a Subordinate Court under s. 197, 26 C. 852. See also 1908 A. W. N. 273 = 5 A. L. J. 749 = 9 Cr. L. J. 39; 4 L. B. R. 135 = 7 Cr. L. J. 416. High Court's power of interference in such cases is under s. 15 of the Charter Act.

59. Orders under s. 88.—See Notes 19 to 21 to s. 88 and 9 P. R. 1903 = 29 P. W. R. 1903 = 8 Cr. L. J. 260. In 28 P. L. R. 1915 = 15 Cr. L. J. 166, it was however held following 22 C. 935 and 20 M. 88 that no revision lies against order of attachment. High Court cannot set aside sale duly made, 8 P. R. 1911 = 104 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 142.

59-A. Issue of warrant under s. 90 without recording of reasons.—Where accused has been let out on his own bond, a warrant under s. 90 without recording any reason as required by the section is illegal, 33 M. 1088. See s. 406 and notes thereon.

60. Power to revise security proceedings under Chap. VIII.—See s. 406 and notes thereon.

Although the High Court seldom interferes in the preliminary stage with the discretion of the Magistrate taking action under the preventive section, e.g. ss. 207 and 110 of the Code still when the materials on which such orders are based are clearly insufficient to support those orders, the High Court should interfere and quash the orders and proceedings under its revisional jurisdiction, 28 C. W. N. 23.

61. Power to revise order passed under Chap. XI.—See Notes under Heading XI, Chap. XI. See preliminary note to section 435. Under the amended Code these orders can be revised by the High Court.

61-A. Power to revise orders under Chapter XII.—Owing to the amendment of s. 435 by the omission of clause (3) orders under Chapter XII of the Code are now proceedings within the meaning of s. 435 and therefore are revisible by the High Court. See preliminary note to s. 435. But it is held in 49 M. L. J. 593 that the High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition for the appointment of a Receiver, pending the disposal of a criminal revision petition preferred against an order of the Lower Court passed under s. 145 of the Code.

61-B. Orders under s. 250.—See Note 35 at p. 711.

61-C. Orders under s. 332.—The High Court is competent to revise an order under s. 332 fining an absent assessor or juror. See Note to s. 332 at p. 846.

62. Orders under s. 334.—The High Court may on revision set aside an order directing an accused person to pay costs of an adjournment on an application by the accused for transfer, 8 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 274.

62-A. Orders under s. 336.—No revision lies against order of attachment under s. 386, 29 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 166; 22 C. 935; 20 M. 88.

62-B. Orders under s. 437.—See Note 14 to s. 437.

62-C. Orders under s. 471.—The passing of an order under s. 471 after an acquittal has been recorded cannot be said to alter a finding of acquittal into one of conviction. Therefore where the Court below acquitted an accused upon the ground, that he was in same but omitted to pass orders under s. 471, Cr. P. C., held, that the High Court has power in revision to pass an order under that section, 43 M. L. J. 72.

63. Appellate orders under s. 435.—See 23 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 567.

64. Orders in maintenance cases under s. 438.—The High Court has power under this section to set aside or modify a Magistrate's order, awarding maintenance under s. 438 or to direct further inquiry on the ground that the rate fixed by the order appears to be beyond the means of the person ordered to pay the allowance, Weir II, 575. See also 16 M. 234; 5 B. H. G. R. Cr. Ca. 81, and Note 86 to s. 438.

65. Orders under ss. 514 and 515—Forfeiture of Bonds.—Under ss. 435 and 439 the High Court has power to revise orders passed by Magistrate under s. 514 or by the District Magistrate under s. 515. This general power is not taken away by the power given to the District Magistrate, 15 P. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 131; 5 B. L. R. 179 = 13 Cr. L. J. 31; 159 P. L. R. 1917 (Cr.) Mad Cr Rev Case 77 of 1907. The cases in 3 C. 757 = 2 C. L. R. 403; 8 C. L. R. 72; 19 W. R. 1 and 2 P. R. 1883 were all decided under the Codes prior to 1882 and are obsolete. See Notes to s. 514 and Note 2 to s. 515.

66. Order for disposal of property under s. 517.—The powers conferred by ss. 435 and 439 on the High Court are larger than any previously exercised by it. The words "any proceedings" extend to an order made by a Magistrate under s. 517, Weir II, 538; 38 C. 44, 17 Bom. L. R. 922.

66-A. Orders under s. 520.—See 27 A. 630.

67. Order for restoration of immovable property, 522.—The High Court has full power to interfere in revision with orders passed by Magistrates under s. 522, 35 C. 44; 27 A. 415 followed. See Note 50 above. See sub-sec. (3) of s. 522 which provides that an order under s. 522 may be made by any Court of Appeal, confirmation, reference or revision.

67-A. Order refusing to transfer a case under s. 525 whether revisable.—In 1 Rang. 632 it is held that High Court has no power to interfere in revision with an order to transfer a case under s. 528.

67-B. Orders under s. 545.—See 29 P. R. 1903.

67-C. Orders under s. 548.—See 6 C. 166, where an order refusing to grant copies was revised under s. 1 of the High Court's Act.

67-D. High Court interfering with revision in expunging remarks prejudicial to the character of a person neither a party nor a witness.—Where a Magistrate in a criminal case made observations against the character of a person who was neither a witness in nor a party to the proceedings and who had no opportunity of being heard, and upon material which was not legal evidence in the case, held, that it would be a denial of justice to allow such reflections to stand and they should be expunged from the judgment of the Magistrate, 6 Lah. 166. In a Bombay case it was held that it would be an extraordinary exercise of the powers of a High Court to order that remarks made against a complainant by a Magistrate while convicting the accused should be deleted, 19 Bom. L. R. 912. But see s. 561 A which was inserted newly by Act XVIII of 1923 and the note thereon.

VIII.—INTERFERENCE IN REVISION WITH ORDERS OF ACQUITTAL.

68. Revision against acquittal not usually encouraged.—Though the High Court has the power of set aside in revision an order of acquittal though they were prepared to set aside the order of acquittal if the matter had come before it by way of appeal by the Local Government. Though the High Court has jurisdiction on facts is no ground for exercising revisional jurisdiction in petitions against orders of acquittal, KULAKA SASTRI, J., 16 Cr. L. J. 600 (M.), 17 M. L. J. 437 = 16 Cr. L. J. 553 (M.), 17 Cr. L. J. 1. In 14 L. 332, the Madras High Court remarked it would not ordinarily interfere by way of revision in cases of acquittal. In 1 A. 139 (F.B.) the High Court refused to interfere, even where the acquittal proceeded on an error of law. See also 27 A. 359; 25 A. 346, 25 A. 128; 1902 A. W. N. 200; 8 C. 895; 2 A. 276; 1 C. L. R. 352; 4 Cr. L. J. 37; 12 P. R. 1906; 15 P. R. 1905 which is now overruled by 13 P. W. R. 1907; 5 M. L. T. 258 = 11 Cr. L. J. 195; 10 Cr. L. J. 160 (B.), 1914 M. W. N. 124 = 15 Cr. L. J. 225. In 9 Bur. L. T. 47 = 17 Cr. L. J. 91, the High Court refused to consider an application for revision against acquittal. In 20 C. W. N. 862 an acquittal under s. 247 was set aside as the absence was due to the death of the complainant and the case was one of considerable importance, 45 A. 332; 6 Lah. 16, 5 Patna 25.

69. High Court cannot interfere with acquittal where Public Prosecutor has withdrawn charge.—See s. 494. If the Public Prosecutor withdraws a charge and the Court approves of it, the accused shall be acquitted and neither the Public Prosecutor nor the Judge is called on to give any reasons for his action. The High Court has no power to interfere with such an order of acquittal, 5 M. L. T. 216 = 11 Cr. L. J. 193.

70. Entry under s. 273 cannot be revised even if Court entering it is a High Court for limited purpose only.—A Court subordinate to the High Court may be declared to be a High Court under s. 266 for the limited purpose of Chap. XXIII. The High Court as defined in s. 4, although possessing revisional power over the said Subordinate Court in all other respects, will not have the power of reversing or interfering with any order passed by that Court under s. 273. The said Subordinate Court when making an order under s. 273 in Chapter XXIII acts as a High Court within the meaning of s. 266.—Per MITTER, J., 14 C. 42 at p. 48.

71. In exceptional cases alone High Court will interfere.—As a rule, where no appeal has been preferred by the Local Government from an original or appellate order of acquittal, the High Court will not interfere in revision, 13 P. W. R. 1907 = 5 Cr. L. J. 438; which overrules 14 P. R. 1905; 42 C. 812. See also 12 P. R. 1906; Weir II, 570 and 571. But where a Magistrate acquitted the accused disregarding the uncontradicted evidence and facts admitted which proved the guilt of the accused and acted illegally in treating a warrant-case as a summons case, the High Court interfered under this section on the application of the private complainant and setting aside the acquittal ordered a re-trial, Weir II, 572 = 15 M. L. J. 225. Although the High Court does not ordinarily interfere with orders of acquittal in revision, yet it cannot be expected that it would hesitate to do so, where the acquittal is based, not upon an appreciation of doubtful evidence, but upon a manifest error apparent on the face of the judgment, 9 Bom. L. R. 166 = 5 Cr. L. J. 171, 3 Bom. L. R. 584. The High Court set aside an acquittal when the accused were acquitted upon the result of local inspection and without taking the evidence of witnesses present, 29 C. 931. It will interfere where the acquittal is based solely on a mistaken view of the law, 6 A. L. J. 758 = 10 Cr. L. J. 417. So also where a trial was wrongly held to be barred under s. 403, 12 Bom. L. R. 226. Where a Magistrate in a summary trial acquitted the accused, without examining all the witnesses for the prosecution, his order was set aside on revision 24 W. R. 82; 2 C. L. R. 389. A Magistrate cannot refuse to allow an accused person when put on his defence to recall the witnesses for the prosecution to be cross-examined by him 19 W. R. 83. Where a Magistrate acquitted the accused in a summary trial the High Court set aside the acquittal on the ground that the summary procedure was ill-adapted to the complicated nature of the case, 6 S. L. R. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 780; 6 S. L. R. 121 = 13 Cr. L. J. 771. See also 5 M. L. T. 258. Upon a proper interpretation of s. 439, sub-sec. (4), a High Court, acting as a Court of Revision, is not competent to question an order of acquittal upon the merits thereof, nor can it direct a re-trial upon the ground that it takes a different view of the facts, or of the law applicable thereto, from that upon which the order of acquittal is based. It is only where an acquittal is illegal for some such reason as is given in s. 530 (p), or where an incurable irregularity has occasioned a failure of justice the High Court can interfere, 5 N. L. R. 4 = 9 Cr. L. J. 211. Where it is plain that the Lower Court for reasons outside the merits of the dispute has really declined to decide the controversy and has dealt with matters which really do not decide the complaint before him, the High Court will interfere in revision from an order of acquittal, for example, where in a case of defamation as by stating a person to be of the "Chamar" caste the Judge has decided that the case ought to be dismissed because he regards it as trivial and contemptible but has not decided the issues requiring determination for a finding as to whether or not an offence of defamation has been committed, 18 A. L. J. 846.

The High Court declined on an application by the complainant to interfere under s. 435 of the Code with an order of acquittal passed by a Sessions Judge agreeing with assessors, 25 Bom. L. R. 458 (9 Bom. L. R. 196, distinguished).

72. Revision against acquittal not restricted to errors apparent on face of record.—That the accused obtained his acquittal under s. 247 by preventing the complainant from appearing by wrongfully arresting and detaining him on a false charge of nuisance is not a ground for setting aside the order of acquittal in revision whether directly at the instance of the complainant or on a report of the District Magistrate. There is no reason to hold that the ground for interference should be apparent on the record, 33 M. 1028. See also 1891 A. W. N. 120 and Notes 15 and 20 above.

73. After setting aside acquittal, may direct re-trial or re-hearing of appeal.—The High Court has power under this section to revise an order of acquittal, though not to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction, 5 W. R. 2 and 32; 11 B. H. G. R. 117; 21 W. R. 21 = 12 B. L. R. Appx. XXII; 1 A. 1; 3 B. 150; 7 C. L. R. 142; 1904 P. L. R. 1; 8 S. L. R. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 780. In reference to orders of acquittal passed by a Court of Session in appeal, the High Court may, under this section, reverse such order and direct a re-trial of the appeal, the proper tribunal to conduct which is the Sessions Court, or such other Court of equal jurisdiction as the High Court may entrust, under s. 426 with the trial of the appeal, 9 A. 134; 27 C. 320; 19 A. L. J. 889. See also 23 A. L. J. 433; 24 A. L. J. 414.

74. High Court will not interfere with acquittal on reference under s. 438.—Usually the High Court will not interfere with an acquittal, when it is made the subject of reference under s. 438, 24 A. 348; 18 A. L. J. 235 = 15 Cr. L. J. 304; 25 A. 123; 1 S. L. R. 50 = 8 Cr. L. J. 161. For an exceptional case, see 7 S. L. R. 200 = 15 Cr. L. J. 553, where the Magistrate allowed a compromise at the instance of the relatives of the person deceased and the acquittal was not after trial on the merits. The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere with acquittal in revision under s. 439, but it will not exercise that jurisdiction on a reference by a Sessions Judge except where serious injustice has been caused by error of law, 42 M. 109.

75. High Court has jurisdiction to revise order of acquittal at the instance of complainant.—Provisions of sub-sec. (5) do not debar the High Court from revising an order of acquittal at the instance of the private complainant who could not appeal. "We entertain no doubt that we can deal with an order of acquittal in accordance with the practice of this Court in a series of cases," 38 C. 786. Though as a Court of Appeal, the High Court can consider an order of acquittal only on the appeal of the Local Government yet as a Court of Revision, it can deal with either an original or appellate order of acquittal, either when reported under s. 438, or whenever it may otherwise come to its knowledge. It can so act even on the application of a private prosecutor, 37 C. 329; 11 C. L. J. 113 = 11 Cr. L. J. 213, 18 P. R. 1833, 18 C. W. N. 1241 = 15 Cr. L. J. 722; 18 P. W. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 837; 2 A. 443, 25 A. 123, 6 S. L. R. 121 = 13 Cr. L. J. 771; 39 C. 931. In 42 C. 812, JENKINS, C.J., distinguished 11 C. L. J. 113, on the ground that the error was one of pure law apparent on the face of the record, while the offence was one under s. 504, I P. C. "I have always understood that offences of an essentially or personal character, such as defamation or insult were viewed differently for the purpose of revision." See also 14 M. 363, 6 C. L. R. 245, 7 C. L. R. 142, 7 C. 447, 1933 A. W. N. 222. But the High Court should ordinarily exercise this jurisdiction sparingly and only where it is urgently demanded in the interests of public justice, 42 C. 812, 16 Cr. L. J. 558, 1915 M. W. N. 540 = 16 Cr. L. J. 600, 19 Bom. L. R. 334, 18 Cr. L. J. 519; U. B. R. (1917) 2nd Qr., 19, 18 Cr. L. J. 849, 18 A. L. J. 846, 41 B. 560.

76. Sub-sec. (4) does not limit the powers of Court of Appeal.—Sub-sec. (4) cannot be held to limit the powers of a Court of Appeal. It only limits the powers of the High Court when acting as a Court of Revision from converting a finding of acquittal into one of conviction. But s. 423 (b) has no such restriction, 37 M. 119. In 23 C. 975, it was contended upon subsec. (4) of this section, that the power under s. 423, sub-sec. 1 (b) to alter the finding must be held to be subject to the restriction, that the High Court cannot find the appellant guilty of any offence of which he had been acquitted by the Court below, but the High Court was of opinion that the clause did not limit the powers of the Court as a Court of Appeal, that it was only intended to limit in certain respects the revisional powers of the Court which would otherwise have been competent in revision to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction 44 A. 332.

77. Sub-sec. (4) limits power of High Court only where there is complete acquittal.—In 12 P. R. 1904 = 599 P. L. R. 1904, it was held the Chief Court had power in revision, where the accused had been convicted of one offence and acquitted of another, to convert the acquittal into a conviction. What was meant by acquittal in sub-sec. (4) of this section was a complete acquittal and discharge on all the allegations and facts charged and not an acquittal on one charge and conviction on another. Reading this section and s. 423 together, the Court considered that the High Court as a Court of revision had power at one and the same time to alter the finding and to enhance the sentence as might be lawful or desirable in accordance with the new finding. The juxtaposition of the words "maintaining the sentence" in s. 423, and "may enhance the sentence" in this section is not accidental but significant. See also 37 M. 119 where it was held that sub-sec. (4) refers to a case where the trial has ended in a complete acquittal and not to a case where a trial has ended in a conviction but where the Court has wrongly applied the law or has wrongly found some fact not proved, and has, in consequence, held that the conviction should be under some section of the Code other than the section properly applicable and the accused has appealed against the conviction

But in a recent Bombay case, 12 P. R. (1904) is dissented from and where the accused was convicted by a Magistrate of voluntarily causing grievous hurt under s. 326, I P C., but on appeal the conviction was altered to one of simple hurt (s. 323, I P C.). An application having been made to the High Court for altering the conviction again to one under s. 326, held dismissing the application that the effect of the order of the Sessions Judge on appeal was that the accused was acquitted of the offence under s. 326¹ and that the High Court would not, under s. 439 convert a finding of acquittal to one of conviction. The word "acquittal" in s. 439 of the Code is not confined to a complete acquittal on all the charges framed, 26 Bom. L. R. 433.

IX.—POWER TO ENHANCE THE SENTENCE.

78. High Court may alter finding and enhance sentence.—The High Court has power while hearing an appeal as a Court of Revision to enhance sentence, 11 C. 530; 10 B. 254, so as to alter its nature, 6 A. 522 (F.B.) even in cases when the accused are tried summarily, Bom Cr Rul. 30th July, 1883 (F.B. in Chambers) to two years as provided for in sub-sec. (3) of this section. The effect of ss. 423 and 439 being read together is that the High Court when hearing an appeal against a conviction may under s. 423 (b) alter the finding and then as a Court of Revision, may under s. 439 enhance the same so as to make it appropriate to the altered finding, 37 M. 119. In this case the High Court on an appeal against a conviction under ss. 147—304, I P C., gave the accused notice of revision and convicted him of an offence under s. 302, I P C. The following cases were referred to, Cr A 600 and Cr R C 400 of 1903, where the accused had been acquitted under s. 302 and convicted under s. 304, the High Court gave notice of revision and convicted him of murder and sentenced him to death. In Cr A 143 and Cr R C 437 of 1907, where the accused was acquitted under s. 302, I P C., and convicted under s. 325, the High Court on appeal by the accused gave notice of revision convicted the accused under s. 304 and enhanced the sentence. See Note 63 to s. 423. But see 27 Bom. L. R. 355 = 49 Bom. 450.

79. Where accused convicted under two or more counts, legal to acquit of one charge and enhance sentence on others—It is competent to the High Court as a Court of Revision in the case of an accused charged with two offences and sentenced separately to each of them, to set aside the sentence in respect of one charge and enhance the sentence in respect of the other, Weir II, 35. The alteration of a sentence of fine of Rs. 50 to one of two months rigorous imprisonment, including seven days solitary confinement amounts to an enhancement, 416 P. L. R. 1904.

80. When High Court will enhance sentence.—The principles upon which this Court habitually acts as a Court of Revision in relation to the enhancement of sentences where the law allows a discretion to the Court whose sentence is impugned are that it should not interfere if the sentence passed involve substantial punishment, and should interfere if the sentence is manifestly inadequate. The Court is, in particular, slow to interfere where interference would involve the imprisonment of persons already discharged from jail, though this circumstance is no insuperable obstacle. The Court also declines to interfere in order to enhance a sentence on the mere ground that it would itself have passed a heavier sentence contenting itself with pointing out that the sentence is so far light that heavier sentence would have been maintained.—PER FLOWDEN, J., 7 P. R. 1889, 29 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 599

(i) Sentence must be manifestly inadequate—Where the accused a constable, was charged under s. 223, I P C. for negligently suffering an under trial prisoner to escape, and was convicted and sentenced to two months simple imprisonment, and the District Magistrate, considering the sentence to be inadequate, referred the case to the High Court, it was held that it was not merely because circumstances occur to the Magistrate which would render necessary a more severe sentence or a different charge, that the High Court should interfere. There must be matter on the record of the case showing that the charge has been improperly framed or that the sentence passed is clearly inadequate to the offence, 20 W. R. 22. An enhancement of sentence should take place only when the sentence awarded is manifestly inadequate, and the powers of the High Court should be exercised only under exceptional circumstances, 17 P. R. 1893 (P.B.)

(ii) Subsequent discovery that accused was an old offender no ground for enhancement—Where owing to the negligence of the prosecution the accused was sentenced without certain previous convictions being proved and taken into account, and the Government applied in revision for a re-trial on the ground they had then obtained formal proof of the previous convictions held, that no re-trial could be ordered.

as there was no neglect of duty on the part of the convicting Magistrate, as to justify a re trial, 21 P. R. 1902; 43 P. R. 1905 = 42 P. L. R. 1906 = 3 Cr. L. J. 341; 9 B. L. R. 95 = 17 Cr. L. J. 3. Where the evidence of previous conviction is discovered after the trial, the High Court will not enhance the sentence in revision Ratanlal 457 and 461; 19 P. R. 1905; Weir II, 574.

(iii) Discovery of fresh evidence after valid conviction no ground for setting it aside—A valid conviction, arrived at by the Magistrate who had jurisdiction in the matter, cannot be set aside, simply because, subsequent to the trial and conviction fresh evidence has been discovered which may tend to convict the accused of an offence other than that for which he was convicted, 21 W. R. 47. But where the omission to record evidence that the accused had been previously convicted or is an habitual offender, has been caused by the failure on the part of the Magistrate to perform the duty imposed upon him as Magistrate by the Code in relation to the conduct of the prosecution in the case, the High Court, in the exercise of its powers of revision, is competent to direct a new trial, 36 P. R. 1884

(iv) When the Lower Court was incompetent to pass the sentence—The penalty provided by s. 74 of the Companies Act, 1882, is a fixed and not a maximum penalty, 35 A. 173. Where, therefore, the Magistrate sentenced accused to a fine of Rs. 300 only under that section, the Chief Court enhanced the same, 19 P. R. 1914; 37 P. L. R. 1914 = 16 P. W. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 260.

81. Procedure when sentence is inadequate—When it is necessary to ask Government to apply for revision of sentence, on account of the insufficiency of punishment awarded, this should be done immediately after the punishment is notified. Superintendents of Police should report all strikingly inadequate punishments at once to the District Magistrate.—Bom Pol Man, p. 83. When proceedings are called for an appeal solely with a view to enhance the sentence, notice to that effect should be given to the appellant and to the District Magistrate, Ratanlal 179. It is not necessary that Government should instruct the Government Pleader to move the High Court to enhance the sentence. It is competent to the District Magistrates to bring to the notice of the High Court cases of inadequate sentences. The High Court has jurisdiction to enhance the sentence howsoever the case comes to its notice, 13 Bom. L. R. 1189 = 12 Cr. L. J. 604

82. In dealing with applications for enhancement, conviction treated as conclusive.—It has been the invariable practice of the Bombay High Court in cases that come up before it for enhancement of sentence to accept the conviction as conclusive and to consider the question of enhancement of sentence on that basis, 32 B. 162. Where, however, it is proposed to enhance a sentence beyond the limit of the powers of the trying Magistrate the High Court should satisfy itself that the conviction is right, 9 B. L. R. 82 = 16 Cr. L. J. 712. In 6 B. L. R. 101 = 13 Cr. L. J. 780, the High Court set aside the conviction as the case has been tried summarily and directed a re trial. But see now sub-sec. (6) which is newly inserted under the amending Act of 1923. That sub-section expressly gives a right to an accused person to show cause against his conviction when he is called upon to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced. So now 32 B. 162 has become obsolete

83. Service of notice upon accused necessary.—A complainant applied under ss. 435 and 439 to set aside an order of compensation passed under s. 560 (now s. 250). Held that as the accused died, no order could be made, as none could be passed to the prejudice of an accused person who could not be served with notice, Ratanlal 634; but see 33 M. 89, sub-sec. (2) is an exception to the rules laid down in s. 440

84. Application for enhancement must be made before expiry of sentence.—When the convicted persons have served out their sentences before an application for enhancement is made, the High Court will not interfere, 14 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 99 following 7 P. R. 1889, where it is observed that the High Court is in particular slow to interfere when interference would involve the imprisonment of persons already discharged from jail though this circumstance is no insuperable difficulty. Similarly, where the imprisonment awarded on a summary conviction by a Magistrate, had already expired, the High Court declined to go into the case on a reference from the Sessions Judge, because it would be no advantage to the prisoner to do so and because if the Magistrate's proceedings were quashed the prisoner would be put to the risk of being tried again for the offence, 24 W. R. 71, especially where there is delay, (1912) 1 M. W. N. 50 = 13 Cr. L. J. 121. It is not fair to the accused to revise the conviction and direct him to be committed to the Sessions after he has undergone the full period of sentence inflicted by the Magistrate, because his previous convictions were not known at the time of sentence, 9 B. L. R. 95 = 17 Cr. L. J. 3. See also 29 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 599, where following 19 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 359, it was held that the High Court is not always bound to interfere under s. 439 even if the order of the Court below is wrong in law

84-A. 'But see 23 Bom L. R. 300 where it is held, that it is competent to the High Court to impose an additional sentence of imprisonment on reference or revision even where the accused has served out the sentence of imprisonment inflicted upon him by the lower Court 1 Lah 435 doubted.

85 Application for enhancement by private complainant.—In 5 B L. R. 85 = 11 Cr. L. J. 593, the sentence was enhanced on an application by a private complainant though it was contrary to the ordinary practice as the application was in the particular instance supported by a report from the District Magistrate In 26 Bom. L. R. it was held that a private complainant cannot move the High Court to enhance the sentence 26 Bom. L. R. 182.

86. Application for enhancement must be supported by Government Pleader.—Enhancement of sentence is a very serious proceeding and where there is a proposal to that effect it ought, if it is a sound proposal, to be supported by the Government Pleader under instructions which will enable him to put before the Court cogent reasons why there should be an enhancement of the sentence 16 Bom. L. R. 202 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 192 = 15 Cr. L. J. 385 = 45 A 332.

87. High Court's power to enhance sentence beyond power of trying Magistrate.—The power of enhancement conferred upon the High Court by s. 439 is limited only by cl. (3) of that section. That clause does not regard the difference in the powers of trying Magistrates under s. 32, but lays down the general rule that in cases of sentences passed by Magistrates and empowered under s. 34, the limit of enhancement shall be the sentence that might have been inflicted by a Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, 9 B. L. R. 82 = 16 Cr. L. J. 712.

Optional with Court to hear parties

440. No party has any right to be heard either personally or by pleader, before any Court, when exercising its powers of revision

Provided that the Court may, if it thinks fit, when exercising such powers hear any party either personally or by pleader, and that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect section 439 sub-sec (2)

Notes —1. Conduct of the proceedings.—In the case of an appeal, the appellant has the conduct of the proceedings, Sessions Judge exercise its pr

2. Right of parties to be heard in revision.—The language of this section is rather curious, but in no way affects the provisions of ss. 436 and 439 (2). See 1 B 64 and 10 C. 268. The Madras High Court in the exercise of this discretionary power refused to hear Counsel who appeared in support of a petition to revise an order of acquittal, 14 M. 363, 14 W. R. 51. But the High Court of Calcutta always does hear Counsel in matters of importance, 19 C. 380 In 8 A. L. J. 237 it was stated that the Allahabad High Court as a matter of practice heard pleaders in revision In 1 B. 64 the Bombay High Court refused to hear Counsel against report made under s. 438, but it also refused to interfere as a Court of Revision. See 6 B. L. R. Appx. XLVI and 5 B L. R. Appx. LXX, as to the practice under the Code of 1872 where it was held that a private prosecutor was not allowed to be heard on a reference to the High Court In 11 C. W. N. 316 an accused was heard as to why a further inquiry should not be directed against him though no rule was issued upon him In 5 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 211, JOHNSTONE J, refused to hear a pleader against a petitioner as he had moved the District Magistrate for his appointment to appear before the High Court and had been refused.

441. When the record of any proceeding of any Presidency Magistrate is called for by the High Court under section 435, the Magistrate may submit with the record a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision or order and any facts which he thinks material to the issue, and the Court shall consider such statement before overruling or setting aside the said decision or order.

Note.—A statement submitted by a Presidency Magistrate under this section must be regarded as a completion of the record and possesses a conclusive character as against affidavits, 12 B. 377. This section apparently applies to cases in which the sentence or order is not appealable See s. 411 Mere omission by a Magistrate to record his reasons before referring a case under s. 202 for enquiry by the Police, and for dismissing a complaint under s. 203, is an irregularity But a statement filed under s. 441 supplies the omission. So, after the filing of such a statement, such an omission does not call for the interference of the High Court with an order made under those sections, 8 M L T. 79. The Calcutta High Court has held that no rule exists which can be binding on any Bench exercising criminal revisional jurisdiction as to whether a party may be heard through Counsel or Vakil instructed or returned or merely instructed by the Legal Remembrancer or Local Government.

442. When a case is revised under this Chapter by the High Court, it shall, in manner hereinbefore provided by s. 425 certify its decision or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order revised was recorded or passed and the Court or Magistrate to which the decision or order is so certified shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the decision so certified, and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith

High Court's order to be certified to Lower Court or Magistrate.

Notes—1. Scope of section—This section applies to all revisions by a High Court whether under s. 435 or s. 433 and the provisions that it must certify its decision or order to the Court by which the sentence, etc., was passed are incompatible with the notion that a High Court can revise its own finding, for it cannot certify to itself, 4 P. R. 1909 = 41 P. L. R. 1909 = 10 P. W. R. 1909 = 9 Cr. L. J. 378.

2 The result of every application for revision of a sentence under which the applicant is in confinement shall be notified direct to the officer in charge of the jail in which the applicant is confined by the Court from whose order the application for revision was preferred—C. P. Cr. Cir., Part II, No. 47 For Bombay Rule, see Book Cr. C. pp 50—54, vide Government Gazette for 1896 Part I, pp 427 and 428

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

CHAPTER XXXIII.*

SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO CASES IN WHICH EUROPEAN AND INDIAN BRITISH SUBJECTS ARE CONCERNED

Note.—Chapter XXXIII is thoroughly recast by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act XII of 1923. The object of this through revision of Chapter XXXIII is to reduce the differences in the cases of trials of European British subjects and Indians under the Code. The report of the Committee that was submitted to the Legislative Assembly, represents a compromise that could be effected between the interests concerned under the existing circumstances and the various racial considerations between Europeans and Indians that must be recognized as existing facts in spite of theoretical considerations based on pure justice. It would be best to give in the words of the report itself the effect of the compromise arrived at.

If the Bill is enacted the only privileges as regards the criminal procedure applicable to them which will be retained for European subjects of His Majesty as compared with Indian subjects of His Majesty will therefore be as follows—

- (a) the privilege of not being tried by Magistrates of the second or third class save for offences punishable with fine only not exceeding Rs. 50,
- (b) the privilege of being under different High Courts in the case of a few areas in which the present Judicial Administration is not very highly developed,
- (c) the privilege of being able to obtain writs in the nature of habeas corpus from High Courts of Judicature established by Letters Patent when outside the limits of British India and
- (d) the exemption from the jurisdiction of Magistrate and Sessions Judges as regards whipping and from the jurisdiction of special power Magistrates as regards sentences of imprisonment exceeding two years.

The Committee accepted retention of each of these few privileges for one reason only—namely the number of persons who will be entitled to the privileges will be reduced and they will only be claimable by persons of European descent in the male line.

* Chapter XXXIII (ss. 442 to 445) has been substituted in the place of the old Chapter XXIII (ss. 442 to 445) by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1923 (XII of 1923).

The only existing distinction between the procedure in criminal trials applicable to Indian subjects of His Majesty and Europeans (other than European British subjects) and Americans is that referred to in paragraph 4 of this statement. The existing privileges are retained for these persons but they are also accorded by the Bill to Indian subjects of His Majesty.

In the Bill the procedure for the trial of cases in which racial considerations are involved is included in a Chapter which takes the place of the existing Chapter XXXII of Code. The remaining provisions of that Chapter which it is necessary to retain are distributed in appropriate places throughout the Code as is indicated in the notes on clauses which are appended to this statement.

As regards the new Chapter XXXIII it will be observed that it applies to offences punishable with imprisonment which are alleged to have been committed outside a presidency town. The first step to be taken to secure that such a case shall be tried under the provisions of the Chapter is a claim to be made by the accused person before the Magistrate. Unless such a claim is made at one of the stages indicated for the trial of a summons-case or of a warrant-case or for the inquiry preliminary to commitment the provisions of the Chapter will not apply. The Magistrate then makes such inquiry as he thinks necessary. As a guide to the Magistrate in coming to a finding as to whether the case should be tried under the provisions of the Chapter or not it is provided that if the complainant and the accused persons or any of them are respectively European and Indian British subjects or Indian and European British subjects he shall find that the case should be tried under the provisions of the Chapter. For other cases with which both European British subjects and Indian British subjects are connected the Magistrate must be satisfied that it is expedient for the ends of justice that the case shall be so tried. This it is observed is the same criterion as that now contained in clause (e) of sub-section (1) of s. 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure relating to the powers of a High Court to transfer criminal cases. If the Magistrate rejects the claim the person has a right of appeal to the Sessions Judge whose decision is final and if the claim is rejected by the Magistrate the Magistrate is required to stay the proceedings until the expiration of the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal or if an appeal is presented until it has been decided. The period allowed for the presentation of an appeal is fixed by the amendment of the Indian Limitation Act 1908 made by clause 39 of the Bill at seven days. The persons who will be included within the term complainant for the purpose of these provisions are then defined by the proposed s. 444. Incidentally public servants and officers and servants of companies, associations or bodies to which the Local Government by general or special order may declare the provisions of the section to apply will not be included within the definition merely because they have made a complaint or given information in their official or quasi-official capacity. The procedure in summons-cases punishable with imprisonment which has been referred to in paragraph 6 of this statement is then laid down. For warrant cases which would normally be triable under the provisions of Chapter XXI of the Code if it is found that the case ought to be tried under the provisions of the Chapter a Magistrate is required if he does not discharge the accused to commit the case for trial to the Court of Session whether the case is or is not exclusively triable by that Court. Normally in the Court of Session the case will then be tried by a jury of mixed nationality the majority of the jurors being either Indians or Europeans and Americans according as the accused person is an Indian or an European subject of His Majesty. Statement of Objects and Reasons—Racial Distinctions Committee Report 1923

Preliminary note. Trial of Europeans by jury whether substantive right or mere matter of procedure.—Where an European had claimed to be tried by jury and was committed on 11th June 1923 to the Sessions Court but that right to be tried by jury was taken away by Act XII of 1923 which came into force on the 1st of September 1923 and the accused appeared before the Sessions Judge in October 1923 and asked for trial by mixed jury held that the right of trial by jury was a substantive right and not a mere matter of procedure and that the accused who had this right under Chapter XXXIII of the old Code when he was committed for trial, could not be deprived of it by the amendment of that code by Act XII of 1923 6 Lah 282

242 or enters on his defence under section 256 as the case may be claims that the case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter, the

Magistrate in committing or trying the case after making such inquiry as he thinks necessary, and after allowing the accused person reasonable time within which to adduce evidence in support of his claim, shall if he is satisfied—

- (a) that the complainant and the accused persons or any of them are respectively European and Indian British subjects or Indian and European British subjects or
- (b) that, in view of the connection with the case of both an European British subject and an Indian British subject, it is expedient for the ends of justice that the case should be tried under the provisions of this Chapter, record a finding that the case is a case which ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter, or, if he is not so satisfied record a finding that it is not such a case

(2) Where the Magistrate rejects the claim the person by whom it was made may appeal to the Sessions Judge, and the decision of the Sessions Judge thereon shall be final and shall not be questioned in any Court in appeal or revision

(3) Where the Magistrate rejects the claim, he shall stay the proceedings until the expiration of the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal or if an appeal is presented, until it has been decided

Note—“Presidency town shall mean the local limits for the time being of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, Madras or Bombay as the case may be s. 3(4) General Clauses Act X of 1897

444. For the purposes of section 443, complainant means any person making a complaint or, in relation to any case of which cognizance is taken under clause (b) of section 190 sub-section (1) any person who has given information relating to the commission of the offence within the meaning of section 154

Definition of ‘complainant’

Provided that a Public Prosecutor a public servant a member, officer or servant of any local authority a railway servant as defined in section 3 of the Indian Railways Act 1890 or an officer or servant of any company, association or other body to which the Local Government may, by general or special order published in the Local Official Gazette declare the provisions of this section to apply shall not by reason only of the fact that he has made a complaint or given information of an offence in his capacity as such Public Prosecutor public servant railway servant, member, officer or servant be deemed to be a complainant within the meaning of this section nor shall a Police-officer be so deemed by reason only of the fact that a report under section 173 relating to a case has been made by or through him

445. (1) Where a Magistrate or a Sessions Judge decides under section 443 that a case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter and the case is a summons-case, the Magistrate trying the same shall direct that the case be referred to a Bench of two Magistrates and shall send a copy of such order to the District Magistrate who shall forthwith provide for the constitution of a Bench of two Magistrates of the first class of whom one shall be an European and the other an Indian for the trial of the case

(2) Where the Magistrates constituting the Bench by which a case is tried under this section differ in opinion the case, together with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before the Sessions Judge who may examine any party or recall and examine any witness who has already given evidence in the case, and may call for and take any further evidence and shall thereafter pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit and as is according to law

(3) Any person convicted by a Bench under this section shall have the same right of appeal as if he had been convicted by a Magistrate of the first class and any person convicted by a Sessions Judge under sub-sec (2) shall have the same right of appeal to the High Court as if he had been convicted by the Sessions Judge at a trial held by the Sessions Judge under this Code

(4) In any case in which it is impracticable to constitute a Bench in accordance with the provisions of sub-sec (1) in any district the District Magistrate shall transfer the case for trial by a like Bench to such other district as the High Court may by general or special order, direct.

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section the Local Government may by notification in the Local Official Gazette direct that all summons-cases tried under the provisions of this Chapter in any district specified in the notification shall be tried as if they were warrant cases in accordance with the provisions hereinafter in this Chapter laid down for the trial of warrant cases

446. (1) Where a Magistrate or a Sessions Judge decides under s 443 that a case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter and the case is a warrant case the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case shall if he does not discharge the accused under section 209 or section 253, as the case may be, commit the case for trial to the Court of Session whether the case is or is not exclusively triable by that Court

(2) Where an accused is committed to the Court of Session under sub-section (1) the Court shall proceed to try the case as if the accused had required to be tried in accordance with the provisions of section 275 and the provisions of that section and the other provisions of Chapter XXIII so far as they are applicable shall apply accordingly

Provided that where the trial before the Court of Session would in the ordinary course be with the aid of assessors and the accused or all of them jointly require to be tried in accordance with the provisions of s 284 A the trial shall be held with the aid of assessors all of whom shall in the case of European British subjects be persons who are Europeans or Americans or in the case of Indian British subjects be Indians relating to appeal.

449. (1) Where—

(a) a case is tried by jury in a High Court or Court of Session under the provisions of this Chapter or

(b) a case which would otherwise have been tried under the provisions of this Chapter is under this Code committed to or transferred to the High Court and is tried by jury in the High Court, or

(c) a case is tried by jury in the High Court in a presidency-town and the High Court grants leave to appeal on the ground that the case would, if it had been tried outside a presidency town, have been triable under the provisions of this Chapter, then, notwithstanding anything contained in section 418 or section 423, sub-section (2), or in the Letters Patent of any High Court, an appeal may lie to the High Court on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Letters Patent of any High Court, the Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original order of acquittal passed by the High Court in any such trial as is referred to in sub-section (1)

(3) An appeal under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall, where the High Court consists of more than one Judge, be heard by two Judges of the High Court.

Notes.—1. Powers of the High Court under s. 449.—Although in ordinary cases tried by jury there is no appeal except on a matter of law (see s. 418 of the Code), since the amendment of the Code by Act XVIII of 1923 an appeal is competent in cases tried by jury under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII "on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law," and so on a reference by a Sessions Judge under s. 307 the High Court can go into the facts of the case. It follows that in such a case 41 C. 621; 26 Bom. L. R. 610 have little application. 6 Lah. 98.

2. Applicability of the section.—Where a case triable under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII has been actually tried at the High Court Sessions under Chapter XXIII without a claim on the part of the accused under s. 275 for a trial under Chapter XXXIII, appeal would lie only under s. 418 and not under s. 449. Further, that such a claim on the part of the accused must be made before the first juror is called and accepted 3 Rang. 220.

3. Whether an appeal, on matters of facts as well as on matters of law, lies when an order for trial under s. 443 is erroneously made.—When an accused person claimed to be tried as an European British subject but omitted to claim to be tried under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII and the Magistrate passed an order that he should be dealt with under s. 443 which order was not objected to by the prosecution an appeal would lie on matters of fact as well as on matters of law as contemplated by s. 449 (1) even though it would appear that the distinction between a claim to be tried as an European British subject and a claim to be dealt with under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII was not properly appreciated by the Magistrate and that there was hardly any foundation for the claim to be tried under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII 29 C. W. N. 100.

4. Right of appeal under s. 449.—The omission to make a claim under s. 528-A does not affect the question of appeal under s. 449 (1) (c), if the conditions in s. 443 (1) (a) and s. 441 (1) (b) exist, and it is not necessary to show that a claim was made before, and found by the Presidency Magistrate. Ss. 528-A and 528-B have no application to s. 449, 53 C. 347 = 29 C. W. N. 447. The same principle is laid down in 52 C. 838 = 29 C. W. N. 438 and it was further held that s. 449 (c) gives an absolute right of appeal when the applicant for leave to appeal shows that the case would if it had been tried outside a presidency-town would have been triable under Chapter XXXIII. On general principle it is desirable that such applications should be made to a Divisional Bench rather than to a single Judge.

450 to 463.—(Repealed)

Note.—Sections 453, 454, 455 and 459 have taken the shape of an additional Chapter XLIV which was inserted by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act XII of 1923. These sections have now become supplementary provisions relating to European and Indian British subjects and others and are now enacted as s. 528-A, 528-B, 528-C and 528. Ss. 456, 457 and 458 have become parts of ss. 491 and 491-A. S. 460 is to be found in s. 284-A. S. 462 has become a part of s. 328.

* (1 A) Pending such examination and inquiry the Magistrate may deal with the accused in accordance with the provisions of section 466

(2) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence he shall † “record a finding to that effect and” shall postpone further proceedings in the case

Note.—The amendment in sub-sec. (2) requires the Magistrate to record a finding if he is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and incapable of making a defence.—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Notes—For procedure where accused though not insane does not understand proceedings see s. 341. See Act XXVI of 1888 as to wandering and dangerous lunatics. Ss 464—466 and 472—475 deal with the procedure in the case of an accused who is of an unsound mind at the time of the trial and see ss. 469—472, 468, 474 and 475 as to the case of an accused who is of an unsound mind at the time of the trial but the question is whether he was of sound mind at the time of the offence

1 Section does not deal with question whether accused was or was not insane when offence committed—This section has nothing to do with the question whether the accused person was or was not of unsound mind at the time when he is alleged to have committed the offence of which he is accused. 1900 A W N 47 The inquiry under this section will only affect the prisoner's trial and not the result after trial. The test of insanity at the time of the commission of the offence is whether the prisoner knew at the time that he was doing wrong. 24 W R 5, 12 M 459, 10 B 512 The law presumes every person of the age of discretion to be sane unless the contrary is proved and when a lunatic has lucid intervals the law presumes the offence of such to have been committed in a lucid interval unless it appears to have been committed during derangement. Ratanlal 172 The fact that the conduct of the accused at the time of trial was unusual and that his father was insane do not justify the conclusion that the accused was at the time of committing the offence by reason of unsoundness of mind incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he was doing what was wrong and contrary to law. Ratanlal 10 The test of insanity under this section is that a person accused before a Magistrate is of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence. Under such circumstances the Magistrate should not acquit him but must proceed under s. 466. Weir 11, 581, see 10 W R 27, 1 W R 11, 11 M L T 24 = 13 Cr L J 25 and Notes to s. 341

2 Provisions of this Chapter do not override general rules of procedure.—The provisions of this Chapter are subsidiary provisions for dealing with an exceptional class of persons charged with offences and are not to be construed to override the general rules of procedure except in so far as the special provision is clearly incompatible with the general provisions. 11 P R 1894 When a charge of an offence to which Chapter XXIII applies is made before a Magistrate he ought in the first place to make an inquiry into the truth of the charge. It is only when he is satisfied after such inquiry that there is a prima facie case against the accused that he can make the inquiry prescribed by this section into the question of the unsoundness of mind of the accused person etc.—Ibid

3 Magistrate must inquire into fact of unsoundness.—The language of this section is that ‘when a Magistrate holding not about to commence an inquiry and consequently incapable of making his defence the Magistrate shall inquire etc. The provision of this section certainly contains a sound sense if it appears to be sound law for the Legislature can never have intended that a person should be liable to be treated as a lunatic by the executive Government on the report of Criminal Court after a summary inquiry into his state of mind alone merely because somebody has chosen to make a charge against him possibly a groundless charge before a Magistrate.—Per FLOWERY, J., 11 P R 1894 A Magistrate cannot consign a lunatic to an asylum or jail on his own mere unprofessional opinion. He must have before him the deliberate statements of a medical officer reduced to writing and subjected to the test of cross-examination 1 Bur L R 87 A mere certificate of a medical man is not enough 9 W R 23. Where upon the report of a Civil Surgeon that the accused person was of weak intellect a Magistrate discharged the accused and made him over to his brother for safe custody it was held that the proceedings were illegal because if the order was made under s. 466 the Civil Surgeon should have been examined and if under s. 470 the accused should have been detained in custody and the case reported to Government Weir II, 580 In the city of Bombay the Police Surgeon is the medical officer to be examined (Ga ette 1877 p 339) while in Madras it is the officer in medical charge of the Penitentiary (Ga ette 20th August 1878 Pt. I p 474) and in the districts all medical officers in independent charge are competent to give evidence under this section (G O No 2224 Judicial dated 23rd August 1883) In addition to expert testimony the Magistrate may also take evidence as to the ordinary habits and behaviour of the accused and his demeanour both before and after the commission of the offence charged 5 C. 828, 42 A 137

4. Magistrate should not try accused when he finds him incapable of making defence.—If after inquiring into the fact of the unsoundness of mind of the accused and examining the Civil Surgeon the accused appears to be insane and unable to understand questions and to return intelligent replies the Magistrate should follow this section and not s. 341 and should act on his opinion under s. 466 Ratanlal 832 When a Magistrate finds that the accused is quite incapable of making his defence he ought not to try him and acquit on the ground of insanity If the accused be afterwards found to be capable of making his defence the procedure prescribed in ss 467 468 and 473 should be followed Weir II, 581 The postponement contemplated by this section is to be sine die and as the postponement is caused by circumstances over which the Court has no control cases postponed under this section may be excluded in preparing the annual statement of the average duration of cases in the Criminal Court J C. Oudh No 70 of 1886

465. (1) If any person committed for trial before a Court of Session or a High Court appears to the Court at his trial to be of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence the jury or the Court with the aid of assessors shall in the first instance try the fact of such unsoundness and incapacity, * and if the jury or Court as the case may be is satisfied of the fact the Judge shall record a finding to that effect and shall postpone further proceedings in the case and the jury if any shall be discharged

(2) The trial of the fact of the unsoundness of mind and incapacity of the accused shall be deemed to be part of his trial before the Court

Note.—This amendment provides for the discharge of the jury in the event of the Court being satisfied that the accused is of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence.—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

Notes.—1 Sections 464 and 465 to be applied only when accused's sanity at the time of trial is questioned—These two sections refer to the procedure to be adopted by a Magistrate or other Court on coming to the conclusion that a person put on trial before the Magistrate or Court is of unsound mind and incapable of defending himself that is to say actually of unsound mind when placed before the Magistrate or other Court. These two sections have nothing whatever to do with the question whether the accused person was or was not of unsound mind at the time when he is alleged to have committed the offence of which he is accused 1900 A. W N 47 See Note 1 to s. 464

2. Fact of unsoundness of mind at time of trial should first be put before jury before calling on prisoner to stand his trial.—The power given to the jury to try the fact of unsoundness of mind is in accordance with the decision in 10 B L R. Ap. 10—19 W R 15 The second paragraph is based on the same decision. Where a person committed to a Court of Session appears to the Court to be of unsound mind and consequently unable to make his defence it is obligatory on the Court to try first the fact of such insanity and incapacity before calling on the prisoner to stand his trial, and not to continue to try the fact, throughout the trial of the prisoner, 1905 A. W. N. 2. A Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury told them that, in his judgment, the accused was, at the time of his trial, exhibiting symptoms of unsoundness of mind, and he directed them to find whether the accused was insane at the time he committed the offence held, that the issue as to whether the accused was of sound mind at the time of the trial, and incapable of properly making his defence, was a preliminary issue to that put by the Sessions Judge, and should have been first submitted to the jury, 19 W. R. 45; 1882 A. W. N. 106; 10 W. R. 37. The trial was set aside as bad and re-trial ordered. Again, where the accused confessed to having killed his wife and pleaded guilty at his trial for murder, and the Sessions Judge recorded briefly the evidence of two prosecution witnesses to determine whether the offence committed was or was not culpable homicide amounting to murder, and he found that the offence was murder and sentenced the accused to transportation for life on the ground "that the accused without being actually insane, so as not to be aware of what he was doing, appears to be decidedly a man of weak intellect." On appeal it was urged that the accused was insane or at any rate incapable of understanding the charge against him. The Chief Court set aside the conviction and ordered an inquiry under this section before re-trial on the charge, 34 P. R. 1905 = 168 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 80.

3 Where accused's sanity is doubted, the fact should be tried.—Where a Sessions Judge entertains doubts as to the sanity of the accused he should not merely put questions to him, but should try the fact of such unsoundness of mind by examining the Civil Surgeon, or some other medical officer, and by taking such evidence as might have been procurable from the village at which the accused resides with the view of ascertaining whether the accused had, at any time prior to the commission of the crime, exhibited symptoms of insanity, 1 B. H. G. R. 33. See the procedure adopted in 2 W. R. 33. Where an accused person is found to be insane before the completion of his trial, the Judge should postpone the trial and report the case to the Local Government, instead of trying the accused when he is incapable of making his defence and acquitting him on the ground that he committed the offence charged when he was incapable of knowing that he was doing wrong, 1 W. R. 11. Where in the course of his examination under s. 364 the accused said that he was not in his senses when he tried to rob, held, that the Court of Session should have acted under s. 465 and tried the fact whether on the date the accused was called on to plead the accused was or was not of unsound mind and capable or incapable of making his defence, 15 A. L. J. 239.

4 Stay of proceedings by Sessions Court.—A Sessions Judge has no power to stay proceedings and to direct inquiry as to the state of the accused's mind, because it appeared to him problematic whether he was capable of making his defence. The proper procedure to be followed is provided by this section, Weir II, 137, 3 W. R. 87.

5. Procedure when case is postponed.—When a Magistrate finds that an accused person was of unsound mind, and incapable of making his defence when put before him for trial, he should postpone further proceedings and take action under this section, 1900 A. W. N. 47, after a case has been reported to Government under s. 466, it should not be struck off, but should be kept on the register of pending cases, 6 W. R. 3. When a trial is postponed under this section on the ground of the insanity of the prisoner and the consequent incapacity to make his defence it should not be resumed at the point at which it was previously stopped, but should be commenced de novo when the Court finds him capable of making his defence, Weir II, 532. See Note 4 to s. 464.

6 Prosecution must prove sanity of accused.—When a jury is impanelled, the onus is on the prosecution to prove the sanity of the defendant, R v Davies, (1853) 3 Car. and Kir. 328. The jury may form their own judgment of the defendant's sanity or insanity by his demeanour without any evidence being given, if he shows strong symptoms of insanity, it is unnecessary to ask him if he wishes to cross-examine any witnesses who are called or to make any remarks or offer evidence, R v Goode, (1837) 7 Ad. and EL 538, Halsbury Laws of England, Vol. IX, p. 354. See also 51 G. 584; 51 G. 827.

466. (1) Whenever an accused person is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, * "whether the case is one in which bail may be taken or not," may release him on sufficient security being given that he shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, and for his appearance when required before the Magistrate or Court or such officer as the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf

Release of lunatic pending investigation or trial.

* The words in inverted commas were substituted for words "If the case is one in which bail may be taken" by Act XVIII of 1923

*“(2) If the case is one in which, in the opinion of the Magistrate or Court, bail should not be taken, or if sufficient security is not given, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, shall order the accused to be detained in safe custody in such place and manner as he or it may think fit and shall report the action taken to the Local Government

Provided that no order for the detention of the accused in a lunatic asylum shall be made otherwise than in accordance with such rules as the Local Government may have made under the Indian Lunacy Act, 1912

Note.—This section is amended so as to allow bail to be granted at the discretion of the Court in any case in which the accused is a lunatic and the amendment also permits the accused to be kept in custody. The object in view is to delegate the power of the Local Government and to do away with the existing distinction in procedure between bailable and non bailable cases. Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

Note —1 Jurisdiction of Criminal Courts over lunatics.—The authority of the Criminal Court over an accused declared to be of unsound mind ceases after the transmission of such accused to the place of safe custody appointed by the Local Government, and it does not revive until he (the accused) is sent back to the Magistrate under s. 473 on a certificate that he is capable of making his defence, 2 G. 850. See 3 W. R. 70 as to custody in non bailable cases pending orders of Government.

467. (1) Whenever an inquiry or a trial is postponed under section 464 or section 465, the Magistrate or Court as the case may be, may at any time resume the inquiry or trial, and require the accused to appear or be brought before such Magistrate or Court

Resumption of inquiry or trial

(2) When the accused has been released under section 466 and the sureties for his appearance produce him to the officer whom the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf, the certificate of such officer that the accused is capable of making his defence shall be receivable in evidence

Note.—While under s. 464 the examination of the medical witness is necessary the certificate of such officer is sufficient for a renewal of proceedings under sub-sec. (2) of this section.

Procedure on accused appearing before Magistrate or Court

468. (1) If when the accused appears or is again brought before the Magistrate or the Court as the case may be, the Magistrate or Court considers him capable of making his defence, the inquiry or trial shall proceed

(2) If the Magistrate or Court considers the accused † to be still incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court shall again act according to the provisions of section 464 or section 465, as the case may be ‡ and if he the accused is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence shall deal with such accused in accordance with the provisions of section 466

Note.—1 Inquiry or trial should commence “de novo.”—When a trial is postponed on the ground of insanity of the prisoner, it should not be resumed at the point at which it was previously stopped but should be commenced de novo, when the Court finds him capable of making his defence, Weir II, 882.

469. When the accused appears to be of sound mind at the time of inquiry or trial, and the Magistrate is satisfied from the evidence given before him that there is reason to believe that the accused committed an act which, if he had been of sound mind, would have been an offence, and that he was at the time when the act was committed, by reason of unsoundness of mind incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the Magistrate shall proceed with the case, and if the accused ought to be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, send him for trial before the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

When accused appears to have been insane.

* Sub-sec. (2) was substituted for the original sub-sec. (2) by Act XVIII of 1923, s. 122

† The word “person” was omitted by ibid

‡ The words in inverted commas were added by Act XXIII of 1923

Notes.—1. Committing Magistrate to inform jail authorities to place accused under careful surveillance.—Whenever a Magistrate, acting under this section, shall send for trial before the Court of Session an accused person regarding whose sanity at the time of committing the offence he entertains any doubt, he shall at the same time inform the jail authorities of the supposed state of the accused, in order that he may be placed under careful surveillance prior to his trial before the Court of Session.—Bom H C Cr Cr., p 18

2. A Magistrate rightly commits for trial at the Sessions, a prisoner charged with murder, whom he finds to be sane at the time of the preliminary investigation, although he was insane, when he committed the act. 9 W. R. 23

470. Whenever any person is acquitted upon the ground that, at the time at which he is alleged to have committed an offence, he was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act alleged as constituting the offence, or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the finding shall state specifically whether he committed the act or not.

Notes.—1. Acquittal on ground of lunacy.—"Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it by reason of unsoundness of mind is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law." S 84, I P C.

2. Fact of unsoundness must be distinctly proved.—The fact of unsoundness of mind is one which must be clearly and distinctly proved before any jury is justified in returning a verdict under s. 84, I P C. Every man is presumed to be sane and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crimes, until the contrary is proved, 20 W. R. 70 = 13 B. L. R. Appx. XX, Ratanlal 172, 1 W. R. 19; 1901 A. W. N. 132; 33 M. 550. See also R v Oxford 5 St. Tr. (N.B.) 497; R v Stokes, 3 C. and K. 183. Finding of acquittal within the terms of this section must be after a trial by a regularly constituted Court. So where the Sessions Judge without choosing assessors proceeded himself to try this point, took evidence and delivered judgment, the proceedings were quashed and a re-trial ordered with assessors, 5 N.-W. P. H. Cr. 110. See Note 1 to s 464

3. Procedure—discharge of accused.—When a Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of sound mind at the time of the trial but was insane when he committed the act, he should not be discharged under s. 263. Such a procedure is illegal and the Magistrate should have acted under this section and s. 471. Weir II, 582

4. Confession of guilt—Opinion (evidence) as to state of accused's mind.—The accused killed his brother in law, there being apparently no enmity or quarrel between them. His explanation was that he killed the deceased in order that he might die by the order of the public authorities and so go to heaven. No medical evidence had been taken as to whether the accused was or had been of unsound mind. Held, that the explanation if accepted as indicating the thoughts of the accused at the time of doing the act, did not fall within the definition of unsoundness of mind sufficient to excuse crime, inasmuch as it indicated a consciousness that the act was contrary to law. Held also, that it was expedient to have the opinion (evidence) of a medical witness as to state of accused's mind (past and present), Weir II; 583. See also 9 B. L. R. 171 = 17 Cr. L. J. 79

5. The Judges to certain questions propounded by the Judges to certain questions. CL and Fin. 200 = 2 Esg. Rep. 718, A

1st—What is the law respecting alleged crimes committed by persons afflicted with insane delusion in respect of one or more particular subjects or persons, as, for instance, where at the time of the commission of the alleged crime the accused knew he was acting contrary to law, but did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some supposed public benefit?

2nd—What are the proper questions to be submitted to the jury when a person, alleged to be afflicted with insane delusion respecting one or more particular subjects or persons, is charged with the commission of a crime (murder for example), and insanity is set up as a defence?

3rd—In what terms ought the question to be left to the jury, as to the prisoner's state of mind at the time when the act was committed?

"4th.—If a person, under an insane delusion as to the existing facts, commits an offence in consequence thereof, is he thereby excused?"

"5th.—Can a medical man, conversant with the disease of insanity, who never saw the prisoner previously to the trial, but who was present during the whole trial and examination of all the witnesses, be asked his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, or his opinion whether the prisoner was conscious, at the time of doing the act, that he was acting contrary to the law, or whether he was labouring under any and what delusion at the time?"

To these questions the Judges (with the exception of MAULE, J., who gave on his own account a more qualified answer) answered as follows—

To the 1st question—"Assuming that your Lordships' inquires are confined to those persons who labour under such partial delusions only, and are not in other respects insane, we are of opinion, that, notwithstanding the party did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, he is nevertheless punishable, according to the nature of the crime committed, if he knew, at the time of committing such crime, that he was acting contrary to law, by which expression we understand your Lordships to mean, the law of the land."

To the 2nd and 3rd questions—That the jury ought to be told in all cases that every man is presumed to be sane, and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crimes, until the contrary be proved to their satisfaction, and that, to establish a defence on the ground of insanity, it must be clearly proved that, at the time of the committing of the act, the party accused was labouring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong. The mode of putting the latter part of the question to the jury on these occasions has generally been, whether the accused, at the time of doing the act, knew the difference between right and wrong, which mode, though rarely, if ever, leading to any mistake with the jury, is not, as we conceive, so accurate when put generally and in the abstract, as when put to the party's knowledge of right and wrong in respect to the very act with which he is charged. If the question were to be put as to the knowledge of the accused, solely and exclusively with reference to the law of the land, it might tend to confound the jury, by inducing them to believe that an actual knowledge of the law of the land was essential in order to lead to a conviction, whereas the law is administered upon the principle that everyone must be taken conclusively to know it, without proof that he does know it. If the accused was conscious that the act was one which he ought not to do, and if that act was at the same time contrary to the law of the land, he is punishable, and the usual course, therefore has been to leave the question to the jury, whether the party accused had a sufficient degree of reason to know that he was doing an act that was wrong, and this course we think is correct, accompanied with such observations and explanations as the circumstance of each particular case may require.

To the 4th question—"The answer to this question must, of course, depend on the nature of the delusion, but making the same assumption as we did before that he labours under such partial delusion only, and is not in other respects insane, we think he must be considered in the same situation as to responsibility as if the facts with respect to which the delusion exists were real. For example, if, under the influence of his delusion he supposes another man to be in the act of attempting to take away his life and he kills that man, as he supposes, in self-defence, he would be exempt from punishment. If his delusion was that the deceased had inflicted a serious injury to his character and fortune, and he killed him in revenge for such supposed injury, he would be liable to punishment."

And to the last question—"We think the medical man, under the circumstances supposed, cannot in strictness be asked his opinion in the terms above stated, because each of those questions involves the determination of the truth of the facts deposed to which it is for the jury to decide, and the questions are not mere questions upon a matter of science, in which case such evidence is admissible. But where the facts are admitted and not disputed, and the question becomes substantially one of science only, it may be convenient to allow the question to be put in that general form, though the same cannot be insisted on as a matter of right." For decided cases in India on the subject, see 1 W. R. 1; 7 W. R. 64, 7 W. R. 42, 8 W. R. Cr. (Let.) 19; 23 C. 604; 10 B. 512, 12 M. 459; 22 C. 817; 14 B. 564; 10 C. W. N. 723; 34 C. 696; 8 P. R. 1839; 42 B. R. 1937; 16 P. W. R. 1909 — 94 P. L. R. 1909, the opinion of lay persons on the question of sanity is not of much value, 15 O. C. 321 — 14 Cr. L. J. 81.

5. Recommendation to Local Government to commute sentence.—Where the accused was not so insane as to gain the benefit of s. 84, I P C, but the Judge was of opinion that the accused was at the time of the commission of the crime suffering from mental derangement, the record was forwarded to the Local Government with a recommendation that the case may be dealt with under s 401, 23 C. 604; 10 B. 512; 16 P. W. R. 1909 = 11 Cr. L. J. 105. In 1914 U. B. R. III 28 = 16 Cr. L. J. 95 a mental derangement which fell short of unsoundness of mind described in s. 84, I P C, was held to be a good ground for passing the lesser sentence. As to the Court's power to order detention of lunatic until orders from Government were received after acquittal in the trial, see 20 Bom. L. R. 629.

471. (1) Whenever "the finding" states that the accused person committed the act alleged, the Magistrate or Court before whom or which the trial has been held, shall, if such act would, but for the incapacity found, have constituted an offence, order such person to be detained † safe custody in such place and manner as the Magistrate or Court thinks fit, ‡ "and shall report the action taken to the Local Government" §

Power of Local Government to relieve Inspector General of certain functions.

*(2) The Local Government may empower the officer in charge of the jail in which a person is confined under the provisions of section 468 or this section, to discharge all or any of the functions of the Inspector General of Prisons under †† section 473 or section 474

Note.—Original sub-secs (2) and (3) of s 471 were repealed by the Indian Lunacy Act, IV of 1912.

Note 1—Scope of the section.—Under the old section it was held that s. 471 of the Code does not compel the Court to send the accused to a lunatic asylum. All that is necessary is to see that such safeguards are taken as would keep the accused from mischief, 42 M. L. J. 72. See also 43 B. 134

In 43 B. 134 it was held that the Court can order under s 471 that the accused be detained in custody in jail until the further orders of Government and that the case be reported for further orders of Government. In 25 Bom. L. R. 286, 43 B. 134 was dissented from and it was held that under s. 471 the Court, in a case where it finds that an offence has been committed by a lunatic, must confine itself to making an order that he should be kept in safe custody. It is then for the Government to decide under their own powers the future fate of the person concerned and it was no duty of the Court to report the case for further orders of the Local Government as the last 12 words "and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government" were repealed by Act X of 1914. Under the new amendment the words "and shall report the action taken to the Local Government" are newly added. Previously the words, "and shall report the case for orders of the Local Government" which occurred at the end of sub-sec (1) were held not to authorize the Court to send the accused to a lunatic asylum or jail, but the Court had to submit a report of the case to the Local Government. Now under the new amendment a Court is competent to direct the detention of the accused in an asylum or jail. After making such order, under the new amendment, the Court is required to submit a report to the Local Government of the action taken under s 471, so under the new amendment the Court can take action under s 471 without reporting the case for the orders of the Local Government.

2. High Court will not interfere with verdict of jury.—Where the question for decision is one on which all unprofessional opinion is likely to be equally good, the High Court expressed its unwillingness to interfere with the unanimous finding of a jury of educated men, come to on evidence before them, without the very clearest proof that they were mistaken. It is the duty of the Judge and not of the High Court to report the case for the orders of Government, 49 W. R. 43.

* The words in inverted commas were substituted for the words "such judgment" by Act XVIII of 1923

† The word "detained" was substituted for the word "kept" by s 114

‡ The words in inverted commas were inserted by s 114

§ The words "and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government" were repealed by Act X of 1914

¶ This proviso was inserted by s 114

 Or aial sub-sections (2) and (3) were repealed by Act IV of 1912

†† Original sub-sec (1) was renumbered (4) by s 114

‡† The word and figure "section 472" were repealed by Act X of 1914

3. Section should be applied to accused persons who labour under defects which make their trial impossible.—In 37 P. R. 1899 it was held that in accordance with English practice when the accused persons are not insane but labour under defects which render their trial impossible they should be treated as insane persons and confined during the King's pleasure. This was followed in 13 P. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 613. See also 27 C. 365. In R v Pritchard 7 C. and P. 303, where a prisoner charged on an indictment for felony, appeared to be deaf, dumb and also of non sane mind ALDERSON, B. put three distinct issues to the jury, directing the jury to be sworn separately on each (1) Whether the prisoner was mute of malice or by the visitation of God, (2) Whether he was able to plead, (3) Whether he was sane or not, and on the last issue they were directed to inquire whether the prisoner was of sufficient intellect to comprehend the course of the proceedings of the trial, so as to make a proper defence to challenge a juror to whom he might object, and to understand the details of the evidence and he directed the jury that if there was no certain mode of communicating to the prisoner the details of the evidence so that he could clearly understand them and be able properly to make his defence to the charge against him, the jury ought to find that he was not of sane mind. See also R v Dyson, 7 C. and P. 305; R v Whitfield 3 C. and K. 121. The directions in R v Pritchard were approved of in R v Berry, 1 Q. B. D. 447 and Ex parte Emery, (1909) 3 K. B. 81. In the last case the accused was totally deaf and unable to read or write. On being called on to plead he stood mute. The jury found that he was mute by visitation of God and being again sworn found that he was not capable of conducting his defence. It was held that this finding amounted to a finding that the accused was insane within the meaning of s. 2 of the Criminal Lunatics Act, 1800 Archbold, pp. 191—194

CHAPTER XXXV.

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CERTAIN OFFENCES AFFECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

* 476. (1) When any Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court is, whether on application made to it in this behalf or otherwise, of opinion that it is expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made into any offence referred to in section 195, sub-section (1), clause (b) or clause (c), which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court, such Court may, after such preliminary inquiry, if any, as it thinks necessary record a finding to that effect and make a complaint thereof in writing signed by the presiding officer of the Court, and shall forward the same to a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction, and may take sufficient security for the appearance of the accused before such Magistrate or if the alleged offence is non bailable may, if it thinks necessary so to do, send the accused in custody to such Magistrate and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence before such Magistrate"

For the purposes of this sub-section a Chief Presidency Magistrate shall be deemed to be a Magistrate of the first class

(2) Such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed according to law and as if upon complaint made under section 200

(3) Where it is brought to the notice of such Magistrate, or of any other Magistrate to whom the case may have been transferred, that an appeal is pending against the decision arrived at in a judicial proceeding out of which the matter has arisen, he may, if he thinks fit, at any stage adjourn the hearing of the case until such appeal is decided

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section, the Select Committee say—

"The changes that we have made in the proposed s. 476 are not of great importance. We have provided that a Court can act on application made to it or suo motu and after such preliminary inquiry, if any as it thinks necessary. For the words "committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding" we have substituted the phraseology used in the proposed new s. 185. We have substituted "may make a complaint" for "shall make a complaint" and in view of the criticism of the words "nearest first class Magistrate" we have provided that a complaint should be sent to a first-class Magistrate having jurisdiction. For the words "if he thinks expedient in the interests of justice, which we think might hamper a Magistrate in the exercise of his powers of adjournment, we have substituted 'if he thinks fit'." In order to give effect to the decision arrived at in our consideration of cl. 114 that proceedings under s. 476, etc., should be subject to revision, we have introduced words which will make it necessary for the Court to record an order.

† Sections 476, 476 (A) and 476 (B) were substituted for section 476 by Act XVIII of 1923

The whole section has been redrafted by the recent amendment. And the changes made by the amendment are given in the Select Committee Report quoted above.

Under the new amendment, under s. 476 the Court can act on application made to it or suo motu and may make a complaint to a first-class Magistrate having jurisdiction. Under the old law it was not necessary to make a formal complaint and the Court could send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest first class Magistrate. But under the new amendment it is necessary that such first class Magistrate should have jurisdiction to try the case.

Instead of "and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding" the amending Act has substituted the words "which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court." The probable effect of this amendment is to widen in some respects and in other respects to restrict the scope of the section.

Sub-sec. (3) added by the amending Act gives power to a Magistrate to adjourn the hearing of a case until the decision of an appeal preferred over the proceeding out of which the matter arose.

I—SCOPE OF SECTION

Notes.—1 The changes introduced by the amendment.—The changes effected by the amendment are noted above, s. 476 had to be re-cast in view of the changes introduced in s. 195 under the amending Act (XVIII of 1923). Under s. 195 as amended the necessity of a sanction for the cognizance of certain offences mentioned in that section is dispensed with. Now s. 185 lays down the conditions necessary for the cognizance of certain offences by a Court. Under the old s. 195 a sanction or a complaint could be preferred by a Court of law. But now under that section as amended no sanction can be given. In short s. 195 now deals with the limitations that exist to the cognizance of offences by a Court.

Analysing s. 195 therefore it will be seen that under cl. (a) of sub-sec. (1) a complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or of some other public servant to whom he is subordinate, is now necessary for the cognizance of offences under ss. 172 to 183, I P C. The complaint referred to in cl. (a) is an ordinary complaint against an accused person, filed by the public officer concerned. The only difference being that there is no necessity of examining a public servant as complainant as provided in s. 200, sub-cl. (aa).

Clause (b) of s. 195 provides that offences under ss. 193 to 196, 199, 200, 205 to 211 and 223, I P C., can only be taken cognizance of on the complaint in writing of a Court concerned, under circumstances mentioned in cl. (b).

Clause (c) of s. 195 provides that in the case of ss. 463, 471, 475, 476, I P C., cognizance can only be taken on the complaint in writing of the Court concerned under circumstances mentioned in cl. (c).

As far as the complaints by public servants under cl. (a) are concerned, there is no section in the Code requiring any special procedure with regard to such complaints. The public servants concerned in the prosecution of offences mentioned in cl. (a) are reasonably expected to file a direct complaint against an accused person. (See Report of the Select Committee quoted at p. 440 under s. 195.)

But with regard to offences mentioned in cls. (b) and (c) a special procedure is laid down under s. 476. Under that section a Court can only proceed by making a complaint with regard to an offence which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court. It should be remarked that s. 476 is the only section that authorizes a Court to proceed against delinquents under cls. (b) and (c) of s. 195. It is already stated that now there can neither be a complaint nor a sanction under s. 195. See 25 Bom. L. R. 239.

A sanction to prosecute granted after September 1st, 1923, when the Criminal Procedure Code of 1898 was amended by Act XVIII of 1923, is illegal, (51 C. 552 followed) 25 Bom. L. R. 1235.

2. Under the old Code there was a conflict of decision as to the working of ss. 195 and 476. In some cases (e.g. 32 B. 184, 40 M. 100; 42 M. 540 (F.B.)) it was held that ss. 195 and 476 must be read together and were supplementary and not independent of each other. These cases held that s. 476 must be read along with s. 195 and the qualifications mentioned in s. 195 are to be treated as incorporated in the provisions of s. 476 and it was further held that an offence under s. 467, I P C., committed by a person not a party to the proceeding does not come within the purview of s. 476 and therefore the Court is not competent to direct prosecution of such a person (40 M. 100). But in 32 M. 49, SANKARAN NAIR, J., held that s. 476 is a self-contained section and the power of the Court to direct a prosecution under s. 476 is not restricted by the circumstances mentioned in s. 195. Therefore it was held that under s. 476 a Court can direct the prosecution of a person for an offence under s. 467, I P C., though he was not a party to the proceeding in that Court (32 M. 49; 40 A. 26; 15 B. 581; 14 Bom. L. R. 968; 34 C. 551), 40 A. 24.

Now under the present amendment of both the sections, it seems that the Legislature intends that both ss. 195 and 476 must be read together and that cls. (b) and (c) of s. 195 must be treated as incorporated in s. 476 and therefore s. 476 can only apply to those offences mentioned in s. 195 if they are committed by the person or in the circumstances mentioned therein, and therefore the Court is not competent to pass an order under s. 476 directing the prosecution of a person who is not a party to the proceeding for an offence under s. 467, I P C. Under the present amendment s. 195 lays down the necessity of a complaint by specified persons for the cognizance of offences and s. 476 lays down the procedure that is to be followed in cases of offences mentioned in cls. (b) and (c) of s. 195. Therefore it is clear that s. 476 deals with the procedure required to be followed under s. 195. The cases holding contrary views on the interpretation of ss. 195 and 476 are however noted below.

3. Relation between ss. 195 and 476—

(i) Is s. 476 supplementary to s. 195?—Under cls. (b) and (c) of s. 195 it is open not only to the Court trying the case, but also to the Court to which such Court is subordinate either to grant a sanction or to prefer a complaint for the prosecution of the offender, although the superior Court may have had nothing to do with the trial of the case itself. How that complaint may be preferred is not stated in that section, but stated in s. 476 (1), because cl. (2) of this section says that the proceedings adopted by a Court under cl. (1) shall be treated as being in the nature of a complaint. 32 B. 184. "The confession that so often arises on this subject would disappear if Magistrates would regard the first three subsections of s. 195, the last four subsections of s. 195 and the two subsections of s. 476 as the three subdivisions of one section, the first laying down the two main subjects to be dealt with, sanctions and complaints, the second dealing with sanctions and the third with complaints," 9 N. L. R. 154 = 19 Cr. L. J. 33. But the Madras High Court has dissented from this view, 32 M. 49 (F.B.) where WHITE, C.J., expresses the opinion (at p. 54) that s. 476 is a self-contained section. Sub-sec. (1) gives the Court power to put the law in motion and sub-sec. (2) provides for the procedure to be followed when the law has been put in motion. SANKARAN NAIR, J., (at pp. 53-55) is also of opinion that an order under s. 476 is not a complaint under s. 195, but it is also open to a Court instead of following the procedure prescribed by s. 476 to present a complaint like any other ordinary person before a Magistrate. But MILLER, J., approves of 32 B. 184 and dissents from the view of the majority. See also 7 A. 871; 21 M. 124; 5 Bom. L. R. 1160 = 6 Cr. L. J. 326 and see Weir II, 396, where it was held that a Court is not precluded by this section from sanctioning the institution of a complaint by an officer of the Court or otherwise, instead of itself sending down the accused to a Magistrate of the first class.

(ii) "Offence referred to in s. 195—The sections must be read together—These words do not mean merely the offences covered by the sections of the I P C. mentioned in s. 195, but they mean the offences covered by those sections and committed under the qualifying circumstances mentioned in s. 195, a number of decisions is in favour of the view that the qualification mentioned in s. 195 (b) is to be treated as incorporated in the latter provision, (see 7 C. L. J. 373 = 12 C. W. N. 575 = 7 Cr. L. J. 349; 5 C. W. N. 108), but upon the question of the effect of cl. (c) of s. 195 upon s. 476, judicial opinion is divided (see 18 B. 581; 22 C. 1004; 14 Bom. L. R. 988 = 13 Cr. L. J. 843; contra 15 M. 224), 37 C. 250. In 18 M. L. T. 493 = 16 Cr. L. J. 797, it was held following 15 M. 224, that s. 476 applies only to those offences mentioned in s. 195 if they are committed by the person or in the circumstances mentioned therein and therefore a Court is not competent to pass an order under s. 476 directing the prosecution of a person not a party to the proceeding for an offence under s. 467, I P. C. See 36 M. L. J. 449 (F.B.). The wider view held in 22 C. 1004; 18 B. 581; 14 Bom. L. R. 988 = 13 Cr. L. J. 843 and the dictum of SANKARAN NAIR, J., in 32 M. 49—57, that s. 476 must be construed as being entirely self contained and that the offences mentioned in s. 195 must be referred to without any of the restrictions of qualifications that are to be found there as to the circumstances in which the offence is committed, was not adopted. See also 12 P. R. 1903. See 21 Cr. L. J. 86.

4. Difference between complaint under s. 195 and order under s. 476.—Where offences against public justice are committed, it will be well, if Courts availed themselves more fully of the provisions of this section, instead of leaving the prosecution to private parties who often use the sanction granted to them for the gratification of private ends, 26 B. 785. In Wair II, 589, the proceedings of a Sessions Court according sanction under s. 195, of its own motion, without notice to the parties concerned and the forwarding of these proceedings to a District Magistrate, instead of to the nearest Magistrate of the first class were not viewed as taken under this section and were set aside as illegal.

(i) S. 195 is not confined to judicial proceedings while s. 476 is so restricted

(ii) A complaint may be made under s. 195 when the matter requires investigation, but an order under s. 476 can be passed only when a prima facie case is made out.

(iii) The complaint under s. 195 must be made before a Magistrate having jurisdiction under the ordinary provisions of the Code while s. 476 confers an exclusive jurisdiction on the 'nearest' first-class Magistrate who may not have any power to try if a complaint were laid before him under s. 195. See Notes 52 and 53.

(iv) The Magistrate to whom a case is sent under s. 476 has to dispose of the case after 'inquiry' or 'trial' as the case may be, but not upon the result of any investigation by a Police-officer, etc., as a Magistrate taking cognizance of a complaint under s. 195 is entitled to do under s. 203

(v) A first-class Magistrate cannot order an investigation into a case sent to him under s. 476 as there is no examination of the complainant

(vi) The High Court has power to revise the orders passed under s. 476 at least by Civil or Criminal Courts, but it has no power to reject or to direct the Magistrate to reject a complaint preferred under s. 195—Per SANKARAN NAIR, J., in 32 M. 49 at pp. 57-58.

(vii) An order granting sanction is subject to an appeal under s. 195, while there is no appeal against an order under s. 476, 34 C. 551 (F.B.)

(viii) A sanction or a complaint under s. 195 may be given or made at any time, but an order under s. 476 must be made promptly, 34 C. 551; 32 M. 49

5. Under the old section a Presidency Magistrate could not fall within the definition of a Magistrate of the first class as used in this section.—But now under the present amendment by the addition of the last paragraph to sub-sec. (1). The Chief Presidency Magistrate is regarded as a Magistrate of the first class for purposes of this section. So rulings in 9 Bom. L. R. 1160 = 6 Cr. L. J. 326 and 32 M. 49 at p. 57, have become obsolete.

5-A.—As to the relation between this section and s. 195, see 17 Cr. L. J. 470, 473; 1 Pat. L. J. 298 = 18 Cr. L. J. 797.

5-B. Whether ss. 476 and 476-A apply to a forged document produced in Court, the person forging the document neither being a party to the proceeding nor producing the document in Court.—A person who possibly forged the document which was produced in Court cannot be proceeded against under s. 476-A of the Code if there be no grounds for supposing that he did so for the purpose of using it in Court and there is nothing to show that it was he who used the document in Court, 28 C. W. N. 880.

II.—COURTS EMPOWERED TO ACT UNDER THIS SECTION.

6. What is a Court?—Notes 11 to 16 to s. 435 The word 'Court' in this section evidently means a Judge or body of Judges to whom the public administration of justice as regards any particular subject or subjects has been delegated by the Government. The test for deciding whether a particular officer is a Court does not depend upon whether he is empowered to take evidence, e.g., an arbitrator or commissioner appointed to take evidence does not constitute a Court. There may be Courts like Appellate Courts who are not empowered to take evidence but decide upon evidence taken by others. There need not be two parties arrayed as opponents. The test is whether there was alms before the officer. See R v Woodhouse, (1906) 2 K. B. 501. He must have been given jurisdiction by the constituted authorities to deal out justice in any particular defined class of cases, 38 M. 72 approving 25 M. 121 where it was held that a Tahsildar acting under Income-tax Act III of 1869 was a Court as he was a tribunal empowered to deal with a particular matter and authorized to receive evidence bearing on that matter in order to enable him to arrive at a determination. See also 37 B. 265 where 17 C. 872 is followed and Royal Aquarium v Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 431.

A Court to which an application purporting to be under s. 83, Transfer of Property Act, is made is entitled under s. 476 of the Code to make a complaint with respect to documents filed with the application, & P. 24

6-B. The Court which tried a case and not the Court in which the complaint was merely filed, is empowered under s. 476 to complain—Where on a complaint having been transferred to another Court and dismissed under s. 203, the Magistrate before whom the complaint was filed took action under s. 476 for s. 211, I P C., and transferred the same for action to another Magistrate. Held, that the Court before which the complaint was filed had no jurisdiction to proceed under s. 476. If a complaint under s. 476 is to be made, it should be made by the Court which tried the case and not by the Court before which the complaint was merely filed. 30 C. W. N. 504.

7. Section not applicable to Village Magistrates in Madras—Village Magistrates in the Madras Presidency are not bound in the circumstances mentioned in this section to follow the procedure laid down herein. A complaint of any offence referred to in s. 195, when made by a Village Munsiff, is, therefore, sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate complained to, to inquire into the offence—M H C Pro, 6th July, 1885

8 What are not Courts within the meaning of this section—

(i) Registrar under the Land Registration Act III of 1877—Having regard to the provisions of s. 483 a Registrar under the Land Registration Act III of 1877 is not a Court, Civil, Criminal or Revenue, within the meaning of this section, therefore if in an inquiry under s. 74 of the said Act, false evidence is given before him, he cannot send the offender to a Magistrate under this section, 2 C. W. N. 244. See Note 28 to s. 195

(ii) Registration Officer under the Registration Act—See 14 Bom. L. R. 970 = 13 Cr. L. J. 845; 16 Bom. L. R. 946 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 264 = 16 Cr. L. J. 106. In 1 Bom. L. R. 686, the accused on the sanction of the District Registrar were prosecuted for giving false evidence and convicted and sentenced, but the High Court reversed the conviction and sentence on the ground that the statements being outside the question before the Registrar viz., the execution of the documents, the District Registrar was not "acting in execution of that act." In 10 C. W. N. 222 = 2 C. L. J. 619 = 3 Cr. L. J. 112 it was held that a District Registrar is not a Court empowered to act under this section while holding a departmental inquiry into certain alleged irregularities against a Sub Registrar. Where a District Registrar on receipt of a complaint against a Sub-Registrar held a departmental inquiry, found the complaint to be false and made a report to himself as District Magistrate and in this latter capacity sanctioned prosecution of the complainant under ss. 182 and 211, I P C., held, whether he purported to act under s. 195 or s. 476 the order was bad. He could not take action under s. 476 as the alleged offence or offences could not be said to have been committed before him or brought to his notice as a Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, 11 C. L. J. 111 = 11 Cr. L. J. 212

Where the District Registrar who was also the District Magistrate found a certain document to be a forgery and ordered the prosecution of the party for an offence under s. 471, I P C., held that although the District Registrar was not a Civil Criminal or Revenue Court within the meaning of s. 476 of the Code, he could, as District Magistrate take cognizance of the offence under s. 190 (i) (c), and that the presentation of the document before the Sub-Registrar was a sufficient user of the document. 2 P. 459.

(iii) Collector holding inquiry for determining who shall pay stamp duty, not a Court—In 7 C. W. N. 793, a document was presented for registration to a Sub-Registrar who impounded and sent it to the Collector. The alleged executant, when called upon to pay the penalty, denied execution and the Collector ordered a Deputy Collector to hold an inquiry On the report of the Deputy Collector that the document was a forgery, the Collector acting under this section, directed the prosecution of the person who presented the document for registration. Held, that neither the Collector nor the Deputy Collector acted as a Court in making the inquiry for determining who should be called upon to pay the stamp duty and penalty.

(iv) Collector holding inquiry under s 46 of the Land Revenue Act (U P III of 1901).—A Collector holding an inquiry under s. 46 of the Land Revenue Act (U P III of 1901) acts merely as a Revenue Officer and not as a Court, 13 O. C. 193 = 11 Cr. L. J. 814.

(v) Collector under the Land Acquisition Act.—A Deputy Collector acting under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial officer, nor can he be properly regarded as a Revenue Court within the terms of this section. He has no authority given to him to administer an oath or require verification of claims. Therefore he cannot take cognizance of any offence committed in the course of proceedings before him and send the offenders to a Magistrate under this section, 27 C. 820 followed in 7 C. W. N. 249. See 6 A. 103

(vi) Officer holding departmental or executive inquiry not a Court.—See Note 19 See 15 A. L. J. 634.

(vii) Election Commissioners are not a Court within the meaning of s. 476, 47 A. 934 = 23 A. L. J. 845; 46 A. 611; 23 A. L. J. 355.

9. What Courts held competent to act under this section—

(i) Income-tax Collector is a Court.—In 36 M. 72 it was held that an Income-tax Collector holding an inquiry under the Income tax Act is a Revenue Court. In 8 Bom. L. R. 477 = 4 Cr. L. J. 34, it was held that an Income-tax Collector is not a Court within the meaning of this section and not being a Court, the High Court was not competent to revise an order made by him purporting to be under this section. But in 33 B. 642 (F.B.) it was held that an Income-tax Collector was a Revenue Court within the meaning of cls. (b) and (c) of s. 195. In 44 P. R. 1905 = 187 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 123, it was held that a Collector hearing objections to the assessment under the Income-tax Act II of 1886, is a Revenue Court and his proceedings are judicial proceedings so that an order made by him under this section, when he found a false declaration had been made to him within the meaning of s. 25 of the Income tax Act is perfectly valid and though the High Court cannot revise such an order of the Collector, the Board of Revenue can. See also 4 A. L. J. 701 = 1907 A. W. N. 277 = 8 Cr. L. J. 350; 3 B. L. R. 66 = 10 Cr. L. J. 395 and Note 13 under s. 435. A Collector deciding an objection to the assessment of income-tax may possibly be regarded as a Revenue Court (44 P. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 123) and an order arising out of the assessment proceedings if passed under s. 476 may be open to revision by the High Court but if the order for prosecution was passed not by the officer hearing the objection but on his report by the Collector under s. 36 of the Income-tax Act such an order cannot be revised by the High Court (3 B. L. R. 66 = 10 Cr. L. J. 395, 13 Cr. L. J. 2 (Oadh). An Income-tax Officer adjudicating upon a petition for reduction of income-tax or hearing an appeal under the Income tax Act is a Court.

(ii) Officers under the Bengal Tenancy Act VIII of 1885.—A Collector who is called on under the Bengal Tenancy Act to appraise crops, is a Court, 17 C. 872. Under Rule 40 of Bengal Act VIII of 1885 the Assistant Settlement Officer has all powers exercisable by a Civil Court in the trial of suits and receiving evidence on oath is within such power, 37 C. 52. A Sub-Divisional Officer to whom an inquiry under s. 55, cl. (3) of the Tenancy Act is transferred is competent to record a proceeding under this section, 40 C. 465, 43 C. 1088

(iv) Magistrate holding an inquiry under the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879.—A Magistrate holding an inquiry under s. 23 of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, is a Court, 9 A. L. J. 156 = 13 Cr. L. J. 190. See Note 16 (iii) (a) to s. 435

(v) Tahsildar holding inquiry under Madras Act III of 1869.—A Tahsildar when holding an inquiry as to whether a transfer of names in the land register should be made or not, is a Revenue Court and, as such, competent to act under this section, 24 M. 121. See Notes 36 at (i), p. 501

(vi) Competency of first Court which has partly heard the case, to act under the section after the case is subsequently transferred to another Court.—The circumstance that a case has passed out of hands of a Court, for instance, by an order of transfer, after it has been partly heard does not deprive

Court of its jurisdiction to take proceedings against a witness under s. 476 of the Code, nor is that jurisdiction taken away by the circumstance that the second Court may have formed a different opinion as to the veracity of the witness, 44 A. 642.

10 Competency of successor to take action under this section.—All the High Courts except Punjab are now agreed that the power being vested in a Court, the successor in office of a Judge is competent to institute proceedings under this section. But see now 4 Lah 58 below.

Calcutta.—The power to direct prosecution being conferred on the Court and not on the individual officer who fills the judicial office at a particular time, it cannot be laid down as a general rule that in no case can the successor make an order under s. 476 without an independent investigation, 15 C. W. N. 691 = 14 C. L. J. 123 = 12 Cr. L. J. 209. Accused were called upon by a Munsiff B to show cause why they should not be prosecuted for forcibly resisting a writ of attachment issued by him in execution of a decree. During the pendency of the proceedings B was transferred and his successor after a protracted hearing passed orders under s. 476 directing prosecution. The District Judge following 35 C. 551, set aside the order under s. 476 as the offence in respect of which prosecution was ordered was not brought to the notice of the officer who made the order but to that of his predecessor. Held, that the Munsiff had jurisdiction as there was nothing in s. 476 to warrant the withholding from the word 'Court' its natural meaning with the sense of continuity that it implies notwithstanding the change of officer. 37 C. 642 (P.B.)

The following cases are now of no authority on this point—In 35 C. 551 a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court affirming the decision in 9 C. W. N. 839 = 4 Cr. L. J. 209 held, that the expression 'Court' in this section means the particular Judge who heard the case and does not include his successor in office. It is the Judge who tries the case who alone can exercise the summary power conferred by this section and such power is exercisable only at or immediately after the conclusion of the trial in which the offence is alleged to have been committed—Per MACLEAN, C.J. (BRETT and MITRA JJ., concurring). The responsibility of ordering prosecution under this section rests on the officer who has heard the witnesses and knows of his personal knowledge whether the circumstances call for summary proceedings or not—Per HARRINGTON, J. But the word 'Court' in the section need not necessarily mean the same judicial officer—Per GEIDT, J., dissenting from the majority view see also 11 C. W. N. 119 and 33 C. 193. In 33 C. 114, an affidavit by the petitioner was filed before an Additional Munsiff in a suit pending before him. On the transfer of that officer, the suit was made over to the second Munsiff, but the miscellaneous petition in which the affidavit was filed was taken up by the first Munsiff who ordered the prosecution of the petitioner under this section. Held, that such an order could only be passed by the officer before whom the affidavit was filed and as the affidavit was filed before the Additional Munsiff, the order of the first Munsiff was ultra vires.

Allahabad.—In 34 A. 393 it was held following 37 C. 642 that the word 'Court' in s. 476 includes the successor of the Judge before whom the alleged offence was committed. The Allahabad High Court in 6 A. J. 392 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219 followed the dissenting judgment of GEIDT, J., in 34 C. 551 and held that the words 'brought under its notice' are wide enough to cover an offence which may have been committed in another forum and on some previous occasion making an order under this section. 392 that where a Magistrate commences proceedings in office has power to continue the proceedings. See also 10 A. L. J. 257 = 13 Cr. L. J. 707; 12 A. L. J. 1003 = 16 Cr. L. J. 97, 46 A. 851.

rd 496 must be read udge in the same essor and 34 C. 551
is dissented from 27 Bom. L. R. 616 = 49 B. 710.

Madras.—The power to direct a prosecution under s. 476 is conferred on the Court and not on the individual Magistrate who tried the case 29 M. 331. This must however, be held subject to the conditions laid down in 31 M. 140 and 37 M. 49 (P.B.)

Burma.—A Magistrate who pronounces judgment in a case partly heard by himself and partly by his predecessor is competent to proceed under s. 476 against a witness who deposed before his predecessor, 4 Bar. L. T. 246 = 12 Cr. L. J. 521; 8 Rang 48.

Contra—Punjab.—It is only the individual Judge or Magistrate before whom the offence was committed in Court who can take action under this section (34 C. 551 and 35 C. 114 followed, 29 M. 331 not followed). 6 P. R. 1909 = 12 P. W. R. 1909 = 10 Cr. L. J. 158 = 17 Cr. L. J. 40. It was held in 10 P. L. R. 1911 = 4 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 68 (following 33 C. 114 and 6 P. R. 1909) that even where the preliminary inquiry has been commenced by the proper officer who issued that notice, his successor cannot be competent to complete the inquiry and pass an order under s. 476, but see 4 Lah. 58.

The word "Court" in s. 476 of the Code includes the successor of a Judge before whom the alleged offence was committed or to whose notice the commission of it was brought in the course of a judicial proceeding, and therefore it was held that the successor of the Sessions Judge could direct a prosecution under s. 476 though the alleged false evidence was given before his predecessor, 4 Lah. 58. See 7 Lah. 108.

11. Powers of Appellate Court to institute proceedings under this section.—Under the old section it was held that where a Subordinate Judge refuses to grant sanction, a District Judge has on appeal, jurisdiction to take action under this section, but in so doing, he should himself proceed according to sub-sec. (b) of s. 195 read with this section, 32 B. 184 where 34 C. 551 (F.B.) is dissented from. It is not competent to the District Judge to direct the Subordinate Judge to prosecute the offender. On disposal of an appeal, it is competent to the Court of First Instance as also to the Court of Appeal to take action under this section, 18 C. L. J. 589 = 14 Cr. L. J. 32. But it is an unusual and not a proper procedure for an Appellate Court, which did not hear the evidence, to order the prosecution for perjury of a witness for making false statements in his deposition in the Lower Court on materials in support of the prosecution, which were not before the Lower Court and which the witness had no opportunity for explaining while in the box, 10 C. W. N. 1091 = 4 Cr. L. J. 219. But see now s. 476 A which expressly authorizes the Appellate Court to take action under s. 476.

12. Powers of High Court in revision to take steps under this section.—In 11 A. L. J. 113 = 14 Cr. L. J. 127, the High Court in revision set aside an order under s. 195 and directed proceedings under s. 476. In 37 C. 13 it was held on the authority of 34 C. 551 that a District Judge was not competent while dealing with an application under s. 195 (6) to set aside the sanction and himself take steps under this section and the Full Bench ruling prevented the High Court as much as a District Judge from taking action under s. 476. In view, however, of 37 C. 842 (F.B.) this case cannot be regarded as good authority. Calling up records under s. 435 is not a judicial proceeding, 7 M. 560 (see Note 21 to s. 435) and therefore a District Magistrate has no power to make an order under this section merely on calling up the records. In this case the application was made after the lapse of one year from the termination of the case in which the offence was committed in the Sub Magistrate's Court. See 1908 A. W. N. 74 = 8 A. L. J. 582 = 7 Cr. L. J. 304. See also the Select Committee Report in the preliminary note, supra.

Since the amendment of the Code by Act XVIII of 1923 the power of private prosecution is taken away in connection with offences relating to proceedings in Court and the amended Code has given a definite right of appeal against complaints drawn up by Courts as a general rule. It is inadvisable for the High Court to interfere in revision with an appellate order refusing to withdraw complaints. 7 Lah. 103; 26 Bom. L. R. 289.

III.—LIMIT OF TIME FOR TAKING ACTION.

13. Appropriate time for making an order under this section.—There is nothing in this section either impliedly or expressly limiting the time within which action under s. 476 should be taken. All that can be said is that the offences in respect of which action has to be taken being offences against the administration of justice, prompt action is desirable. At the same time, the Court will have to take into consideration the advisability of taking action before the proceedings in which the offence is committed are concluded or before the appeal in any such proceedings is over or before the connected civil litigation is disposed of except in Madras and in some cases in Calcutta, the other High Courts are of opinion, that no time limit ought to be imposed for the Courts to act under this section.

Madras.—The power conferred by this section can be exercised by the Court only in the course of the judicial proceeding or at its conclusion, or so shortly after as to make it really the continuation of the same proceeding in the course of which the offence was committed or brought to its notice. 32 M. 45 (F.B.); 31 M. 140 (F.B.) MILLER, J., however, who dissented from the majority view was of opinion that though the section contemplates immediate action, it does not expressly or impliedly exclude what may be called action subsequent. The words 'when the Court is of opinion' are wide enough to embrace any point of time at which the opinion is formed whether during or after the close of the proceedings and there is nothing in the rest of the section to indicate that the opinion must in all cases be formed as soon as the offence is committed, 31 M. 140 at p. 150 and 32 M. 49 at p. 53. See also 15 M. L. J. 439 = 3 Cr. L. J. 118; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 98 = 12 Cr. L. J. 327. In 36 M. 72, SUNDARA IYER, J., with whom SADASIVA IYER, J., concurred, was of opinion that delay in directing the prosecution cannot be regarded as one of entire absence of jurisdiction in the Court in passing the order. "The Court has inherent jurisdiction to make the order. Taking it that it is bound to do so at a particular time it is not easy to say that the passing of the order after the lapse of time would be a ground for holding it to be made without jurisdiction. At any rate I do not think that the High Court would be bound to quash the proceedings on account of a defect of jurisdiction of this character." A delay of five days is not material, if proceedings are taken within reasonable promptitude, that is, so shortly after the conclusion of the proceedings as to make it practically the continuation of the same proceeding, it will suffice, (1912) M. W. N. 1206 = 13 Cr. L. J. 823. In 17 Cr. L. J. 515 it was held that action under this section could be taken while the proceedings are not finished, 44 M. 422 (F.B.)

Illustrations—(a) A witness was examined on the 17th September and judgment was delivered on the 8th October. On the 29th October the Judge issued notice to the witness why he should not be prosecuted. The witness's explanation was received on the 15th November and the order for prosecution was made on the 18th November. held by the Full Bench that the order made after an interval of three weeks was made without jurisdiction. 32 M. 49 (MILLER, J., dissenting), 31 M. 140 (F.B.) followed and 32 B. 184 not followed. (b) On information given to the Police by the petitioner an investigation was made and a preliminary inquiry held at the conclusion of which on the 11th July, the accused was discharged. On the 28th August, the District Magistrate refused to set aside the order of discharge. On 25th September, a notice to show cause was issued and on the 3rd November an order was made for the prosecution of the complainant under s. 211, I P C., held by the Full Bench (MILLER, J., dissenting) that the order was without jurisdiction, 31 M. 140 following Weir II, 597; 15 M. L. J. 439 = Weir II, 601-A and 34 C. 551; 29 M. 331 considered. See 23 M. L. T. 18 where the last case was followed. (c) In the absence of anything to show that the Magistrate's order under s. 476 is part of the proceedings in the trial in which the alleged offence was committed, it is made without jurisdiction, 6 M. L. T. 92 = 10 Cr. L. J. 8, 8 M. L. T. 81 = 11 Cr. L. J. 479. (d) During the pendency of an execution case which was dismissed on 27th July, 1911 it was brought to the notice of the Judge that an offence under s. 186, I P C., had been committed. On an application for sanction, order was made on the 25th November under this section. held, order bad. 23 M. L. J. 593 = 14 M. L. T. 512 = 1913 M. W. N. 1002 = 14 Cr. L. J. 824. (e) Where in execution proceedings a District Munsiff passed an order under s. 476 not of his own motion, but on the suggestion of the District Judge 19 days after the termination of the execution proceedings, held the delay was fatal to the validity of the order. 10 M. L. T. 333 = 12 Cr. L. J. 396. See also 15 Cr. L. J. 283, where proceedings were instituted five months after close of trial.

Calcutta.—Action under this section should, as far as possible, be prompt and expeditious, 37 C. 644. The power conferred by s. 476 is exercisable only at or immediately after the conclusion of the trial in which the offence was committed. "The terms of s. 476 indicate that the desirability of prosecuting the offender must be present to the mind of the Court during the proceedings in the course of which the offence was committed or brought to its notice. It was never intended that when the proceedings had terminated, the attention of the Court should be subsequently drawn by some private person to the fact that in those proceedings there had been committed some offence in contempt of the Court's authority or against public justice which deserved punishment. The commission of the offence and the desirability of a prosecution should be so patent as to move the Court at the time to take action without the stimulus of an application by some interested person"—GEIDT, J., in 34 C. 551 (F.B.) quoted with approval by WHITE, C.J., in 31 M. 140. See also 40 C. 444.

(b) The petitioner laid an information before the Police which the Police reported to be false. On this report the Deputy Commissioner directed a judicial inquiry into the matter by a Deputy Magistrate who, after inquiry came to the conclusion that the information was false and submitted his report on the 4th February, 1908, to the Deputy Commissioner for orders, who ordered the prosecution of the petitioner under s. 211, I P C. The order was set aside by the High Court following 33 C. 30 as one made without jurisdiction and the record was returned to the Deputy Magistrate. The Magistrate again inquired into the matter and on the 14th August, 1908, ordered the prosecution of the petitioner, held, the order was legal, 13 C. W. N. 1265 = 11 Cr. L. J. 4. ~

Calcutta.—Action under this section should, as far as possible be prompt and expeditious, 37 C. 662. The power conferred by s. 476 is exercisable only at or immediately after the conclusion of the trial in which the offence was committed. The terms of s. 476 indicate that the desirability of prosecuting the offender must be present to the mind of the Court during the proceedings in the course of which the offence was committed or brought to its notice. It was never intended that when the proceedings had terminated, the attention of the Court should be subsequently drawn by some private person to the fact that in those proceedings there had been committed some offence in contempt of the Court's authority or against public justice which deserved punishment. The commission of the offence and the desirability of a prosecution should be so patent as to move the Court at the time to take action without the stimulus of an application by some interested person.—GEORGE, J., in 34 C. 551 (F.B.) quoted with approval by WHITE, C.J., in 31 M. 140. See also 40 C. 444.

Illustrations—(a) An order made four months after a criminal trial had concluded, by the successor in office of the Magistrate who had tried the case directing the prosecution under s. 476 is bad, 34 C. 551. (b) The petitioner laid an information before the Police which the Police reported to be false. On this report the Deputy Commissioner directed a judicial inquiry into the matter by a Deputy Magistrate who, after inquiry came to the conclusion that the information was false and submitted his report on the 4th February, 1908, to the Deputy Commissioner for orders, who ordered the prosecution of the petitioner under s. 211, I P C. The order was set aside by the High Court following 33 C. 30 as one made without jurisdiction and the record was returned to the Deputy Magistrate. The Magistrate again inquired into the matter and on the 14th August, 1908, ordered the prosecution of the petitioner, held, the order was legal, 13 C. W. N. 598 = 11 Cr. L. J. 4.

Allahabad—There is nothing in s. 476 which requires a Court to take action, if at all, immediately after the conclusion of the case in which the offences are said to have been committed or within any fixed time there-after, 37 A. 344, where the Madras decisions were referred to and not followed. Except under very special circumstances, proceedings under s. 476 should be taken at an early date after the decision of the original case, 11 Cr. L. J. 20 (A). Though it is desirable that any action taken under s. 476 should be as prompt as possible, yet, s. 476 lays down more than one starting point from which such action should be taken, 6 A. L. J. 392 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219. See also 10 A. L. J. 247 = 13 Cr. L. J. 707; 34 A. 393; 1901 A. W. N. 177.

Illustrations—(a) An ex parte decree of 1907 was transferred from Court A to Court H for execution against judgment debtor N. In execution, N's objections were overruled and he was imprisoned and released in April, 1903. Another decree against N was transferred from Court B to H, in proceedings in execution of that decree in August, 1903, the Court at H found on inquiry that both the suits against N were false suits brought at the instigation of G and committed him for trial under ss. 210, 109, 467/109, 471/109 and 468/109, he d., that the committal was good. The words "brought under its notice" were wide enough to cover an offence which may have been committed in another forum and on some previous occasion provided it is brought under the notice of the Court inquiring and making an order under s. 476. The judgment of GEIDT, J., in 34 C. 551 (F.B.) approved, 81 M. 140 and 9 C. W. N. 859 discussed and not followed, 6 A. L. J. 392 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219. (b) A District Magistrate's order giving sanction refused by a Sub-Magistrate was set aside by the High Court for want of notice to accused. Thereafter the District Magistrate instituted proceedings under s. 476. Held, order bad, 11 Cr. L. J. 20 (A). (c) See also 1 A. L. J. 315 and 333. In the former a Magistrate after ceasing to preside over the Court and while engaged on some other duty in the same district made an order under this section in respect of a case tried by him. In the latter, a complainant was prosecuted under s. 211 and acquitted. After the acquittal the same Magistrate who accorded sanction for the prosecution, now acting in the capacity of a District Magistrate ordered the prosecution of the complainant for perjury. In both cases the order was set aside as calculated to bring the administration of justice into contempt. (d) The High Court in revision against an order granting sanction under s. 195 set aside the order and directed proceedings under s. 476, 11 A. L. J. 113 = 14 Cr. L. J. 127.

Bombay.—There is nothing in the language of the section which makes it incumbent upon a Court acting under it to exercise the power within any period or at any particular time. Such a construction necessitates the importing into the section of words which are not there, and for which there is no necessary implication from the language used by the Legislature, 32 B. 184 at p. 190. See also 13 B. 384 and 34 B. 83. 20 Bom. L. R. 998; 43 B. 300.

Sindh.—It will be found on careful perusal extremely difficult to extract from the words of the section any provision either impliedly or expressly limiting the time within which action should be taken. No limitation has been imposed to prevent a prosecution being filed in the ordinary way under s. 195 and it is difficult to see why it should have been thought necessary to limit the more convenient procedure under s. 476, 7 B. L. R. 187 = 13 Cr. L. J. 551 where the Bombay view was followed. See 17 Cr. L. J. 77.

IV.—IN RESPECT OF WHAT OFFENCES ACTION MAY BE TAKEN?

14. The offence must be one 'referred to in s. 195'—Scope of 'any offence referred to in s. 195'.—See Notes 2 and 3, supra. There is a conflict of authority as to whether these words mean only the offences covered by the sections of the I.P.C. mentioned in s. 195 or do they mean the offence mentioned in those sections and committed under the qualifying circumstances described in s. 195. So far as the effect of cl. (b) of s. 195 upon s. 476 is concerned, the authorities are in favour of the view that the qualification mentioned in the former section is to be treated as incorporated in the latter. See 7 C. L. J. 373 = 12 C. W. N. 575 = 7 Cr. L. J. 340 and 5 C. W. N. 106. Therefore no order for prosecution can be made under s. 476 when the alleged offence under s. 211, I.P.C., has been committed in the course of a Police investigation and not in reference to any proceeding in a Court, 14 C. W. N. 339 = 10 C. L. J. 561 = 11 Cr. L. J. 37, distinguishing 7 C. L. J. 371 = 7 Cr. L. J. 333 and 33 C. 30. As to the question of effect of cl. (c) of s. 195, 15 B. 531 and 22 C. 1004 hold the view that the qualifying circumstances mentioned in s. 195 are not to be incorporated in ss. 476 and 478 so that the Court has jurisdiction to proceed under s. 478 whether the offence of forgery was committed by a party to the proceeding or by a witness or whether it has been committed in respect of a document merely produced, but not given in evidence. See also 13 P. R. 1897. But the Madras High Court in 15 M. 224 has held that the qualification mentioned in s 195, cl (c), makes s. 476 inapplicable if the offence under s 471, I P C., has been committed in respect of a document not given in evidence. See Notes 24, 159 and 160 to s 195. See also Note 7 to 195.

15. Is it necessary that the person whose prosecution is ordered must be a party or witness in the proceedings?—See Notes 2 and 3, supra. It should be noted that under the present amendment, it appears to be intended by the Legislature that ss 195 and 476 must be read together. Section 476 is supplementary to s 195 and all the qualifications mentioned in s 195, cls. (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) must be treated as incorporated in s 476. Therefore, s 476 can apply to those offences mentioned in s 195 if they are committed by the persons or in the circumstances mentioned therein and therefore a Court may not be competent to pass an order under s 476 directing the prosecution of a person who is not a party to the proceeding in the case of an offence mentioned in cl. (c) of sub-sec. (1), s. 195. So it is submitted that the decision in 43 B. 300 holding that under s 476, a Court can direct the prosecution of a person who is not a party can no longer be supported. All that is required is that such an offence as is referred to in this section should be either committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court, provided the terms of section 195, sub-section (1) cls. (b) and (c) are satisfied.

In 24 A. L. J. 122 the effect of the amendments of ss 476 and 195 was discussed at length and the view of the learned Judges is that now after the Amending Act of 1923, sections 476 and 195 must be read together and all those conditions mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) of s 195 must be held to have been incorporated in s 476 so as to render the scope of s 476 co-extensive with cls. (b) and (c) of s 195. Also held, that under s. 476 the Court cannot prosecute by a complaint a person who is not a party to the proceeding before it as that condition is laid down by clause (c) of s 195. So a witness not being a party to the proceeding cannot be proceeded against by a complaint under s 476. But, at the same time, it will be remembered that s 195 being a restrictive section, there is nothing in that section and s. 476 to prevent the Munsiff, without recourse to s 476, from making a complaint under the ordinary law in respect of the offence under s 471, I P C., when it was committed before him by a witness who was not a party to the proceeding.

In 2 Rang 374 it is now decided that it is not open to a Court to make a complaint under s 476 of the Code in respect of any person other than persons who are parties to the proceedings before it. 3 Rang 49.

In 3 Rang. 303, 2 Rang. 374 was distinguished and it was held that in respect of offences enumerated in s 195 (1) (b) of the Code the powers of the Court to complain are not confined only to the parties before it.

It is competent to a Court to sanction the prosecution under s. 476, I P C., of a minor's guardian who applies for the probate of a forged will, 14 Bom. L. R. 968 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 212 = 13 Cr. L. J. 845. Contra—13 M. L. T. 498 = 16 Cr. L. J. 797. But a person not a party who is accidentally in Court

15-A. Whether complaint necessary under s. 476 for the prosecution of a party to a proceeding where the document produced is not given in evidence by the party himself.—It is now held by the Bombay High Court in 27 Bom. L. R. 607 = 49 B. 608 that s 195 (c) of the Criminal Procedure Code covers any document produced or given in evidence in the course of a proceeding whether produced by the party who is alleged to have committed the offence or by anyone else (5 Pat. L. J. 133 distinguished).

16. Offence under s. 467, I P C., is within the intentment of s. 195.—Though s. 467, I P C. is not mentioned in s 195, yet sanction is necessary as s. 463, I P C., which is one of the sections mentioned therein covers s 467, I P C., 14 C. W. N. 479 = 21 Cr. L. J. 280.

Offence under s 474, I P C.—No sanction is necessary for a prosecution under s. 474, I P C., 19 C. W. N. 125 = 16 Cr. L. J. 309.

17. "Offences committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court."—Under the old section action could be taken with regard to offences committed before a Court or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding. Under the new amendment the words 'and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding' are dropped and in their stead the words 'which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court' are substituted. The probable effect of this, it is submitted, would be to restrict the scope of the section and perhaps cases like 6 A. L. J. 392 and 40 A. 118 in which the offence was committed neither before the Court nor in relation to a proceeding in that Court but in another jurisdiction, will not be covered by the wording of the present section.

The following cases under the old section are retained for their academic interest

Under the old section offence must be committed before the Court or brought to its notice in a judicial proceeding.—The powers conferred by this section can only be exercised if the offence in respect of which a prosecution is ordered has come to the cognizance of the Court in a judicial proceeding, 40 C. 444. This section applies only to judicial proceedings, 4 C. W. N. 386; 7 M. 560; 6 A. 103; 2 C. L. J. 612 = 3 Cr. L. J. 81; 13 P. R. 1915 = 184 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 251. 'All the High Courts are agreed that the offence for which a prosecution can be ordered under s. 476 must have been either committed before the Court making the order or brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding before it. There is and can be no difference of opinion on this point, because the language of the section is perfectly plain.' The illegality of passing an order in respect of an offence not complying with such conditions cannot be cured by s. 537, 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 289.

(i) Offence committed before it.—Where a District Magistrate without examining the complainant refers his case to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and report, and on the strength of that report, initiates prosecution against the complainant under s. 211, I P C., his order is void, as the offence is not committed before him, 27 C. 921. Neither the High Court nor the District Magistrate can take action under this section for an offence committed before a Subordinate Court, 87 C. 13. See also 4 C. W. N. 205; 14 C. W. N. 63, 78 and 306; 1904 A. W. N. 170 = 1 A. L. J. 481.

(ii) Court cannot take action under s. 476 for the purpose of obtaining notice of an offence.—In respect of an offence not committed before him nor brought to his notice in a judicial proceeding but brought to his notice in a Police report, a Magistrate cannot afterwards set up a judicial proceeding for the purpose of again informing himself of what he already knew so as to artificially create for himself jurisdiction under s. 476. That would be a reducing of the law to absurdity. In respect of an offence already notified to him extra-judicially he could not have jurisdiction to proceed under s. 476, 11 N. L. R. 36 = 16 Cr. L. J. 289.

(iii) The judicial proceeding in which the offence is committed need not be the same judicial proceeding in which the offence is brought to notice of Court.—See 32 B. 184, 6 A. L. J. 392 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219 and Note 13, Contra, MADRAS, see Note 13.

(iv) Brought to its notice in a judicial proceeding.—Where a District Magistrate had sanctioned the prosecution of one S, who was alleged to have given false evidence before a second class Magistrate in a Forest Case, and directed that it should take place before a Head Assistant Magistrate, held, that he had no jurisdiction to act under this section, since the alleged offence was not brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, 18 M. 487. See also 12 W. R. 69 = 4 B. L. R. Ap Cr. 9 and 34 P. R. 1886 as to the precise meaning of the words "brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding." The words "brought under its notice" are wide enough to cover an offence which may have been committed in another forum and on some previous occasions, 6 A. L. J. 392 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219. These words are wide enough to include the proceedings before an arbitrator to whom the proceedings in a suit had been referred and a decree passed on the award, 33 A. 896. Where complaint was made of an illegal seizure of cattle to a Subordinate Magistrate and that officer reported the matter to a Joint Magistrate for action on the Revenue Side, and the Joint Magistrate forwarded the complaint to a Canonment Magistrate for trial. Held, that the Joint Magistrate had no power to make the order as the alleged offence was not brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, Weir II, 593. Where the petitioner made a deposition before a Subordinate Magistrate and after the making of the deposition, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate transferred the case to his own file and the deposition of the witness was not put in evidence nor was he examined at the trial before the Head Assistant Magistrate, on account of his non appearance in obedience to a summons until after the disposal of the case. Held, that the order of the Head Assistant Magistrate made under this section in respect of the alleged false statements contained in the deposition before the Subordinate Magistrate was made without jurisdiction, because the petitioner's offence was not brought to the notice of the Head Assistant Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding, Weir II, 593. But see 21 C. W. N. 753. Similarly, where a person had been examined as a witness in support of the prosecution by a Subordinate Magistrate in a case of theft and subsequently on the transfer of the case to the file of the Head Assistant Magistrate, he did not appear before that officer in obedience to a summons nor was the deposition made before the Subordinate Magistrate put in evidence, but nevertheless the Head Assistant Magistrate in discharging the accused, found that the evidence given by the witness before the Subordinate Magistrate was false. After the trial was over the witness appeared before the Head Assistant Magistrate and deposed that what he had stated before the Subordinate Magistrate was false and thereupon the Head Assistant Magistrate directed his prosecution under this section Held, that the order of the Head Assistrate Magistrate was ultra vires and made without jurisdiction, as the evidence of this particular witness was not brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, Weir II, 593. Where the Police reported a complaint made to them to be false and the District Magistrate thereupon directed the Deputy Magistrate to make an inquiry and on receipt of the Deputy Magistrate's report, the District Magistrate passed final orders on the Police report directing, under this section, the prosecution of the complainant for an offence under s 211, I P C. Held, that the order was without jurisdiction as it was passed with regard to a matter which did not come before a District Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding, 33 C 30. The proper course in such a case should have been to direct the Police to lodge a complaint, 7 C. L. J. 371 = 7 Cr. L. J. 338. In 9 C. W. N. 1030 an application was made before the District Magistrate on behalf of a mother for the recovery of the custody of a female child from her grandfather. The District Magistrate ordered the Deputy Magistrate to hold an inquiry, in the course of which the grandfather stated that the child had already been married, and on receipt of a report to that effect from the Deputy Magistrate the District Magistrate dismissed the application. The District Magistrate on a subsequent application came to the conclusion that the statements made before the Deputy Magistrate by the grandfather and the alleged husband were false and directed their prosecution under this section. Held that the alleged offence of perjury had not been brought to the notice of the District Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of this section and therefore the proceedings of the District Magistrate were ultra vires. See also 14 C. W. N. 63 and 78. One B, a stranger presented a complaint to the District Magistrate alleging that A had given false evidence in a criminal trial in the Court of a Subordinate Magistrate and praying that A might be punished, whereupon the District Magistrate directed the prosecution of A held that the order was bad as the false statement was not made before the District Magistrate nor brought to his notice in a judicial proceeding, 13 P. W. R. 1913 = 68 P. L. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. A. J. 107. A Magistrate being of opinion that a Police witness had not spoken the truth stated in his judgment that he left the witness to the mercy of the Superintendent of Police. Thereupon the Superintendent of Police to whom the judgment was sent, forwarded the same to the District Magistrate, who remarked that it was a case in which proceedings should be taken under s 476. The Superintendent forwarded the papers to the successor of the trial Magistrate, the trial Magistrate having been transferred. The succeeding Magistrate initiated proceedings under s 476, held, he had no jurisdiction inasmuch as the offence had neither been committed before him nor was it brought to his notice in the course of any judicial proceeding, 17 Cr. L. J. 40 (Oadh). See also (1911) 2 M. W. N. Jour. 107.

18. No prosecution will lie in respect of statement in affidavits by accused persons—No oath can be administered to a person accused of an offence in connection with the criminal matter in which he is accused and therefore no prosecution will lie in respect of false statements contained in a document purporting to be an affidavit sworn to by an accused person, 3 A. L. J. 93 which follows 19 A. 200. See 12 M. 431, Weir II, 686, 1, 176.

Y.—POINTS TO BE CONSIDERED BEFORE TAKING PROCEEDINGS.

19. Notice desirable but not indispensable.—Opportunity should be given to the accused to show cause before passing an order under this section, Weir II, 587; 7 M. 189. It is always fairest and a course that should be followed that a notice should be given to the party concerned, but the section nowhere says that notice shall be given and at the best the want of notice is a mere irregularity in procedure, 10 A. L. J. 243 = 13 Cr. L. J. 707, where 11 Cr. L. J. 20 distinguished. See also 3 Bur. L. T. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 85; 1915 U. B. R. III, 83 = 17 Cr. L. J. 82. In strict law a notice is not an indispensable preliminary to an order under this section, 15 C. W. N. 691 = 16 C. L. J. 123 = 12 Cr. L. J. 209, where 20 C. 349 and 474, 7 Bom. L. R. 84 = 2 Cr. L. J. 34 are followed. When the materials before the Court are insufficient, notice must go, 6 A. 101, 17 O. C. 25 = 19 Cr. L. J. 317.

20. Preliminary inquiry must be held when necessary.—See Notes under Heading VII

21. Must order under s 476 be based on strictly legal evidence?—In 21 M. L. J. 795 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 9 = 10 M. L. T. 47 = 12 Cr. L. J. 323, SUNDARA AIVAR, J., was of opinion that an order under s. 476 based on statements which do not constitute legal evidence is illegal. The same principles which apply in granting sanction should be followed in passing orders under this section. The words "when any civil Court is of opinion that there is ground for inquiring into any offence" must be construed as meaning "when there is legal ground for inquiring and therefore an order based partly at least on what appeared at the preliminary investigation under s 202 was illegal" while AYLING, J., was of opinion that the wording of sub-sec. (1) is wide enough to cover the consideration of other than strictly legal evidence on the record and therefore an order under sub-sec. (1) ought not to be set aside because it proceeds (wholly or partly) on a consideration of the result of a preliminary inquiry under s 202. During a civil suit in the Court of the District Judge, a witness gave evidence. After the decision of the case the District Magistrate held a departmental inquiry, forwarded the proceedings to the District Judge and applied for sanction to prosecute the witness for forgery. The District Judge refused sanction but on perusing the records of the departmental inquiry issued notices to the witness and directed his prosecution. Held that the Judge ought not to have looked at the records of the departmental inquiry which was not evidence in the case and that he acted with material irregularity in ordering a prosecution without having before him at least some material in the shape of evidence which went to show that there is reason to believe that the offences have been committed and without making an inquiry himself, 13 Cr. L. J. 43 (A). See also 26 M. L. J. 435 where it was held that a sanction under s. 195 need not be based on legal evidence.

22. Power given by this section must be used with great care and deliberation.—In delivering judgment in 1 C. 450, MACPHERSON, J., remarked 'The power given by this section should be used with care and due consideration. And it is by no means in every instance in which a party fails to prove his case that the Judge who has decided against such party is justified in exercising the powers given him by this section. So long as it is a case as to which there is any possible doubt, or in which it is not perfectly certain that the Judge's decision must be upheld in the event of there being an appeal in the civil suit, the Judge acts indiscreetly and wrongly if the moment he has given his judgment in the civil suit, he exercises the power given him by this section. At the same time if, in the course of the civil trial the Judge has before him clear and unmistakable proof of a criminal offence, and if, after the trial is over, he, on consideration, thinks it necessary to proceed at once, of course it may be right to do so. Judges should however, bear in mind that criminal prosecutions are frequently suggested by successful litigants merely to prevent an appeal in the civil suit, and they should be careful not to lend themselves to such suggestions too readily. They should also recollect that when they proceed under s 476, the responsibility for the prosecution rests upon the Judge entirely, such a prosecution being a very different thing from a prosecution instituted on the complaint of a private party and merely sanctioned by the Court under s 195, cl. (b). See also 8 C. 433. The order should disclose a reasonably well founded and deliberate judicial opinion that there was ground for inquiry and the power given by this section should be used with care and consideration, 1901 A. W. N. 177. See also 37 G. 13.

23. There must be reasonable probability of conviction—but question of guilt or innocence not to be decided.—There must be a reasonable probability of conviction, because without that there could be no ground for another Magistrate to waste his time in holding the inquiry. But the section does not say that before a Magistrate orders a prosecution he must try the whole case and be absolutely satisfied that the accused cannot by any possibility escape a conviction. 9 N. L. R. 184 = 15 Cr. L. J. 33. No sanction should be granted unless there is a reasonable probability of conviction. It would be an abuse of the powers vested in a Court of Justice, if sanction were granted or upheld on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility, it is desirable that the matter should be thrashed out so that it may be decided whether or not an offence has been committed. No doubt the authority which is called upon to grant a sanction under s 195 or to take action under s 476 need not and should not decide the question of guilt or innocence of the party against whom proceedings are to be instituted, but great care and caution are required before the criminal law is set in motion, and there must be a reasonable foundation for a charge in respect of which prosecution is sanctioned or directed, 37 C. 250, where 7 A. 874, 12 C. W. N. 3 = 6 Cr. L. J. 356 and 1 C. 450 are referred to. There is yet another reason why no Court should take action under s 476 without inquiring thoroughly into the matter and being satisfied that there is what may be called fairly good case against the accused. It is that persons complained against by a Court under s. 476 are deprived of the protection given to them by s 203 against frivolous and unnecessary prosecution by other complainants, 10 M. L. R. 177 = 16 Cr. L. J. 161. See also 8 C. W. N. 927, 1900 A. W. N. 149; 23 C. 532; 20 C. 349; 21 M. 124. In 15 A. L. J. 1111 = 16 Cr. L. J. 837, KNOX, J., dissented from the views held in 37 C. 13 and 37 C. 250 that sanction ought not to be granted when the evidence before the Court granting the sanction is such that the probable result will be acquittal and held that all that a Court granting sanction has to see is that a prima facie case has been made out upon the evidence before it for inquiring further into the question whether or not any of the offences punishable as set out in s. 195 has or has not been made out. KNOX, J., seems to make a difference between sanctioning a prosecution under s. 195 and taking action under s. 476, and an application for sanction must be carefully considered before the

When there is a dispute between the two parties over a property it is s. 195 but the Court ought to proceed under s. 476, 11 A. L. J. 113 = 14

Cr. L. J. 127 and see Notes to s. 195 at pp 510 to 515. It is not in every case which a Magistrate considers to be

Magistrate ought not to take proceedings under s. 476 until the close of the trial, the reason being as pointed in 8 Bom. H. C. R. 125 that such action is eminently calculated to intimidate subsequent witnesses and defeat the object of the trial, but that is a consideration which affects the accused under trial and not the witness whose prosecution is ordered, 17 Cr. L. J. 77 (Bindh), see also 16 Cr. L. J. 114 (G). But see 20 M. L. T. 232.

27. Propriety of criminal prosecution when appeal is pending against the original proceedings.—If in the course of a proceeding, either civil or criminal, a Judge or Magistrate finds clear grounds for believing that either the parties to the proceeding or their witnesses have committed perjury or any other offence against public justice, he is justified in directing criminal proceedings against such person under this section without any further inquiry than that which he has already held in his own Court. As a matter of discretion and propriety, it is right for a Court, before committing a person on a charge of perjury upon his own uncontradicted statement to await the hearing of the appeal, where an appeal is pending in the case in which he is charged with such perjury, 6 C. 303 following B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.) 426 = 5 W. R. (Civ. M.), 24. See also 13 B. 109; 7 B. H. C. R. 29; 23 C. 532 and 610; 16 C. 730; 20 C. 349; 13 M. 144; 16 A. 80; 21 M. 124; 16 B. 729; 18 B. 591. The High Court cannot, as a Court of Civil Appeal, interfere, 8 G. L. R. 143. The High Court ought not to stay the criminal proceedings where the Court below has refused to do so and has thought it fit in the interest of justice to take immediate action, 35 C. 909. See Note 67

23. According of sanction under s. 195 no bar to acting under this section.—The fact that the Court may have given sanction under s. 195, to a person to complain of an offence specified therein, does not affect its power to act under this section should it deem it necessary, 13 R. 354; 34 B. 85; 29 M. 331. But in Madras this power must be read subject to 31 M. 140 and 32 M. 49. When a Magistrate sanctions the prosecution in the absence of any application before him, his order must be taken to be one made under this section, 7 M. 189; and conversely sanction may be given after a proceeding under s. 476 has been set aside on a technical ground, 11 Cr. L. J. 327 (C)

29. Court must form its own opinion.—Where a Munsiff in making an order under this section for the prosecution of a person for an offence committed before him purported to act not of his own accord, but on the responsibility of the District Judge who himself had no jurisdiction on to pass such an order, held the order of the Munsiff was bad inasmuch as it was only nominally his, but the opinion was the opinion of the District Judge 6 A. L. J. 924 = 10 Cr. L. J. 523 See Note 44 and 17 Cr. L. J. 40 (O.)

VI.—NECESSITY FOR PRELIMINARY INQUIRY.

30. Holding of preliminary inquiry is discretionary and its absence will not render order bad.—Ordinarily it is not necessary that there should be a preliminary inquiry before an order under this section is made, 5 C. 308. Preliminary inquiry is discretionary to be had or not as the Court thinks fit, 20 C. 474; 6 C. W. N. 293; 1 C. L. J. 630 = 2 Cr. L. J. 656, 26 M. L. J. 436 = 15 Cr. L. J. 271. In strict law for proceeding under this section, neither notice to show cause why the party should not be sent before a Magistrate for a trial nor a preliminary inquiry indispensable, 7 Bom. L. R. 84 = 2 Cr. L. J. 34, 14 Bom. L. R. 537 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 134 = 13 Cr. L. J. 689. The adoption of a rigid rule to that effect would simply introduce a new stage as a matter of imperative necessity, 15 A. 392; 34 A. 267; 20 C. 474. An order under this section sending a case for inquiry to a Magistrate, is not necessarily bad, because the Court did not make a preliminary inquiry before making such order. The law requires only such preliminary inquiry as may be necessary, 5 A. 62, nor is omission on the part of a Sessions Judge to hold such inquiry a sufficient ground for reversing the conviction when the omission does not appear to have affected the merits of the case.—At H C Pro, 5th January, 1882. For other cases, see 5 C. 184 at p. 187, 2 C. L. R. 315; 9 W. R. 3; 23 P. R. 1836. See Notes 97—101 at pp 516—518. 4 Pat. 434.

It is absolutely essential to the validity of an order under s. 476 of the Code that the Court which passes the order should apply its mind to the matter upon its merits.

31. When preliminary inquiry desirable—

(1) Generally when materials already before Court are not sufficient to establish a 'prima facie' case —

Where the parties to a civil suit filed a compromise after part of the evidence was recorded and the suit was dismissed and five days later the Judge suo moti took cognizance of the case afresh and without calling upon the defendant to show cause directed his prosecution for fabricating false evidence in respect of provisions not relied on by the defendant. Held, that the order was bad as he had not recorded any finding on the question of the genuineness or otherwise when deciding the suit and he ought to have given the persons concerned an opportunity of showing cause, 17 O. C. 25 = 15 Cr. L. J. 217; 7 B. L. R. 487 = 15 Cr. L. J. 541. See also 6 C. 440 = 7 C. L. R. 330. Where the materials already before the Court are insufficient in themselves to establish a prima facie case it is better to make preliminary inquiry, 19 C. 345. When a suit did not come on for trial, but was settled out of Court, the Civil Court was competent to hold a preliminary inquiry to determine whether prima facie one of the specified offences had been committed before it by the false personation of the person who had confessed judgment, 19 C. 345; 12 P. R. 1897. See also 6 A. 114 and 98; 8 C. L. R. 143; 2 P. R. 1883; 19 A. L. J. 56.

(ii) When offence has not been committed before the Court—Where a suit for the recovery of money due on a bond was referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator decided that the bond was a forgery and the Magistrate directed a prosecution, held, that the Magistrate should not have granted a sanction without making an inquiry to satisfy himself whether there were materials to justify a prosecution, 6 A. 101. A Subordinate Judge, on the report of his bailiff that he was obstructed by A and B in executing a warrant of attachment of the moveable property of a judgment debtor, gave sanction for the prosecution of A and B under s 186, I P C, without making a preliminary inquiry into the truth or otherwise of the report, and sent the case to a first-class Magistrate for trial under this section. Held, that the Subordinate Judge would have better complied with the requirements of this section if, before acting on the mere report of the bailiff, he had made an inquiry of his own, Ratanlal 701. Where a complaint is made to the Police and a report is made that the complaint is false, the Magistrate will not exercise a proper discretion if he forthwith, on the receipt of the Police report, orders the prosecution of the complainant under s 211, I P C. The Magistrate should give the complainant full opportunity to have a proper judicial inquiry into the truth of the complaint. But, if advantage is not taken of the opportunity, the Magistrate may either accord sanction under s 195 to some person desirous of prosecuting, or himself make the complaint under s 195. If a judicial inquiry is made, the Magistrate may proceed under this section, 5 C. W. N. 106. See also 7 M. 189; 14 C. 707; 27 C. 821 and 13 Cr. L. J. 48 (A.), 15 C. W. N. 691 = 14 C. L. J. 123 = 12 Cr. L. J. 209.

(iii) When the identity of the offender, or offence is uncertain—A preliminary inquiry ought to be held when it is uncertain as to who the accused person is, 23 C. 632, 16 C. 730; 20 C. 349 and 474 or where the offence is uncertain, 1 C. 450.

32. Successor in office may pass order without preliminary inquiry.—The authority of 9 C. W. N. 859; 24 C. 551; 25 C. 114 that it is not competent to the successor in office to pass an order under this section without an independent investigation is very much shaken by 37 C. 642. All that was intended to be laid down was that if an offence has been committed not in Court but outside the Court, an investigation may be necessary to enable the Court to ascertain the facts justifying an order under s 476, 14 C. L. J. 123 = 15 C. W. N. 691 = 12 Cr. L. J. 209.

33. Practice and procedure in preliminary inquiry—

(i) Oath may be administered and evidence taken—Inquiry must be on evidence, one mode of making an inquiry is certainly to take evidence (17 C. 872) and if the Court can take evidence it is a judicial proceeding, s 4 (m), 37 C. 52 and see 8 Bom. L. R. 589 = 4 Cr. L. J. 183. But see 6 W. R. 81.

(ii) Person implicated not to be subjected to examination—A person against whom proceedings are to be taken under this section ought not to be subjected to any examination in the preliminary inquiry, Weir II, 598. See 17 Cr. L. J. 316 (Bar.), where it was held that such a person is in the position of an accused and cannot be examined as a witness.

(iii) Person implicated need not be present—It is not necessary that the preliminary inquiry, contemplated by this section, should be conducted in the presence of the accused. All that the Court making inquiry has to do is to satisfy itself that there are prima facie grounds for sending the case for investigation to a Magistrate, 9 W. R. 3; 7 M. 224; 8 C. W. R. 235.

(iv) Manner of recording evidence—Though the Magistrate made a preliminary inquiry under s 476, and presumably examined witnesses in the course of that inquiry he made no record of their statements. We do not find in the Code any provision with regard to the manner in which the evidence in such inquiry should be recorded. But we are of opinion that for further reference a summary of the statements should have been made, 42 C. 240.

(v) Not necessary to give accused opportunity to cross-examine—A Magistrate refusing to give the accused opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses does not act illegally, or with material irregularity, 33 A. 267. The person implicated has no right to cross-examine the then accused, 18 Bom. L. R. 234. But see 19 A. L. J. 56 where refusal to give opportunity to cross-examine witnesses by the lower Court was set aside in revision by the High Court and a preliminary inquiry ordered, 6 Pat. L. J. 146; 44 M. L. J. 74.

(vi) Inquiry must be conducted by the Court—See 1 C. 450.

34. Dieting of witnesses in inquiries held by Civil Courts under this section.—With the sanction of the Local Government it is directed that when witnesses are summoned by a Civil Court to attend a preliminary inquiry held under this section into any offence referred to in s 195, diet money on the scale allowed for Criminal Courts, be paid to such witnesses by the nearest Magistrate on the requisition of the Civil Court—Oudh Cr Dig, at p 21

VII.—PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE OF COURT SENDING CASE.

35. Procedure when offence not covered by s. 195.—A District Judge cannot direct the arrest and prosecution of a person under s. 411, I P C., as such an order is not warranted by the provisions of this section. If, in the course of the hearing of a case before him, he thinks that someone should be proceeded against under s. 411, he can proceed under Chapter XVI of the Code by instituting a complaint in the ordinary way also, Ratanlal 515. See 9 Bom. L. R. 1160; Weir II, 896.

36. Procedure when two contradictory statements are made in two different Courts.—Where the evidence given before the committing Magistrate was contradicted by the same witness before the Sessions Judge, it is not competent for the Sessions Court to order the trial of the accused for perjury without specifying which of the depositions made by the accused was false, especially when there is nothing on the record to show that the Judge was satisfied that the evidence given before himself was false, 3 L. B. R. 204 = 4 Cr. L. J. 469. When prosecution is ordered in respect of two contradictory statements made in two different Courts, an order under this section of one of the Courts alone is insufficient. Both Courts must make an order under this section in respect of the alternative charge, 16 M. L. J. (Sh. N.) 40; or at all events, the Court which desires to take action should obtain the sanction of the Court before which, the other statement was made, unless it is itself a Court to which the other is subordinate, 6 C. 496 = 7 C. L. R. 467. In Tilak's Case, 4 Bom. L. R. 750 an offence under s. 211, I P C., alleged to have been committed in the Court of Poona City Magistrate was brought to the notice of the District Court of Poona in the course of a civil judicial proceeding. The District Judge acted under this section and sent the case down to the first-class Magistrate, Poona. Held, that the offence was not cognizable by the first-class Magistrate, as there was neither the previous sanction nor the complaint of the Poona City Magistrate or of the Sessions Court to which he is subordinate. The fact that the District Court and the Sessions Court are represented by one and the same individual will not in any way cure the illegality. But see 6 A. L. J. 392 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219.

37. Court cannot review order declining to send case.—A Magistrate when acquitting the accused declined to order the prosecution of the complainant under s. 476, but subsequently on the application of the accused he took steps under this section, Held the second order was a review of the first order and the Magistrate's second order was therefore incompetent and must be quashed, 10 M. L. T. 339 = (1911) 2 M. N. 431 = 12 Cr. L. J. 558. See also Note 3 to s. 369

38. Court may direct prosecution when moved by stranger.—In 13 Cr. L. J. 1 (C.) it was suggested that as the Court does not ordinarily grant sanction under s. 195 to a person in no way connected with the proceeding the Court should similarly refuse to direct a prosecution under s. 476 when the fact of the commission of an offence has been brought to its notice by a stranger, but the Court refused to accept the limitation suggested. See, however, 13 P. W. R. 1213 = 16 Cr. L. J. 107 and Note 23. In 34 C. 251, GEIDT, J., was of opinion that it was not intended that when the proceedings had terminated and passed beyond the reach of the Court, the attention of the Court should be subsequently re-drawn by some private person to the fact that in those proceedings there had been committed some offence in contempt of the Court's authority or against public justice which deserved punishment and in 31 M. 140, WHIRRE, C.J., approved of these remarks. So also in 6 A. L. J. 924, (Note 35) an order by a Munsiff at the suggestion of the District Judge was set aside.

39. Offences must be specified and the order sending case must not be vague.—Although s. 643 of Act X of 1877 gives Civil Courts powers similar to those conferred on Civil, Criminal or Revenue Courts alike, by this section, the whole law as to the procedure in cases within that section is now embodied in this section. Where a Judge, having disbelieved the evidence of a witness, directed the record of the case to be sent to a the defendant to show cause directed his prosecution for fabricating false evidence in respect of provisions not relied on by the defendant. Held, that the order was bad as he had not recorded any finding on the question of the genuineness or otherwise when deciding the suit and he ought to have given the persons concerned an opportunity of showing cause, 17 O. C. 25 = 15 Cr. L. J. 217; 7 S. L. R. 187 = 15 Cr. L. J. 541. See also 6 C. 430 = 7 C. L. R. 330. Where the materials already before the Court are insufficient in themselves to establish a prima facie case it is better to make preliminary inquiry, 19 C. 343. When a suit did not come on for trial, but was settled out of Court, the Civil Court was competent to hold a preliminary inquiry to determine whether prima facie one of the specified offences had been committed before it by the false personation of the person who had confessed judgment, 19 C. 345; 12 P. R. 1897. See also 6 A. 114 and 98; 8 C. L. R. 143; 2 P. R. 1898; 19 A. L. J. 56.

(ii) When offence has not been committed before the Court—Where a suit for the recovery of money due on a bond was referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator decided that the bond was a forgery and the Magistrate directed a prosecution, held, that the Magistrate should not have granted a sanction without making an inquiry to satisfy himself whether there were materials to justify a prosecution, 6 A. 101. A Subordinate Judge, on the report of his bailiff that he was obstructed by A and B in executing a warrant of attachment of the moveable property of a judgment debtor, gave sanction for the prosecution of A and B under s 186, I P C, without making a preliminary inquiry into the truth or otherwise of the report, and sent the case to a first-class Magistrate for trial under this section. Held, that the Subordinate Judge would have better complied with the requirements of this section if, before acting on the mere report of the bailiff, he had made an inquiry of his own, Ratanlal 701. Where a complaint is made to the Police and a report is made that the complaint is false, the Magistrate will not exercise a proper discretion if he forthwith, on the receipt of the Police report, orders the prosecution of the complainant under s. 211, I P C. The Magistrate should give the complainant full opportunity to have a proper judicial inquiry into the truth of the complaint. But, if advantage is not taken of the opportunity, the Magistrate may either accord sanction under s 195 to some person desirous of prosecuting, or himself make the complaint under s 195. If a judicial inquiry is made, the Magistrate may proceed under this section, 8 C. W. N. 106. See also 7 M. 189; 14 C. 707; 27 C. 921 and 13 Cr. L. J. 48 (A.), 15 C. W. N. 691 = 14 C. L. J. 123 = 12 Cr. L. J. 209.

(iii) When the identity of the offender, or offence is uncertain—A preliminary inquiry ought to be held when it is uncertain as to who the accused person is, 23 C. 532; 16 C. 730; 20 C. 349 and 474 or where the offence is uncertain, 1 C. 450.

32. Successor in office may pass order without preliminary inquiry.—The authority of 8 C. W. N. 359; 34 C. 551; 35 C. 114 that it is not competent to the successor in office to pass an order under this section without an independent investigation is very much shaken by 37 C. 642. All that was intended to be laid down was that if an offence has been committed not in Court but outside the Court, an investigation may be necessary to enable the Court to ascertain the facts justifying an order under s 476, 14 C. L. J. 123 = 15 C. W. N. 691 = 13 Cr. L. J. 209.

33. Practice and procedure in preliminary inquiry—

(i) Oath may be administered and evidence taken.—Inquiry must be on evidence, one mode of making an inquiry is certainly to take evidence (17 C. 872) and if the Court can take evidence it is a judicial proceeding, s 4 (iii), 37 C. 82 and see 6 Bom. L. R. 589 = 4 Cr. L. J. 183. But see 6 W. R. 41.

(ii) Person implicated not to be subjected to examination.—A person against whom proceedings are to be taken under this section ought not to be subjected to any examination in the preliminary inquiry, Weir II, 598. See 17 Cr. L. J. 316 (Bar), where it was held that such a person is in the position of an accused and cannot be examined as a witness.

(iii) Person implicated need not be present.—It is not necessary that the preliminary inquiry, contemplated by this section, should be conducted in the presence of the accused. All that the Court making inquiry has to do is to satisfy itself that there are prima facie grounds for sending the case for investigation to a Magistrate, 9 W. R. 3; 7 M. 223; 6 C. W. N. 293.

(iv) Manner of recording evidence.—Though the Magistrate made a preliminary inquiry under s. 476, and presumably examined witnesses in the course of that inquiry he made no record of their statements. We do not find in the Code any provision with regard to the manner in which the evidence in such inquiry should be recorded. But we are of opinion that for further reference a summary of the statements should have been made, 42 C. 240.

(v) Not necessary to give accused opportunity to cross examine—A Magistrate refusing to give the accused opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses does not act illegally, or with material irregularity, 33 A. 267. The person implicated has no right to cross examine the then accused, 18 Bom. L. R. 284 But see 19 A. L. J. 56 where refusal to give opportunity to cross-examine witnesses by the lower Court was set aside in revision by the High Court and a preliminary inquiry ordered, 6 Pat. L. J. 146; 44 M. L. J. 74.

(vi) Inquiry must be conducted by the Court—See 1 C. 450.

34. Dieting of witnesses to inquiries held by Civil Courts under this section.—With the sanction of the Local Government it is directed that when witnesses are summoned by a Civil Court to attend a preliminary inquiry held under this section into any offence referred to in s 195, diet money on the scale allowed for Criminal Courts, be paid to such witnesses by the nearest Magistrate on the requisition of the Civil Court—Oudh Cr Dig, at p 21

VII.—PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE OF COURT SENDING CASE.

35. Procedure when offence not covered by s. 195.—A District Judge cannot direct the arrest and prosecution of a person under s 411, I P C., as such an order is not warranted by the provisions of this section. If, in the course of the hearing of a case before him, he thinks that someone should be proceeded against under s. 411, he can proceed under Chapter XVI of the Code by instituting a complaint in the ordinary way also, Ratanlal 515. See 9 Bom. L. R. 1160; Weir II, 586.

36. Procedure when two contradictory statements are made in two different Courts.—Where the evidence given before the committing Magistrate was contradicted by the same witness before the Sessions Judge, it is not competent for the Sessions Court to order the trial of the accused for perjury without specifying which of the depositions made by the accused was false, especially when there is nothing on the record to show that the Judge was satisfied that the evidence given before himself was false, 3 L. B. R. 204 = 4 Cr. L. J. 469. When prosecution is ordered in respect of two contradictory statements made in two different Courts, an order under this section of one of the Courts alone is insufficient. Both Courts must make an order under this section in respect of the alternative charge, 16 M. L. J. (Sb. N.) 40; or at all events, the Court which desires to take action should obtain the sanction of the Court before which, the other statement was made, unless it is itself a Court to which the other is subordinate, 6 C. 496 = 7 C. L. R. 467. In Tilak's Case, 6 Bom. L. R. 780 an offence under s. 211, I P C., alleged to have been committed in the Court of Poona City Magistrate was brought to the notice of the District Court of Poona in the course of a civil judicial proceeding. The District Judge acted under this section and sent the case down to the first-class Magistrate, Poona. Held that the offence was not cognisable by the first-class Magistrate, as there was neither the previous sanction nor the complaint of the Poona City Magistrate or of the Sessions Court to which he is subordinate. The fact that the District Court and the Sessions Court are represented by one and the same individual will not in any way cure the illegality. But see 6 A. L. J. 292 = 9 Cr. L. J. 219.

37. Court cannot review order declining to send case.—A Magistrate when acquitting the accused declined to order the prosecution of the complainant under s 476, but subsequently on the application of the accused he took steps under this section, held the second order was a review of the first order and the Magistrate's second order was therefore incompetent and must be quashed, 10 M. L. T. 399 = (1911) 2 M. N. 431 = 12 Cr. L. J. 586. See also Note 3 to s 369

38. Court may direct prosecution when moved by stranger.—In 13 Cr. L. J. 1 (C) it was suggested that as the Court does not ordinarily grant sanction under s 195 to a person in no way connected with the proceeding, the Court should similarly refuse to direct a prosecution under s 476 when the fact of the commission of an offence has been brought to its notice by a stranger, but the Court refused to accept the limitation suggested. See, however, 13 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 407 and Note 23. In 34 C. 531, GZINT, J., was of opinion that it was not intended that when the proceedings had terminated and passed beyond the reach of the Court, the attention of the Court should be subsequently re-drawn by some private person to the fact that in those proceedings there had been committed some offence in contempt of the Court's authority or against public justice which deserved punishment and in 31 M. 190, WHITE, C.J., approved of these remarks. So also in 6 A. L. J. 924, (Note 35) an order by a Munsiff at the suggestion of the District Judge was set aside.

39. Offences must be specified and the order sending case must not be vague.—Although s 643 of Act X of 1877 gives Civil Courts powers similar to those conferred on Civil, Criminal or Revenue Courts alike, by this section, the whole law as to the procedure in cases within that section is now embodied in this section. Where a Judge, having disbelieved the evidence of a witness, directed the record of the case to be sent to a Magistrate with a view to his inquiring whether or not he had voluntarily given false evidence, held, on a motion to quash the order, that the Judge had no power to send a case to a Magistrate except when, after having made such preliminary inquiry as may be necessary, he is of opinion that there is sufficient ground (i.e., ground of a nature higher than mere surmise or suspicion) for directing judicial inquiry into the matter of a specific charge, and that the Judge is bound to indicate the particular statements or averments in respect of which he considers that there is ground for a charge, into which the Magistrate ought to inquire, and that the order was bad, because the Judge had made no preliminary inquiry and because it was too vague and general, 1 C. 450 followed in 1900 A. W. N. 149; 8 S. L. R. 179 = 16 Cr. L. J. 104; 1 P. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 90. See also 14 A. L. J. 815; 52 C. 478.

40. Order must specify the accused person.—A Court ought not to send a case when it is uncertain as to who the accused person is. See 23 C. 352; 16 C. 730; 20 C. 349 and 474. Where a District Judge being of opinion that the forgery of a document produced before him was committed either by the plaintiff or by the defendant, sent both of them to the nearest first class Magistrate, so that the guilty party might be proceeded against, held, that the order was illegal and must be set aside in revision under s. 439, 153 P. L. R. 1905 = 3 Cr. L. J. 73, 23 A. 249 followed 2 Lah. 68.

41. Order must show that it was part of the proceedings in the trial.—In the absence of anything to show that the Magistrate's order under s. 476 is part of the proceedings in the trial in which the alleged offence was committed the order is made without jurisdiction (31 M. 140 and 32 M. 49 followed), 6 M. L. T. 92 = 10 Cr. L. J. 8.

42. Case cannot be sent to third-class Magistrate for inquiry or to Sessions Judge without commitment.—When a Criminal Court sends a case under this section to a third-class Magistrate to hold a preliminary inquiry, the offence being exclusively triable by the Court or Session, the third class Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hold an inquiry or to commit, 7 M. 189. See 15 M. 131. Nor can the Magistrate send the accused to the Sessions Court, without holding a preliminary inquiry under Chapter XVIII, and making a valid order of commitment, Weir II, 555. But a Civil Court may send a case to a Criminal Court for investigation without specifying the particular officer by whom it is to be investigated, 13 W. R. 45, contra 4 N.-W. P. H. G. R. 86.

43. Simultaneous order under this section and s. 250 legal.—A Magistrate may simultaneously send down the complainant under this section for an offence under s. 211, 1 P. C., and order him to pay compensation under s. 250, 21 M. 237; 27 M. 59 and 30 C. 123 (F B), where 22 C. 536 and 26 C. 181 are explained.

44. Taking security from accused before drawing up proceedings under this section illegal.—A Sessions Judge is not competent to direct a witness alleged to have given false evidence in a judicial proceeding before him to give security to appear before him, when called upon to answer charges yet to be framed under s. 193, 1 P. C., it is open to him to take immediate action under this section, if he considers it expedient, 8 C. W. N. 630.

45. Irregular order.—(i) Optional order is bad.—Where a Magistrate on an application by a private party for sanction under s. 196 against X Y, made an order to the effect "I charge X Y with perjury, and I make the case over to (another competent Magistrate) or in the alternative, I accord sanction to the applicant to prosecute X Y, for an offence under s. 182, 1 P. C., etc." Held, that such an option of this kind was no order at all and was altogether invalid, 23 A. 234. A Court may either grant a sanction or proceed under this section, but if it grants the sanction and merely sends the accused to a Magistrate, it does not comply with the requirements of this section, 13 B. 109 at p. 112.

(ii) Order with a view to commit to Sessions is bad.—Again, where a Judge proceeding to act under this section, made an order arresting the accused "with a view to commit him to the Court of Sessions," held, that the order, so far as it was made with a view to commit the accused to the Sessions Court, was wrong, but the Magistrate should have sent the case to the nearest first-class Magistrate, 3 Bom. L. R. 185.

(iii) Order sending the case to a District Magistrate.—An Assistant Collector trying a Rent Suit, made an order to the effect "as the plaintiff knowingly and voluntarily told a lie, it will be fair that he be proceeded against under s. 193, 1 P. C., it is therefore ordered that the record of the case be herewith submitted to the Collector for starting a case under s. 183." On receipt of this order, the Collector, who was also District Magistrate directed that a case under s. 193, 1 P. C., be instituted against Sundar Sirup and made over for decision to M. Magistrate of the first class. Held per K. V. J., that the Assistant Collector intended to act under this section when he made the order, and in any event, his order was a complaint either under s. 476 or s. 195 made to the District Magistrate though that officer was addressed as Collector, and the District Magistrate on receipt of such complaint had jurisdiction under s. 192 to make the order he made, 28 A. 814. But in 30 P. R.

1903 = 105 P. L. R. 1903 a Revenue Court being satisfied from perusal of certain documents tendered in evidence, that they were forgeries, sent the case to the District Magistrate for action, held, that such a proceeding was a complaint within the meaning of s 195 but did not constitute a proceeding under this section. See also 23 P. R. 1901; 13 B. 109 and 1915 U. B. R. III, 91 = 17 Cr. L. J. 89.

(iv) Order merely directing prosecution without sending case to Magistrate—An order under s. 476 which merely directs the prosecution of the accused, but omits to direct the accused to be taken before the nearest first-class Magistrate is utmost an irregularity cured by s 537, 37 M. 317. Cf 12 A. L. J. 881 = 15 Cr. L. J. 700.

(v) The fact that a Magistrate directed a prosecution for an offence under s. 211, I P C., while the offence really falls under s. 182, I P C., does not render the order bad, 8 B. L. R. 179 = 16 Cr. L. J. 101.

(vi) As an order under s. 476 of the Code directing a prosecution of offences under ss 193 and 196, I P C., amounts to a complaint under s 200 of the Code, the Court before making an order must hold an inquiry and must specify by its order (1) the witnesses to prove the complaint, (2) the false evidence complained against, (3) whether a person complained against knew that the evidence which he was using as genuine was false. An order not specifying these matters but leaving them to be fished out by the trying Magistrate is liable to be set aside as illegal. 48 M. 395.

(vii) Where the Chief Presidency Magistrate made a complaint to himself under s 476 (1) of the Code and then transferred the same to the third Presidency Magistrate for disposal, the latter after having enquired into the case committed the accused to the High Court Sessions for trial, held that the procedure followed was substantially correct. The Chief Presidency Magistrate in taking the cognizance of a complaint made by himself and sending it to the third Presidency Magistrate made a mistake but a technical one only, not going to the root of the case. There was nothing in the Code to prevent the Chief Presidency Magistrate from taking cognizance of his own complaint. Taking cognizance of a complaint is not a judicial act. 30 G. W. N. 276.

(viii) A proceeding drawn up by a Magistrate sanctioning the prosecution of an accused under s. 211, I P C., with a request that the case may be disposed of according to law does not amount to a formal complaint within the meaning of s 4 (h) and cannot be also regarded as a complaint under s 476 of the Code, 52 G. 686.

But see 3 Rang. 48 where instead of making a formal complaint the Court ordered the prosecution of the appellants under s. 476 of the Code, and forwarded a copy of the order to the District Magistrate for the necessary action, it was held that this was merely a formal defect and did not vitiate the order.

XIII.—JURISDICTION AND POWERS OF COURT TO WHOM CASE IS SENT.

46. Order sending case is of itself sufficient to confer jurisdiction on Magistrate to whom accused is sent.—When the case is sent to the nearest Magistrate, the order sending down the case is of itself sufficient to confer jurisdiction, 16 M. 461, where SHEPARD, C.J., says "The substitution of the description 'nearest' for 'having power to try' in the 1872 Code is significant." The power to send the supposed offender to the nearest Magistrate of the first class is quite irrespective of the local jurisdiction of the Magistrate to whom the offender is forwarded. S 177 in no way curtails the power under this section. It affects only the power of private complainants and the Police and not the power of a Magistrate acting under this section, Ratanlal 88. See also 26 M. 640; 32 M. 49 at p. 57. In 1 B. L. R. 84 = 8 Cr. L. J. 200, it was, however, held that the word

48. Officer before whom offence committed should not himself try the case in another capacity.—See s. 487. When the officer presiding over the Court exercises revenue as well as magisterial jurisdiction and an offence is committed before him sitting as a Revenue Court, it will not be proper compliance with the provisions of this section for the officer presiding to make the case over to himself as the nearest Magistrate of the first class, 2 A. 403. The obvious intention of the Legislature is that the officer before whom the offence is committed should not himself charge and try the accused, 15 W. R. 83; 12 W. R. 18. But a Sessions Judge is not by reason merely of having, as a District Judge, ordered an inquiry under this section disqualified under s. 487 from trying the case or hearing any appeal when the case has been tried by a Lower Court, nor is he personally interested in the case within the meaning of s. 556 16 C. 786; 7 C. W. N. 708.

49. Powers of Magistrate to whom case is sent.—(i) Magistrate must dispose of the case sent to him.—A Magistrate is bound to proceed with the case sent to him by a Civil Court by adopting the procedure laid down in the Code. In 28 B. 785, it was held, that the Magistrate was bound to proceed with the case sent to him by a Civil Court under this section, the words "such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed according to law" being imperative. Nor can he refuse to take cognizance of an offence, on a case sent to him by a Civil Court under this section, 13 B. 409. When an attaching peon reported to a Munsiff of obstruction in carrying out execution proceeding, held the Munsiff was competent to proceed under this section and send the case to the District Magistrate for the prosecution of the persons who obstructed the attachment, and the Magistrate was not justified having regard to sub-sec (2) of this section, in refusing to take cognizance of the case, 31 C. 664. See also 7 A. 871.

(ii) May discharge—He is competent to discharge the accused under s 253 if in his opinion the evidence against the accused is not sufficient to warrant their committal to the Court of Session. The Sessions Judge has power, under s 436 should he see fit to order the case to be committed, 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 41.

(iii) Cannot return case—If the case is sent by a Civil Court, the Magistrate is bound to complete the inquiry and cannot return the case to the Civil Court, 3 B. L. R. Ap. Cr. 47; 7 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 29; 12 W. R. 41.

(iv) May dismiss complaint—If the order under s. 476 is made without jurisdiction, the Magistrate is competent to dismiss the complaint, 10 M. L. T. 389 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 431 = 12 Cr. L. J. 556.

(v) Proceedings cannot be dropped because sanction is subsequently given—If after drawing up a proceeding under this section, ordering prosecution under s 193, I P C., and while the prosecution is still being proceeded with, sanction is given in respect of the same, the original proceeding is not dropped but such sanction is really a continuation of the same proceeding, 9 C. W. N. 127 = 2 Cr. L. J. 13.

50. Magistrate to whom case is sent cannot direct compensation to be paid if he dismisses case.—A Magistrate to whom a case is sent under this section has no jurisdiction while acquitting the accused to direct compensation to be paid. The decree-holder complained to the Civil Court of obstruction and proceedings were directed under s 476 and after the trial the Magistrate directed the decree-holder to pay compensation. Held, the order was not valid under s 250 as the decree holder was not the complainant, 16 Bom. L. R. 1166 = 1 Bom. Cr. Ca. 237 = 14 Cr. L. J. 1. See Note 18 at p 706.

51. Does cancellation of order under sub-sec. (1) operate as stay of proceedings under sub-sec. (2)?—Where a Munsiff decreed in plaintiff's favour, holding the suit bond to be genuine and, at the same time, sent down the defendant under this section to the nearest first-class Magistrate to be tried for an offence under s 193, I P C., and on appeal the Appellate Court finding the defendant's evidence to be true reversed the Munsiff's decree. Held, the result of the civil appellate judgment must be taken to be, that the order of the Munsiff under this section was not maintainable, as the basis of that order had gone, and that, on production of the appellate judgment it was the duty of the Criminal Court to withhold its hands and to proceed no further, and even if the defendant had been convicted by the Criminal Court and the conviction upheld by the Sessions Judge, the High Court would set aside the conviction, although the accused did not move the High Court to quash the proceeding as soon as the judgment of the Civil Appellate Court was pronounced in his favour, 12 C. W. N. 1 = 6 C. L. J. 703 = 6 Cr. L. J. 355. Where a Magistrate dismisses a complaint and directs a prosecution under this section and the Sessions Judge directs further inquiry setting aside the order of dismissal but passed no order in respect of the order under s 476, held the said order remains good until it is quashed. It does not cease to be operative, all that 12 C. W. N. 1 = 6 C. L. J. 703 lays down is that when the Appellate Court dissents from the opinion of the first Court that a statement made by a person was false and reverses the decree of that Court, the order of the first Court under s 476 directing the prosecution of the deponent should be quashed and not that the order ceases to be operative without being quashed. Therefore the Magistrate to whom the case has been sent may continue the inquiry, 21 M. L. J. 793 = 10 M. L. T. 47 = (1911) 2 M. W. N. 9 = 12 Cr. L. J. 323. In 6 L. B. R. 49 = 13 Cr. L. J. 492 it is laid down that if an order under s. 476 (1) directing an inquiry by another Magistrate is set aside, it is just and proper that proceedings under sub-sec. (2) before that Magistrate shall also cease.

IX.—REVISION OF ORDERS.

52. Sessions Court cannot revise.—A Deputy Magistrate having decided that certain witnesses (who had given evidence before himself and before two other Magistrates on different occasions relating to charges of rioting and causing hurt) had wilfully committed perjury on one occasion or another, ordered them to be prosecuted for perjury and bound them over to take their trial. The Sessions Judge set aside the said order, deeming it undesirable that sanction to prosecute should be given under the circumstances. Held, that whether the Deputy Magistrate had intended to pass an order under this section or to make a complaint under s. 195 (1) (b) the Sessions Judge had no power to interfere, 23 M. 205 followed in 7 Bom. L. R. 84 = 2 Cr. L. J. 84. It is the High Court alone that has power to revise under s. 439 under its general powers of superintendence. A Sessions Judge has no such power, 34 C. 42. See also 14 C. W. N. 132.

53. Sessions Judge cannot under s. 437 direct further inquiry when the original Magistrate has not only discharged the accused, but directed prosecution of complainant.—A Sessions Judge has not the power to set aside an order of discharge when the prosecution of the complainant has been ordered under s. 476 for an offence under s. 211, I P C., and if the Sessions Judge is of opinion that the order should be set aside, he should refer the matter to the High Court, 13 Cr. L. J. 1 (C) followed, 19 Cr. L. J. 16 (C). See Note 35 to s. 437.

54. High Court competent to revise.—See Note 57 under s. 439. The High Court is competent in the exercise of its revisional powers to interfere with an order of a Subordinate Court, made under this section, directing the prosecution of any person for offences referred to in that section. The High Court, under s. 439 has the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by s. 423 to alter or reverse any such order of an inferior Criminal Court, 26 B. 785 (where 16 C. 730; 21 M. 124; 20 C. 349; 23 C. 610 are relied on) contra, see 13 B. 109; Ratanlal 899; 13 M. 144; 15 A. 80. It will be seen that there was a conflict of opinion between the High Courts on this point. But now the Legislature has limited this power of interference of superior Courts. See s. 537, cl. (b). The case in 26 M. 98 where a Full Bench of the Madras High Court took the view that an order under this section, being in the nature of a complaint is not subject to revision by the High Court, was expressly repudiated by all the other High Courts in India and is now overruled by 33 M. 43 (F.B.) where it was held following 21 M. 124 (F.B.) that the High Court has power under s. 439 to interfere, on grounds other than want of jurisdiction when a Criminal Court has taken action under s. 476 and no change was effected in the revisional power of the High Court by the Code of 1898. Under the 1882 Code orders under this section were doubtless subject to revision under s. 439 and the words in sub-sec. (2) of the present Code, do not operate to make the proceedings of the Magistrate merely a complaint. Sub-section (1) contemplates an order being passed after such inquiry as may be necessary, and that order is something more than a complaint as defined in the Code, for a Magistrate who receives it, is bound to take action on it and has not the option of postponing the issue of process under s. 202 or dismissing it under s. 203. The words "as if on complaint made and recorded under s. 200" do not mean that the proceedings taken under sub-sec. (1) is to be regarded merely as a complaint and not as an order. The words added to s. 537 certainly contemplate such orders as being subject to revision, and moreover it is not one of the sections enumerated in sub-sec. (3) of s. 435, 3 L. B. R. 234 (F.B.) = 5 Cr. L. J. 123. In 28 A. 349, STANLEY, C.J., was of opinion that an order under this section sending a case to a Magistrate, is not really a complaint though it is of the nature of a complaint. See 23 A. 349; 26 A. 249; 1903 A. W. N. 22 = 4 A. L. J. 811 = 7 Cr. L. J. 3; 1903 A. W. N. 27 = 4 A. L. J. 803 = 7 Cr. L. J. 1; 26 B. 785; 8 C. W. N. 73; 1 L. B. R. 236; 3 Bar. L. T. 101 = 12 Cr. L. J. 83; 3 Bar. L. T. 119 = 11 Cr. L. J. 734; 4 Bar. L. T. 246 = 12 Cr. L. J. 821; 1904-06 U. B. R. (Cr. P.) 4; 1907 U. B. R. (Cr. P.) 1 = 6 Cr. L. J. 23; 4 N. L. R. 160 = 8 Cr. L. J. 331; 9 N. L. R. 184 = 15 Cr. L. J. 33; 5 P. R. 1903 = 103 P. L. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 281; 159 P. L. R. 1911 = 33 P. W. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 216; 29 M. 100; 40 Cr. 477 (F.B.) It is open to the High Court to consider in revision whether the person against whom the order is made is prejudiced by the absence of a preliminary inquiry, 20 C. 349; 15 C. W. N. 691 = 14 C. L. J. 123 = 12 Cr. L. J. 209; 7 B. L. R. 187 = 13 Cr. L. J. 841; 19 C. W. N. 127 = 18 Cr. L. J. 320; 46 B. 401 = 26 Bom. L. R. 239; 7 Lah. 108,

55. High Court will not interfere merely because on facts it may take a different view.—Where a Magistrate had taken upon himself the responsibility of starting a case under ss 182 and 211, I P. C., and he does this advisedly and his order shows that he has acted with circumspection and mature deliberation, his order should not be lightly interfered with, on a mere question of fact by the High Court in revision, 1908 A.W. N. 27 = 4 A. L. J. 803 = 7 Cr. L. J. 1. Similarly, the Chief Court of Punjab in 18 P. R. 1902 hid down that revision should be granted only if there be some error of law, some irregularity some abuse or failure to exercise jurisdiction and not simply because the Revisional Court has formed a different opinion from that of the Courts below on the merits of the case. In 23 A. 249, STRACHEY, C.J., remarked that if the Court below had proceeded upon merely fanciful ground or grounds so obviously wrong that it could not be said to have formed a serious judicial opinion at all then the High Court would interfere, even on the merits, but such power would not be exercised where the Court below had arrived at a judicial opinion on substantial grounds, merely because the High Court disagrees with that opinion. The High Court must have regard to the nature of the revisional jurisdiction and must not in a case arising under s. 476 any more than in any other case allow what would virtually be an appeal from the Court below, 35 C. 909; 9 N. L. R. 184 = 15 C. R. L. J. 33. The High Court will, however, set aside an order when the ordering Court in forming whatever opinion it did takes action on merely fanciful ground or grounds so empty, so obviously wrong that it could not be said to have formed a serious judicial opinion at all, 10 N. L. R. 177 = 16 Cr. L. J. 161; 18 Cr. L. J. 1015.

56. Power of High Court under s. 439 to revise orders made by Courts other than criminal.—It is now held by all the High Courts except Bombay and Punjab in 7 P. W. R. 1908 = 5 P. R. 1908 = 7 Cr. L. J. 251 and 26 B. 783, that a Criminal Bench cannot revise orders made by Courts other than criminal. See Note 11 under s. 435

(i) Civil Court—A Criminal Bench of the High Court cannot interfere under s. 439 with proceedings of Civil Courts under this section. Application must be made under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code V of 1908 40 C. 477, 8 C. W. N. 73, a Criminal Bench may deal with such orders only if authorized by the Chief Justice under s. 14 of the High Courts Act 40 C. 477 (F.B.) See 23 A. 554 (F.B.) which overrules 26 A. 249; 30 M. 311, 31 M. 510, 28 M. 139, 4 L. B. R. 133 = 7 Cr. L. J. 416, 7 L. B. R. 76 = 6 Bar. L. 1. 144 = 16 Cr. L. J. 496; 34 A. 393, 4 L. B. R. 339 = 9 Cr. L. J. 24, 17 O. C. 23 = 15 Cr. L. J. 217; 17 M. L. T. 269 = 16 Cr. L. J. 232; 1915 U. B. R. III, 83 = 17 Cr. L. J. 82. An order by a Settlement Officer acting under Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is revisable only under s. 115 of Civil Procedure Code or under s. 15 of the High Courts Act, 40 C. 477 (F.B.) 31 M. L. J. 440.

(ii) Revenue Court—When an order under this section is made by a Collector, the High Court cannot interfere in revision as the Collector is not an inferior Criminal Court. The application, if any, for revision should be presented to the Board of Revenue to which alone the Collector is subordinate, 4 A. L. J. 701 = 1907 A. W. N. 277 = 6 Cr. L. J. 350, 3 B. L. R. 66 = 10 Cr. L. J. 393; 15 Cr. L. J. 2 (Oadh), 38 M. 72, 14 A. L. J. 1077. Of course, the Collector would have had no jurisdiction to proceed under this section unless he had been acting as a Revenue Court. In 1902 A. W. N. 202 a Revenue Court made an order under this section and forwarded the accused to the District Magistrate, who acting under sub-sec. (2) of this section, transferred the case to a Magistrate subordinate to him. After an unsuccessful application to the Sessions Judge to set aside the order, the High Court was moved in revision. Held, that neither the High Court nor the Sessions Judge had any jurisdiction in the matter. If the object of the application was to question the original order of the Revenue Court, the Appellate or Revisional jurisdiction was in the superior Revenue Court and as regards the only order passed by the District Magistrate it was a perfectly legal order made under sub-sec. (2) of this section.

(iii) District Registrar—High Court cannot revise the orders of a District Registrar, 35 A. 109.

56-A. Procedure when Bench of Chartered High Court hearing petition from order passed by Civil Court divided.—When the Judges of a Division Bench differ in a matter under revision before them under s. 115, Civ P C, the opinion of the senior Judge prevails, cl. 36 of the Letters Patent and not s. 93, Civ P C, being applicable 19 M. L. T. 591 = 17 Cr. L. J. 42.

57. Board of Revenue cannot revise order of Revenue Court.—The Board of Revenue has no power to set aside the order of an Income-tax Collector directing proceedings under s. 476, 36 M. 72.

58. Procedure to be adopted when Munsiff desires to show cause.—A Munsiff, as a judicial officer, cannot under this section direct the prosecution of a person under ss 228 and 500, I P. C., in respect of contempt of Court and defamation. If the Munsiff desired to show cause against the rule issued by the High Court in respect of such a proceeding he should appear by Counsel, 6 C. L. J. 713

X.—STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

59. Power of Chartered High Court to stay proceedings under this section.—The Madras High Court even when it was of opinion that it could not revise the orders under this section [25 M. 88 (F.B.)] held, that it had the power to stay proceedings instituted under this section by a Civil Court during the pendency of an appeal. The power of general superintendence of s. 15 of the Charter Act and transfer (s. 19 of the Letters Patent) implied the power to send for the records in any case in the Lower Courts which must of necessity stay further proceedings in that case. The High Court has the power to point out to the subordinate Courts the inexpediency of trying a case when it is likely to interfere with the due course of justice (34 C. 843 referred to), 31 M. 510; 18 M. L. T. 591 = 17 Cr. L. J. 42; 43 A. 180.

60. Power of High Court to stay proceedings.—See 15 B. 729, 25 B. 735; 23 C. 610, 31 C. 853, 30 M. 325 and Notes under Heading XXIX, at pp. 546 and 547 and Note 54 to s. 439. Quare, whether the High Court in the exercise of its civil revisional powers has power to stay criminal proceedings, 35 C. 909, 23 C. 610; but the Criminal Court should be asked to stay proceedings, 8 C. W. N. 31.

61. When stay of criminal proceedings desirable.—(a) Pending suit—It would be a dangerous doctrine to lay down any hard and fast rule to the effect that a criminal trial or inquiry should of necessity be stayed, simply because a civil suit has been instituted between the parties in which some or all of the matters materially in issue in the criminal case would have to be determined, until the civil litigation was finally decided. The case in 34 C. 843 lays down no general rule. A Court may well hesitate to give sanction to prosecute his adversary for an offence alleged to have been committed during the pendency of a civil litigation as, if it acceded to his request, it must, to some extent at least give him an unfair advantage by enabling him to hold over the head of his adversary for at least six months the threat of a criminal prosecution which might or might not eventually be undertaken. But it is a very different thing to ask a Criminal Court which after inquiry held with this very object in view, has come to the conclusion that there are grounds for starting criminal proceedings against an individual to stay its hand indefinitely or at any rate, possibly for some years, because that individual has filed a civil suit. As held in 35 C. 909 it is very desirable that such a prosecution should be entertained as speedily as possible while the evidence on both sides is fresh, 13 C. W. N. 398 = 11 Cr. L. J. 4. In this case the civil suit was instituted nearly eight months after the criminal inquiries began and after the petitioner had been called on to show cause why he should not be prosecuted. It is not an invariable rule that the criminal proceedings should be stayed during the pendency of civil litigation regarding the same subject matter. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree. Thereupon accused No. 1 applied to have the attachment raised on the ground that he had purchased the property from the judgment-debtor under a sale-deed executed long before the date of the attachment. In the summary inquiry before the Civil Court, he produced the sale-deed which was supported by the evidence of accused No. 2. The Civil Court found that the deed was a forgery and rejected the claim and then, holding an inquiry under this section committed both accused to the Sessions Court on charges of perjury and forgery. During the pendency of this inquiry, accused No. 1 filed a civil suit to establish the genuineness of the sale deed and to set aside the attachment. He also applied to the High Court to quash the commitment or stay criminal proceedings pending the disposal of the civil suit. Held, refusing the application, that the mere fact that a regular suit was filed to establish the genuineness of the sale-deed was not a sufficient ground for quashing the commitment or for adjourning the trial pending the hearing of a civil suit, 18 B. 581. Where on the refusal of the District Registrar to register certain documents, suits were instituted by the petitioners for the registration of the documents and the District Registrar ordered the prosecution of the petitioners for forgery of the documents, the High Court being of opinion that the petitioners had followed regular course prescribed by law to obtain registration stayed the criminal proceedings for three months only, in order to prevent the petitioners postponing the criminal proceedings for a long time by introducing delays in the conduct of the civil suit, 14 C. W. N. 131. See also 13 Cr. L. J. 1 (C.), 9 P. W. R. 1916 and 8 P. W. R. 1916.

(b) Criminal Proceedings instituted when civil suit pending—When a civil suit is pending, proceedings are instituted in respect of an offence under s. 474, I P. C., alleged to have been committed in the course of such suit it is expedient that Criminal Proceedings should be deferred pending the final disposal of the civil suit, 19 C. W. N. 125 = 16 Cr. L. J. 309.

(c) Pending appeal—Though ordinarily the High Court will not interfere with the discretion of the trying Magistrate and stay proceedings in a Criminal Court, pending the disposal of a second appeal on the civil side yet it will undoubtedly do so when imperatively required in the interests of justice 8 C. 308; B. L. R. Sub Vol 426; 16 B 729, 18 B 881; 26 B 785; 5 C W N 44; 5 C. L. J. 233; 23 C 610; 14 C. W. N. 131, 34 C. 843, 31 M 510 It was held in 35 C. 909 following 26 B 785 that where a Civil Court on passing orders of civil proceeding is not a sufficient reason to quash under s 215 a commitment made under s. 478. See also 14 Bom L R 968 = 1 Bom Cr Ca 212 = 13 Cr L J 843 and 21 P W R. 1912 = 23 Cr L J. 173

82 Sessions Judge cannot stay proceedings of Civil Court.—A Civil Court acting under s 478 or s 478 not being an inferior Criminal Court within the meaning of s. 435 a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction under these sections to stay the proceedings taken by a Civil Court as he cannot call for the records in such a case Welr II, 602 See also Note 26 at p 1050

XI—APPEAL

Under the new amendment it will be found that s. 476-A enables a superior Court to make a complaint where the Subordinate Court has omitted to do so and under s 476-B an appeal is expressly provided for from orders under s 476

476-A. The power conferred on Civil Revenue and Criminal Courts by section 476 sub-section (1) may be exercised in respect of any offence referred to therein and alleged to have been committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any such Court by the Court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of section 195 sub-section (3) in any case in which such former Court has neither made a complaint under section 476 in respect of such offence nor rejected an application for the making of such complaint and where the superior Court makes such complaint the provisions of section 476 shall apply accordingly

Notes—1 Under the old Code there was a conflict of decisions as to whether an Appellate Court can institute proceedings under this section when the Lower Court has omitted to do so (e.g. 32 B 184, 34 C. 551, 10 C. W N 1091).

But now under the present amendment under the new s. 476-A a superior Court may complain where a subordinate Court has omitted to do so.

2 Direction to complain by the higher Court pending an application for sanction before a lower Court.—The pendency of an application for sanction before a lower Court does not prevent a higher Court from granting a sanction under s 476-A of the code 26 Bom L R 713

476-B. Any person on whose application any Civil Revenue or Criminal Court has refused to make a complaint under section 476 or section 476-A, or against whom such a complaint has been made may appeal to the Court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of section 195 sub-section (3) and the superior Court may thereupon after notice to the parties concerned direct the withdrawal of the complaint or as the case may be itself make the complaint which the Subordinate Court might have made under section 476 and if it makes such complaint the provisions of that section shall apply accordingly

Appeals

Notes—1 No appeal to the High Court against an order made under section 476 B—Reversional jurisdiction not ordinarily exercised.—No appeal lies under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code against an order made by the Court to which the Court making a complaint under s. 476 is subordinate

Although the High Court may in extraordinary cases exercise revisional powers in cases falling under s 476-B of the Code yet generally speaking where the Lower Appellate Court withdraws a complaint made under s. 476 it is very difficult for the High Court to interfere in revision.

The question whether a complaint should be made under section 476 is almost invariably a matter of discretion and if the trial Court or the Court to which it is subordinate thinks that no complaint should be made it is not desirable that the High Court should interfere.

Under s 476 as amended the Court is directed, in case it thinks that proceedings should be taken, to make a complaint in writing signed by the presiding officer of the Court and forward the same to a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction

A Court proceeding under s 476-B should, if it quashes the direction to prosecute, direct with drawal of the complaint, it is not enough to direct that the sanction granted by the trial Court should be withdrawn, 26 Bom. L. R. 289.

2 Abatement of appeal on the death of the appellant.—The right of appeal under s. 476-B does not survive on the death of the appellant and the appeal abates. 47 A. 359.

3. The duty of the Appellate Court under s. 476-B.—In deciding an appeal under this section the Appeal Court should reconsider the entire matter on its merits and should take a complete review of all the facts and if the Appellate Court is not satisfied that a prima facie case has been made out, the order appealed against must be set aside. The words "the offence which appears to have been committed" mean the facts before the Court, unless rebutted, show that an offence has been committed. 23 A. L. J. 515.

4. Operation of ss. 476-A and 476-B.—From the scheme of the new amendments it appears that if the Subordinate Court has neither made a complaint under s 476 nor rejected an application for the making of a complaint, then the Superior Court may take action under s. 476-A and make a complaint. But where the Subordinate Court has rejected the application or has granted that application by a formal complaint, then, the procedure contemplated by the Code is by way of an appeal to the Superior Court under s 476-B

Further, held that an appeal under s 476 B of the Code is barred under Art. 154 of the Limitation Act if filed more than thirty days after the order rejecting the application under s 476 53 G. 1009

5. Whether an appeal lies to the High Court under s. 476-B from an appellate order of the District Judge making a complaint which the Subordinate Judge refused to make.—Held, that no appeal lies under s 476-B of the Code to the High Court from an appellate order of the District Judge making a complaint under s 476, which the Subordinate Judge might himself have made but refused to make, 8 Lah. 56.

But see 5 Pat. 282 where 8 Lah. 56 is disapproved and it is held that an appeal lies on behalf of the person against whom complaint is made by the District Judge. In the Patna as well as the Lahore case the facts were the same. In both the cases the Sub-Judge had refused to make a complaint and from this order an appeal was preferred under s 476-B to the District Court, and the District Court passed an appellate order under s. 476-B to lodge a complaint. It goes without saying that in the case of every order to file a complaint whether made by a subordinate or superior Court the procedure laid down under s 476 is to be followed in sending the complaint to the nearest Magistrate etc though the application may be made by a party under s. 476 or 476-A or the party may ask the Court to file a complaint in an appeal under s 476-B

The Patna High Court appears to hold that an appeal is provided under s 476 B in all cases where, 'Any person against whom a complaint under s. 476 has been made by any Court.' (See 5 Pat. 274) This is how the s 476-B is construed by the Patna High Court. The words 'any Court' may mean the Court of First Instance or the Appeal Court and would include both the Sub-Judge and the District Judge. And the conclusion arrived at by the Patna High Court is that where any Court whether the trial Court or the Appeal Court lodges a complaint by following the procedure under s 476, a right of appeal is given under s 476-B to a person against whom such complaint is filed.

But it is submitted that the Patna decision cannot be upheld, and, on the contrary, the decision in 5 Lah. 56 correctly interprets s 476-B for the following reasons—

(1) The policy of the Criminal Procedure Code is not to allow two appeals as a rule in criminal matters. According to the construction put by the Patna High Court on s. 476-B there would be two appeals under that section.

(2) The words "or s. 476-A" in s. 476-B would be quite superfluous, because every District Judge taking action under s. 476-A will have to proceed under s. 476 and to file a complaint under s. 476. So even without the mention of s. 476-A in s. 476-B an appeal would lie under that section as the actual complaint is filed by the District Judge under s. 476.

(3) Section 476-B has the words—

"Any person on whose application."—The word application is very important and clearly indicates the circumstances under which an appeal is allowed under s. 476-B.

Under this section an appeal is only allowed in the following cases —

(a) When an application is made under s. 476 to the trial Court, i.e., Sub-Judge and he refuses to grant it.

(b) When an application is made for the first time to the District Court under s. 476 (where no application was made to the trial Court, i.e., Sub-Judge) and the District Court acts under s. 476 A.

For purposes of appeal, s. 476-B contemplates an order refusing a complaint or making a complaint on an application by a party either under s. 476 or 476-A. Over such an order on such an application only a right of appeal is allowed under s. 476-B. This section does not seem to contemplate a right of appeal over an appellate order rejecting or making a complaint, which order is itself passed in an appeal under s. 476-B and which cannot be said to have been passed on an application either under s. 476 or 476-A.

On this point, see also 26 Bom. L. R. 289, 52 Cal. 478.

6 Whether revision lies to the High Court over an appellate order passed under s. 476-B.—As regards revision all the High Courts seem to have been agreed that in most cases revision lies to the High Court over an appellate order passed under s. 476-B by a District Court. See 26 Bom. L. R. 289, 52 Cal. 478; 5 Lah. 56; 5 Pat. 262. But the Allahabad High Court has held that there is no revision to the High Court under s. 439 in case of an order passed under s. 476-B by a superior Civil Court. 26 A. L. J. 217; 26 All. 249 (F.B.) followed. In this case the Munsiff dismissed an application under s. 476 and refused to file a complaint. There was an appeal over this order to the District Judge and the District Judge under s. 476-B allowed the appeal and ordered a complaint to be filed under s. 476. Under these circumstances it was held that where an order is passed under s. 476 by a superior Civil Court the case does not fall under s. 439 because ss. 435 and 439 must be read together and under these sections High Courts have power to revise the Records of only Criminal Courts and not Civil Courts.

The word proceeding in ss. 435 and 439 refers to a criminal proceeding, and therefore where a superior Civil Court acts under s. 476-B the proceeding is a civil proceeding and not a criminal one and so ss. 435 and 439 cannot apply to such a proceeding and therefore there cannot be any revision.

In 26 Bom. L. R. 289 the proceedings concerned were in the Civil Courts, and revision was sought over an order of the District Judge in a civil matter and still it was held that though an appeal would not lie over an order passed by a District Judge under s. 476-B still revision may lie under s. 439 though the High Court as a rule, will not interfere with the discretion of the Lower Courts. In view of the remarks in 25 A. L. J. 217 the decision in 26 Bom. L. R. 289 will have to be re-considered.

7. Limitation in the case of an appeal under s. 476-B against an order making a complaint.—Limitation begins to run from the date of the making of the complaint and not from the date of the order of the District Judge directing that a complaint be drawn up because s. 476-B of the Code gives a right of appeal to a person against whom a complaint has been made. 7 Lah. 77. Cf. Note 4 above for limitation in case of rejection to file a complaint.

477. (Power of Court of Sessions as to such offences committed before itself) omitted by s. 129 of Act XVIII of 1923

The Joint Committee Report, 1922, says—

Section 477 is inconsistent with section 476 as proposed by the Bill because the latter section made it obligatory on the Court to make a complaint and send it to a first class Magistrate. This defect has been removed by one of the amendments we have made in section 476, but we are doubtful whether s. 477 should stand. We considered a proposal to enable a Court of Sessions to try a case committed to it after a complaint had been made by itself but we do not think it desirable that a Court which has instituted the proceedings should dispose of the case itself, and we have therefore, introduced a clause into the Bill repealing s. 477."

478. (1) When any such offence is committed before any Civil or Revenue Court, or brought under the notice of any Civil or Revenue Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, and the case is triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Sessions or such Civil or Revenue Court thinks that it ought to be tried by the High Court or Court of Sessions, such Civil or Revenue Court may, instead of sending the case under section 476 to a Magistrate for inquiry, itself complete the inquiry, and commit or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the High Court or Court of Sessions as the case may be

Power of Civil and Revenue Court to complete inquiry and commit to High Court or Court of Sessions.

(2) For the purposes of an inquiry under this section the Civil or Revenue Court may* exercise all the powers of a Magistrate, and its proceedings in such inquiry shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVIII, † "and of Chapter XXXIII in cases where that chapter applies and shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate"

Notes.—1. Scope of the words “any such offence.”—These words mean an offence referred to in s. 195, and not an offence referred to in that section qualified by the circumstances under which it is committed, i.e., committed by a party to any proceeding, in any Court, in respect of document given in evidence in such proceeding, as described, in cl. (c) of s. 195 of the 1882 Code, 22 C. 1005; 14 B 591, contra 15 M. 224 and see Notes 3 and 20 to s. 476, 37 C. 250. This section must also be regarded as supplementary to s. 195.

2 Preliminary inquiry necessary and the procedure under Chapter XVIII must be strictly followed.—A Civil Court has no power to order the commitment of a person for offences under ss. 471, 466 and 193, I P C., without holding the preliminary inquiry required by this section, 23 W. R. 52 Where a Court elects to commit the accused itself, the procedure as to preliminary inquiry into cases triable by a Sessions Court (Chapter XVIII) must be strictly followed, 4 M 227—Weir II, 385. The preliminary inquiry must be conducted strictly under Chapter XVII If the offence has not been committed before Court itself, or if the offence be one not exclusively cognizable by a Court of Sessions (or one which in the opinion of the Court ought to be tried by a Court of Sessions) the Court which considers further inquiry to be necessary cannot commit the case to the Court of Sessions, but must send it to a competent Magistrate, 4 B 287, see 15 A. L. J. 803; 40 A. 82.

3. After taking steps under s. 476, Court cannot proceed under this section.—The procedure prescribed in this section, viz., of completing the investigation and committing the accused, etc., is only alternative, and when a Civil Court has once sent a case for inquiry under s. 476 before a first class Magistrate, and the latter discharges accused under s. 209, the Civil Court has no power to revive the case against the accused and issue notice upon him to show cause why he should not be proceeded against before itself. Ratanlal 959.

4. Proceedings which may be construed as orders under this section.—An Assistant Sessions Judge before whom a witness gave a false deposition, took cognizance of the case under s. 190 (c) in his capacity as District Magistrate. On objection being taken for want of previous sanction under s. 195 alleging that the action taken by the officer as a District Magistrate was not tantamount to a sanction by him as a Civil Judge held, that the action taken by the officer was in effect action which as a Civil Judge he was perfectly competent to take under this section as the offence was brought under his notice as a Civil Court in the course of a judicial proceeding. As a Civil Judge he could either transfer the case to himself as a Magistrate for enquiry or completing inquiries as a Civil Judge commit the accused 9 Bom. L. R. 212—5 Cr. L. J. 202. No action having been taken on a sanction a complaint was lodged by the Karkun of a Magistrate under the orders of the Magistrate in the Court of the nearest first-class Magistrate. Held that the proceedings were instituted under s. 476. 34 B. 88

5. Sessions Judge not entitled to stay proceedings of Civil Courts under this section.—A Civil Court acting under s. 476 or this section, not being an inferior Criminal Court within the meaning of s. 435, a Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to call for the records of a Civil Court and to stay the proceedings relating to an inquiry into a charge of an offence held by that Court under this section, Weir II, 602, see Note 68 to s. 476.

6 Stay of criminal proceedings pending civil litigation.—See Note 67 under s. 476.

7. Whether an order of commitment under this section by a Judge of the High Court can be quashed.

† These words and figures "—" were inserted by ibid

479. When any such commitment is made by a Civil or Revenue Court the Court shall send the charge with the order of commitment and the record of the case to the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or other Magistrate authorized to commit for trial and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the High Court or Court of Sessions as the case may be together with the witnesses for the prosecution and defence

Notes.—See s. 206 as to Magistrates authorized to commit for trial

480. (1) When any such offence as is described in sections 175 178 179 180 or section 223 of the Indian Penal Code is committed in the view or presence of any Civil Criminal or Revenue Court the Court may cause the offender * to be detained in custody and at any time before the rising of the Court on the same day may if it thinks fit take cognizance of the offence and sentence the offender to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees and, in default of payment to simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month unless such fine be sooner paid

(2) Nothing in † section 29 A or Chapter XXXIII* shall be deemed to apply to proceedings under this section

Notes.—1 Scope of the sections referred to—S 175—Omission to produce a document before a public servant by a person legally bound to produce such document S 178—Refusing oath when duly required to take oath by a public servant S 179—Refusing to answer a public servant authorized to question. S 180—Refusing to sign a statement made to public servant when legally required to do so S 223—Intentional insult etc. to a public servant sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding

2 Form of warrant—As to the form of warrant in certain cases of contempt when fine is imposed, see Sch V Form No 38 As to the form of the record see s 481 Cf Notes at pp 111 and 112 of the Appendix

3 Prevarication may amount to contempt—Prevarication by a witness may though it does not necessarily amount to a contempt of Court within the meaning of s 298 I P C and under this section 10 B H C R 69, see contra 4 B H C R Cr Ca 6 and 7, 15 W R 5

4 Latitude must be allowed to counsel in conducting the case—See Notes 1 and 2 under s 484 Some latitude should be allowed to a member of the Bar insisting in the conduct of his case upon his question being taken down or his objection noted where the Court thinks the question inadmissible or the objection untenable There ought to be a spirit of give and take between the Bench and the Bar in such matters and every little persistence on the part of a pleader should not be turned into an occasion for a criminal trial unless the prisoner's conduct is so clearly vexatious as to lead to the inference that his intention is to insult or to interrupt the Court 6 Bom L R 541 An irrelevant question put to a witness cannot amount to a contempt under s 228 I P C though a persistence in vexatious or irrelevant questions after warning might amount to a contempt 44 P R 1867 But see 46 B 973

5 When there is no intention to insult, there can be no contempt.—See Note 1 under s. 484—Where an accused person in making an application for transfer of the case pending against him inserted in such application assertions of a scandalous or defamatory nature concerning the trying Magistrate held that there being no intention on the part of the applicant to insult the Court but merely to procure a transfer of his case the conviction under s 228, I P C was bad 1893 A. W N 145 An application for transfer from a particular Court on the ground of a probable miscarriage of justice is not a contempt 34 P R. 1869 A Court has power to deal with an accused only if he committed one of the offences enumerated herein a person therefore cannot be convicted under this section for walking with creaking shoes near the Court room 5 M. L. T 236 = 9 Cr L J 309 In 33 A 284 the case in 1898 A. W N 145 was followed

6 No contempt, unless Magistrate sitting in course of judicial proceedings.—In an inquiry held by a second-class Magistrate about a breach of the peace which arose in consequence of a dispute between two castes the accused said to the Magistrate in a defiant and insolent manner that he would never permit the castes to be friendly even if the Magistrate were to shoot him dead." The Sub-Magistrate thereupon fined him Rs 50 and the Joint Magistrate reversed the conviction on the ground that he was not sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding and this reversal was upheld by the High Court as perfectly correct, Weir II, 603. While a Tahsildar was hearing a civil case, he allowed the proceedings to be interrupted by the accused, a lambardar, who had brought part of a sum due from him for revenue and in the course of which the accused was alleged to have abused the Tahsildar and was prosecuted, held that the Tahsildar was not sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding and the conviction under s 228 was unsustainable 40 P. R. 1881; see also 35 P. R. 1886.

* The words whether he is an European by the subject or not were omitted by Act XII of 1923

7. Section not applicable to village headmen in Madras.—The head of a village is a Criminal Court, but he cannot take cognizance of a contempt under this section, because under no provision of the law has he power to fine.—Mad. H C Pro, 26th July, 1870 Ss. 480—482 do not apply to Village Munsiff therefore, where a Village Munsiff was intentionally insulted in the discharge of his Magisterial duties by the accused, who was thereupon convicted by a second-class Magistrate on Police report held, that the conviction was right as the Magistrate had jurisdiction and the want of sanction or complaint on the part of the Village Munsiff was a defect curable by s. 537, 15 M. 131.

8. Contempts must be dealt with before rising of Court.—The procedure laid down in this section should be strictly followed. The provisions of the section should be applied then and there, at any rate before its rising, by the Court in whose view or presence a contempt has been committed which it considers should be dealt with under this section. Where a Magistrate, in whose presence contempt was committed, took cognizance of the offence immediately, but in order to give the accused an opportunity of showing cause, postponed his final order for some days, held that, under the circumstances, it was doubtful whether there was any necessity for the Magistrate to postpone the final order until the accused has had an opportunity of showing cause against it, and that he should have directed the detention of the accused and dealt with the matter at once or before his rising, 11 A. 361. When a proceeding under this section was instituted immediately after the reading out of a final order and it was objected that the judicial proceedings have been concluded by the reading of the final order, the Court could not proceed under this section held, that the accused was rightly convicted under this section, 16 P. R. 1897—Per ROG, C.J. It might also be held, that the whole sitting of a Court for the disposal of judicial work from the opening to the rising of the Court is a judicial proceeding and that the necessary interval between the conclusion of one case and the opening of another is a stage in a judicial proceeding. S 482 need not be read with this section and that section does not require the Magistrate to draw up proceedings on the same day that the offence is committed, 33 C 161. The rule applies only to action taken under this section.

9. Change of capacity of offended officer does not give jurisdiction.—An officer before whom whilst acting in a particular capacity an offence under s. 228, I P C., is committed, cannot in another capacity take up and try the offence. Where the officer does not follow the procedure laid down in this section the case must be tried by an officer other than the person before whom the contempt was committed 13 W. R. 18 See also 15 W. R. 2. The Ruling in 22 W. R. 10 to the effect, that if the Court does not proceed under this section or s. 432 it cannot make the contempt the subject of a complaint under s. 195 to a Magistrate, is perhaps of doubtful authority having regard to the language of s. 195.

10. Sentence cannot be passed in excess of Rs. 200 for interruption.—Notwithstanding the provisions as to punishment in s. 228 I P C., a Court, proceeding itself under this section (i.e., when dealing with an offence) cannot pass a sentence in excess of that prescribed herein, Weir II, 603. If it considers a fine too light a sentence for the offence, it ought, under s. 483 to refer the case to some competent Magistrate, 10 W. R. 47; Ratanlal 64.

11. Right of appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this section. See s 486 and a Sessions Judge cannot decline to interfere on appeal, merely because in his opinion 'the matter is a mere trifle'. He is bound to hear the appeal, and to come to a finding, whether the conviction is legal or illegal, Ratanlal 978.

12. Imprisonment in default to be in Civil Jail.—Though the section is silent as to the jail in which the imprisonment is to be carried out, the offender is generally sent only to the Civil Jail. Where a person is committed to jail for contempt, the Government is bound to supply him with rations, in the same way in which they are supplied to the other prisoners in the jail, 3 W. R. Cr. (Let.) 21.

13. No process fee payable by party.—No fee is chargeable for serving and executing any process such as a notice, rule, summons or warrant of arrest which may be issued by any Court of its own motion, solely for the purpose of taking cognizance of and punishing any act done or words spoken in contempt of its authority,

14. Has a Chartered High Court power to punish for contempt of inferior Courts?—In Governor of Bengal v. Mota Lal Ghosh, 41 C. 173, the Calcutta High Court held, that it had no jurisdiction to punish, as an offence in a summary proceeding, conduct in relation to a proceeding, in a mofussil Criminal Court, such as commenting on a case pending before that Court and differed from the decision of the Madras High Court in 21 M. L. J. 832 (F.B.) = 12 Cr. L. J. 825, where it was held that the High Court had jurisdiction to punish in a summary proceeding contempts of inferior Courts. See Note 1 under section 2 of the Appendix.

15. Comment on pending proceedings may amount to contempt.—It is a contempt of Court to make comment on a pending case if the comment can in the least be taken to have the effect of prejudicing the fair trial of an accused person, 14 Bom. L. R. 231 = 1 Bom. Cr. C. 108 = 13 Cr. L. J. 461. An article in a newspaper reflecting on the party to a suit, more especially when he is under cross-examination is a contempt of Court, 15 C. W. N. 771. As the law now stands it is only the Chartered High Court that have power to punish for such contempts.

16. Suit against Magistrate for punishing person under this section when offence committed.—Where a Magistrate charged a person with an offence under s. 228, I P C., alleged to have been committed by the accused by walking in view of the Magistrate with shoes on, while discharging his duties as a Magistrate and it was found that he acted bona fide, held no suit could be maintained against him in damages, 9 M. L. T. 444.

481. (1) In every such case the Court shall record the facts constituting the offence, with the statement (if any) made by the offender, as well as the finding and sentence

(2) If the offence is under section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, the record shall show the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting, and the nature of the interruption or insult

Notes.—1. Disregard of procedure will lead to reversal of conviction.—Where the procedure laid down in this section, as respects the recording of facts constituting the offence with any statement that the offender may make, as well as the finding and sentence was disregarded, the High Court set aside the conviction as illegal, 4 M. H. C. R. 229. The directions of this section "to record facts constituting the offence," are mandatory, and the omission to record the particulars mentioned herein "any proceedings taken under s. 480 is fatal to such proceedings, 10 C. W. N. 1062 = 4 C. L. J. 415 = 4 Cr. L. J. 210.

2. Record must show nature and stage of judicial proceeding.—Where all that appeared from the record was that the Court of a Tahsildar was at a certain village for the purpose of attesting transfers in his capacity of a Revenue Court and that the accused had in the course of a conversation acted insolently and were convicted under s. 480, but the record did not show that at the time of the insult the Tahsildar was acting in any stage of a judicial proceeding held, the conviction must be set aside for non-compliance with the provisions of sub-sec. (2) 36 P. R. 1866. Where there is no evidence on the record from which it can be gathered what was the judicial proceeding or what was the stage of that proceeding which was interrupted, the order cannot be sustained though any irregularity can be cured by s. 537, 13 Cr. L. J. 621 (M)

3. Specific offence charged must be stated and opportunity of answering it given.—A contempt of Court being a criminal offence, no person can be punished for such unless the specific offence charged against him is distinctly stated, and an opportunity given him of answering—In re Pollard, (1880) L. R. 2 P. C. 108; 13 C. W. N. 685 = 19 M. L. J. 324 (P.C.)

4. Trivial incidents ought not to be magnified into offences.—See 4 M. H. C. R. 146 at p. 147, where the Appellate Court held it to be no contempt, a laugh and hesitation in speaking, which the Lower Court held to be one. It was found there was no intention to insult the Judge. As to whether prevarication would constitute contempt, see also 5 M. L. T. 286 = 2 Cr. C. L. J. 309. Notes 3 and 5 under s. 480 and Notes to s. 484

482. (1) If the Court in any case considers that a person accused of any of the offences referred to in section 480 and committed in its view or presence should be imprisoned otherwise than in default of payment of fine or that a fine exceeding two hundred rupees should be imposed upon him, or such Court is for any other reason of opinion that the case should not be disposed of under section 480 such Court after recording the facts constituting the offence and the statement of the accused as hereinbefore provided, may forward the case to a Magistrate

Procedure where Court considers that case should not be dealt with under section 480

having jurisdiction to try the same and may require security to be given for the appearance of such accused person before such Magistrate or if sufficient security is not given shall forward such person in custody to such Magistrate

(2) The Magistrate to whom any case is forwarded under this section shall proceed to hear the complaint against the accused person in manner hereinbefore provided

Notes—1 Trial to be by officer other than the one before whom contempt was committed—

Section 482 distinctly contemplates that the trial is to be by a judicial officer other than the person before whom the contempt was committed. There is nothing to warrant the inference that an officer before whom while acting in a particular capacity a contempt has been committed punishable under s 228 I P C can in another capacity take up and try the offence an offence committed against himself. If he could do so it would be in violation of that fundamental rule in the administration of justice that no man can be a judge in a case wherein he is interested. Per NORMAN J 12 W R 18 at p. 21

2. Case not to be dismissed because Court is unable to record any statement.—The Court should record a statement of facts constituting contempt and the statement of the accused and then forward the case to a Magistrate 11 W R. 49. Where a Court proceeding under this section was unable owing to the offender—a barrister—having left the Court house to record any statement from him explanatory of his conduct held that the dismissal of the case on the ground of no such explanatory statement being recorded was improper Weir II, 604; 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. XVI

3. Section 480 does not limit the time for institution of proceedings under s. 482.—A Court acting under this section is not bound to take proceedings on the same day as it is when acting under s. 480 35 C 161

When Registrar or Sub-Registrar to be deemed a Civil Court within sections 480 and 482.

483. When the Local Government so directs any Registrar or any Sub-Registrar appointed under the Indian Registration Act 1877 shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of sections 480 and 482

Note.—The Indian Regulation Act III of 1877 is now repealed and the law on the subject consolidated by Act XVI of 1908. In Madras (G O No 229 Judicial 10th February 1890) and in United Provinces (Allahabad Gazette 1888 Pt I p 378) every District Registrar has been declared to be a Civil Court within meaning of ss 480 and 482. This section is based on 13 B L R Appx. XL = 22 W R. 10, but no notification has yet been issued with regard to Sub-Registrars and exceptional provisions like those embodied in section are not to be drawn out into all their logical consequences 12 B 36. See also 2 C. W. N 244 and Note 8 under Heading II to s 476.

484. When any Court has under section 480 or section 482 adjudged an offender to punishment for or forwarded him to a Magistrate for trial refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do or for any intentional insult or interruption the Court may, in its discretion discharge the offender or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court or an apology being made to its satisfaction

Discharge of offender on submission or apology

Notes—1. Court will always do well to accept earnest assurances of pleaders that there was no intention to insult the Court.—A pleader was tried and punished for contempt by a Munsiff for having used certain words which the Judge thought was derogatory to his position and the Munsiff declined to accept the assurance of the pleader that the words were never meant to apply to the Court. The High Court postponed the case in order to give the Munsiff an opportunity to consider whether he should not accept the assurance with these remarks. I think that the learned Munsiff should have accepted that assurance as coming from a gentleman of the standing, of the pleader as a full and real assurance that he never intended to make use of that expression and did not use that expression with reference to the Court. The Judge will always do well to give the fullest belief to the words addressed to him in real earnestness from a gentleman at the Bar. The Munsiff not having accepted the assurance his Lordship accepted the same as sufficient and set aside the order punishing the pleader 11 A L J 955 = 14 Cr L J 837. See Note 4 to s. 481

2. Courts ought not to take too much notice of sudden lapses during movements of excitement.—Litigants are bound to conduct themselves in an orderly manner but too much notice should not be taken of the sudden lapse during a moment of excitement, into language which is unfortunately too common among lower class of rustics and is not meant to be taken seriously. When the offender was detained and adopted a submissive attitude when brought before the Court later after the excitement had worn off due admonition sufficient for preservation of order at the most a petty fine would meet the necessities of the case. 23 P. W. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 587

485. If any witness or person called to produce a document or thing before a Criminal

Imprisonment or commitment of person refusing to answer or produce document

Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him or to produce any document or thing in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce and does not offer any reasonable excuse for such refusal such Court may for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment or by warrant under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court for any term not exceeding seven days unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document or thing. In the event of his persisting in his refusal he may be dealt with according to the provisions of section 480 or section 482 and in the case of a Court established by Royal Charter shall be deemed guilty of a contempt.

Notes — 1 Form of warrant of commitment see Sch. V Form No. 39

2 Complainant is not a witness — A complainant can hardly be held a witness punishable for refusing to answer under this section and even a witness cannot be punished for not answering a question which is irrelevant to the real issue or which he is not legally bound to answer, 13 B. 600

3 Duty of witness when incriminating question put. — If a witness does not desire to have his answers used against him on a subsequent criminal charge he must object to answer although he may know beforehand that such objection if the answer is relevant is perfectly futile so far as his duty to answer is concerned and must be overruled. 3 M. 271 (F.B.) followed in 12 B. 440, where it was held that protection is afforded only to answers which a witness has objected to give or which he has asked to be excused from giving and which then he has been compelled by the Court to give (BIRDWOOD J., assenting). See also 21 C. 392, 16 A. 83, 32 C. 766. The same construction was put on the Canadian Act in Queen v. Williams 26 Can. R. 583 overruling Queen v. Hender Shott but the Chancery Divisional Court has pronounced in Queen v. Hamman 34 Can. Law Journal No. 5 p. 164 a contrary opinion, holding that the immunity embodied in the section 4 of the Canadian Evidence Act (which is substantially identical with s. 132 of the Indian Evidence Act) extends even to persons who had not objected or asked to be excused from answering incriminating statements. 2 C. W. N. 169

4 Not bound to answer questions asked with a view to criminal proceedings being started — If a Judge asks questions with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against the witness the witness is not bound to answer them and cannot be punished for not answering them under s. 179 I. P. C. 10 B. 185

5 Commit him to custody — It is advisable but not necessary to limit the period of commitment to a fixed time. When a person is in custody for contempt of Court any application for release should be made to the committing Judge. 1 Ind. Jur. N. 23.

6 Power of Chartered High Court to commit for contempt. — The power of the Chartered High Courts to commit for contempt is not under this Code and the Penal Code but under the Common Law of England. Macderott v. The Justices of British Guiana 5 Moore's P. C. C. (N.B.) 466. See also The Champion 2 Atkins 459, in re Davies L. R. 1 Q. B. D. 236, 3 C. W. Appeals from conviction in contempt cases

486. (1) Any person sentenced by any Court under section 480 or section 485 may notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained appeal to the Court to which decrees or orders made in such Court are ordinarily appealable

(2) The provisions of Chapter XXXI shall so far as they are applicable apply to appeals under this section and the Appellate Court may alter or reverse the finding or reduce or reverse the sentence appealed against

(3) An appeal from such conviction by a Court of Small Causes in a presidency town shall lie to the High Court and an appeal from such conviction by any other Court of Small Causes shall lie to the Court of Session or the Sessions division within which such Court is situate

(4) An appeal from such conviction by any officer as Registrar or Sub-Registrar appointed as aforesaid may when such officer is also Judge of a Civil Court be made to the Court to which it would under the preceding portion of this section be made if such conviction were a decree by such officer in his capacity as such Judge and in other cases may be made to the District Judge or, in the presidency towns to the High Court.

Note.—Ordinarily appealable, i.e. in the majority of cases 11 B 438 at p 440 In Civil cases an appeal lies from an order, refusing an application to commit for contempt of Court 25 C 236

487. (1) Except as provided in sections* 480 and 485 no Judge of a Criminal Court or Magistrate other than a Judge of a High Court† shall try any person for any offence referred to in section 195 when such offence is committed before himself or in contempt‡ of his authority, or is brought under his notice as such Judge or Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding

Certain Judges and Magistrates not to try offences referred to in s. 195 when committed before themselves

(2) Nothing in section 476 or section 482 shall prevent a Magistrate empowered to commit to the Court of Session or High Court from himself committing any case to such Court

Note.—1 Prohibition is personal—The prohibition contained in this section is a personal prohibition the mischief to be prevented being that the same person should not decide a matter which he may have already pre-judged 1 M 305, but curiously enough having regard to the language of the section where sanction was given by an officer in his capacity as a revenue officer the trial of the case by the same officer as Deputy Magistrate was held not illegal Weir II, 613 A second-class Magistrate who issues an order under s 144 has no jurisdiction to punish for its disobedience 10 B H. C. R. 424, 1 B 339, 24 M 282, Ratanlal 804 which distinguishes 18 B 380, 13 C. W N 223. Also a Magistrate whose summons has been disobeyed has no jurisdiction to try the offence Weir I, 82, II, 612. See Note 65 to s. 144

2 Exemption for Judges of High Court.—The High Court as a Court of record has the power of summarily punishing for every contempt without sending the accused for trial to the ordinary Courts of criminal jurisdiction 8 W R 32 See the remarks of BASHAM AYLWARD J in 24 M 523 at p 545

3. Prohibition extends to Sessions Judge.—A Sessions Judge is not competent to try the case of a person who has given false evidence before him in a Criminal case In other words the prohibition in the section extends to Sessions Judge 14 A 354. A Sessions Judge who has omitted to take action under s 477 in respect of an offence referred to in s. 195 committed before his own Court has no jurisdiction to try such offence notwithstanding that it may be exclusively triable by a Sessions Court Weir II 609 But in Weir II, 607, it was held that a Sessions Judge who was the Judge before whom an offence under s. 193 I I C W is committed is not precluded by this section from hearing an appeal in the case Weir II, 607

4. Section applicable to Presidency Magistrates.—Under this section the Chief Presidency Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try a person for an offence under s. 188 I P C. for disobedience of his own order The terms of this section are wide enough to include a Presidency Magistrate and where the High Court sets aside a conviction for the reason that the trying Magistrate had no jurisdiction it is not the duty of the High Court ordinarily to direct a re-trial The order of the High Court merely setting aside the conviction and sentence is no obstacle to the accused being re-tried on the same charge at the instance of the prosecution 12 C. W N 246 = 7 C. L. J 70 = 7 Cr L. J 103.

5 Prohibition is restricted to Judges of Criminal Courts or Magistrates.—Where sanction was given by an officer in his capacity as a revenue officer the trial of the case as Deputy Magistrate was held not illegal Weir II, 613. A District Judge who has sanctioned the prosecution of a party for forgery is not debarred from trying the offence in his capacity of a Sessions Judge, 6 B. 479; 14 A. 334. It would be inconsistent to hold that a Sessions Judge may under s 477 try an offence committed before him as Sessions Judge, but that he may not try such an offence if committed before him as District Judge. The prohibition is restricted to a "Judge of a Criminal Court" and that being so, a strict construction must be placed on the words "as such Judge," and it must be held that they do not include a Judge of a Civil Court or a District Judge, 16 C. 766 at p 771 (F B) overruling 16 C. 121; followed in 18 B. 390. Nor is a Sessions Judge debarred from hearing an appeal from a conviction by the District Magistrate to whom he had sent the case for inquiry, under s. 476, while acting as District Judge, 7 C. W. N. 708. This circumstance would not also constitute "personal interest" within the meaning of s 556. The illustration to s 556 is distinguished in the above Ruling. See Note 9 below and Note 7 to s 477.

6. Magistrate not excluded when sanction is in respect of offence not committed in Court.—Whereupon a report by a Police-officer that false information was given by A, the District Magistrate gave sanction to his prosecution for giving such information; held, that this section does not apply to the case and prevent the District Magistrate from hearing the appeal against the conviction of such person inasmuch as the offence was not committed before himself, etc., within the meaning of this section, 27 C. 437, nor does this section prevent the District Magistrate from trying the case himself. Section 195 (1) (b) has reference to an offence under s 211, I P C., but only when such offence is committed in, or in relation to any proceeding in Court. 12 P. R. 1903 = 74 P. L. R. 1903 = 2 Cr. L. J. 86. Where a false charge is made to the Police and on their report, the District Magistrate directs the prosecution of the informer, there is nothing to prevent his trying the case himself. See Note 9 below.

7. Magistrate not excluded, unless matter had been before him in course of judicial proceeding.—B charged certain persons with theft before a Police-officer, who brought it to the notice of a Magistrate having jurisdiction. The Magistrate directed the Police to investigate into the truth of such charge. Having ascertained that such charge was false the Magistrate took proceedings against B on a charge of making a false charge of an offence, and convicted him of that offence. Held, that as such false charge was not preferred by B before such Magistrate, the offence of making it was not a contempt of such Magistrate's authority and such Magistrate was not precluded from trying B himself, nor was his sanction or that of some superior Court, necessary for B's trial by another officer. 3 A. 322.

8. Magistrate not excluded, if offence was committed before him in a non-criminal capacity.—Magistrate is not debarred by this section from trying an accused person under s. 174, I P. C., for disobedience of a summons issued by him in his capacity as a Mamlatdar, 18 B. 380 (F.B.) but see Ratanlal 70 and 804. Where the accused would not allow the attachment of his property in execution of a decree of the Cantonment Small Cause Court, the Judge of that Court had no jurisdiction as a Magistrate to try him under s. 186, I P. C., 22 P. R. 1879. Where a Settlement Officer, who was also a Magistrate, summoned as Settlement Officer a person to attend his Court and such person neglected to attend, and such officer as a Magistrate charged him with an offence under s. 174, I P. C., and tried and convicted him on his own charge, held, that such conviction was illegal, 2 A. 405, 13 M. 24; 14 A. 334. The Madras Law Journal (Vol. 4, p 287) observes with regard to the Ruling in 18 B. 380, "there can be no doubt in this case the policy of the law has evidently been frustrated by the language of the section. There can be no reason for recording him as competent merely because he issued summons in a different capacity. If the policy of the law has been that the accused will not have a fair trial, if the disobedience for which he is tried is the order of the trying officer, regard must be had to the sameness of the individual, and not to the sameness of capacity. However as the language of the section stands there can be only one interpretation of it."

9. Magistrate excluded if offence was before him as a Criminal Court.—Accused was summoned to produce certain documents, but failed to produce them, saying that they were not in his possession. The Magistrate, having found that the statement was incorrect charged him with having committed an offence under s 175, I P C., and himself tried and convicted him, held that the Magistrate was precluded by this section from trying the case himself and that none of the sections excepted (i.e., ss 477, 480 and 485) was applicable to the case, 13 M. 24. An order whether original or appellate granting or refusing sanction under s. 195 is a judicial proceeding. A Magistrate who has refused to set aside an order sanctioning a prosecution on a charge of perjury, has no jurisdiction under this section to try the case himself, 20 M. 383, 16 A. L. J. 432; 23 C. W. N. 820.

10. Prohibition in section extends to all contempts.—S 473 of Act X of 1872, which, except as therein provided, forbids a Court to try any person for an offence committed in contempt of its own authority, is not limited to offences falling under Chapter X of the I P C, but extends to all contempts of Courts, 1 B. 339. The words in contempt of authority are general, and are not to be construed as limited to cases where the alleged offence is in the nature of a contempt of Court, 24 M. 262; 18 B. 380 (F B)

11. Giving false evidence in judicial proceeding is contempt of Court.—The offence of intentionally giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding cannot be tried by the Magistrate before whom the false evidence is given. The offence being an attempt to pervert the proceedings of a Court to an improper end, is a contempt of its authority 10 B H. C. R. 73; 1 A 625 (F.B.); 1 B. 311, and therefore the Magistrate himself cannot try a person for giving false evidence before himself 7 M. H. C. R. Appx XXVII; 22 W. R. 49, 1 A. 129, or for the abatement of such an offence 7 M. H. C. R. Appx XXVII. Under the 1872 Code a Court of Session had no power to commit to itself a person charged under s. 193 I P C, with giving false evidence before itself, 4 C. 570 = 3 C. L. R. 599; 3 M. 255, 5 C. 184 at p. 187; 2 A. 405. But now s. 477 makes an exception in the case of a Sessions Judge. Where, however, a Sessions Judge without taking action under s. 476 or s. 477, merely sanctioned the prosecution of the accused for having given false evidence in a trial before him and they were committed for trial by a Magistrate on the charge for perjury and was tried and convicted by the same Sessions Judge, held that the trial was without jurisdiction and the conviction must be set aside, Weir II, 609.

12. Duty of Court when sufficient ground forthcoming.—Where a Court thinks that there is sufficient ground for inquiring into a charge mentioned in s. 195 it should proceed under this Chapter, observing the provisions of this section 3 A. 62.

13. Even when Judge qualified to try, transfer may be desirable.—Where a District Magistrate had procured the initiation of a number of proceedings against the same person and one of them which had resulted in conviction came up before him in appeal the High Court considering that it was not altogether seemly that he should hear the appeal, ordered its transfer to the Sessions Judge, 24 W. R. 88. See also 5 M. H. C. R. 312 as to the desirability of transfer in similar circumstances. But the circumstance that the Sessions Judge had expressed an opinion unfavourable to a person accused of an offence belonging to a class of cases, excepted by this section from the general rule that no Court shall try an offence committed in contempt of its own authority, is in itself no ground for transferring the trial to another Sessions Court, such a state of things being one the existence of which the law necessarily contemplates, when it authorizes a Sessions Judge to try such cases, Weir II, 608.

14. Accused must always be given opportunity for explanation.—A conviction without giving an opportunity to the accused for explanation is bad, 13 C. W. N. 685 = 19 M. L. J. 324 (P C.), re Pollard, L. R. 2 P. C. 106 (1888) = 8 Moore P. C. N. R. 111.

or his legitimate or illegitimate child unable to maintain itself, the District Magistrate a Presidency Magistrate, a Sub-Divisional Magistrate, or a Magistrate of the first class may, upon proof of such neglect or refusal, order such person to make a monthly allowance for the maintenance of his wife or such child, at such monthly rate, not exceeding* "one hundred" rupees in the whole, as such Magistrate thinks fit, and to pay the same to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs

(2) Such allowance shall be payable from the date of the order, or, if so ordered, from the date of the application for maintenance

(3) If any person so ordered fails without sufficient cause to comply with the order, any such Magistrate may, for every breach of the order, issue a warrant for levying the amount due in manner hereinbefore provided for levying fines and may sentence such person, for the whole or any part of each month's

* * Provided, further, that no warrant shall be issued for the recovery of any amount due under this section unless application be made to the Court to levy such amount within a period of one year from the date on which it became due "

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason, she refuses to live with her husband or if they are living separately by mutual consent

(5) On proof that any wife in whose favour an order has been made under this section is living in adultery or that without sufficient reason she refuses to live with her husband or that they are living separately by mutual consent, the Magistrate shall cancel the order

(6) All evidence under this Chapter shall be taken in the presence of the husband or father, as the case may be, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in the presence of his pleader, and shall be recorded in the manner prescribed in the case of summons-cases

Provided that if the Magistrate is satisfied that he is wilfully avoiding service, or wilfully neglects to attend the Court, the Magistrate may proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte. Any order so made may be set aside for good cause shown, on application made within three months from the date thereof

† (7) The Court in dealing with applications under this section shall have power to make such order as to costs as may be just

§ (8) Proceedings under this section may be taken against any person " in any district where he resides or is or where he last resided with his wife or, as the case may be, the mother of the illegitimate child

Note.—For levy of fines see ss. 386–389, for recording evidence in summons-cases, see s. 355. Imprisonment may be simple or rigorous. See s. 3 (25) of the General Clauses Act 1897, § A. 240. The jurisdiction conferred by this section is not punitive and is preventive rather than remedial, 3 P. R. 1893. The N Y Cr P Code (ss. 914–926) treats the subject as a special proceeding of a criminal nature—Stokes Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol. II p. 29, introduction

Notes.—(1) Changes in the section by the amending Act XVIII of 1923. Instead of rupees fifty rupees hundred can now be given as maintenance allowance per month. In sub-sec. (3) instead of the words ' wilfully neglects ' the words ' fails without sufficient cause ' are substituted by a new proviso to sub-sec. (3). A period of one year is laid down for the recovery of arrears of maintenance. Original sub-sec. (7) is omitted see now s. 340 which expressly provides for the right of giving evidence.

The word ' accused ' is deleted from sub-sec. (8) and in its stead the word ' person ' is substituted thereby making it clear that the person proceeded against under this section is not an accused person.

2. Forms of warrant.—As to forms of warrant of imprisonment on failure to pay maintenance see Sch. Y, Form No. 40, and to enforce the payment of maintenance by distress and sale see No. 41

I.—SCOPE AND NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS.

3. Chapter applies to European British subjects.—See 10 P. R. 1871; 49 M. L. J. 335.

3-A. Enforcement in India of maintenance orders made outside India.—Now under Act XVIII of 1921 provision is made for the enforcement in British India of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions and Protectorates and vice versa. Under that Act the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate is constituted a Court of summary jurisdiction and under certain conditions and circumstances mentioned in that Act the Chief Presidency Magistrate in a Presidency town or the District Magistrate in the Mofussil is empowered to enforce such maintenance orders made outside British India. This jurisdiction is somewhat analogous to the Magisterial jurisdiction under s. 488.

A. Nature of proceedings under this Chapter.—(i) Proceedings are judicial proceedings—See s. 4 (m) at pp 13-14. The proceedings under this Chapter are judicial proceedings in their nature, and must not be conducted as if they were ministerial matters. The notes of evidence must not be inadequate and vague, and the order recorded should be on distinct findings of fact, 5 A. 225; 5 Bom. H. C. R. 81.

(ii) Proceeding is a 'criminal case' within the meaning of s. 528—A proceeding under this section is a criminal case within the meaning of s. 528 and the District Magistrate may withdraw a case instituted under this section from the file of the first-class Magistrate to his own file 5 P. R. 1903 = 2 Cr. L. J. 40. Cf 25 B. 179; 28 G. 709.

(iii) Order awarding maintenance is order made in a 'criminal trial' within meaning of s. 15 of Letters Patent—See 17 M. L. T. 330 = 16 Cr. L. J. 326.

(iv) Maintenance proceedings under s. 488 wholly governed by the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code—[in a maintenance proceeding under s. 488 when the plea of insanity is set up on behalf of the counter petitioner, the Magistrate is bound to hold a judicial inquiry into his sanity and put him, if necessary, under medical observation, 43 M. 338 = 43 M. L. J. 187.

5. Proceeding under this Chapter not a civil suit.—The proceedings under this Chapter do not amount to a civil suit where the issue is to the social standing of the wife and the amount of alimony appropriate, or the kind of education children of a person in the father's position ought to receive and the amount, if any property payable in schooling fees for them. These are questions beyond the scope of this Code. The Code in providing 'maintenance' does not intend to go further than to ensure to the wife or children food, clothing and lodging. It does not provide for schooling fees 1909 U. B. R. L. 17 = 11 Cr. L. J. 40.

6. Neglect or refusal to maintain is no "offence" and the person proceeded against is not an accused person in the ordinary sense—Effect thereof.—Though clis. (7) and (9) refer to the defendant in a maintenance case as an 'accused' it is clear from the nature of the proceedings as also from the facts that an oath can be administered to him that he is not an accused person in the ordinary sense of that term, 17 C. P. L. R. 177 = 1 Cr. L. J. 884. The neglect or refusal to maintain mentioned in this section is not an 'offence' as defined in s. 4 (o), that is to say, is not an act or omission made punishable by law and therefore, (1) s. 177 does not determine the place of inquiry, 13 P. P. 1833; 3 P. R. 1893; (2) s. 20, cl. (1) of the Court-fees Act, 1870, does not apply to processes issued under this section, 18 M. 234; (3) when the Magistrate orders a person to make a monthly allowance under this section there is no conviction of any offence and no appeal lies 7 W. R. 10; 5 Bom. H. C. R. 84; (4) ss. 202 and 203 are inapplicable to such proceedings and a Magistrate having jurisdiction to determine such application cannot refer it to his subordinate for inquiry or dismiss it on his report, 29 P. R. 1903 = 3 Cr. L. J. 421; 11 M. 199, (5) proceedings are of a civil nature and parties are competent witnesses. See s. 120 of the Evidence Act and sub-sec. (7), 18 A. 107; 18 B. 483; 18 C. 781; (6) compensation cannot be awarded to accused, 6 M. L. T. 281 = 11 Cr. L. J. 456 following 16 M. 234

7. Statutory right created by section is independent of and not controlled by personal law.—(i) Of a wife—Under the law of the Shea sect of Muhammadans, a moola wife is not entitled to maintenance but such a provision of the law does not interfere with the statutory right to maintenance, given by this section, 8 C. 736 = 11 C. L. R. 237; 6 W. R. 60; 19 M. 461; 5 A. 226; and children of a nikah wife are legitimate, 18 W. R. 23. The fact that under the personal law a person is bound to maintain is not conclusive, e.g., a wife under the Muhammadan Law is entitled to maintenance during iddat, 20 M. L. J. 12 = 10 Cr. L. J. 502

(ii) Of a child—An illegitimate son of a Hindu by a non-Hindu woman (here a Christian) is not entitled under Hindu Law to maintenance (4 C. L. R. 154, referred to). He may be entitled to maintenance under this section, but his rights hereunder, can be enforced only by the particular remedy provided by the section, and to the extent herein provided. Consequently, he cannot enforce it by suit, nor does the right survive the death of his putative father. In the case of illegitimate children entitled to claim maintenance under the common law, i.e., the personal law applicable to them, the statutory remedy given by this section will only be a cumulative remedy and will not take away the remedy under the common law to enforce such right by action against the father during his life-time or after his death against his estate, 27 M. 13. The father of a child born during the continuance of the form of marriage known as sumbundhum under the Marumakkathayam Law as observed by the Nayar community of Malabar is liable to have an order made against him for its maintenance under this section, 22 M. 246 and 247 (footnote). See the subject of the liability of a Numbodri Illom property to maintain the Nayar children of one of the members of the Illom, discussed at great length by the Full Bench of the Travancore High Court in A S 147 and 171 of 1079 (Malabar Law Quarterly Vol. I, p. 37). The right of a wife and of children to be maintained by the husband and by the actual father, is a statutory right, and the duty is created by express enactment independent of the personal law of the parties. If the children be illegitimate, the refusal of the mother to surrender them to the father is no ground for refusing an allowance for maintenance. If the children be legitimate and the parties are governed by the Muhammadan Law, the mother may have the right to custody until they attain the age of seven years, and in any case they are entitled to be maintained till then. But if the parties are governed by Marumakkathayam Law, it is doubtful whether the father could be held to have neglected his duty to provide for his children, if they are actually being maintained by the karnavan of the mother's tarwad who is bound by law to maintain them. Quare? Whether the karnavan of the mother's tarwad has any locus standi to make an application for the maintenance of her children, when the law has imposed the same duty on himself and when he himself has sufficient means to perform that duty, 19 M. 461. It was however held in 25 M. L. J. 335 = 14 M. L. L. 223 = 14 Cr. L. J. 597, that the fact of the child belonging to a well-to-do tarwad had nothing to do with the liability of a father who has sufficient means to maintain his child and neglects to do so. But this view was dissented from in 19 M. L. T. 23 = 17 Cr. L. J. 16, where it was held that s. 488 has no application to cases of children having independent means of their own or have a right to be maintained by a tarwad.

Although the offspring of a sambundhum is not entitled to an order for maintenance against the father in case the tarwad has means to maintain. But where the tarwad is not in a position to maintain an order for maintenance may be passed against the father under s. 468 46 M. L. J. 324.

II.—JURISDICTION AND COMPETENCY OF COURTS.

9. Meaning of the words 'may order.'—The use of the word 'may' in this section shows that a Magistrate has a discretion to decide in what cases the award of maintenance may properly be made, though the discretion has to be exercised judicially and reasonably and not capriciously, 31 M. 185. See also 20 M. 470.

10. Jurisdiction—place where complaint to be instituted—There was some conflict of opinion on this point. In 9 B. 40, 3 P. 1893 and 24 C. 633 it was held that the application must be tried where the husband resides while in 5 N. W. P. 237 and 13 A. 348 it was held that the application must be heard where the wife resides, but the law is now settled by sub sec. (9) in accordance with the decision in 9 B. 40 and 24 C. 633. The general rule enunciated in s. 177, does not apply to proceedings under this section, 13 P. R. 1885; 3 P. R. 1893. Sub-sec. (9) does not give the wife or child the right to select a forum other than that where the husband or father is then residing or last resided with the applicant, 1904 U. B. R. L. Cr. Pro., p. 10 = 1 Cr. L. J. 645. Occasional visits of a husband to a wife who lives apart from him, do not give jurisdiction to a Magistrate in the district in which the wife resides. For purposes of cl. (9) a man may be said to reside with the mother of his illegitimate children, if he visits her only occasionally at her settled abode, so long as he has the intention of continuing to so visit her, and where she has no permanent residence elsewhere, two months' stay at a place where she is occasionally visited by the father of the children, is sufficient to constitute that place as 'residence' for purpose of this section, 5 B. L. R. 220 = 13 Cr. L. J. 522.

Reside—The construction of the words 'residence,' 'dwelling' as used in ss 16 and 20 of the Civil Procedure Code and in other statutes has been considered in several decisions, see 3 B. 227; 8 B. 100; 18 B. 290; 1 A. 51; 21 C. 634; 5 M. H. C. R. 101, 36 C. 964. A man may have a number of residences, 3 A. 91 (P.C.). A man who has no permanent place of residence resides where he is for the time being, 8 M. 205; 25 B. 176. Alexander v Jones, L. R. 1 Ex. 133. Temporary residence sufficient to give jurisdiction, 21 C. W. N. 812.

11. Proceedings of Magistrate not empowered void—If any Magistrate not being empowered by law in this behalf passes an order of maintenance his proceedings shall be void. S. 630, cl. (a). A second-class Magistrate is not entitled to act under this section, 22 W. R. 30, unless he be a Sub-Divisional Magistrate. A Magistrate of the first class, though not empowered to take cognizance of an offence, may act under this section 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 237.

12. Magistrate to whom complaint is made cannot refer case for inquiry to Subordinate Magistrate.—A Magistrate has no power under this section to refer a complaint, for inquiry and report to a Subordinate Magistrate, and any order passed upon such report is illegal 11 M. 199. A Magistrate cannot direct an inquiry under this section to be made by a Magistrate of a rank below the first class, Wahr II, 817. The petition not being a complaint within the meaning of s. 4 (A), the Magistrate to whom it is presented, should hear the case himself, and cannot refer it to a Subordinate Magistrate and dismiss it on his report, as s. 203 is inapplicable to such a petition, 29 P. R. 1905 = 90 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 421.

13. Can fresh application be entertained after previous dismissal?—"Res judicata."—When a duly empowered Magistrate has decided a matter under this section by dismissing the application after hearing the evidence offered, the District Magistrate cannot entertain the complaint de novo, 1 C. L. R. 89; 17 Cr. L. J. 108 (C.). The petitioner's remedy, if any, is in a superior Court. There is no appeal against the order, but it is subject to revision under s. 439, 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 81; 7 W. R. 10; 20 W. R. 58; but the dismissal of a complaint on one state of facts is no bar to the Magistrate awarding maintenance on a complaint based on a different state of facts which may subsequently arise Wahr II, 633. The rejection of an application in one district for want of jurisdiction, is no bar when application is renewed in the district having jurisdiction, 5 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 237. See 9 B. 40. The principle of res judicata is applicable to criminal as well as civil proceedings. Therefore, where, a husband, who had been ordered to pay maintenance to his wife, objected to its continuance on the ground of her adultery, and that objection was adjudicated upon by the Magistrate, another Magistrate is wrong in re-opening matters already adjudicated upon, and his order directing discontinuance of the allowance is illegal, 5 A. 224. 17 Cr. L. J. 108; 24 P. R. 1916 (Cr.). But see 4 L. B. R. 237 = 9 Cr. L. J. 21. Where an application under sec. 488 Cr. Pro. Code, for the maintenance of an illegitimate child was dismissed for default and the Magistrate entertained a fresh application. Held, that there was no bar to the Magistrate entertaining the fresh application inasmuch as there was no adjudication of the first application. 24 C. W. N. 32.

14. When first order becomes inoperative, fresh application may be entertained.—A Magistrate ordered a husband to maintain his wife. Against this order the husband applied to the High Court. Subsequent to this, an agreement was entered into between the parties but the husband did not act up to his promise. On the application of the wife to enforce the former order, it was held that the Magistrate was right in not enforcing it, as it had become inoperative when the agreement began to operate, but that, if the wife applied again under this section de novo the Magistrate should deal with any fresh application on its merits. B. H. C. Cr. Rule, No. 8 of 15th March, 1889; 1889 A. W. N. 217; 27 A. 433.

15. Magistrate not competent to restore case once dismissed.—The Code does not empower the Magistrate to re-hear a petition once dismissed. 9 C. W. N. 123 = 1 C. L. J. 216 = 2 Cr. L. J. 15; 17 Cr. L. J. 106 (C). See also Weir II, 622.

16. Who may enforce order for maintenance.—Any Magistrate in any place where the person against whom the order is made may be, may enforce the order, under s. 490. A second-class Magistrate may enforce it, Ratanlal 238. But s. 490 does not deprive the Magistrate who made the order of the power of enforcing it. 4 M. 230, 7 L. B. R. 116 = 15 Cr. L. J. 701. As to the powers of such Magistrate there is some conflict as to which, see Notes 5 and 6 to s. 490 and Note 68-A.

17. Who may cancel order for maintenance.—An application under sub-sec. (4) or (5) to have an order for maintenance passed under sub-sec. (1) set aside should be made to the Magistrate who passed the original order or to his successor in office who and who alone has jurisdiction in the matter, 25 A. 545, but see 10 M. 13 and Note 6 to s. 490.

III.—CONFLICT OF ORDERS OF CIVIL AND CRIMINAL COURTS

18. Effect of order on jurisdiction of Civil Courts.—(i) Order for maintenance does not bar civil suit for declaration that no maintenance is payable.—In 15 A. 19 it was held following 20 W. R. Civ. 83, that the order for maintenance cannot be set aside by a suit in a Civil Court praying for a decree to the effect that the wife in whose favour such order was made has no right to maintenance. See also 32 C. 479, where it was stated that if the Magistrate had made an order granting maintenance possibly a suit would not lie in the Civil Court to set aside that order. But in 30 M. 400 it was held following Weir II, 615 and 14 C. 276 that the Magistrate's order for maintenance does not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court and a suit claiming a declaration that maintenance is not payable is maintainable and 15 A. 29 was distinguished. An order for maintenance passed in favour of an illegitimate child, at the instance of the mother, furnishes a good cause of action to the alleged father for a declaratory suit against the child and mother that the child was not his illegitimate son, 17 O. C. 331 = 25 In. Ca. 325, where the above cases are discussed, see also 9 O. C. 49 = 3 Cr. L. J. 229.

(ii) Order refusing maintenance does not bar suit in Civil Court for maintenance.—A Hindu woman applied under this section to a Magistrate for maintenance of her child alleging that the defendant was its putative father. The Magistrate refused maintenance and she sued in a Civil Court. The defendant contended that the order of the Magistrate was conclusive and the suit was there ore not maintainable. Held, this section does not bar a suit in any Civil Court. It simply enables a Magistrate to pass an order for maintenance under a given state of circumstances. Further, s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (s. 9 of Act V of 1908) allows a suit in respect of a matter of a civil nature, unless the suit is barred by a special enactment. There being no enactment barring the cognizance of the suit it was maintainable. It was contended also that the Hindu Law does not authorize maintenance being granted to illegitimate children (7 M. L. A. 18). Held, apart from Hindu Law, maintenance is awardable in such cases, on general principles. The defendant having begotten the child, was bound to provide for its maintenance. 32 C. 479.

(iii) Civil Courts cannot issue injunction against Magistrates.—Civil Courts cannot grant injunction restraining the Magistrate from enforcing an order under this section, 30 M. 400. The person in whose favour the decree is passed should apply to the Magistrate and satisfy him that by the order of the Civil Court his order for maintenance cannot be enforced and ask him on the authority of 5 C. 355 and 7 B. 150 to abstain from giving any further effect to his order for maintenance. 14 C. 276—239.

(i) Civil Court not competent to set aside order of Magistrate.—It is not competent to a Civil Court to make a decree setting aside an order of maintenance by a Magistrate, Weir II, 614; 32 C. 479, 13 A. 29, 20 W. R. (Civ.) 83.

19. Effect of subsequent decree on previous order under this section.—(i) Decree for restitution of conjugal rights may supersede order for maintenance of wife—Where a Criminal Court ordered a husband to pay a monthly allowance towards the maintenance of his wife and children, and a Civil Court subsequently on the suit of the husband for restitution of the conjugal rights gave him a decree, it was held, that the order of the Criminal Court ceased to have any effect from the date of the decree of the Civil Court, 13 W. R. 52. An order of a Civil Court for restitution of conjugal rights supersedes any previous order of a Magistrate for maintenance if the wife should persist in refusing to live with her husband, and a Magistrate ought to cancel his previous order or rather treat it as determined, if the wife failing to comply with the decree for restitution, refuses to live with her husband, 23 B. 434; 6 P. R. 1883, 46 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 73; 27 A. 483; 17 Cr. L. J. 412; 33 M. L. J. 449. But where the suit for restitution is brought—not with a view to take the wife back, but simply to evade the payment of the allowance awarded by the Criminal Court, the order of the Magistrate must remain in force until the husband executed the decree against his wife by taking her home—B H C Cr Rule (Bombay Gazette, 8th January, 1892, JARDINE and TELANG, JJ). Where a bona fide decree obtained from the Civil Court, was subject to certain conditions, non compliance of the husband with those conditions, would justify the wife's having left his custody and would revive her right to maintenance under the magisterial order passed under this section. The powers of the Magistrate under this section to consider the grounds of refusal by the wife to live with her husband include the power to decide whether the conditions of such a subsequent decree for custody of the wife have been complied with by her husband, 4 P. R. 1906 = 115 P. L. R. 1907 = 4 Cr. L. J. 73. A decree for restitution of conjugal rights does not affect the order for maintenance of a child, 6 L. R. 127 = 14 Cr. L. J. 98; 43 B. 885.

(ii) Effect of subsequent divorce—See Note 5 to s. 490

(iii) Subsequent compromise decree supersedes previous order under this section—On the complaint of a Muhammadan wife a Magistrate passed an order for maintenance against the husband. Subsequent to this, the husband sued in a Civil Court for restitution of conjugal rights. In that suit a compromise was effected whereby, it was agreed that the husband should pay the wife a monthly allowance of a certain amount for her maintenance and should provide her with a house to live in and a decree was passed in terms of the compromise. The husband thereupon applied to the Magistrate for cancellation of the order of maintenance passed by him and this the Magistrate refused to do. Held that the decree of the Civil Court, even though it was passed on a compromise, superseded the order of the Magistrate for maintenance. If the husband did not act up to the terms of the compromise, it was the duty of the wife to prefer her objections, if any, to the Civil Court. She cannot put in force the order of the Magistrate ordering the payment of maintenance. The High Court therefore set aside the order altogether, 27 A. 483 where 23 B. 486 is referred to.

(iv) Subsequent declaratory decree may make previous order under this section unenforceable—

(i) Against wife—After passing an order under this section the alleged husband instituted a suit for a declaration that the complainant was not his wife and the Civil Court passed a decree accordingly. When proceedings were instituted to enforce the order for maintenance, the defendant pleaded the decree of the Civil Court but the Magistrate disregarded the decree. Held, that when a competent Civil Court has decided that the woman is not and never has been the wife of the defendant a Magistrate cannot in proceedings under s. 488 hold that she is the wife and direct the defendant to maintain her. The Magistrate was bound to recognize the decree and should have refused under s. 490 to enforce the order, 9 O. C. 49 = 3 Cr. L. J. 229. (ii) Child—Subsequent to an order for the maintenance of an illegitimate child, the alleged father instituted a suit for a declaration that he was not the father of the child and obtained a decree. Held, that the decree of the Civil Court did affect the order of the Magistrate and it was open to the alleged father to demand that the Magistrate should refuse to enforce his previous order and that under s. 490 the Magistrate should refuse to enforce the order, 16 Cr. L. J. 609 (O).

On obtaining the decree of a Civil Court that a child is not his illegitimate child, a person is entitled to ask the Magistrate not to give effect to his previous order awarding maintenance to the child (33 M. L. J. 449 followed), 46 M. 721.

20. Duty of Magistrate when decree is passed subsequently—The jurisdiction conferred on a Magistrate to settle the maintenance is as pointed out in 32 C. 679 and 30 A. 609 only auxiliary to that first order, Weir II, 614. It is not open to a Magistrate to ignore a final decree of a Civil Court, the jurisdiction vesting in him under this section, being auxiliary to that of the Civil Court. Where, therefore, an order of a Magistrate directing maintenance has been superseded by the decree of a Civil Court, the Magistrate is not entitled to enforce his previous order, Weir II, 615; 14 C. 276; 23 B. 434; 9 O. C. 49 = 3 Cr. L. J. 329, 16 Cr. L. J. 609 (Oudh).

21. Magistrate not competent to entertain application when previous decree is in force.—A woman is not entitled to an order under this section from a Magistrate, when a decree for maintenance obtained by her in a Civil Court is in force, Weir II, 615. When the husband has obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights and which decree is in full force, an application for maintenance by the wife under this section ought not to be entertained, (1910) U. B. R. I, 34 = 11 Cr. L. J. 662; 33 M. L. J. 449.

But in 46 A. 877 = 22 A. L. J. 806 it was held that where the decree for restitution of conjugal rights against wife was passed by Civil Court and thirteen months after the passing of the decree the husband was found illtreating the wife so much that she had to leave him, the Magistrate was justified in passing an order under s. 488 for maintenance as the applicant was quite justified in refusing to live with her husband.

21-A. An alimony order of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division in England is no bar to a wife's application under s. 488.—It is now held in 49 M. L. J. 335 that a monthly alimony order of the English Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division is no bar to an application by the wife under s. 488 if, in fact, the husband has neglected to maintain his wife either by payment of alimony or otherwise. In such a case, the Magistrate's power to order maintenance is not taken away.

Enforcement in India of maintenance orders made outside India.—See now for the enforcement in British India of maintenance orders made in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions and Protectorates and versu Act XVIII of 1921 (Maintenance Orders Enforcement Act).

IV.—CONDITIONS NECESSARY FOR AN ORDER FOR MAINTENANCE.

22. Any person having sufficient means may be directed to maintain his wife or child.—The law requires that the person on whom the order of maintenance is issued, must have sufficient means to support, 1882 A. W. N. 179. An able-bodied man who is not prevented by any physical infirmity from working may be presumed to have sufficient means to support himself and his child, (1911) U. B. R. I, 90 = 13 Cr. L. J. 482. The onus is on him to show that he has no sufficient means. The fact that the husband may be of slender means does not justify absolute refusal of an order for some maintenance, Weir II, 617. The fact that the father or husband is a professional beggar, Weir II, 616, or is an undivided member of a Hindu family, 13 M. 17, or is a youth of 16 years and still studying at school, 4 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 123, does not relieve him from the obligation imposed by this section of maintaining his wife or legitimate or illegitimate child.

23. Order may be made only against husband or father of child.—In the case of a minor husband, his father cannot be ordered to pay maintenance to son's wife, 26 P. R. 1903, nor can the father be made jointly liable with the son as no such arrangement is contemplated by s. 488. 12 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 577; 21 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 629.

24. Proof of valid marriage and existence of marital relation necessary.—A woman is not entitled to obtain a Magistrate's order under this section until she has proved that she is validly married to her alleged husband, and that she is justified in living apart from him, nor can a Magistrate pass an order before he finds that the complainant is the wife of the defendant, 16 B. 269. When the validity of the marriage is questioned it is for the applicant to prove that she was the legally married wife according to the personal law by which the parties are governed, 7 Barr. L. T. 71 = 15 Cr. L. J. 484. Unless there is such proof, no order can be made under this section, 7 L. B. R. 270 = 16 Cr. L. J. 39. It is only one proof of the existence of the relationship of husband and wife that a Magistrate can make an order (under this section) of maintenance to a wife, but where the cessation of conjugal relation has been proved, the responsibilities attached thereto must cease and a Magistrate is competent to stay an order maintenance already made and to refuse to issue his warrant and to try all questions raised before him which affect the right of the woman to receive maintenance, 5 C. 558 = 5 C. L. R. 31; 5 A. 226. Where the marriage is disputed, the Magistrate should himself try and decide the question and not refer the parties to a civil suit, 11 P. R. 1881. In proceedings under this section, census records are not, however, admissible as evidence, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Indian Evidence Act. See s. 12 of Act X of 1900. When the evidence of marriage is doubtful but it is proved that the parties co-habited for several years as man and wife, the presumption that there was a valid marriage will prevail, 17 Cr. L. J. 112. Karoo marriage among Jats valid—Amongst the Jats a "karo" marriage is valid, and as the children are entitled to inherit to their father, a woman so married is entitled to claim maintenance from her husband, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 128. See also 6 W. R. 60.

25. Means of wife does not relieve husband.—A husband having sufficient means, is bound to maintain his wife and is not relieved of the obligation, by the circumstance that the wife may have relations able and willing to maintain her, Weir II, 618; 11 C. W. N. 6; 16 Cr. L. J. 80 (M). The proposition that a wife who has ample means of her own is not entitled to maintenance is not correct. The contention that in Hurma the earnings of a wife are the joint property of herself and her husband and that when the husband leaves the wife in the enjoyment of the whole of her earnings, there is no neglect or refusal cannot be sustained, 10 Bur. L. R. 166. That the wife may earn by her own labour is no consideration, 1887 A. W. N. 107.

26. Child must be in existence and "unable to maintain itself."—For meaning of the word 'child,' see Note 47. No order under this section can be passed for the maintenance of an unborn child, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 70; Weir II, 618. It is obvious that the words "unable to maintain itself" refers to a child and not to a wife, 10 Bur. L. R. 166; 1 Cr. L. J. 843 (Bur). The father is bound to maintain the child whatever the position of the mother may be, 7 Bur. L. T. 24 = 15 Cr. L. J. 278. Inability is a necessary condition. A child who is deaf and dumb and unable to maintain itself, is entitled to maintenance, although it may have arrived at the age of majority, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 237. The fact that the child is not in a starving condition cannot be set up in answer to an application under this section. The questions which the Magistrate has to decide are (i) is the child unable to maintain itself? (ii) has the father neglected or refused to maintain it? 8 Bur. L. R. 96. Where it was alleged that a girl 17 years old, the daughter of a dancing woman was old enough to maintain herself, held the law will not treat prostitution as a profession by which a girl might earn her livelihood and maintain herself, 37 M. 265.

In 2 Rang. 682 the words "unable to maintain itself" were interpreted to mean inability to earn a complete livelihood, such as an adult person might earn without depending on any other person. A father being bound to maintain his child under the age of majority, in fixing the sum payable the Court should pay no regard to the fact that the child is able to contribute towards its support by means of its own labour or work of any kind.

27. Does the inability refer to physical inability or to poverty?—The inability referred to in the section relates to the absence of sufficient maturity of physical and mental development in the child rendering it in consequence unable to earn its living by its own efforts and does not refer to inability through poverty or absence of means, 23 M. L. J. 235 = 16 M. L. T. 22 = 16 Cr. L. J. 297; but this view was dissented from in 19 M. L. T. 23 = 17 Cr. L. J. 18 and it was held that no order can be made in favour of a well-to-do child or a child having a legally enforceable claim against a stranger. See Note 4 (ii).

28. In case of illegitimate children paternity must be clearly established.—The Court would be wrong in taking into account the similarity of the names and the features of the child, and the defendant, 18 C. 781. When maintenance is claimed for an illegitimate child it is not enough to find that the defendant may have been the father, but the Magistrate must be able to find that in all reasonable probability, none else could have been, Weir II, 621. A wife can be examined as to possession of her husband during her married life, without independent evidence being first offered to prove the illegitimacy of her children, 18 B. 462. Acts of familiarity before the time that the bastard child could have been born are received as corroborative evidence, see sub-secs. (6) and (7) and Cole v. Manning, L. R. 2 Q. B. D. 611. See Note 75 below.

29. Actual neglect or refusal to maintain must be established—order cannot be made on contingency of default.—A neglect or refusal to maintain is with by the husband may be by words or by conduct; it may be expressed or implied, 9 Bom. L. R. 229 = 5 Cr. L. J. 234. When the defendant has denied his paternity, that is a fact from which the Court may infer neglect to maintain, 6 B. L. R. 278 = 16 Cr. L. J. 293; it is not open to a Magistrate, even in the case of the parties (husband and wife) consenting, to make an order awarding maintenance on the contingency of a default or default on the part of the husband to maintain. To give jurisdiction to a Magistrate, an actual neglect or refusal to maintain must be established Weir II, 620. Before passing an order under this section a Magistrate is to ascertain whether the husband had been called upon to maintain his wife having regard to the customs of Hindu society, 23 W. R. 38. As to husband's liability to maintain a Mohammedan child, see 26 W. R. 46. The general principle on the order is based, should be set out in the order issued—At II C No. 224 per order, 1874. A declaration of actual refusal is not for 4.

father (or husband) does not in fact maintain his child or wife, he neglects to do so § Bar L R 96 Where both the parties agree to live together no 'refusal to maintain' can be inferred from the deposition of the wife who asserted that though she was willing to live with her husband, the latter refused to maintain her, 45 P W R 1914 = 213 P L R 1915 = 15 Cr L J 86

The fact that the husband who is in arrears of maintenance has been adjudicated an insolvent is conclusive that he is unable to pay the amount due and therefore is not guilty of wilful neglect within the meaning of s 488 (3) of the Code 50 G 867

V—WIFE'S RIGHT TO MAINTENANCE

30 When wife is not entitled to order for maintenance.—See sub-sec (4).—(i) If her husband and wife are living separately by mutual consent—A wife is not entitled to receive an allowance under this section, if she and her husband have entered into an agreement which provides for their living separately and they are so living separately by mutual consent Ratanlal 870

(ii) When private arrangement is made for her maintenance—Where the maintenance of a wife was by arrangement made at the time she began to live separately from the husband provided for by the assignment to her of some land held that the Court had no jurisdiction to award her additional maintenance on the ground that the yield of the land was insufficient for her maintenance Weir 11, 848

(iii) When wife leaves husband of her own accord without sufficient reason—The proviso to it treats her so as to make it impossible for her to live in the house this will amount to refusal or neglect on his part to maintain her 8 Bom L R 614, 21 P W R 1914 = 115 P L R 1914 = 15 Cr L J 529

(iv) When she is living in adultery—Where there has been desertion by a wife of her husband for many years coupled with adultery and no attempt has been made to seek the husband's pardon for past misconduct the wife is not entitled to an order for maintenance merely because at the time when she makes her application she may not be living in adultery Ratanlal 506 See Note 36

(v) Adultery accompanied with loss of caste—The use of the word 'may' in this section shows that a Magistrate has a discretion to decide in what cases the award of maintenance may properly be made though the discretion has to be exercised judicially and reasonably and not capriciously Thus where the wife was

(vi) When she fails to show cause why she should not live with her husband—When an application for maintenance under this section came on for hearing the husband of the woman appeared and offered to maintain her if she agreed to live with him. The applicant not appearing on that date the Magistrate dismissed her application. Some time after she applied for the restoration of her cause alleging that the non appearance was due to illness. The Magistrate however refused to restore the case, and holding that there was no power given to him by the Code to restore a case of this nature rejected her application. Held that there was nothing illegal in either of the orders made by the Magistrate. The respondent admitted that the petitioner was the wife and offered to maintain her on condition of her living with him. Then under sub-sec (3) of this section if she refused to live with him the Magistrate would have to consider any grounds of refusal stated by to ask for an adjournment on the ground of illness. Held further the application to re-hear the petition already dismissed was not made under any section of the Code giving the Magistrate any power to set aside his previous order and hear the case again. Consequently the High Court declined to interfere 1 C L J 214 = 2 Cr L J 218 where 1 C L R 89 is distinguished

31 It is no longer necessary for wife to prove habitual cruelty.—In the proviso the words that he actually has treated his wife with cruelty are omitted and the words that there is some reason for so doing are substituted. This alteration gives Magistrates larger discretion in giving maintenance—Sel. Com. Rep. The present Code does not restrict payment of maintenance when the wife is living separately to cases in which she has been treated with habitual cruelty, U. B. R. (1897—1901) 1, 104 is no longer law, 4 Bur. L. T. 269 = 13 Cr. L. J. 55. Where it is proved that a husband has not refused or neglected to maintain his wife, a Criminal Court acting under this section, has no jurisdiction to make an order upon the husband for her maintenance, on the ground that the husband has been guilty of cruelty to her. But that is a very different thing from holding that no evidence of cruelty can be admitted in a proceeding under this section to prove, not indeed cruelty as a ground for separate maintenance but the conduct and acts of the husband from which the Court may draw the inference of neglect or refusal to maintain the wife. A neglect or refusal by the husband to maintain his wife may be by words or by conduct. It may be expressed or implied. In order to find out the intention of the Legislature in enacting a particular provision in a Statute, it is a canon of interpretation, that the Court must have regard to the context of the whole section and not confine itself to its words, detached from the whole of its context. It is a rule of construction that in interpreting a section which is ambiguous, the Court may look into the state of the law, as it existed before the Statute containing the section was passed, 9 Bom. L. R. 339 = 5 Cr. L. J. 334, where 6 N.-W. F. H. C. R. 203 and 5 Bom. L. R. 614 are referred to.

32. Rallings under old Code, as to what amounts to cruelty in law.—The previous Codes used the term 'cruelty'. There was no definition of cruelty, but it was held that the criterion of legal cruelty justifying a wife's desertion is the same in this country as in England, viz., whether there has been actual violence of such a character as to endanger personal health or safety, or whether there is the reasonable apprehension of it, 1 B. 164. See also 19 C. 84. The word 'cruelty' is not necessarily limited to personal violence, 11 A. 480. A false charge of incest is tantamount to cruelty, Milner, 4 Swab and Trist 24. Refusing to take food or water from the wife amounts to cruelty, 1 B. 164 at p. 166. The present Code, however, omits the word cruelty and uses instead 'just ground for so doing'. What is just ground will have to be determined with reference to the circumstances of each individual case. See 6 B. L. R. Appx. XIX. If a husband, knowing that he is in such a state of health that by having connection with his wife he will run the risk of communicating the venereal disease to her, recklessly has connection with her and thereby communicates the disease to her, he is guilty of cruelty, Boardman v Boardman L. R. 1 Prob and Mat. 223. If force, whether physical or moral, is systematically exerted to compel the submission of a wife to such a degree and during such a length of time as to injure her health, and renders a serious malady imminent, although there be no actual physical violence such as would justify a decree, it is legal cruelty, and entitles her to a judicial separation—Kelly v Kelly, L. R. 2 Prob. and Mat. 31, 39. See 1 B. 164 at p. 174; Tomkins v Tomkins, 1 Swab and Trist 168.

33. What are not just grounds for refusing to live with husband?—(i) Minority of wife—The Court has no authority to award maintenance when the husband offers to maintain the wife in his house merely because the wife is a minor and it might be better she should live with her parents, 1 P. R. 1882.

(ii) Incompatibility of temper and presence of a second wife in the house are not legally sufficient for the award of a separate maintenance to a wife, 21 P. R. 1873, 30 P. R. 1831, 31 P. R. 1832, 2 P. R. 1878. The fact, that a younger wife is likely to suffer annoyance from the elder wife and there is reason to fear that her husband may not protect her from such annoyance, is not sufficient cause for refusing to live with her husband, 1904 U. B. R. Cr. P. C. I., p. 10 = 1 Cr. L. J. 543; (1910) U. B. R. 34 = 11 Cr. L. J. 662. But if the husband is found to treat her unkindly owing to the presence of the other wife, she may claim separate maintenance. 14 P. R. 1901. But disagreement with husband's family is no sufficient ground for separate maintenance, 21 P. R. 1870. The inability of a husband and wife to agree to live together is no ground for decreeing separate maintenance, 6 W. R. 59.

(iii) Marrying a second wife—Where polygamy is allowed, the fact that the husband has married a second wife is not a sufficient reason, within the meaning of this section to justify the award of separate maintenance, 7 M. 187; 66 P. R. 1857; Ratanlal 7; 12 P. R. 1914 = 13 Cr. L. J. 577. She can only claim maintenance ing, her maintenance under s. 488, 4 L. B. R. 340 (F.B.) = 9 Cr. L. J. 25 overruling 4 L. B. R. 166. Similarly, if a man marries a second wife and she does not know of the previous marriage she may refuse to live with the chief wife and claim maintenance, 3 Bur. L. T. 154 = 11 Cr. L. J. 750. But if she had knowledge it would be otherwise, U. B. R. (1897—1901) 1, p. 104.

(iv) Husband keeping a concubine in the house—Concubinage is so far recognized among Hindus that the circumstance of a Hindu husband keeping a concubine in his house will not entitle a wife to a maintenance allowance, provided the husband is willing to receive her and treat her with the consideration which is due to her position as a wife, Weir II, 641, 17 M. 280. The question in each case will be whether the conduct of the husband is such as the wife consistently with self-respect and due regard to her position as wife can live in the house of the husband. Therefore adultery on the part of the husband may constitute sufficient cause for refusing to live with him, 20 M. 470 (F.B.).

(v) Husband's failure to pay dowry—The fact that in a civil suit by the husband for restitution of conjugal rights, the wife successfully resisted his claim by a plea of unprovoked dowry is not a sufficient reason for her refusal to live with her husband, 8 P. R. 163; 15 P. R. 1880.

34. What is a proper offer to maintain?—(i) It must be bona fide—An offer to maintain must be a bona fide offer and not made with the object of escaping obligation, 13 Cr. L. J. 55 (Barma).

(ii) It must be an offer to maintain with the consideration due to her position as a wife—See 17 M. 250, 20 M. 470.

(iii) Must the offer extend to observing conjugal duties?—An offer by a Hindu, having two wives, to maintain his first wife by allowing her to live in his house, and by supplying her with grain to be cooked and eaten separately, coupled with a refusal to live with her as husband and wife, does not come within the meaning of the proviso to this section, 6 M. 371. This was disapproved of in 16 B. 269, where it was held that there is no authority for the proposition that the words "as his wife must be read into the proviso to subsec (3) and that it is sufficient that the husband has offered to maintain his wife in his house. When no neglect or refusal to maintain is found against the husband, it is for the wife to establish a justifying cause for her living apart. The object of this section is to provide for maintenance and not to enforce conjugal duties, 42 M. L. J. 256.

35. What are not sufficient grounds to refuse maintenance.—(i) Suspicious conduct of wife—A Magistrate cannot refuse to make an order of maintenance merely because he considers the conduct of the applicant open to suspicion. The matters recognized by this section as disentitling a wife to maintenance, must be proved to justify dismissal of an application for maintenance, Weir II, 647.

(ii) Refusing to attend a Panchayat convened to consider her conduct—A wife's refusal to attend a Panchayat convened to consider a charge of adultery against her, is no reason for rejecting an application by her under this section, 18 Cr. L. J. 52 (M.).

(iii) Delay in applying for maintenance—Delay on the part of a wife in complaining of her husband's neglect to maintain her, is no ground for dismissing the complaint, Weir II, 615 and 616. A wife does not lose her right to maintenance, because she may not have advanced her claim, immediately on her husband's desertion of her, Weir II, 616.

husband. The husband subsequently took a woman to live with him as his mistress, and she lived with him up to the time when this case came on for hearing before the Magistrate, and before the Magistrate, the wife agreed to return to her husband within a week on his putting away his mistress and promising to have nothing more to do with her, but subsequently she refused to abide by that arrangement. Held, that an offer made in Court by the husband to give up his mistress does not deprive the wife of her right of refusal to live with her husband. 14 Bur. L. R. 240 = 8 Cr. L. J. 472. The wife's right to refuse is not demolished by the fact that the husband was driven to concubinage by his wife's continued refusal to live with him. Where the breach between husband and wife is irremediable and it is impossible for the latter to return to the husband and live with him, after many years' separation, without fresh trouble and dispute, she will be entitled to live separately and get maintenance, 26 P. W. R. 1914 = 170 F. L. R. 1914 = 13 Cr. L. J. 554.

(v) Change of religion by husband—The rejection of an application for maintenance by the wife of a Christian, who has reverted the Hinduism is wrong. 4 M. H. G. R. Appx. III.

36. Meaning of 'adultery' and 'living in adultery' as used in this section.—(i) Adultery—Under the I P C., adultery is an offence committed by a man against another man in respect of the wife of the latter and it is an offence which cannot be committed by a woman. Adultery under the I P C. is not committed by a man who has sexual intercourse with an unmarried woman, or with a widow, or even with a married woman whose husband consents to it. But adultery in this section is used in the wider and ordinary sense of voluntary sexual connection between either of the parties to the marriage, and someone, married or single of the opposite sex other than the offender's own husband or wife. This construction is not inconsistent with s. 4(2). Therefore adultery on the part of the husband, not being such as would be punishable under 1 P.C., may nevertheless constitute sufficient cause for the wife separating from her husband and enable her to claim maintenance under this section, 20 M. 470 (F.B.), overruling 17 M. 260.

(ii) 'Living in adultery'—The words "living in adultery" refer rather to a course of conduct or at least to something more than a single lapse from virtue, and therefore a single act of adultery does not necessarily amount to living in adultery, so as to disentitle the wife from applying for maintenance under this section, 30 M. 332 (where 26 A. 326 and 20 M. 470 are referred to), 5 N. L. R. 19 = 9 Cr. L. J. 390. Where the wife who applied for maintenance had some two years prior to the date of the application given birth to an illegitimate child, but since that time, had been living with her parents and leading a chaste and respectable life, it could not be said she was living in adultery within the meaning of this section so as to disentitle her to maintenance, 26 A. 326, where 1831 A. W. N. 37, 63 and 113 are referred to. But when the wife was found guilty of adultery with a low caste man which led to her expulsion from caste it is not necessary to prove that she is living in adultery, 31 M. 185. Where the husband disclaimed paternity of a child born to his wife and the wife in consequence, took to living in her father's house, held in the absence of proof that she was living in adultery, the wife was entitled to an order under this section, 1331 A. W. N. 113; 37 and 62. See also 26 A. 326; 1904 A. W. N. 23. In 1831 A. W. N. 63, the exact questions to which alone the Magistrate should address himself in an application of this nature, are set forth at great length. See also 29 C. W. N. 647.

37. Cancellation of order for maintenance.—See Notes under Heading X below.

38. Is it not open to a wife to make a contract discharging husband's true liability?—Where a wife first applied for maintenance for herself and child, but on receipt of a certain lump-amount from the husband, withdrew her application, and later on, again applied, stating that the lump-amount has been expended, and the husband objected that the lump-amount had been paid in final settlement of all her claims, held, that on such application, the duty of the Magistrate is (i) to find out whether the husband has sufficient means and (ii) whether he refuses or neglects to maintain the applicant, and on the last point, he must find out, whether the settlement made by the husband still furnishes a sufficient means for the wife's support. Although if the lump-sum has been invested, it would have yielded a sufficient income to maintain her for the rest of her days, this question is immaterial, if in fact the money was spent or lost and is no longer yielding a sufficient income. The language of the section is inconsistent with a wife making a contract to absolve the husband from liability. The object of the law being to prevent the wife, whom her husband is able to support, from becoming a burden to other people, this object would not be attained by a contract which ultimately leaves the wife, to the charity of her neighbours. The section does not say that a wife is not eligible for maintenance, if she is able to support herself or if she has made a bad use of the money which her husband gave her sometime back, 1905 U. B. E. (C. Fr.) 43, where 1892—95 U. B. R. 64 and 1897—1901 U. B. R. 103 are referred to. This decision seems to require re-consideration as it is open to the parties to live separately by mutual consent.

7 B. 180; where 19 W. R. 73 dissented from, 31 P. R. 1894.

43. Magistrate must enquire into plea of divorce.—When a husband pleads the maintenance of his wife pleads non-liability on account of his having divorced, Magistrate to entertain and enquire into such plea, and if he finds it established, he at least after such date as the divorce operates, 21 P. R. 1894. The Magistrate is bound to entertain such application and determine the question, 1915 U. B. R. 1: 53 = 16 Cr. L. J. 531; 17 O. C. 260 = 15 Cr. L. J. 646. In Weir II, 620, it is said the Magistrate is bound to enquire into the validity of the plea, and if he finds in the affirmative, then no further maintenance can be ordered. See also Note 2 to s. 489.

44 Right of divorced wife to maintenance during 'iddat.—Iddat is the period during which a woman whose marriage has been dissolved by divorce or death is bound to wait before she is free to marry again. Iddat is primarily imposed with a view to ascertain whether the woman is pregnant, so that the paternity of the child that is born to a woman whose marriage has been dissolved may be fixed. Under the Hanafi Law, a divorce (talak) whether revocable (rajai) or irrevocable (bayan) does not completely destroy the relationship of husband and wife until after the expiry of the period of iddat. Therefore a wife is entitled during iddat to an order for maintenance under s. 488. She is also entitled during the period of iddat to the benefit of an order for maintenance which had been made in her favour before divorce—the pronouncement of talak, 20 M. L. J. 12 = 10 Cr. L. J. 802 following Weir II, 617; 5 A. 228 and 19 A. 53; 5 P. R. 1905 = 85 P. L. R. 1905 = 2 Cr. L. J. 40 dissenting from 1895 A. W. N. 29, 4 Bae. L. T. 13 = 12 Cr. L. J. 82. But an order for maintenance for a time subsequent to the period of iddat is illegal, unless pregnancy is alleged, Weir II, 617; 19 W. R. 73; 5 A. 228; 5 P. R. 1905.

45 Order does not deprive husband of right to divorce.—An order made by a Magistrate, directing a Muhammadan husband to pay a sum monthly for the maintenance of his wife, does not deprive such husband of his inherent right to divorce his wife, and after such divorce the Magistrate's order can no longer be enforced 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 95, 7 B. 180; 14 C. 276; 1 Bom. L. R. 345; 19 A. 50 (F. B.), 19 W. R. 73 = B. L. R. Ap. XXXIII. The dissolution of the bond of marriage when once validly effected must have the result of stopping the operation of a Magistrate's order made in favour of a wife, 17 O. C. 260 = 15 Cr. L. J. 646; 21 P. R. 1894; 1915 U. B. R. 1, 53 = 16 Cr. L. J. 531. See Note 5 to s. 490.

46 Repudiation of wife by husband having come to her knowledge is good divorce.—A Muhammadan against whom an order for the maintenance of his wife had been passed under this section, paid into Court the arrears due from him, with a sum in addition on account of the wife's iddat, and in an application accompanying such payment set out in clear terms that he had repudiated his wife. The repudiation was three times repeated in the application. Held, that this having come to the knowledge of the wife was a good divorce under the Muhammadan law, and that it was not necessary that the writing of divorce should be specially addressed to the wife, 1999 A. W. N. 83. According to the Hanafi Law it is not necessary that the talak or words of repudiation should be addressed directly to the wife to constitute a valid divorce, 33 M. 22 where s. 488 is dissented from and 30 B. 337; 36 C. 186 approved. An order under this section for the maintenance of a Muhammadan wife, passed more than three months and thirteen days after divorce, by words which had not been repeated three times, was held to be illegal, 1898 A. W. N. 116.

VI.—RIGHT OF CHILDREN TO MAINTENANCE.

47 Meaning "of child."—The word 'child' as used in the section, simply means son or daughter. Reference to age is purposely omitted in the section, the object being any son or daughter is entitled to claim maintenance so long as he or she is unable to maintain himself or herself, 28 P. W. R. 1910 = 11 Cr. L. J. 427. The word 'child' means one who has not attained the age of majority, 37 M. 565. See Note 26 above as to the meaning of "unable to maintain itself." See Note 26 and 2 Rang. 682.

48 Is a child having means of its own entitled to maintenance?—In 25 M. L. J. 355—15 Cr. L. J. 597 it was held that if the child is not of sufficient maturity to earn a livelihood, then, even if that child belongs to a well-to-do farwad, the liability of the father is not taken away. But this view was dissented from in 19 M. L. T. 23 = 17 Cr. L. J. 16 where it was observed as follows:—"I think the ability contemplated by the section applies as much to the case of a child which has got means of its own or which is entitled in law to be maintained, and is being maintained, as in this case, as to a child which is able to earn by its own exertions. This is a summary procedure provided by this section, and it does not cover entirely the same ground as the Civil Liability of the father to maintain his child. It does not seem to have been within the contemplation of the legislature that a child which is well-to-do should be entitled under s. 488 to an order for maintenance as against its father," 19 M. 461 was referred to.

49 Is it open to Magistrate to refuse order for maintenance if father offers to maintain children if they live with him?—A mother, who has the custody of the child and who has to maintain it, is entitled, so long as that state continues, to the allowance granted for the maintenance of the child, Weir II, 630.

A father cannot refuse to maintain his children on the ground that they are not living with him, U. B. R. 1902-03; 1 Cr. P. 7; 12 Bar. L. R. 33 = 2 Cr. L. J. 830; U. B. R. 1910, Cr. P. C. 1 = 11 Cr. L. J. 433; 8 Bar. L. T. 134 = 16 Cr. L. J. 636; (1910) 1 U. B. R. 34 = 11 Cr. L. J. 862. If the father wishes the children to live with him his obvious course is to get an order from the proper authority giving him the custody of the children. Living together in the case of husband and wife is a thing of a special character. It is an incident of matrimony. See also 23 M. L. J. 335 = 14 M. L. T. 223; 8 Bar. L. T. 134 = 16 Cr. L. J. 636. Merely sending a man to go and ask the child to come and live with the father does not amount to an offer to maintain the child and absolve the father of his liability, 7 Bar. L. T. 34 = 13 Cr. L. J. 278. A mother having the custody of her child applied under this section for its maintenance by its father. Before the receipt of summons under her application the father had neither asked for the custody of the child nor offered to provide for it in any way. He now made an offer in Court to maintain the child, if it was left with him. Held, that a present offer to maintain will not take away the Magistrate's jurisdiction under this section to order him to pay for the child's maintenance, 1905 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 39 where 1902 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 7, 18 P. R. 1894, 16 W. R. 62 and 2 L. B. R. 48 are referred to. See Note 50. Contr.—A father offering to maintain his children on condition that they live with him cannot be said to refuse to maintain them and though by express provision of law an order of maintenance can be passed, notwithstanding such offer in favour of a wife on certain specified grounds, there is no similar provision in the children, 18 P. R. 1894; 21 P. W. R. 1916 = 15 Cr. L. J. 529. Where a father has custody of his minor children and is maintaining them properly, the mere fact that they go and live with their mother would not make him liable to be charged for maintenance, though he refuses to maintain them unless they return to his custody 8 L. B. R. 103 = 16 Cr. L. J. 217. The proper course for the mother is to get a certificate of guardianship of her children by proving that the father is an unfit person and when this has been done to resort to the provisions of this section if the father refuses to make an allowance for the child 18 P. R. 1894. See 22 P. R. 1917 (Cr.).

But in a Bombay case it was held that with regard to the maintenance of children it is sufficient under sub-sec. (1), s. 488 if the neglect or refusal to maintain them is proved. On such proof the Magistrate can make an order for the payment of a monthly allowance for the maintenance of each child to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs. An offer to maintain the children in the future is not sufficient of itself to debar the Magistrate from making an order. Of course the Magistrate is entitled to take such offer into consideration, 27 Bom. L. R. 339 = 49 B. 562.

(3) Father not relieved of liability when mother is of right entitled to custody, as under the Muhammadan law—Under Muhammadan law, the mother is entitled to the custody of her children till they reach the age of puberty, even when she has been divorced by her husband, but that does not relieve the father from the obligation of maintaining the children. Where, therefore, a Muhammadan father contended that as the mother (his divorced wife) had the custody of the children, he was not bound to maintain them but that he was willing to maintain them, if the children were made over to him held, that the father was bound to pay for the maintenance of the children in the custody of the mother and that his conduct amounted to a refusal or neglect within the meaning of this section, 6 Bom. L. R. 636. When however, the child is a girl admittedly between 14 and 15 years of age and therefore of puberty, the father is entitled to custody, even if the treatment of her mother by the father is against him. The father should not be charged with her maintenance if he offers to support her in his own house, 11 P. L. R. 1904.

50. Magistrate not competent to go into the question of the lawful guardianship of a child—In determining questions under this Chapter, a Magistrate has no power to enter into any question as to the lawful guardianship of a child. There is nothing in the Code which would warrant a Magistrate in ordering a mother to surrender her illegitimate child to its father, although such child be of the age of maturity. A refusal by the mother to make over the custody of child in such a case would be no ground for stopping an allowance previously ordered, 4 C. 374 followed in 17 P. R. 1885. See also 19 M. 461. When a father offers to maintain his children, a Criminal Court has no jurisdiction, merely because he refuses to make a money allowance to the children who prefer to remain with their mother apart from him, to make an order that he shall do so, nor in a summary proceeding under this section is the Court competent to enter upon an enquiry as to the fitness or unfitness of the father to act as guardian of his children, 18 P. R. 1894.

51. Children living with adulterous mother or removed from the father without his consent, not entitled to maintenance—A father cannot be ordered to pay a maintenance allowance for a child live with its mother, while the latter is living in adultery, Weir II, 630; nor where the children their mother from their father's custody and without his consent although he was entitled equally with the mother and the latter has prevented the children from returning to him.

52. What are not proper grounds for refusing maintenance.—(i) That the mother of the illegitimate children is a married woman—The circumstance, that the mother of illegitimate children is a married woman, is in itself no ground for dismissing the claim for their maintenance. The intention of the Legislature is to enforce the liability of the husband of a woman and of the male parent of an illegitimate child as the person primarily responsible for their maintenance, Weir II, 619, and the words of this section are sufficiently wide to include a married woman, claiming maintenance for her illegitimate children from the putative father, 18 B. 468.

(ii) Divorce of mother—Even a valid divorce of the mother will not free the father, from liability to maintain his children, 1 Bur. L. R. 145.

(iii) Decision of Civil Court on the claims of the mother—A decision of the Civil Court, refusing to enforce a contract or agreement against a man for a maintenance of a woman cannot preclude either the woman from applying or a Magistrate from making an order for the maintenance of their illegitimate child, 17 W. R. 49.

(iv) That the mother is living separately from her husband—A Muhammadan mother being the natural guardian of her minor daughter, would be entitled to claim maintenance for the child even though she is living separately from her husband and may have no valid grounds to refuse to live with her husband, 15 C. W. N. 27. See also the case in 15 C. W. N. 136 (Christians).

(v) That the mother has sufficient means to maintain the child—The father is bound to maintain his child whatever the position of the mother may be, 7 Bur. L. T. 34 = 13 Cr. L. J. 278. But if the child itself has sufficient means or is entitled to be maintained out of the mother's darwad, an order for maintenance cannot be passed, see Note 48.

53. Is it open to a lawful guardian to compromise the claim of a child under this section?—A compromise made by the lawful guardian of a minor, acting bona fide for his benefit, cannot be set aside even at his instance, except on proof of fraud. Therefore, where a mother on behalf of her illegitimate minor children compromised and renounced a future claim for their maintenance, by executing a document in consideration of the payment of Rs 300, held, that under the circumstances there could be no neglect to maintain within the meaning of this section, Weir II, 631. But where there is nothing to show that the agreement was really for the benefit of the child and the presumption from the circumstances under which the compromise was made, being that the child would be materially injured by such a manifestly inadequate adjustment of its claim to maintenance during minority, the agreement is not binding on the child or any person who may become the guardian subsequent to the death of the mother, 13 P. R. 1883. See 25 A. 463; 8 Bur. L. R. 96. The better view is, that a father cannot divest himself of his liability to maintain his child by any agreement with his wife or mother of the child, Weir II, 648. It is submitted that the statutory right cannot be compromised unless such power is specially recognized by the Statute. The Magistrate is not competent to consider such a compromise. Compare Note 38 at p. 1188.

54. Order awarding maintenance to child cannot be cancelled.—See Note 79.

VII.—CONTENTS OF ORDER AWARDING MAINTENANCE.

55. Considerations in fixing the rate of maintenance.—In determining the amount of maintenance no luxury should be allowed but necessaries of life should be considered according to the station in life of the applicant and the means of the respondent, 4 Bur. L. T. 269 = 13 Cr. L. J. 53. 'Maintenance' is intended for food, clothing and lodging. It does not include schooling fees, U. B. R. 1909, 1 Cr. P. 17 = 11 Cr. L. J. 40. See Note 5.

56. Rupees one hundred represent the maximum amount each person entitled to maintenance can get.—In the case of twins, a separate sum should be awarded for each. Also, the order may include more than one bastard child if begotten by the same man upon the same woman, Skinn, 1 Bott. 470. Where a wife applied for maintenance for herself and her four children and the Magistrate ordered the husband to pay Rs 50 for maintenance of the wife and Rs 10 for each child every month. Held, that the order was legal. The husband was liable to maintain his wife and each of his children and the Magistrate might order him to pay as much as Rs. 50 for each of them if each child was living with a different person, and the fact that all the children were at the time in custody of the mother cannot affect the question of what should be paid to each child, 4 Bur. L. T. 139 = 12 Cr. L. J. 383. Under the new amendments rupees one hundred is now fixed as the maximum under s. 488. See 49 M. L. J. 339.

57. Magistrate in passing order at certain rate cannot direct prospective increase of rate.—An order fixing a sum for the maintenance of a child, containing a prospective order for an increase of the amount awarded as the child grows older, is unauthorized by law, 2 N.W. P. H. C. R. 434; 12 C. 533; 14 M. 398. A Magistrate cannot make an order for maintenance at a progressively increasing rate, but he can from time to time alter it under s. 489. In the case of a child, the allowance should be such a proper allowance, as may suffice for the maintenance of the child, till it is able to maintain itself, 2 N.W. P. H. C. R. 434. If the father (or husband) is aggrieved, he could apply to the Magistrate under s. 489, 9 W. R. 1. A Magistrate in passing an order for maintenance at a certain rate, cannot direct a prospective increase of the rate. The fact that a child who has been awarded maintenance, has grown older would no less constitute 'a change in the circumstance of the person receiving the allowance' within the meaning of s. 489 than would the death of the child or the birth of another, and therefore the rate can be varied under s. 489, as the child gets older, 14 M. 398.

58. Magistrate cannot fix duration of maintenance.—A Magistrate is not competent in any case to fix the duration of maintenance to children until they come of age, 18 P. R. 1894; Weir II, 634. But in England an order of payment "till the child shall no longer be chargeable on the Parish" was held good, Mathews, 2 Balc 475; Johnson, Comb. 69.

59. Order cannot be retrospective.—An order directing the payment of maintenance with retrospective effect from a certain date is illegal. Under sub-sec. (2), the allowance can be made, at the most, from the date of the application for maintenance, Weir II, 633. But an order directing payment in advance from the date of the Magistrate's order is perfectly legal, Ratanlal 189.

60. Payment of maintenance must be monthly and in coin.—The payment ordered must be a monthly payment. An order directing payment of two cloths annually, Weir II, 627, or grain, Weir II, 626 and 627; 19 P. R. 1911; 3 P. R. 1887, or providing separate residence, is not in accordance with the Code 31 P. R. 1887; 1 P. R. 1876. To such an order an alternative one for a specified quantity of grain cannot be added, 3 P. R. 1887. But where a compromise filed by the parties and accepted by the Magistrate contained an agreement that an annual sum was to be paid to the wife for the value of cloth, held that effect could be given to the general intention of the parties as disclosed by the razi by allotting in the monthly maintenance the value of the cloths agreed to be paid annually, Weir II, 634. In England when a father was ordered to pay £9 in gross and after that so much weekly, the order was held good. Odams, 1 Balc 124; 1 Bott. 497; 26 Bom L. R. 186.

60-A. Conditional order illegal.—An order for maintenance passed on condition that the woman resides in her house is illegal, 14 P. R. 1917 (Cr.).

61. Order for payment into public treasury is illegal.—An order directing the payment of a maintenance allowance into a public treasury is not sanctioned by law, Weir II, 627.

62. Magistrate cannot make order in terms of compromise—when claim settled amicably, case should be dismissed.—A Magistrate purporting to act under this section, cannot assume the functions of a Civil Court and give judgment in accordance with a bond evidencing a compromise entered into between a husband and a wife. Where a claim for maintenance is amicably settled by the parties the Magistrate should simply dismiss the petition, if pending before him, Weir II, 629; 42 P. R. 1888; 39 P. R. 1903 and see Note 72.

VIII.—PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

63. Ordinarily inquiry must be full as in warrant-case.—Ordinarily the inquiry should be full as in the trial of a warrant-case. But when an order directing a monthly payment of a fixed sum of money was made on the consent of the parties, the necessity for taking evidence being thereby dispensed with, held, that the order was not illegal, Weir II, 629.

(i) Should not be summary—Proceedings under this section cannot be conducted as in a summary trial under Chapter XXII. Evidence must be recorded as prescribed by s. 355. Where summary procedure was adopted the High Court in 20 C. 351 directed a fresh trial.

(ii) Evidence must be duly recorded—An order awarding maintenance without recording evidence, Weir II, 628, or on the evidence taken by a Subordinate Magistrate and order passed thereon in the absence of the defendant husband, is illegal, 11 M. 199; 361 P. L. R. 1905. The various elements required to sustain an order under this section must be strictly proved by evidence recorded on oath, 13 W. R. 19. The Magistrate cannot dispose of the case upon knowledge acquired by him in another case, 8 W. R. 67. Proceedings under this section are judicial in their nature and must not be conducted as if they were ministerial matters. The notes of evidence therefore must not be inadequate and vague, and the order recorded should be one on distinct findings of fact, 5 A. 224.

64. Attendance of complainant may be dispensed with.—There is nothing in the section which requires the personal attendance of the person in whose favour the order for maintenance is made. It is left to the discretion of the Magistrate to dispense with the attendance of the complainant, 19 P. R. 1903 referring to 3 P. R. 1893, 12 A. 69; 15 G. 775; 21 G. 833.

65 "Ex-parte proceedings."—Inquiry ought not to be conducted in absence of accused unless Magistrate is satisfied that he is wilfully absent.—In a case under this section, the defendant was summoned to appear before a Magistrate on a certain day, but the summons did not specify the place of appearance. Held, that the Magistrate ought not to have passed an ex-parte order in the defendant's absence as there was no failure to appear, because no place was specified at which the petitioner was to appear, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XLIII. In the Court of a District Magistrate, an application was made against a person for the maintenance of an illegitimate child on the ground that he being its father, neglected to maintain it. The District Magistrate made over the complaint to an Honorary Magistrate of the first class for inquiry. The Honorary Magistrate after a lengthy inquiry, reported the case to be false. But the District Magistrate not satisfied with the result, ordered process to issue against the putative father and made over the case to a Deputy Magistrate. This officer, without issuing any notice to the father asked the pleader who conducted for him the proceedings before the Honorary Magistrate, to conduct the case. The pleader declined on the ground that he had no instructions. Thereupon the Deputy Magistrate proceeded with the case ex-parte and ultimately made an order against the petitioner. Held that the provisions of sub-sec. (6) of this section had not been complied with. The evidence was not taken by the Deputy Magistrate in the presence of the petitioner. That ought to have been done, unless the personal attendance of the petitioner has been dispensed with, in which case it ought to have been taken in the presence of his pleader. Unless the Court was satisfied that the petitioner was wilfully avoiding the service of summons or wilfully neglecting to attend the Court, evidence should not have been taken ex-parte, 1 G. L. J. 102. Summons was served on the husband of one P under this section to attend the Court, either in person or by duly authorized wakil on a certain day, but on that day the case was postponed to another day, although the wakil of the husband was present. In the meantime the case was again adjourned to another day, and notice was served on the pleader. When the case was called on a mukhtyar appeared on behalf of the husband, but the Magistrate refused to hear him and decided the case, ex-parte, holding that the husband wilfully neglected to attend. Held that in the circumstances of the case, although the Magistrate was justified in refusing to hear the mukhtyar, he was not entitled to proceed ex-parte, 2 Bom. L. R. 700. See proviso to sub-sec. (6) for power to set aside ex-parte order.

66. Duty of Magistrate when husband offers to maintain his wife.—When the husband offers to maintain his wife the Magistrate must consider any ground of refusal on the part of the wife to live with her husband and receive evidence which may be offered one side or the other, 8 W. R. 67. Where an offer to maintain the wife is made, the Magistrate should ask the woman whether she is willing to live with the petitioner. If she refuses, it is for the Magistrate to consider the grounds of such refusal and pass such order as he thinks fit, 9 Cr. L. J. 301 (M.), 1883 A. W. N. 233. Failure to determine the question is equivalent to an omission to determine the question of neglect or refusal and is an error in law, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 205.

67. Non-payment of process-fee.—An application for maintenance should not be dismissed on failure of the applicant to comply with an order for payment of process-fee, neglect to maintain not being an offence and process-fees being leviable under the Court-fees Act only in respect of an offence, 16 M. 231. But now under s. 204, sub-sec. (3) Magistrate may dismiss the complaint if fees are not paid within a reasonable time.

IX.—ENFORCEMENT OF ORDER FOR MAINTENANCE.—Sub-sec. (3).

68. Before passing order of commitment, Magistrate must be satisfied that non-payment of the maintenance was due to wilful neglect.—Before an order for imprisonment can be passed, it must be proved that the non-payment of the maintenance is the result of wilful negligence on the part of the defendant, 22 G. 291; followed in 25 G. 291, 25 A. 163. Imprisonment cannot be awarded in anticipation of default, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXIV.

68-A. Jurisdiction of Magistrate who made the order to enforce it, is not ousted by change of residence of party ordered.—The provisions of s. 490 cannot be held to derogate from s. 483 (3). He can issue a warrant under s. 396 for the distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to the person against whom this order is passed. Such a warrant can be executed either within the local jurisdiction of the Magistrate or without such limits under s. 357 when it has been endorsed by the District Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the moveable property is found. S. 490 merely provides an alternative course by enabling the person in whose favour the order was passed to apply direct to a Magistrate in any district where the person bound by the order may be, 7 L. B. R. 116 — 15 Cr. L. J. 701. See Note 3 to s. 490.

In 27 Bom. L. R. 63 — 49 B. 906 it was held per JAWCETT, J., that under s. 488 (3) read with s. 386 (1) (a) it is competent to a Magistrate to issue a warrant for levying the amount of maintenance due by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to the person ordered to give maintenance even if such property consists of a share in a joint Hindu family property.

69. Imprisonment is not punishment for contempt of Court's order, but merely a means of enforcing payment.—The imprisonment which can be awarded under this section is not a punishment for contempt of the Court's order, but merely a means of enforcing payment of the amount due, and upon the payment of that amount being made, the defendant is entitled to his release. "It cannot be regarded as a punishment for the breach of the order, for if that were the case, the punishment would follow upon the breach of the order, irrespective of any success or the reverse in the levying of the amount by warrant, whereas that is not what the section enacts. According to the express terms of the section the disobedience of the order may be never so gross and wilful, and yet, if the amount ordered to be paid is realized in full by execution of the warrant, no sentence of imprisonment is to follow. This conclusively shows that the sentence is not for the disobedience or contempt of the Court's order. Nor again would it be right to hold that the sentence of imprisonment is an absolute sentence for the law says that the Magistrate may sentence such person 'for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid to imprisonment. That shows that the imprisonment is for the unpaid portion of the maintenance, or, in other words, that it is owing to default of payment of the unrealized portion of the maintenance, and if that is so, the imprisonment that is ordered ought to cease upon payment being made. —PER BANERJEE and SALE, JJ., in 22 G. 291 at p. 298. The imprisonment, if served, does not absolve the person from liability for arrears of maintenance, 3 W. R. 81. See also 12 P. R. 1919 (Cr.)

70. Defaulter entitled to be released as soon as payment is made.—'Or until payment if sooner made'—These words in sub-sec. (3) supersede the decisions in 8 M. 70 and Weir II, 639. Now the defaulter is entitled to be released as soon as payment is made, 20 M. 3. They are in accordance with the decision in 22 G. 291, see Notes 69 and 71.

71. Enforcement of payment of accumulated arrears.—(i) Enforcement of payment of arrears is in discretion of Magistrate—No hard-and-fast rule can be laid down as to whether a Magistrate should grant or refuse an application for recovery of arrears of maintenance. The Magistrate should ascertain in each case under what circumstances the arrears came to accumulate and if there was no good reason why the application for recovery should not have been made with greater promptitude, whether it would be equitable and in accordance with the spirit of the Criminal Procedure Code to enforce payment of the accumulation. The Magistrate should also consider whether he should enforce payment of any part of the arrears, where in his opinion it is not proper to enforce payment of the whole of the arrears, 1909 U. B. R. 114, Cr. Pro., pp. 19 and 21 — 11 Cr. L. J. 79 where 20 M. 3 is distinguished. But now see proviso newly added to sub-sec. (3) proceeding that an application for maintenance amount must be made within one year from the date on which it became due.

(ii) Only one warrant may be issued for the whole of the arrears due at the time of issue—Where six months' arrears were due an order for separate warrants of commitment awarding a separate sentence of imprisonment of one month on each warrant is bad in law, as the law contemplates a single warrant of commitment in respect of the arrears due at the time of the issue, 22 G. 291, 7 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXVII, Ratanlal 801, 31 P. R. 1850, 7 Bar. L. T. 225 — 15 Cr. L. J. 434.

(iii) Mode of computing sentence awardable in default of payment of arrears—Is a Magistrate competent to order more than a month's imprisonment at one time? ALLAHABAD AND BURMA—A warrant for the levy of arrears of maintenance for fifteen months is not illegal, but one month's imprisonment would alone be awardable in default as if the warrant only related to a single breach of the order. The third paragraph of s. 488 ought to be strictly construed, and as far as possible, construed in favour of the subject. Under the section a condition precedent to the infliction, of a term of imprisonment is the issue of a warrant in respect of each breach of the order directing maintenance, and after distress has been issued, Kalla Bana is the result. The section contemplates one warrant and one punishment and not a cumulative warrant and cumulative punishment.—PER STRAIGHT, J., 9 A. 240. See also P. J. L. B. 310; U. B. R. (1903-04) L. 2. On the other hand the Madras High Court has held that such imprisonment is not limited to one month. The procedure contemplated by the Code appears to be to deduct the sum levied from the sum due, and then to ascertain how many months' arrears the balance represents. The maximum imprisonment that can be imposed will then be one month for each month's arrears and if there is a balance representing the arrears for a portion of a month, a further term of a month's imprisonment may be imposed for such arrear, 20 M. 3 overruling 6 M. H.C.R. 22, approved in 25 C. 291; 12 P. R. 1877. The Burma Chief Court in 7 Bur. L. T. 223 = 7 L. B. R. 351 = 15 Cr. L. J. 434, held, following, 9 A. 240, and dissenting from 20 M. 3, that when a Magistrate issued a warrant for arrears of maintenance for more than one month and when the allowance for more than one month remained unpaid after the execution of the warrant, he was not competent to pass a sentence of imprisonment exceeding one month. Per OSMOND, J., "I can find nothing to support the conclusion that the section authorizes one month's imprisonment for every month's arrears when one warrant is issued for the recovery of several months' arrears. The words 'for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid after the execution of the warrant' in cl (3) should be read as meaning 'for the whole amount or any part of a month's allowance remaining unpaid on each occasion after the execution of the warrant'." See also 8 M. 70.

72. When order for maintenance cannot be enforced.—(i) If defaulter becomes insolvent.—An insolvent who has obtained a protection order, is not liable for arrest or imprisonment in respect of arrears of maintenance when such arrears are included in the schedule filed by him. Maintenance ordered to be paid is not a fine, penalty or forfeiture, but it is a purely civil liability and a debt within the meaning of s. 13 of the Insolvent Act (11 and 12 Vict., Chapter 102). Its enforcement by a Criminal Court cannot affect the matter, 5 C. 536 = 5 C. L. R. 458.

(ii) If defaulter dies, order cannot be executed against his estate.—Sub sec. (9) is quite explicit in regard to the necessity for the presence of the party against whom the evidence is being taken and on his death the order cannot be enforced against his estate, 61 C. 88. Cf. Harrington, in re, Wilder v Turner, (1906) 2 Ch. 687.

(iii) If the claim has been released or rendered inoperative by decree.—When an application is made to a Magistrate to enforce an order for maintenance, passed under this section, such Magistrate is not bound to enforce the order if the defendant proves that the claim for maintenance has been released, 10 M. 13, e.g., by operation of law, or by divorce, 5 A. 226; 15 A. 134 overruled by 19 A. 50, 1895 A. W. N. 29 and see Note 45. If, in disposing of a suit, a Civil Court decides any matter which might have the effect of disentitling a wife to maintenance, a Magistrate, who has awarded maintenance, is bound, in the interests of justice, to take the judgment of a Civil Court into consideration before proceeding to pass a fresh order enforcing payment of the allowance, Weir II, 614; 14 C. 276; or by agreement of parties, 38 P. R. 1902, but see Weir II, 639. If any agreement is made after the order of the Magistrate, it has the effect of superseding the previous order and whatever rights it might give rise to in a Civil Court, neither the agreement nor the order was one that could be enforced summarily under this section, 42 P. R. 1888. A Muhammadan wife applied for maintenance under this section. Pending proceedings the parties compromised and in terms of the compromise, an order was made under this section that the husband should give his wife half his land and a house to reside in, or in default Rs 9 a month. Subsequently the husband divorced the wife, and the wife executed the order of maintenance. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate set aside the order of his predecessor as to the gift of half of the husband's lands and house and ordered that the wife might receive arrears of payment of Rs. 9 for the period of her iddat and thereafter that Rs. 5 per mensem would be paid for the upkeep of her two boys. A warrant was issued for the realization of the total arrears. The District Magistrate found that the case should have been dismissed in the first instance and the order for execution refused on the ground that according to the principles laid down in 42 P. R. 1888, the enforcement of an order of compromise under this section falls within the jurisdiction of a Civil Court and not of a Criminal Court. Held, on revision, the view of the District Magistrate should be upheld, 39 P. R. 1905 = 108 P. L. R. 1905. An agreement by a husband to maintain his wife by giving her a house and jewels and by delivering to her annually a certain quantity of grain and money cannot be made the subject of an order under this section nor enforced under it, 6 M. 283; 12 P. R. 1890.

(iv) If wife has been divorced.—When a divorce is proved, the order for maintenance becomes functus officio and ought not to be further executed, 1 Bom. L. R. 346. See Note 45 and Note 5 to s. 490. See also 19 W. R. 73.

(v) If the wife has voluntarily returned to her husband.—Wife returning to live with husband—subsequent to order renders the order ineffectual subsequent to the date of her return, and if she subsequently leaves him again or is turned out the former order cannot be given effect to, but she must institute fresh proceedings, 1888 A. W. M. 317. See Note 14

(i) Sufficient cause.—Under sub-sec. (3) of s. 488 before a Magistrate puts a maintenance order in execution he is bound to consider the sufficiency of the cause alleged and refuse execution if he is satisfied if the cause is sufficient. The phrase "sufficient cause" in sub-cl. (3) as amended shows that the Magistrate should use a judicial discretion after looking to all circumstances of the case, 48 M. L. J. 494.

73. What are not proper reasons for refusing to enforce order.—(i) Rate of maintenance too high.—A Magistrate cannot refuse to enforce an order for maintenance when in a further inquiry, evidence is given to show that the allowance granted was excessive, but he can revise the rate of maintenance to be allowed subsequent to the date of such inquiry, Weir II, 836. Though upon a change of circumstances being shown, the existing order may be modified, still, so long as that order remains in force, it must carry with it its proper consequence, 22 C. 291.

(ii) Delay.—When an application for recovery of accumulated arrears is made after great delay, a Magistrate should not, even when declining to enforce payment of arrears refuse to enforce payment from the time of the new application, as the order of maintenance deserves to be enforced as long as it holds good, 1909 U. B. R. 111, Cr. Pro., pp. 19 and 21 = 11 Cr. L. J. 79, where 4 Bur. L. R. 29 approved and 20 M. 3 distinguished. But see now proviso newly added to sub-sec. (3) prescribing a period of one year within which to apply for the maintenance amount.

(iii) That the party does not reside within the district.—See Note 3 to s. 490

74. Arrears cannot be recovered by suit.—A suit will not lie to recover arrears of maintenance, the order must be enforced according to the provisions of the section, 2 P. R. 1876 (Clv). But the Jagir income of a person when collected by revenue authorities can be taken in satisfaction of the arrears of maintenance due under an order passed against such person, 3 P. R. 1889.

75. Breaking open inner door for execution of warrant.—A Police-officer, entrusted with the execution of a warrant for the levy of the amount of maintenance recoverable under this section, can break open an inner door of the house of the person against whom the order is made. The principle laid down in 8 B. H. C. R. A. C. 127, as regards civil processes, applies a fortiori to criminal processes, Ratanlal 431.

76. Court-fee on application for arrears of maintenance due.—Application to enforce payment of maintenance already awarded, under this section, is chargeable with a fee of eight annas under Sch. II, Article 1 (b) of Act VII of 1870. The defaulter cannot be ordered to repay the said fee Ratanlal 438.

77. Date of enforcement may be postponed by consent of parties.—Where the date of the enforcement of the order is postponed by consent of the parties to a date other than the date of the order, the High Court will not interfere, Weir II, 635.

78. Security cannot be taken in anticipation of default.—This section does not provide for the taking of security in anticipation of default, 24 W. R. 72.

X—CANCELLATION OF ORDER AWARDING MAINTENANCE

79. Sub-sec. (5) applies only to orders in favour of wife.—No power to cancel order awarding maintenance to a child.—There is no provision in this section for cancelling an order awarding maintenance to a child, though enforcement may be declined, 17 P. R. 1883. Where an order has been passed by a competent Court for payment of maintenance to a child, the only power that exists for modifying such an order is that given by s. 489, 1904 A. W. N. 149. A Magistrate has no power to cancel a previous order made by another Magistrate for the maintenance of a child of a divorced Muhammadan wife, who has married again. Such an order of cancellation is illegal. A Magistrate has no power to cancel an order under this section except on the ground of change of circumstances mentioned in s. 489, 21 A. 11. See Note 4, s. 489, 43 M. 503 = 43 M. L. J. 183.

80. Order for maintenance of child not affected by decree for restitution of conjugal rights.—Where after a wife obtained an order under this section for the payment of a sum by the husband for the maintenance of their child, the husband subsequently obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights against the wife, Held, that the husband was not absolved from the liability to pay maintenance. It may be otherwise if he obtained an order for guardianship of the child, 6 L. B. R. 127 = 14 Cr. L. J. 98 and also 2 L. B. R. 46. The cases in 13 W. R. 52, 23 B. 434 27 A. 453, all deal with the effect of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights on an order for the maintenance of a wife.

81. Order in favour of wife must be cancelled on proof of her living in adultery.—It is open to a husband, upon whom an order for the maintenance of his wife has been made, to prove after such order that his wife is living in adultery, and upon such proof a Magistrate is justified in cancelling his order, 8 B. H. C. R. 124; 1882 A. W. N. 168; 24 C. 633; 5 A. 224; 5 N. L. R. 19 = 9 Cr. L. J. 390. Where on the application of a wife to enforce an order granting maintenance, the husband pleaded (i) that the wife was of bad character, (ii) that she had agreed to take a sum less than the amount ordered and (iii) that he was willing to take her to live with him, if she will be of good character, and the Magistrate dismissed the pleas without making an inquiry and sentenced the husband, held setting aside the sentence, that the pleas set up were good and ought to have been inquired into, 36 P. R. 1902. A Magistrate rejected the application of the husband for cancellation of the order of maintenance on the ground that it was not proved that the petitioner's wife was at the time living in adultery although she might have committed adultery seven months before. Held, that adultery committed by a wife subsequent to an order obtained by her for maintenance, disentitles her to claim a continuance of maintenance and entitles the husband to apply for cancellation of the order if it amounts to living in adultery, Ratanlal 353; 1882 A. W. N. 168. In a proceeding for cancellation of an order for maintenance, the evidence of adultery should not be general and inconclusive, but specific and cogent, 1893 A. W. N. 56. The birth of an illegitimate child is not enough under cl (5) to cancel an order previously passed, 5 N. L. R. 19 = 9 Cr. L. J. 303.

82. Order cannot be cancelled on production of disputed compromise.—It is not competent to a Magistrate to cancel an order for maintenance on the ground that the parties have entered into an arrangement evidenced by a deed the validity of which is denied by the complainant, until it has been declared by some competent tribunal to be binding on the parties, Weir II, 649.

XI.—FURTHER INQUIRY, APPEAL AND REVISION.

83. District Magistrate not competent to direct further inquiry.—When an application for maintenance is refused by a Deputy Magistrate, a District Magistrate cannot direct a further inquiry under s 437, 25 A. 645. See also 1 C. L. J. 102.

84. No appeal lies against order awarding maintenance.—When the Magistrate orders a person to make a monthly allowance under s 488, there is no conviction for any offence and no appeal lies, 7 W. R. 10; 5 Bom. H. C. R. 81.

85. No Letters Patent appeal against order of single Judge made in revision.—No appeal lies under s 15 of the Letters Patent, against the order of a single Judge made on a revision petition against the order of a Magistrate under s 488, as the order is one passed in a criminal trial. In 5 Bom. H. C. R. 81 it was held that maintenance proceedings were judicial proceedings of a Criminal Court from which no appeal lay, 17 M. L. T. 330 = 16 Cr. L. J. 328.

86. Revision.—When the order of a Magistrate under s 488 is no longer enforceable in consequence of a decree of a Civil Court as, e.g., when subsequent to the order of a Magistrate directing a person A to pay maintenance to an illegitimate child, a Civil Court decrees in a declaratory suit brought by A that he is not the father of the illegitimate child, the High Court acting in revision may set aside the order awarding maintenance, 16 Cr. L. J. 609 (O).

87. High Court may revise or direct further inquiry.—When a father in law is ordered to pay maintenance to his son's wife, 5 B. H. C. R. Ca 81, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 123; 26 P. L. R. 1903; 12 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 577, or where the rate of maintenance is excessive, the High Court has power to set aside or modify the Magistrate's order or to direct further inquiry with a view to decide what amount should be allowed, Weir II, 575 and 634, and see Note 6 to s 489.

489. (1) On proof of a change in the circumstances of any person receiving under Alteration in allowance

ance
to pay a monthly allowance, or ordered under the same section to pay a monthly allowance to his wife or child, the Magistrate may make such alteration in the allowance as he thinks fit, provided that if he increases the allowance, the monthly rate of † one hundred rupees in the whole be not exceeded

‡ (2) Where it appears to the Magistrate that in consequence of any decision of a competent Civil Court, any order made under section 488 should be cancelled or varied, he shall cancel the order or as the case may be vary the same accordingly.

* This section was renumbered by Act VI of 1923,

† The one hundred were substituted by 1000,

‡ Sub-sec (2) was added by 1916

Notes.—1. Does this section apply to the total discontinuance or merely to an alteration of the amount?—These words refer not only to a change in the pecuniary circumstances of the person paying or receiving the allowance, but to a change in any of the circumstances which might be taken into consideration in passing an order under s. 488, 21 P. R. 1894. They do not refer to a change in the status of the parties which would entail a stoppage of the allowance, 29 A. 50 (F.B.) overruling 15 A. 143. See also 1855 A. W. N. 29; 8 B. H. C. Cr. Ca. 93; 7 B. 180; 14 C. 278. The words "the Magistrate may make such alteration etc." preceded as they are by the word "wife" and followed as they are by a limitation as to the amount of the monthly allowance clearly indicate that the "alteration in the allowance" contemplated by this section only amount to a power to alter the amount and not to a total discontinuance thereof.—Per Munroon, J., in 5 A. 226. See also 5 C. 558. But a change of circumstances may be the result of divorce among Muhammadans, 19 W. R. 73 = 10 B. L. R. Appx. XXXIII or to the wife living in adultery. It may be said that these cases are covered by s. 488 (5), but the better view seems to be, that this section applies as well to a case of total discontinuance of the allowance. Thus, in 1877, petitioner was ordered to pay a maintenance allowance to his daughter. In 1884, the daughter was married and was living with her husband, who was willing to maintain her. On petitioner's application under this section for a cancellation of the order of 1877, the Magistrate declined to interfere on the ground that in his opinion, the husband was not bound to maintain his wife, until she attained puberty, held that the order of the Magistrate, declining to interfere, could not be supported, the husband living in virtue of the marriage undertaken the obligation of supporting his wife, (the daughter of the petitioner) the latter was no longer in a position to require an allowance from her father, Weir II, 650. See also 11 C. W. N. 100 which adopts the same view. See Note 72 to s. 488 and Note 5 to s. 490.

2. What would be valid change in circumstances?—A Magistrate may under this section, from time to time, alter the rate of the monthly allowance granted as maintenance under this section as, e.g., the child getting older or the birth of another child or death of a child 12 C. 535, 16 M 398. But in 27 A. 11, a Muhammadan wife who had obtained an order for the maintenance of her infant child got a divorce and married another husband. The first husband sought to set aside the order of maintenance on the ground that the second husband had undertaken to maintain the child. Held there was no such change in the circumstances of the infant as is contemplated by this section, which is the only provision in the Code which empowers a Magistrate to modify an order under s. 488 for maintenance of children. Similarly, a husband cannot claim a reduction of the amount of allowance, ordered to be paid by Court, to his deserted wife on the mere ground that she might possibly be able to earn something by her own labour, 1887 A. W. N. 107.

3. Reduction of rate—Such order operates only prospectively.—A Magistrate has no power to reduce the rate of maintenance which has accrued due in arrears. An order reducing the rate can operate only as regards payment accruing after date of the order of reduction Weir II, 650.

4. Court acting under this section not to question propriety of original order.—In dealing with an application for increase of maintenance, a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to enquire into the propriety or other wise of the order for maintenance originally made, Weir II, 650.

5. Is a party desirous of getting order set aside bound to proceed under this section?—When a person against whom an order for maintenance is made considers that such an order should no longer be in force against him for some reason such as, e.g., the existence of a subsequent agreement, he should apply under this section to the Magistrate who passed the original order, 9 W. R. 1; 17 P. R. 1883. He should not raise the objection before the Magistrate enforcing the order under s. 490, 25 A. 165. When the parties make an agreement, subsequent to the order under s. 488, modifying its terms it will be competent to the party interested to apply under this section and get the order altered 25 A. 165. But see Note 5 to s. 490.

der by reduction of the of moneys due, as that

7. Effect of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights on an order for maintenance.—When a decree for restitution of conjugal rights is passed but the husband does not execute it and goes on paying maintenance, it is not open to the Court to increase the amount on a fresh application by the wife as the first order is put an end to by the decree, 21 Bom. L. R. 766. But in 49 M. L. J. 269 where a husband against whom an order for maintenance was passed under s. 488 subsequently obtained a decree for restitution of the conjugal rights and it appeared to the Court that he was not at all anxious to get his wife back to live with him on the ordinary terms of husband and wife. Held that as the object of the restitution decree was merely to get the maintenance order cancelled and not a bona fide wish to live amicably with her, the Court should not exercise its discretion under s. 489 (2) and cancel the order for maintenance.

490. (1) A copy of the order of maintenance shall be given without payment to the person in whose favour it is made, or to his guardian, if any, or to the person to whom the allowance is to be paid, and such order may be enforced by any Magistrate in any place where the person against whom it is made may be, on such Magistrate being satisfied as to the identity of the parties and the non payment of the allowance due.

Enforcement of order of maintenance
Notes—1. 'May be enforced—The word 'may' was substituted for the word 'shall' in Act X of 1882 and the object of the Legislature in making the above alteration obviously was to enable the Magistrate to consider any reasons that may be urged against the enforcement of the order than those for which separate provision is made by s 488 (5) and s 489, 16 Cr. L. J. 609 (O).

1-A. Remission of Court-fee.—In the exercise of the power conferred by s 35 of the Court fees Act VII of 1870, the Governor General in Council is pleased to remit the fees payable under the said Act on a copy of the order when the copy is given under s. 490 to the person named therein—Gazette of India, 1888, Pt. I, p 506. Under rules passed by the Calcutta High Court under s 20 cl (ii) of the Court fees Act, a fee of one rupee has been fixed for serving and executing a warrant for the levy of maintenance of a wife or child, and also a per centage on the amount of maintenance levied, viz., 2 per cent. on sums not exceeding Rs. 100 and when the sums exceed Rs 100, then 2 per cent. on Rs 100 and 1 per cent. on the amount of excess, such percentage is to be deducted from the proceeds of any property sold, or to be paid with the amount levied and with the other costs of process as stated in the warrant—Calcutta Gazette, 1874, p 478, 21 W. R. Rules, etc., 12

2 Order directing payment in advance—A Magistrate's order directing the payment of maintenance allowance in advance from the date of the Magistrate's order is legal under s 538 of Act X of 1872 (now this section) Ratanlal 289.

3. Section does not deprive Magistrate making order of power of enforcing it.—This section does not deprive the Magistrate who has made an order for maintenance, of the jurisdiction given him by s. 488 (3). When the defendant is beyond his jurisdiction he may, in his discretion, exercise the jurisdiction or refer the applicant to the Magistrate having jurisdiction at the place where the defendant is to be found 4 M. 230. In 7 L. R. R. 116 = 15 Cr. L. J. 701, the case in 4 M. 230 was considered and it was held that the law gives the applicant the option of proceeding either in the Court which originally passed the order of that having local jurisdiction over the respondent, but there is no authority under which either of those Courts could refuse to exercise a jurisdiction which it possesses merely on the ground that some other Court also have concurrent jurisdiction

4. Competency of second-class Magistrate to enforce order duly made—A second-class Magistrate of a place, where the husband is at the time is competent to enforce the order for maintenance made against such husband by any competent Magistrate in that behalf, Ratanlal 289.

5. Magistrate bound to consider every plea that may affect enforcement of order.—Where in answer to an application for enforcement of an order under s 488 for the maintenance of a wife, the party against whom such order is subsisting, pleads that he has lawfully divorced his wife and therefore the order can no longer be enforced it is the duty of the Court hearing the application to entertain and consider such plea and if it finds the plea established, to decline to enforce the order for any period subsequent to the date when the marriage ceased to subsist between the parties. In such case, where the parties are Muhammadans the marriage will be deemed to subsist until the expiration of the iddat 19 A. 50 overruling 15 A. 143. The Magistrate should likewise decline if the defendant proves that the claim has been released, 10 M 13, or that the wife has voluntarily returned to live with the husband 1893 A. W. N 217. With the return of the wife the previous neglect or refusal ceases to exist, and if a new cause for proceeding under s 488 subsequently arises it must be proved by fresh evidence 1904 U. B. R. Cr. P. C. L. p 10. The conditions specified in the second clause of this section have special reference to cases in which enforcement is sought at a place other than that in which the order was originally passed, or by a Magistrate other than the one who passed it and cannot be considered exhaustive, and it is open to any party to such order to show cause against its enforcement and to ask for its cancellation or alteration on any of the grounds specified in ss. 488 and 489 in one and the same petition, and inasmuch as the Magistrate's order for maintenance of a wife must be in favour of a person bearing that legal character under the personal law which governs the parties such order cannot endure for the benefit of and cannot be enforced in favour of one who no longer bears that character under the law, and it is incumbent on the Magistrate, when the question is raised before him to satisfy himself that the woman still possesses the character by virtue of which she was enabled to obtain an order of maintenance, 21 P. R. 1898. It is the duty of a Magistrate who is applied to enforce an order for maintenance passed under s. 488 on an objection being raised that the woman has ceased to be a wife by reason of subsequent divorce, to enquire whether there has been, or has not been a legal and valid divorce and if he finds that there has been a valid dissolution of the marriage he ought not to issue an attachment warrant or otherwise to execute the order, it having become in fact functus officio, 17 D. C. 280 = 15 Cr. L. J. 648. The cessation of the conjugal relationship by reason of a subsequent divorce or the decision of a competent Court on the question of marital or filial relationship in question can justify a refusal 18 Cr. L. J. 609, 1915 U. B. R. I. 53 = 18 Cr. L. J. 831.

6 Are powers of executing Magistrate other than the one who made the order limited by terms of this section?—In 10 M. 12 it was held that a Magistrate other than the one who made an order under s. 488 was competent to decline to enforce the order for reasons not within the terms of this section e.g., that the claim had been released. But in 25 A. 163, HOOVER, J. declining to follow 10 M. 12, held that a Magistrate called upon, under this section, to enforce an order of maintenance under s. 488 has no jurisdiction to take into consideration anything further than (i) the identity of the parties (ii) the non-payment of the allowance and (iii) where the person to whom the maintenance is awarded is the wife, that she still holds the position of wife. The fact that the parties had made an agreement subsequent to the order, modifying its terms is not a matter for the Magistrate's consideration in enforcing the order. If the person against whom the order for maintenance is made considers that such an order should no longer be in force, for some reason other than those mentioned above it is for him to apply under s. 489 to the Magistrate who passed the original order or to his successor in office. See Note 20 to section 489 as to effect of Civil Court decree.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

DIRECTIONS OF THE NATURE OF A HABEAS CORPUS

Power to issue directions of the nature of a habeas corpus

491. * (1) "Any High Court may, whenever it thinks fit, direct—

(a) that a person within the limits of its † "appellate criminal jurisdiction be brought up before the Court to be dealt with according to law,

(b) that a person illegally or improperly detained in public or private custody within such limits be set at liberty,

(c) that a prisoner detained in any jail situate within such limits be brought before the Court to be there examined as a witness in any matter pending or to be inquired into in such Court,

(d) that a prisoner detained as aforesaid be brought before a Court martial or any Commissioners acting under the authority of any commission from the Governor General in Council for trial or to be examined touching any matter pending before such Court martial or Commissioners respectively,

(e) that a prisoner within such limits be removed from one custody to another for the purpose of trial and

(f) that the body of a defendant within such limits be brought in on the Sheriff's return of ceps corpus to a writ of attachment

(2) ‡ The High Court may from time to time frame rules to regulate the procedure in cases under this section

(3) Nothing in this section applies to persons detained under the Bengal Sl. le Prisoners Regulation, 1818 Madras Regulation II of 1819 or Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827, of the State Prisoners Act 1850 or the State Prisoners Act 1858

* The words "any High Court" were substituted for the words "any of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William Madras and Bombay" by Act XII of 1923

† The words "appellate criminal" were substituted for the words "ordinary original civil jurisdiction" by s. 6 d

‡ The words "High Court" were substituted for the words "each of the said High Courts" by Act XII of 1923

Note.—Under the old section power under this section was expressly given only to the High Courts at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay within their ordinary original civil jurisdiction. Under the new amendment all the High Courts are empowered to act under this section within the limits of their appellate criminal jurisdiction, see 43 M. L. J. 396 (F.B.) and also 46 C. 52; 52 C. 319 = 29 C. W. N. 88.

Notes.—1. The Regulations and Acts referred to in the section relate to State prisoners. For similar powers conferred on provincial Magistrates, see s. 552, as to European British subjects, see s. 456.

2 Habeas Corpus.—This, the most celebrated prerogative writ in the English law, is a remedy for a person deprived of his liberty. It is addressed to him who detains another in custody, and commands him to produce the body, with the day and cause of his caption and detention, and to do, submit to, and receive whatever the Judge or Court shall consider in that behalf.—WHARTON'S LAW LEXICON

"Ceps corpus et poratum habeo"—(I have taken the body and have it ready) a return made by the Sheriff upon an attachment Capias, etc., when he has the person, against whom, the process was issued, in custody

3. Are the High Courts still entitled to issue writ of 'habeas corpus'?—In 39 C. 164 the question was raised whether the writ of habeas corpus has not been altogether abolished and, if so, whether it is competent to the Indian Legislature to take away that supreme right, but the point was not decided as s. 491 was held to apply in the circumstances of the case.

In 28 Bom. L. R. 471 it was specifically held that the High Court of Bombay has jurisdiction to issue a writ of Habeas Corpus for the production of a person outside British India, provided it is satisfied that he is in the custody or control of a person within its jurisdiction

4 Scope of sub-section (a).—Dealt with according to law, is a phrase of such wide and general meaning that it is fairly open to many constructions. In the case of children it might not unreasonably be extended so as to take in what ordinarily happens when the parties have recourse to the Courts under the Guardian and Wards Act instead of under this section, 12 Bom. L. R. 891 = 11 Cr. L. J. 687. By s. 491, it appears to be entirely left to the discretion of the Court whether it should or should not direct the person to be brought before it to be dealt with according to law, but Rule 794 of the Bombay High Court Rules deprives the Court of all further discretion and commands that in the absence of cause being shown against the rule which is a very different thing from allowing the Court to exercise its discretion even where technically the cause is inadequate, the Court shall pass an order that the person or persons improperly detained shall be delivered to the person entitled to their custody, 12 Bom. L. R. 891 = 11 Cr. L. J. 687.

5. Scope of sub-section (b).—The subsection itself provides that the remedy, which the Court gives, goes no farther than setting the persons detained at liberty, 12 Bom. L. R. 891 = 11 Cr. L. J. 687. A de facto guardianship of children would be sufficient to sustain a conviction under s. 381, I P C., and as against strangers such guardianship would entitle him to an order for restoration to his custody under s. 491 Subsec. (2) does not apply when the children are not illegally or improperly detained, 8 M. L. T. 300 = 11 Cr. L. J. 644. A Hindu father who has become a Sanyasi, is not the guardian of his children and he does not regain his rights in the natural family if he renounces his sanyas, 21 M. L. J. 195 = (1911) 1 M. W. N. 36 = 8 M. L. T. 300 = 11 Cr. L. J. 644.

The applicant came from village which was once British territory, but was recently ceded to the Raja of Benares under a treaty. For some years past, he lived and carried on business in Bombay. On 17th September, 1924, he was arrested by the Police Commissioner under s. 3 (a) of the Foreigners Act. On 23rd September, he applied to the High Court under s. 491. No order of Government under s. 3 of the Foreigners Act was forthcoming, on October 14 when the application was finally heard. Held, that under the circumstances the applicant should be set at liberty inasmuch as in the absence of any order of Government, his continued detention was an illegal or improper detention within the meaning of s. 491 (1) (b) or alternatively he was not being dealt with according to law within the meaning of s. 491 (1) (a). 25 Bom. L. R. 1252 = 49 B. 222.

The Police in Calcutta cannot retain custody under s. 5 of the Calcutta Immoral Traffic Act of a girl removed from a brothel after she has attained the age of 16 years. 30 C. W. N. 72

6. The sole consideration for Court ought to be the benefit and welfare of person brought before it.—Parents and guardians cannot divest themselves of their right of guardianship by contract. A delegation of parental authority is revocable at any time, and it is the duty of the parents and guardians to revoke it if used to the detriment of the children. And it is also open to the Court within whose jurisdiction the children are found to revoke it at any time if sufficient cause be shown for interference. Ordinarily, no doubt the Court will be very slow to interfere with parents or the arrangement made by parents for the custody and education of their children, but it will deprive them of such custody if it be absolutely necessary in the interests of the children, and a fortiori it will for similar reasons take the children out of the custody of persons selected by the parents especially when the parents have put it out of their power to interfere themselves, for the protection of their children. The jurisdiction of the Courts in such cases is essentially a parental jurisdiction and that description of it involves that the main consideration to be acted upon in its exercise is the benefit or welfare of the child. The term 'welfare' in this connection must be read in the largest possible sense, that is to say, as meaning that every circumstance must be taken into consideration and the Court must do what under the circumstances a wise parent acting in the true interests of the child would or ought to do. The Queen v Gynghall, (1893) 2 Q. B. D. 232. The welfare of the child is not to be measured by money only, or by physical comfort only. The word must be taken in its widest sense. The moral and religious welfare of the child must be considered as well as its physical well being. Nor can the ties of affection be disregarded, re M. Grath, (1893) 1 Ch. 143. Even a father, if it be shown that cruelty or corruption is to be apprehended from him, would be deprived of the custody of his children, The King v Greenhill, (1836) 4 A. and E. 266, and so would a mother be deprived of her custody if she is living in open adultery. In re G., (1899) 1 Ch. 719. It is well established that the Court will not ordinarily force a minor more than fourteen if a boy, and more than sixteen if a girl, to remain in a custody to which he or she objects, and that before deciding as to the custody of younger children who are still old enough to form an intelligent preference, it will take account of their wishes as one element in the case, Pollard v Rouse, 33 M. 288. The underlying principle of every writ of habeas corpus (and proceedings under this section) is to ensure the protection and well-being of the person brought before the Court under that writ. The real interest and well being of the person ought to be not only the determining but the sole consideration, 12 Bom. L. R. 891 = 11 Cr. L. J. 687. Courts of Equity in England always exercise a discretionary power to control the father's or guardian's legal rights of custody, Queen v Gynghall, L. R. (1893) 2 Q. B. D. 232. Thus a master is not entitled to a habeas corpus for the purpose of recovering the custody of an apprentice, who of his own accord had entered the service of another person, the object of the writ being merely to protect personal liberty, R v Reynolds, 6 P. R. 477 (1795). A contract of apprenticeship cannot be specifically enforced against a minor either directly or by restraining him by taking service under others or by restraining others from employing him, Le Francisco v Barnum (1889) 43 Ch. D. 365; 33 M. 288. In India, cases of conflict frequently arise between parents or guardians of minors and Christian Missionaries. The principles governing such conflict are laid down in 18 B. 307; 1 M. L. T. 347; 23 C. 290 and 18 B. 636 and see also 60 P. R. 1901 (Clv.) = 187 P. L. R. 1901. In 11 Bom. L. R. 75 = 9 Cr. L. J. 214, there was a conflict between the mother and the executor of the father as regards custody of a minor and it was held that the former is entitled to the custody of the person of the minor as against the latter unless there was in the will a specific appointment of the executor as guardian. In 12 Bom. L. R. 891 = 11 Cr. L. J. 687, the contest was between the Muhammadan mother and father to the custody of two children. By Hindu as well as by English law the father is the natural guardian of his children during their minorities but this guardianship is in the nature of a sacred trust and he cannot therefore during his life-time substitute another person to be guardian in his place. If he affects to do so, the authority conferred upon the substituted guardian is revocable, and the question whether the father is entitled to revoke it depends on the infants' interests, welfare, parentage and religion. Hesant v Narayanasah 4 In. Ap. CCCXIV = 38 M. 207 (P.C.) 43 M. 299.

7. Procedure—(i) Application to whom made—When an application is made under this section, it should be made to the Judge appointed to exercise ordinary original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court (Quare per MACLEAN, C.J., whether that is the proper Court) 2 C. W. N. 333, 44 C. 76. Where a Divisional Court has refused to grant a rule nisi for habeas corpus, the Court of Appeal has no original jurisdiction to grant such a rule, Le Gros, ex parte 30 T. L. R. 249. But see now 52 C. 319 which holds that the Criminal Appellate Bench has jurisdiction to deal with an application under s. 491.

(ii) Right to begin—When the person who obtains a rule under s. 491 is brought before the Court his counsel begins, 39 C. 164—172.

(iii) May be granted in civil or criminal proceeding—A writ of habeas corpus may be granted in a civil or criminal proceeding, R v Barnardo, L. R. 23 Q. B. D. 305, 33 M. 288.

(iv) Appeal lies against order—The petitioner as step mother claimed to be entitled to the custody of her deceased husband's minor son who was living with D his maternal uncle. She obtained a rule calling upon D to show cause why the child should not be delivered to her. After argument the rule was discharged.

Held, that the order discharging the rule was a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, 1865, and that, therefore, under that clause the petitioner had a right to appeal against the order, 14 B. 555; where a single Judge of the High Court, acting under this section (or s 456) refuses, an application for release from illegal custody an appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, as such order is a judgment, and not passed in a criminal trial, though it may be said to have been passed in a criminal matter, 29 C. 286 (F.B.), 28 Bom. L. R. 471.

8. Alien enemy not entitled to writ—See Weber, ex parte 31 T. L. R. 602, where it was held that an alien enemy is not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus. But an alien enemy would be entitled to apply, see 18 B. 836.

9. Power of High Court to issue order under this section when person detained under warrant issued under Extradition Act, 1903—It was laid down in 39 C. 164, that the High Court has jurisdiction under this section to issue an order and to examine whether a person detained in public custody under the Indian Extradition Act is legally detained, and this jurisdiction is not taken away merely because the Government of India have already issued a warrant for surrender under sub-sec. (8) of s 3 of the said Act. The power of the High Court to interfere otherwise by way of revision, e.g., under s 491 is untouched, 42 C. 793. But see also 46 C. 52. See now 52 C. 319 for the effect of the amendment of section 491.

Powers of High Court outside the limits of appellate jurisdiction

* 491-A. 'Any High Court established by Letters Patent may exercise the powers conferred by section 491 in the case of any European British subject within such territories, other than those within the limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction, as the Governor General in Council may direct'

PART IX.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

OF THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR

Power to appoint Public Prosecutors

492. (1) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may appoint, generally, or in any case or for any specified class of cases, in any local area, one or more officers to be called Public Prosecutors

† (2) The District Magistrate, or, subject to the control of the District Magistrate, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate may, in the absence of the Public Prosecutor, or where no Public Prosecutor has been appointed, appoint any other person, not being an officer of Police below ‡ such rank as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf to be Public Prosecutor for the purpose of any case §

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section, the Select Committee say—

We are doubtful whether the second amendment made by the Bill in s 492 really effects what was intended. In some places there are special Police Acts and they do not invariably give the Local Government power to delegate to Assistant Superintendents the powers of a District Superintendent. Moreover, there is a variety of nomenclature and we think it better to leave it to the Local Governments to prescribe the rank of Police-officers who may be appointed Public Prosecutors for the purposes of a particular case

Notes—1. Who is a Public Prosecutor?—See s 4 (f) for definition.

(2) Pleader appointed with District Magistrate's permission is not Public Prosecutor—In a criminal appeal pending before the Chief Court, R, a brother of the murdered man, petitioned the District Magistrate for permission to support the conviction in the Appellate Court, and permission being granted, engaged the services of a pleader for that purpose. Held, that the order on R's petition did not constitute such pleader a Public Prosecutor under this section, 29 P. R. 1886

* This section was inserted by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act XII of 1923 s 31

† The words 'in any case committed for trial to the Court of Session' were omitted by Act XXIII of 1923

‡ The words 'such rank as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf' were substituted for the words 'the rank of Assistant District Superintendent by s62

§ Any case substituted for each case' by s62

(11) Prosecutor appointed for special case is not a Public Prosecutor.—A person appointed by a District Magistrate to conduct prosecution in a Sessions Court for the purpose of a case has not the power of a Public Prosecutor with regard to withdrawal under s. 491, 8 A. 291 (P.B.), 1898 A. W. N. 94; Weir II, 653; but now see s. 495 (2).

2. In criminal cases, the Crown by the Public Prosecutor is the party and not the complainant.—The offence is dealt with as an invasion of the public peace and not a mere contention between the complainant and the accused. The Crown is therefore the party and not the complainant, 13 B. 339. See also 30 A. 525.

3. Non-appointment of Public Prosecutor does not invalidate trial.—The provisions of s. 270 that every trial before a Court of Session shall be conducted by a Public Prosecutor is merely directory. The absence of a Public Prosecutor in a Sessions trial or a defect in his appointment, is at most an irregularity curable under s. 537, 35 P. R. 1887.

4. Powers of Government Pleaders to withdraw.—The powers of Government Pleaders, who have not been appointed Public Prosecutors, under this section, to withdraw prosecutions are limited to the circumstances described in s. 240 Weir II, 652.

5. Convicting Magistrate must not be appointed as Crown Prosecutor.—In 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 126, the High Court censured the appointment of the Magistrate, who in the first instance had tried and convicted the accused to be Crown Prosecutor to conduct an inquiry subsequently directed in the same case in the following terms:—"The appointment as Crown Prosecutor of the Magistrate, who tried the case, was a most improper and singular proceeding. To convert a Judge into an Advocate seeking to uphold his decision before another tribunal is at least in the annals of British jurisprudence quite unprecedented, and most objectionable, as he has a personal interest in the case, which a Public Prosecutor should not have. Having accepted the office, the Magistrate ought to have endeavoured to perform its duties with that calmness and impartiality which should ever characterize a Public Prosecutor. See also the remarks of NORMAN, J., in 4 B. L. R. Appx. L. But they may be so appointed. In the United Provinces all Joint Magistrates and Assistant Magistrates exercising first-class powers, have been empowered to prosecute in Sessions trials.—Government Notification, 31st December, 1870.

6. Public Prosecutor represents the Crown and not the Police.—The purpose of a Criminal trial is not to support at all cost a theory, but to investigate the offence and to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused. The duty of a Public Prosecutor is to represent not the Police but the Crown and this duty should be discharged by him fairly and fearlessly and with a full sense of the responsibility that attaches to his position. The guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined by the tribunals appointed by law and not according to the tastes of anyone else. 42 G. 422, 42 G. 957. See Note 2 at p. 766.

7. Duty of a Public Prosecutor.—It has been well said by a learned Judge "The Counsel for the prosecution has most accurately conceived his duty, which is to be an assistant to the Court in the furtherance of justice, and not to act as Counsel for any particular person or party. He should not by statement aggravate the case against the prisoners, or keep back a witness, because evidence may weaken the case for the prosecution. His only object should be to aid the Court in discovering truth. A Public Prosecutor should avoid any proceeding likely to intimidate or unduly influence witnesses on either side. "There should be on his part no unseemly eagerness for, or grasping at, conviction." Per WESTROFF, C.J., "In the case of Crown prosecution in England, were the Attorney-General or Solicitor General is conducting the case for the prosecution there is never the least vestige of animosity or prejudice. It is regrettable that the practice and procedure here in India is different, and I see no reason why that prevailing in England should not be adopted. —Per MACLEAN, C.J., 8 C. W. N. 17.

and functions of the Legal Remembrancer in the Calcutta High Court, see 7 C. W. N. 11 and Note 4 to s. 417. See also 12 P. R. 1916, and 42 G. 422, as to the duty of the prosecutor to call witnesses.

(12) Can the District Magistrate direct Public Prosecutor to file complaint?—A person cannot delegate to another the right to file a complaint. A District Magistrate cannot, therefore, authorize the Public Prosecutor to file a complaint on his behalf, 13 P. R. 1915—18 P. L. R. 1915—20 P. W. R. 1915—16 Cr. L. J. 251. See, however, Note 3 to s. 4 (A) at p. 7.

8 No Court fees for documents required by Public Prosecutor.—Copies of all documents which a Public Prosecutor may require have been exempted from Court fees—Government of India Notification, 21st January, 1886.

9 Madras Rules as to Public Prosecutors.—See pp 154 155 of the Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, 1912

Public Prosecutor may plead in all Courts in cases under his charge. Pleaders privately instructed to be under his direction

493. The Public Prosecutor may appear and plead without any written authority before any Court in which any case of which he has charge is under inquiry, trial or appeal and if any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute in any Court any person in any such case, the Public Prosecutor shall conduct the prosecution and the pleader so instructed shall act therein, under his directions

Notes—1 Public Prosecutor always at liberty to avail himself of private help.—When the assistance of counsel has been accepted that assistance cannot be excluded at any of the stages of the trial 11 B. H. C. 102.

2 Counsel instructed by a private person cannot conduct a prosecution on behalf of Government in a trial before a Court of Session without being specially empowered by the District Magistrate, Counsel so instructed can attend and watch the case on behalf of their client, but they cannot conduct the prosecution Ord. 8 C. No. 31 In no Court is a pleader (in the meaning of the Code) appointed by or on behalf of the complainant and not by or for Government entitled to conduct the prosecution in a trial as a matter of right 29 P. R. 1885. See Notes to s. 270

* * * * *

494. Any Public Prosecutor* may, with the consent of the Court, in cases tried by jury before the return of the verdict and in other cases before the judgment is pronounced withdraw from the prosecution of any person, † “either generally or in respect of any one or more of the offences for which he is tried,” and upon such withdrawal—

Effect of withdrawal from prosecution.

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged ‡ “in respect of such offence or offences,”

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required he shall be acquitted ‡ “in respect of such offence or offences”

Notes—1 Section does not apply to security proceedings under Chap VII.—Ss. 494-495 apply only when the proceedings could end in an acquittal or discharge of the accused. Security proceedings do not contemplate the framing of a charge at all and as the result of the proceedings neither an order of discharge nor of acquittal is to be passed. Hence ss. 494-495 do not apply to security proceedings 38 M. 315. See Note 10 to s. 430

2 Prisoner charged or committed to Sessions must be acquitted and not discharged.—When a person is committed to the Sessions on a charge he cannot be discharged but must be acquitted under cl. (b) 12 M. 33. Certain persons were charged by a District Magistrate with the offence of robbery. The complainant moved the High Court praying that inasmuch as the charge of robbery was against more than five persons, and he had acted as a witness against the accused, an order of acquittal should be made. The High Court refused to make such an order, holding that the accused was charged with robbery, and thus being so the only order the Magistrate could pass if he permitted that charge to be withdrawn was an order of acquittal under cl. (b) of this section and the High Court declined to make any order, 1904 A. W. N. 277 = 2 A. L. J. 30 = 2 Cr. L. J. 21

3 Public Prosecutor can withdraw either generally or in respect of anyone or more of the charges.—A Public Prosecutor could under the old section only withdraw all the charges under trial or none. He was not competent to withdraw one only of the charges. But under the new amendment he can either withdraw generally or in respect of anyone or more of the charges.

* The words “appointed by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government” were omitted by Act XVIII of 1913
† The words “were inserted by 1884”
‡ The words “were added by 1884”

4. Practice—Reasons for withdrawal of charge.—If the Public Prosecutor withdraws a charge and the Court approves of it, the accused shall be acquitted. Neither the Public Prosecutor nor the Judge is called on to give any reasons for his action, 5 M. L. T. 216. But see 23 C. W. N. 69; 48 C. 1103.

On a permission for withdrawal under s. 494 it is not necessary to record reasons for such permission, 2 Pat. 708.

But in a Rangoon case it is held that prosecutors, with the exception of the Advocate-General may not withdraw from a prosecution without giving reasons and without the consent of the Court. In withholding or according consent the Court is acting in a judicial capacity and it must record its reasons, 1 Rang. 756 (23 C. W. N. 69 follo ref).

5. Withdrawal after charge bars re-trial.—An order of acquittal on the withdrawal of the prosecution after charge is a valid acquittal to which s. 403 applies, 9 N. L. R. 26 = 14 Cr. L. J. 135. See Note 26 to s. 403. Second trial and conviction after such discharge is illegal. Where the accused was charged with an offence under s. 304, I P. C., and on the Public Prosecutor having, with the consent of the Court, withdrawn from the prosecution, was acquitted and discharged by the Sessions Court after taking the opinion of the assessors on the evidence recorded in the case, held, that the Public Prosecutor having withdrawn from the prosecution with the consent of the Court, an acquittal should have been recorded without taking the opinion of the assessors. An acquittal was a matter of right to the accused, whatever the opinion of the assessors might be, Ratanlal 307.

5-A. Summons-case Public Prosecutor withdrawing from prosecution.—In a summons-case, the Public Prosecutor withdrew from the prosecution before the accused had been served and the accused was acquitted under s. 494 of the Code. Held, under s. 429, that the Rule of English Law requiring the accused to have been tried as well as acquitted in order to bar further proceeding which is embodied in section 494 of the present Code is inapplicable to the statutory acquittals subsequently introduced into the Code, i.e. the sections now numbered 494, 247, 345, which are intended to bar further proceedings whether the accused can be said to have been tried or not, 40 M. 976.

6. Further inquiry should not be directed when charge properly withdrawn.—When it is not shown that the order of discharge under this section when it was made was not a proper order, no further inquiry should be directed under s. 437, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 74 = 12 Cr. L. J. 440. Fresh proceedings may be instituted if further evidence is forthcoming.

7. Revision.—(i) High Court cannot revise order of acquittal—The High Court has no power to interfere with an acquittal under this section, 5 M. L. T. 216.

(ii) Can High Court interfere with discretion of Magistrate?—Quære whether the High Court has power to interfere in revision with the discretion of a Magistrate in giving his consent to the withdrawal of the prosecution under s. 494, (1914) M. W. N. 776 = 15 Cr. L. J. 641.

8. Accused against whom charge is withdrawn competent witness against co-accused—Where several accused were charged before the Magistrate under the Gamburg Act (Bom. IV of 1877) and before any evidence had been let in, the Public Prosecutor withdrew, with the consent of the Magistrate, from the prosecution of two of the accused, and they were discharged and they were examined as witnesses for the prosecution held following 5 Bom. H. C. R. Cr. 1 and 1 B 610–619 that they were competent witnesses. See 47 C. 154. Per WHITWORTH, J., dissenting that 'the accused were discharged solely that they might be used as witnesses, and not upon a consideration of the evidence which affected them. The consent of the Court was not based upon judicial considerations and therefore the accused were not competent witnesses,' 23 B. 422; 47 C. 154.

9. Withdrawal of prosecution against an accomplice.—A Local Government in India has no power to tender a conditional pardon to an accomplice for the purpose of his being examined as a competent witness, against others accused with him, 33 C. 1353, where 1 B 610 and 10 C. W. N. 847 are followed. See Note 8 at p. 850. An accomplice if not an accused under trial in the same case, is a competent witness, and may be examined on oath. The prosecution must be withdrawn and the accused discharged under this section before he would become a competent witness. But if the Court purporting to act under this section, sanctions the withdrawal of the prosecution but omits to record an order of discharge, and the accused continues to be kept in custody, his position is in no way changed from that of an accused, 23 C. 1353 where 2 A. 260, 16 B. 661, 23 B 213, 7 W R. 44, 10 C L. R. 553 20 A 426 3 B H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 59, R v. Rudd Cowp. 331 (1773) are referred to. But where the accused person is in fact discharged from custody by virtue of a withdrawal of his prosecution and the Magistrate trying the case takes judicial notice of such withdrawal the omission to use the formal word "I discharge this accused" would be at most an irregularity curable under s. 537 (a). Where there has been an effective withdrawal of the prosecution against an accomplice and his position as a witness could not be adversely affected even though the Court did not comply with the clear provisions of s. 494 (a), held that the accomplice was a competent witness though no formal order of discharge was passed 7 A. L. J. 85 = 11 Cr. L. J. 21, 18 C. W. N. 1219 = 15 Cr. L. J. 693 where 33 C. 1353 is distinguished. See also 5 C. L. J. 271 = 5 Cr. L. J. 142 and Notes 18-20 at p. 740. See also 18 Bom. L. R. 268 = 17 Cr. L. J. 256.

495. (1) Any Magistrate inquiring into or trying any case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than an officer of Police * below a rank to be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf † but no person other than the Advocate-General Standing Counsel Government Solicitor, Public Prosecutor or other officer generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf shall be entitled to do so without such permission.

(2) Any such officers shall have the like power of withdrawing from the prosecution as is provided by section 494 and the provisions of that section shall apply to any withdrawal by such officer.

(3) Any person conducting the prosecution may do so personally or by a pleader.

(4) An officer of Police shall not be permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken any part in the investigation into the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted.

Notes.—1 An officer of Police, not below a rank to be prescribed by the Local Government.—IV MADRAS Police-officers not below the rank of a first-grade Head Constable in charge of a Police-station have been empowered to conduct prosecutions. (G. O. No. 1564 Judicial, dated 19th July 1887) IN THE PUNJAB no Police-officer below the rank of a Deputy Inspector is permitted to conduct a prosecution. (Punjab Gazette 1887 Part I page 84) IN BENGAL (Pub. Man. Vol. I page 271) IN ASSAM (W. N. page 186) IN THE UNITED PROVINCES (Id. page 215) and IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCE (Central Provinces Gazette 1893 Part II page 131 W. N. page 155) no Police-officer below the rank of a Sub-Inspector has been authorized to conduct the prosecution, and IN BURMA an officer not below the rank of a Sergeant of Police (Burma Gazette 1886 Part I page 360).

2. Permission granted to unqualified persons to appear for prosecution.—The words "any person" include persons other than certificated pleaders. It is however discretionary with the Criminal Courts in each case to permit such persons to conduct the prosecution.—W. H. C. Pro 2nd September 1882. The High Court, as a Court of Review, has no power to revise an order passed by a Magistrate in the exercise of his discretion under this section permitting a person to conduct a prosecution, Weir II, 655; 1914 M. W. N. 778 = 11 Cr. L. J. 641. In P. R. 1905 the Punjab Chief Court in declining to interfere with the order of a Magistrate refusing permission to allow the prosecution to be conducted by a pleader remarked, that it is not improper for the District Magistrate if he considered that the too frequent appearance of pleaders for the prosecution in petty criminal cases was detrimental to the interests of justice to advise Courts subordinate to him by a general circular on the subject. See also 12 M. L. J. 354 = Weir II, 421 and Weir II 400.

3. Private Prosecutor can do so only with permission of Court.—With the exception of the Advocate-General Standing Counsel Government Solicitor or other officer generally or specially authorized by the Local Government in that behalf, no person whether Counsel or Attorney can claim the right to conduct the prosecution of any criminal case without the permission of the Presidency Magistrate, 6 C. 59, 17 Cr. L. J. 498.

4. Private Prosecutor may appear personally or by pleader.—Any person whether a private complainant or not, when permitted to conduct a case as prosecutor may instruct Counsel to appear 11 B. R. C. R. 107.

* As to conduct of prosecution by Police-officers in Upper Burma, note that nothing in this section, see Regulation V of 1902, Schedule XIV (Upper Burma Criminals, Just. & Rules) in British Baluchistan see the British Baluchistan Criminal Justice Regulation VIII of 1904 Schedule, s. 17. See also s. 115 of the Indian Railways Act IX of 1890 as to conduct of the prosecution in Railway cases.

† The words "in the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council" were omitted by Act XXVIII of 1920.

5. Reason for the exclusion of Police investigating officer from prosecuting.—In all important cases, and especially in cases of murder and dacoity, the Police-officer making the investigation should be examined as a witness, regarding the circumstances of the investigation. It is generally important to the trying authority to know why, where and when the accused persons were arrested. It is often important to ascertain what the witnesses said when they were first questioned by the Police, and whether such statements agree with those subsequently made by the witnesses in Court, Ratanlal 173. See also 18 W. R. 18; 8 B 534

6. Conduct of prosecution by investigating Police-officer improper, but trial not invalidated.—Where a Police Inspector got information that persons were carrying on a wagering business and having satisfied himself, obtained a warrant under s. 6 of the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1837 and effected the arrest of the accused and the seizure of their books, held, that the Police Inspector had taken a part in the investigation within the meaning of sub-sec. (4) of this section though he may not have examined any of the witnesses, and consequently, the Police Inspector was not qualified to take any part in the proceedings, except as a witness. Where the Police Inspector thus disqualified is allowed to conduct the prosecution, it is a grave irregularity, but unless the accused were prejudiced the irregularity does not invalidate the trial but is cured by s. 537, 26 B 533.

7. Quere whether stranger may be permitted to conduct prosecution.—‘It is doubtful whether the words ‘any person’ in s. 495 would include an absolute stranger who had no connection in the remotest degree with the prosecution and whose desire to help the prosecution was based on a personal grudge only’ 11 A. L. J. 313 = 14 Cr. L. J. 389. In this case the High Court set aside the order granting permission

8. “Any such officer.”—Withdrawal by unauthorized person.—These words in cl. (2) refer only to the “Advocate-General, Standing Counsel, Government Solicitor, Public Prosecutor or other officer generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf” mentioned in sub-sec. (1). If an Advocate, privately engaged by the complainant and permitted by the Magistrate to appear for the prosecution with draws from the prosecution the effect provided in s. 494 does not follow in other words the trial proceeds 1908 U. B. Cr. P. G. 15 = 10 Cr. L. J. 34. Even if a Police Inspector is specially permitted to conduct a prosecution under cl. (1) he would not be competent to withdraw the case under cl. (2) 1911 M. W. N. 108 = 9 M. L. T. 203 = 11 Cr. L. J. 722. But see 46 G. 700. Where on the day appointed for the hearing and before the inquiry, a Police Inspector appeared and said that he withdrew the case against the accused and the Magistrate thereupon discharged the accused, held, that the Magistrate had no power to pass such an order and further enquiry was ordered. The Police Inspector had not been permitted to conduct the prosecution under s. 495 and if he was not so permitted, he would have had no power to withdraw the case under s. 495 (2) even if he came within the purview of the words ‘any such officer’ in that clause 1911 M. W. N. 106. An acquittal following on the withdrawal by an unauthorized officer is of no effect, 10 Cr. L. J. 501 (M)

A Prosecuting Inspector cannot be regarded as a Public Prosecutor for purposes of withdrawal under s. 495 (2) 46 A. 88.

CHAPTER XXXIX.*

OF BAIL

496. When any person other than a person accused of a non bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a Police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer or at any stage of the proceedings before such Court to give bail, such person shall be released on bail

Provided that such officer or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance in due season after provided

† Provided, further, that nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to any person arrested under section 107, sub-section (4), or section 117, sub-section (3)

* The provision of this Chapter and of Chapter XLIII shall so far as may be apply to bail given under the provisions of the Indian Railways Act IX of 1920

† This provision was added by Act XVIII of 1923

Notes.—1. See s 4 (b) for definition of "bailable" and "non-bailable;" and s 4 (p) for definition of "an officer in charge of a Police-station," s 55 for an example of an arrest of a person not accused of an offence, s 86 for the taking of bail by a Magistrate, s 60, etc., for the production before a Magistrate and see s 514 for forfeiture of bail bond

1-A. For form of bond and bail-bond.—See s 555 and Schedule V, Form Nos. III, XXV, XLII.

Court-fees—Bail-bonds exempt.—Under s 19, cl xv of the Court-fees Act VII of 1870, bail-bonds in criminal cases, recognizances to prosecute or give evidence, and recognizances for personal appearance or otherwise are exempted from Court fees.

2. General nature of the right to be admitted to bail.—"Bail" is not intended to be punitive, but only to secure the attendance of the prisoner at the trial. Per RUSSELL, L.C.J. In re Charles Rose, 14 Times L.R. 215. See also re Barronet, (1852) 1 El. v Bl. 1; Reg v Scaife, (1851) 9 Dowl. 553; 2 C.W.N. 125. The detention of an accused under trial is not intended to be penal, but its object is to secure attendance, 35 C. 174, but see Note 2 to s 498. The seriousness of an alleged offence and some evidence of its perpetration by the accused would, however, justify detention. "We may express a hope that Magistrates will always be lenient to accused persons at any rate, until they are convicted." Per PARSONS, J., 22 B. 549. A Magistrate is not competent to refuse bail, unless the law sanctions such refusal, 1 C. L. R. 130.

3. Difference between 'recognizance' and 'bail.'—S 496 coupled with Form XLII of Sch. V contemplates two kinds of security, namely, (1) the simple recognizance of the principal and (2) security with sureties. Where an Act provides for release on 'bail' that means 'security with sureties' and this is the meaning which has been attached to the word in the practice and procedure of the Courts as distinct from the simple recognizance of the principal, 15 C.W.N. 736 = 12 Cr. L. J. 358. 'Bail' means the freeing or setting at liberty one arrested or imprisoned upon others becoming sureties by recognizance for his appearance at a day and place certainly assigned, he also entering into his own recognizance. The party is delivered (or bailed) into the hands of the sureties and is accounted by law to be in their custody, they may, if they will, surrender him to the Court before the date assigned and free themselves from further responsibility.

6. Bail may be claimed as of right by person not accused of non-bailable offence.—It must be understood that for every bailable offence, bail is right and not a favour, detention in the lock up is the alternative, not the original order. The bail demanded should never be excessive with reference to the social status of the party. The amount of bail and the offence charged with, the section under which it is punishable, should always be stated on the face of the order directing the accused to be detained in the lock up. Bail may be tendered and must be accepted at any time before conviction. Punjab Cr. Vol II, p 239. Arrested under the proviso of s 114, applied to be released on bail, but the District Magistrate trying the case refused to bail the accused on the ground of expediency and his pleader's inability to show a provision in the Code how a bail could be claimed. Held, that under this section bail may be claimed as of right not only by one accused of bailable offence, but by "any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence" who is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a Police-station or appears or is brought before a Court, 6 C. P. Cr. 31. It has, however, been held in 36 M. 474, that s 498 does not give an absolute right to bail to any person who is not charged with a non bailable offence and that section must be read along with other provisions of the Code giving a special right of detention to a Court. Therefore the provision in s 107, cl (4) that a Magistrate before whom a person is sent under that section (may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of inquiry) is not subject to or controlled by s. 498. See 14 C.W.N. 138. Notes 11 and 7 below. See 9 B. L. R. 138 = 17 Cr. L. J. 77. See now the new proviso to the section which expressly says that powers under s 107, cl. (4) are not subject to the operation of ss 496 and 117, cl. (3).

8. Who may release on bail.—(i) See ss 57 (2), 59 (3), 60, 63, 169, 170, 496, 497, for powers of Police officer to release on bail, (ii) ss 76, 86, 91, 167, 186, 217, 426, 427, 466, 475, 476, 477, 478, 496, 497 for the general powers of Courts to release on bail, (iii) s 432 for bail by a Presidency Magistrate on making a reference, (iv) s 438 for bail by District Magistrate when making reference, (v) ss 432, 433 for powers of Sessions Judge to release on bail, and (vi) ss 426, 434, 498 for powers of High Court.

8. Leaving decision as to sufficiency of bail to Police illegal.—The practice of leaving to the Police the decision as to the sufficiency of bail, when bail has been ordered by the Court, is contrary to law. The duty of deciding as to its sufficiency or otherwise is with the Court itself and not with the Police, 15 C. 455, though the Court may call for a report from the Police. Cf Notes 89—91 at p. 203.

7. Bail and detention in custody in cases under Chapter VIII.—See ss. 107 (4) 123 (2) and 114, Notes 33 and 34 at pp 161 and 162 and Notes 79—88 at pp 202-203. Where a person appeared in answer to a summons requiring him to find security for good behaviour for one year, and the Magistrate adjourned the hearing of the case in order that the accused person might produce evidence as to character, held that the Magistrate was empowered to take a personal recognizance from the accused person for his appearance at the adjourned hearing. 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 366; 12 Cr. L. J. 533 (B). See Note 4. The words 'at any stage of the proceedings' indicate that there is nothing to confine the operation of this section to a period anterior to the hearing. See 17 Cr. L. J. 77. See now the new proviso to s. 496 which expressly lays down that ss. 107, cl. (4) and 117, cl. (3) are not subject to section 496.

8. Magistrate may make himself personally responsible if bail improperly refused.—If bail be improperly refused, the Magistrate in addition to an action for damages will be liable under s. 168 or s. 342, I P C. But the refusing or accepting of bail is a judicial and not merely a ministerial duty (contra see 29 M. 100), and a mistake in the performance of that duty without malice, will not be sufficient to sustain an action. 2 M. H. C. R. 396

9. Money may be deposited instead of executing bond.—S. 513 permits of a deposit of a sum of money or Government Promissory Notes to be given, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, in lieu of executing a bond.

10. Bond should be by accused and not by agent, when personal attendance of accused dispensed with.—Where the personal attendance of an accused person is dispensed with a recognizance bond if deemed necessary, should be taken from him and not from his agent though he may appear by agent. 5 B H C. R. Cr. Ca. 64.

11. Section applies to Appellate Court.—Reasons for refusing bail must be given.—The petitioners who were convicted of bailable offences appealed to the District Magistrate and applied for bail. The District Magistrate admitted the appeal but made the order "bail refused" on the bail petition without giving any reasons. The petitioners then moved the High Court. Held the fact that no reasons were given was ground sufficient for the granting of bail by the High Court. Held further, that as the District Magistrate could only have acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction as regards bail under s. 496 he was obliged to grant bail under that section. 14 G. W. N. 138

497. (1) When any person accused of any non bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a Police-station or appears or is brought before a Court he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of* 'an offence punishable with death or transportation for life'

When bail may be taken in case of non bailable offence.

† Provided that the Court may direct that any person under the age of sixteen years or any woman or any sick or infirm person accused of such an offence be released on bail

— (2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed † 'a non bailable offence' but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall pending such inquiry be released on bail or at the discretion of such officer or Court on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as here after provided

§ "(3) An officer or a Court releasing any person on bail under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall record in writing his or its reasons for so doing

§ '(4) If, at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non bailable offence and before judgment is delivered, the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused if he is

* The words — were substituted for the words "the offence of which he is accused" by Act XVIII of 1923

† The words — were substituted for the words "such offence" by ibid

‡ This proviso was added by ibid.

§ These sub-sections were added by Act XVIII of 1923

in custody on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered

* (5) A High Court or Court of Session and, in the case of a person released by itself any other Court may cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested and may commit him to custody.

Note.—Referring to the amendment of the section the Select Committee say—

"It was pressed upon us that the provisions as to bail in non-bailable cases are much too stringent. One suggestion made to us was that in s. 497 We should delete all words after 'may be released on bail' in sub-sec. (1) and the whole of sub-sec. (2). The result would have been to give all Courts full discretion in the matter of allowing bail in non-bailable cases and we felt generally that this was going too far. What we have done is to allow the Court or Police-officer to release on bail in a non-bailable case unless there appear to be reasonable ground for believing that the accused has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation and as some safeguard against this we have provided for a review by the Sessions Court or the High Court of any order admitting to bail in a non-bailable case. Some of us—including all the official members of the Joint Committee—are of opinion that this decision goes too far and that in the end it will not tend towards the administration of justice."

Notes.—1. See Chapter V A for arrest without warrant s. 170 etc., for appearance before Magistrate s. 167 for detention in Police custody and s. 344 for remanding accused into custody.

2. General rule in non bailable cases.—Under the old law the general rule was that bail could not be granted in respect of non-bailable offences except under special circumstances (8 Bom. L. R. 420 = 36 G. 158). But under the new amendment the intention of the Legislature seems to be to make the rule with regard to the granting of bail less stringent and now except in the case of offences punishable with death or transportation for life an accused person can be ordinarily admitted to bail.

With regard to persons under the age of sixteen or any woman or any sick or infirm person the Legislature has further relaxed the stringency of the law with regard to the granting of bail even in the case of offences punishable with death or transportation for life.

3. A Meaning of the words "punishable with death or transportation for life."—The phrase "death or transportation for life" in s. 497 does not extend to offences punishable with transportation for life only but means only those offences for which death and transportation for life are alternative sentences. The case in 2 Rang 546 which by implication ruled that the phrase "punishable with death or transportation for life" covers offences punishable only with transportation for life, is disputed from 3 Rang 538.

3. Section does not control powers to defer taking of evidence.—This section assumes that evidence has been taken, and provides for the release of the accused on bail, if the evidence so taken is not such as to raise a strong presumption of the guilt of the accused person but this section does not import that the taking of the evidence may not be deferred, 6 M. 63 at p. 65. See 11 B. L. R. Appx. 8. It is, however the right of an accused person to demand that the charge against him should be tried without any unreasonable delay and such delay will disprove the Court to grant the bail, 36 G. 168.

4. Proceedings involving determination as to bail are judicial.—The proceedings in which it has to be determined whether an accused person has to be admitted to bail by a Magistrate is a judicial proceeding and as such cognizable by the High Court in its revisional powers, 6 M. 63 at p. 65.

5. Bail cannot be demanded when accused is discharged.—Where a Magistrate after inquiry comes to the conclusion that the case against the accused is not proved, and discharges him, he has no authority to demand bail. It is only in cases where further inquiry is pending and the accused has not been discharged that bail can be demanded under this section 10 W. R. 34 = 1 B. L. R. (S.N.) 26. Bail cannot be demanded merely because more evidence might turn up.

6. Sub-Magistrate's order as to bail not subject to revision by District Magistrate.—The discretionary power vested in a Magistrate by this section is not revisable by the District Magistrate. If he considers the order as to bail passed by a Subordinate Magistrate to be wrong he should report it to the High Court. He ought not to have made a transfer the mode of giving effect to his opinion that the order was wrong 22 B. 549. A District Magistrate has no power to order re-arrest of a person released on bail by a Sub-Divisional Magistrate, 4 Bar. L. T. 70 = 12 Cr. L. J. 248.

7. Revision of bail order by High Court.—Where a Sessions Judge, after considering the evidence comes to the conclusion that there are no reasonable grounds for believing the accused guilty, and admits him to bail, the High Court will not go beyond the finding and discharge the bail, either under s. 439 or under any other provision of law, 10 M. L. J. 411. See 1 C. L. R. 130; 5 A. L. J. 419 = 1908 A. W. N. 195 = 8 Cr. L. J. 49. But even where both the Sessions Judge and trying Magistrate have refused bail it is open to the High Court to grant bail 36 C. 174. See Note 2 to s. 498 and Note 54 to s. 439, now under sub-sec. (5) a High Court or a Court of Session has power to revise an order of bail, and the Court granting bail can review its own order.

8. Remand order to be made in presence of accused.—An order for remand should be passed in the presence of the accused person. To remand is to re-commit to custody and therefore as a magisterial commitment requires the presence of the prisoner, his remand or re-commitment also requires that presence so as to give him an opportunity of applying to be admitted to bail, 4 B. L. R. Appx. I. M. H. C. Pro., 10th June, 1867. See Note 16 at p. 883.

9. Magistrate may cancel bail under sub-sec. (3), but must give reasons.—If it appears subsequently on the production of further evidence that a case has been made out against the accused released on bail, it is competent for the Magistrate to declare the bail bonds cancelled and to direct the accused to surrender, 10 G. W. N. 1093 = 4 Cr. L. J. 221; 36 C. 166 at p. 173; 36 C. 174. Reasons must be recorded for cancelling the bail, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 133 = 12 Cr. L. J. 503. Where an accused person had been let out on his bond it was held in 38 M. 1088 that a warrant issued for his arrest without recording reasons was illegal. See now sub-sec. (3) as amended.

10. Duty of Court to release on bail when further remand applied for.—See 6 M. 63 and 69, 36 C. 174, 11 N. L. R. 162 = 16 Cr. L. J. 705 and Notes 18—20 at pp. 883-884. The High Court would be very cautious in interfering with the discretion of the Magistrate in a case, where the prosecution, after the inquiry has begun before the Magistrate, does not tender evidence that the accused has some guilty connection with the non bailable offence, Ratanlal 892.

11. Validity of bond to appear before Police.—The wording of ss. 499 and 514 makes it abundantly clear that a Police-officer in charge of a Police-station has power to make it a condition of a bond that the accused person shall attend before the Police at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and that if he fails so to attend and a Magistrate of the first class is satisfied that the bond has been forfeited, any person bound by the bond can be called upon to pay the penalty thereof. To hold that in such cases the bond can be conditioned merely for appearance before a Court would render nugatory the provisions which enable the Police to take bail-bonds from accused persons during the course of the inquiries and would moreover make meaningless the provisions of s. 499 and s. 514. 11 C. 77 dissented from it it intended to lay down a general proposition that a bail bond under s. 497 cannot be conditioned for the appearance of the accused before the Police, 22 P. R. 1913 = 6 P. L. R. 1914 = 6 P. W. R. 1914 = 14 Cr. L. J. 631. See Note 4 to s. 514.

12. Bail under the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 1908.—See Note 5 to s. 498.

13. American cases.—If facts do not sustain the charge of murder contained in a warrant bail may be allowed.—People v. The Sheriff of Westchester, 1 Park 189. In a case of a man slaughter, where there is no reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt, bail will not be allowed.—Ex-parte, Taylor, 5 Cow. 39. But even in a capital case bail ought to be allowed, unless the proof be evident and the presumption great. People v. Perry, 8 Abb. 27; People v. Hyler, 2 Park 570. That a case has been twice tried and the jury in both cases disagreed presents a proper case for admitting to bail.—People v. Perry, 8 Abb. Pr. (N.S.) 27.

498. The amount of every bond executed under this chapter shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive, and the High Court or Court of Session may, in any case, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not direct that any person be admitted to bail, or that the bail required by a Police-officer or Magistrate be reduced.

Power to direct admission to bail or reduction of bail

Notes.—1. Power and scope of High Court and Sessions Court to bail.—The High Court has concurrent jurisdiction with that of a trying Magistrate and not merely revisional jurisdiction, 36 C. 174.—Per MITRA, J., at p. 177. The provisions of this section are not controlled by those of s. 497, and it is open to the High Court or a Court of Session, to admit any person to bail for good and sufficient cause, the general rule, however, in respect of non bailable offences is, that bail is not to be taken except in special circumstances, Weir II, 457. An accused should not, however, be admitted to bail, where the probability of his conviction being wrong depends on a mere technical ground Ratanlal 430.

The provisions of s 498 of the Code are particularly wide and the Sessions Judge has power thereunder to admit to bail a person whose case has been referred under s 123 (2), pending the hearing of the reference, 50 C. 969.

(i) Even before case is put up before Magistrate—In granting bail, the High Court and the Court of Session have unlimited powers of judicial discretion. They can exercise the power soon after the arrest of the accused by the Police, even before the case is sent up to a Magistrate, 7 Bur. L. R. 86.

(ii) Accused committed for trial may be let on bail—The Sessions Judge has power to admit to bail the accused committed for trial on a charge of a non bailable offence, 1882 A. W. N. 234 (F.B)

(iii) Even convicted person may be let on bail—S 498 is not confined to cases prior to conviction. In 1908 A. W. N. 195 = 5 A. L. J. 419, it was stated that s 498 gives the High Court and the Court of Session very wide powers to admit to bail, even where an accused person has been convicted and has not appealed. Under s 390 of the 1872 Code it was held in 1 A. 151 (F.B) and 1882 A. W. N. 234 (F.B) that bail could not be granted in the case of a convicted person but the grounds on which the decisions rest are no longer tenable by the changes introduced by the Legislature. But see Note 3

2. Principles which should guide High Courts in granting or refusing bail.—The main question for consideration in determining matters of bail is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused guilty of the offences charged. Other considerations must also arise in deciding this question, and one of these, which has always guided English and Indian Courts, is whether there are any grounds for supposing that the accused would abscond.—Per MITRA, J, in 36 C. 174. But see 36 C. 166, where it is laid down that in exercising its discretion under s 498 the High Court should not confine its attention only to the question, whether the prisoner is likely to abscond or not. There may be other circumstances, which may also affect the question of granting bail to accused persons charged with crimes of a grave character. The English cases are not necessarily a safe guide in interpreting sections of the Code. "As the High Court, our power to grant bail 'in any case' as given by s. 498 is quite unfettered, though we consider that in exercising our discretion we ought to take into consideration the limitations on the power of other authorities to grant bail imposed by s. 497, 37 C. 412. 'We think that the rule laid down in s 497 for the guidance of Courts other than High Court is a rule founded upon justice and equity and one which should be followed by us as well as by every other Court unless anything appears to the contrary. The extended powers given to the High Court under s 498 are certainly not to be used to get rid of this very reasonable and proper provision of the law,' 42 C. 25. See also Note 2 to s 496 and Note 2 under s 497

(i) Bail pending inquiry before Magistrate—An accused person ought to be released on bail until reasonable grounds are made out on the evidence, for believing him to be guilty. When a Magistrate issued warrants for the arrest of certain persons for a non bailable offence, against whom there were no reasonable grounds on which he might believe that they were guilty of the offence for which another person was accused on facts inconsistent with their guilt, the Calcutta High Court directed that on their arrest, they should be admitted to bail, 10 C. W. N. 1093 = 4 Cr. L. J. 221. Where there has been unreasonable delay in trying the accused and no evidence is adduced after remand, the High Court will be disposed to grant bail, 36 C. 156. It is no doubt the case that a High Court has absolute discretion in the matter of granting bail and is not bound by the provisions of s. 497, but the Legislature having placed the initial stage of dealing with crimes with Magistrates and having in fact enacted that persons accused of non bailable offences shall not be released on bail except under the terms of s 497, a High Court is bound to follow the general law as a rule, and not to depart from it except under very special circumstances, especially so in the initial stages of a case, 6 L. B. R. 172 = 14 Cr. L. J. 171.

(ii) When Sessions Judge has been moved—The High Court will not ordinarily interfere where a Session Judge acts with due care in the exercise of his discretion, 5 A. L. J. 419 = 1903 A. W. N. 195 = 8 Cr. L. J. 49.

3. Jurisdiction of Sessions Court to release on bail person convicted by itself pending appeal.—Where a Sessions Judge after convicting the accused, released them on bail pending their appeal to the High Court, held, he had no jurisdiction to do so in spite of the use of the words "any person" in this section. The High Court can do so, but not the convicting Court itself. The latter Court has given its final opinion that the accused is guilty and deserves imprisonment. It cannot then consistently with the principle of finality indicated in 10 B 176 (F.B.) vary its own order by admitting the convicts to bail. The word "any" in the section must be read, subject to the limitation that is implied in that principle. The section indicates generally the powers of a Sessions Judge to release on bail all prisoners, who, he thinks, may be found to have been wrongly convicted, and whose case he can either deal with himself or has power (s. 438) to refer to the High Court. The section does not give him power in any way to alter or vary his own order, 4 Bom. L. R. 55. See also 15 P. R. 1903. Contra, see Note (iii). As to rulings under the old Code where the language employed was "any accused person," see 1 A. 151 (F.B.), 1 B. R. L. Ap. Cr. 7; 23 W. R. 40 at p. 42.

4 Power of High Court to admit to bail, pending appeal to Privy Council.—Where a person who was convicted at the Criminal Sessions of the Madras High Court, which conviction was reviewed by the High Court under s. 26 of the Letters Patent obtained from the Privy Council special leave to appeal and the Privy Council had on the petitioner's application for bail expressed the opinion, that the matter of bail should be decided by the High Court, and an application was accordingly made to the High Court, held, that the High Court had jurisdiction to release the accused on bail, pending the decision of the Privy Council, and having regard to the rule laid down by the Judicial Committee in ex parte Carew, L. R. 1897 A. C. 719, as to the circumstances in which an appeal in a criminal matter would be admitted by the Privy Council held that the accused ought to be released on bail, 24 M. 161.

But the Punjab Chief Court held that after deciding a criminal case, whether on Original Appellate or Revision side and upholding the conviction of a prisoner, it has no power under s. 498 to the Code to suspend the operation of his sentence and to release him on bail on his asserting his intention to appeal to His Majesty in Council, because (a) the section does not refer to a case where the Court is functus officio, but refers to cases where the Court has still some power left as regards the sentence of the accused, (b) the Criminal Procedure Code does not provide for an appeal to the Privy Council and does not provide, for the release of the accused appealing to the Privy Council 15 P. R. 1903 = 19 P. W. R. 1908 = 8 Cr. L. J. 89 where 4 Bom. L. R. 55 is referred to and 24 M. 161 distinguished.

The High Court has no power, after disposal on revision of a case tried by a Magistrate, to grant bail under s. 498 of the Code or cl 41 of the Letters Patent, 1865 in order that a petition may be made to the Privy Council for special leave to appeal or until such petition has been disposed of by the latter, per RICHARDSON, J.—The High Court has no inherent jurisdiction to liberate an accused on bail. 50 C. 585.

5 Special powers of High Court to grant bail—

(i) Coroners Act, 1871.—In 31 C. 1, it was held that after a Coroner has drawn up an inquisition against a person under Act IV of 1871, and committed him to prison the High Court alone is empowered to release such person on bail, but now by the amending Act IV of 1908 the Magistrate to whom the accused is sent under s. 26 has power to release on bail.

(ii) Extradition Act XV of 1903.—See Appendix II. The Extradition Act provides for bail to be furnished by person accused of certain crimes and the matter is one which must be regulated by this Code. The High Court has the fullest discretion in the matter, but regard must be had to the provisions of s. 496 and the circumstances of the case, 15 C. W. N. 736 = 12 Cr. L. J. 358.

(iii) Sindh Frontier Regulation III of 1892.—An application for bail on behalf of an accused who is being tried by a Jirgah of Elders under s. 8 of the Sindh Frontier Regulation does not lie to the High Court under s. 498 58 L. R. 105 = 12 Cr. L. J. 368.

(iv) Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, ss 12 and 14.—See Appendix XII. Where the provisions of Part I of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act have been applied to proceedings before a Magistrate in respect of an offence, the Sessions Judge ceases to have jurisdiction to grant bail under s. 498 the exercise of such jurisdiction being inconsistent with the special procedure prescribed in the said part. The proper Court to apply to for bail in such a case is the High Court whose power to admit to bail is not affected by the Act, 37 C. 439. But the High Court in exercising its discretionary power under that section, will take into consideration the terms of s. 12 of the Act, 37 C. 412.

(v) S 50 of the Indian Insolvent Act.—The Criminal Procedure Code has no application to such a case, 17 B. 334.

6. No Letters Patent appeal against order of single Judge refusing bail.—An order refusing bail to an accused is an order in a criminal trial. It is not a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies against such an order of a single Judge 19 M. L. J. 478 = 11 Cr. L. J. 279.

respect of non bailable offences is, that bail is not to be taken except in special circumstances, Weir II, 657. An accused should not, however, be admitted to bail, where the probability of his conviction being wrong depends on a mere technical ground Ratanlal 480.

The provisions of s. 498 of the Code are particularly wide and the Sessions Judge has power thereunder to admit to bail a person whose case has been referred under s. 123 (2), pending the hearing of the reference, 30 C. 969.

(i) Even before case is put up before Magistrate—In granting bail, the High Court and the Court of Session have unlimited powers of judicial discretion. They can exercise the power soon after the arrest of the accused by the Police, even before the case is sent up to a Magistrate, 7 Bur. L. R. 86.

(ii) Accused committed for trial may be let on bail—The Sessions Judge has power to admit to bail the accused committed for trial on a charge of a non bailable offence, 1882 A. W. N. 234 (F.B.)

(iii) Even convicted person may be let on bail—S. 498 is not confined to cases prior to conviction. In 1908 A. W. N. 195 = 5 A. L. J. 419, it was stated that s. 498 gives the High Court and the Court of Session very wide powers to admit to bail, even where an accused person has been convicted and has not appealed. Under s. 390 of the 1872 Code it was held in 1 A. 151 (F.B.) and 1882 A. W. N. 234 (F.B.) that bail could not be granted in the case of a convicted person but the grounds on which the decisions rest are no longer tenable by the changes introduced by the Legislature. But see Note 3

2. Principles which should guide High Courts in granting or refusing bail.—The main question for consideration in determining matters of bail is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused guilty of the offences charged. Other considerations must also arise in deciding this question, and one of these, which has always guided English and Indian Courts, is whether there are any grounds for supposing that the accused would abscond.—Per MITRA J., in 35 C. 174. But see 36 C. 166, where it is laid down that in exercising its discretion under s. 498 the High Court should not confine its attention only to the question, whether the prisoner is likely to abscond or not. There may be other circumstances, which may also affect the question of granting bail to accused persons charged with crimes of a grave character. The English cases are not necessarily a safe guide in interpreting sections of the Code. "As the High Court, our power to grant bail 'in any case' as given by s. 498 is quite unfettered, though we consider that in exercising our discretion we ought to take into consideration the limitations on the power of other authorities to grant bail imposed by s. 497, 37 C. 412. 'We think that the rule laid down in s. 497 for the guidance of Courts other than High Court is a rule founded upon justice and equity and one which should be followed by us as well as by every other Court unless anything appears to the contrary. The extended powers given to the High Court under s. 498 are certainly not to be used to get rid of this very reasonable and proper provision of the law,' 42 C. 25. See also Note 2 to s. 496 and Note 2 under s. 497

(i) Bail pending inquiry before Magistrate—An accused person ought to be released on bail until reasonable grounds are made out on the evidence, for believing him to be guilty. When a Magistrate issued warrants for the arrest of certain persons for a non bailable offence, against whom there were no reasonable grounds on which he might believe that they were guilty of the offence for which another person was accused on facts inconsistent with their guilt, the Calcutta High Court directed that on their arrest, they should be admitted to bail, 10 C. W. N. 1093 = 4 Cr. L. J. 221. Where there has been unreasonable delay in trying the accused and no evidence is adduced after remand, the High Court will be disposed to grant bail, 36 C. 166. It is no doubt the case that a High Court has absolute discretion in the matter of granting bail and is not bound by the provisions of s. 497, but the Legislature having placed the initial stage of dealing with crimes with Magistrates and having in fact enacted that persons accused of non bailable offences shall not be released on bail except under the terms of s. 497, a High Court is bound to follow the general law as a rule, and not to depart from it except under very special circumstances, especially so in the initial stages of a case, 6 L. B. R. 173 = 14 Cr. L. J. 171.

(ii) When Sessions Judge has been moved—The High Court will not ordinarily interfere where a Sessions Judge acts with due care in the exercise of his discretion, 5 A. L. J. 419 = 1908 A. W. N. 195 = 8 Cr. L. J. 49.

3. Jurisdiction of Sessions Court to release on bail person convicted by itself pending appeal—Where a Sessions Judge after convicting the accused, released them on bail pending their appeal to the High Court, held, he had no jurisdiction to do so, in spite of the use of the words "any person" in this section. The High Court can do so, but not the convicting Court itself. The latter Court has given its final opinion that the accused is guilty and deserves imprisonment. It cannot then, consistently with the principle of finality indicated in 10 B 176 (F.B.) vary its own order by admitting the convicts to bail. The word "any" in the section must be read, subject to the limitation that is implied in that principle. The section indicates generally the powers of a Sessions Judge to release on bail all prisoners, who, he thinks, may be found to have been wrongly convicted, and whose case he can either deal with himself or has power (s 438) to refer to the High Court. The section does not give him power in any way to alter or vary his own order, 4 Bom. L. R. 55. See also 15 P. R. 1903. Contra, see Note (iii). As to rulings under the old Code where the language employed was "any accused person," see 1 A. 151 (F.B.), 1 B. R. L. Ap. Cr. 7; 23 W. R. 40 at p 62.

4 Power of High Court to admit to bail, pending appeal to Privy Council.—Where a person who was convicted at the Criminal Sessions of the Madras High Court, which conviction was reviewed by the High Court under s. 26 of the Letters Patent obtained from the Privy Council special leave to appeal and the Privy Council had on the petitioner's application for bail expressed the opinion, that the matter of bail should be decided by the High Court, and an application was accordingly made to the High Court, held, that the High Court had jurisdiction to release the accused on bail, pending the decision of the Privy Council, and having regard to the rule laid down by the Judicial Committee in ex-parte Carew, L. R. 1897 A. C. 719, as to the circumstances in which an appeal in a criminal matter would be admitted by the Privy Council held that the accused ought to be released on bail, 24 M. 161.

But the Punjab Chief Court held that after deciding a criminal case whether on Original Appellate or Revision side and upholding the conviction of a prisoner, it has no power under s. 498 to the Code to suspend the operation of his sentence and to release him on bail on his asserting his intention to appeal to His Majesty in Council, because (a) the section does not refer to a case where the Court is functus officio but refers to cases where the Court has still some power left as regards the sentence of the accused, (b) the Criminal Procedure Code does not provide for an appeal to the Privy Council and does not provide for the release of the accused appealing to the Privy Council 15 P. R. 1903 = 19 P. W. R. 1906 = 8 Cr. L. J. 89 where 4 Bom. L. R. 55 is referred to and 24 M. 161 distinguished.

The High Court has no power, after disposal on revision, of a case tried by a Magistrate, to grant bail under s. 498 of the Code or cl 41 of the Letters Patent 1865 in order that a petition may be made to the Privy Council for special leave to appeal or until such petition has been disposed of by the latter, per RICHARDSON, J.—The High Court has no inherent jurisdiction to liberate an accused on bail. 50 C. 585.

5. Special powers of High Court to grant bail—

(i) Coroners Act, 1871.—In 31 C. 1, it was held that after a Coroner has drawn up an inquisition against a person, under Act IV of 1871, and committed him to prison, the High Court alone is empowered to release such person on bail, but now by the amending Act IV of 1903 the Magistrate to whom the accused is sent under s. 26 has power to release on bail.

(ii) Extradition Act XV of 1903.—See Appendix II. The Extradition Act provides for bail to be furnished by person accused of certain crimes and the matter is one which must be regulated by this Code. The High Court has the fullest discretion in the matter, but regard must be had to the provisions of s. 496 and the circumstances of the case, 15 C. W. N 736 = 12 Cr. L. J. 336.

(iii) Sindh Frontier Regulation III of 1892.—An application for bail on behalf of an accused who is being tried by a Jirgh of Elders under s. 8 of the Sindh Frontier Regulation does not lie to the High Court under s. 498 55 L. R. 105 = 12 Cr. L. J. 568.

(iv) Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, ss 12 and 14.—See Appendix XII. Where the provisions of Part I of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act have been applied to proceedings before a Magistrate in respect of an offence the Sessions Judge ceases to have jurisdiction to grant bail under s. 498 the exercise of such jurisdiction being inconsistent with the special procedure prescribed in the said part. The proper Court to apply to for bail in such a case is the High Court whose power to admit to bail is not affected by the Act, 37 C. 439. But the High Court in exercising its discretionary power under that section will take into consideration the terms of s. 12 of the Act, 37 C. 412.

(v) S 50 of the Indian Insolvent Act.—The Criminal Procedure Code has no application to such a case, 17 B 334.

6. No Letters Patent appeal against order of single Judge refusing bail.—An order refusing bail to an accused is an order in a criminal trial. It is not a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies against such an order of a single Judge, 19 M. L. J. 478 = 11 Cr. L. J. 279.

7. Application for bail containing irrelevant or scandalous matter not to be entertained.—Where a prisoner applied to the High Court to be admitted to bail pending the disposal of his appeal and the petition contained defamatory allegations, consisting, inter alia, of irrelevant attacks on the trying Magistrate and other officers in the service of the Government of India, the Court refused to allow the petition to be filed, and ordered it to be returned, 13 B. 488.

499. (1) Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the Police-officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the Police-officer or Court as the case may be

(2) If the case so require, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court of Session or other Court to answer the charge.

Notes.—See Notes under s. 514 for forfeiture of bond.

1. Form—As to form of bond and bail bond on a preliminary inquiry before a Magistrate, see Sch. V, Form No. 42.

2. Contents of bond.—(i) Must provide for money penalty—17 C. P. L. R. 113 = 1 Cr. L. J. 884. (ii) Time and place must be mentioned—Time and place must be mentioned in the bond itself, 1885 A. W. N. 44. (iii) Total of surety bonds not to exceed amount of accused's own recognizance—When an accused person is released on bail with sureties, the sureties should ordinarily be made jointly and severally liable for the same amount as the accused, and cannot be made liable for more. The total of the sums recoverable from them must not exceed this amount, 2 L. B. R. 235; 1905 U. B. R. 31 = 3 Cr. L. J. 463. But see 38 C. 562, Note 22 to s. 514.

3. Is it illegal to require the daily attendance of accused?—There is nothing illegal in requiring the accused to execute a bond for appearance daily, 6 Mad. H. C. R. 38. But see 20 W. R. 23 = 11 B. L. R. 46, 8 where it is stated that it is impossible to say that admitting him to bail upon recognizances condition in such a way is the same thing as releasing the prisoner.

4. Bond may be conditioned to appear before Police.—The words "until otherwise directed by the Police-officer" show that a bond under s. 497 may be conditioned to appear before the Police and the provisions of s. 497 are not limited to appearance before the Court, 22 P. R. 1913 = 6 P. L. R. 1914 = 6 P. W. R. 1914 = 14 Cr. L. J. 631. See Note 11 to s. 497 and Note 4 to s. 514.

5. Only one bond from accused and his sureties.—In a good behaviour case it was held that only one bond should be taken from the accused and his sureties for one determinate amount, the sureties engaging to be bound jointly and severally for the same amount as the accused so that it may be realizable from anyone of the obligors. There is no warrant in law for taking separate bonds from the accused and his sureties individually and severally, exceeding in the aggregate the amount for which the accused is liable, 30 P. R. 1890. See also Form No. 42 Sch. V.

6. Magistrate must himself decide on fitness of sureties.—See Note 6 to s. 496. See Notes 89–91 at p. 203.

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed, the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released, and, when he is in jail, the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer on receipt of the order shall release him

(2) Nothing in this section, section 496 or section 497 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed

Form.—As to form of warrant, to discharge a person imprisoned on failure to give security, see Sch. V, Form No. 43.

501. If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and, on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail

Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.

Note.—Power to cancel bond or increase amount of bail.—When a surety for good behaviour has once been accepted a Magistrate has no power subsequently to cancel the security bond though he may be of opinion that the surety is an unfit person, 1 G. W. N 394; 16 P. R. 1905; 28 P. R. 1901 See Note 97 at p 205 A Magistrate is justified in increasing the amount of bail if by further enquiry the case turns out more serious than he first imagined, 4 P. W. R. 1912 = 66 P. L. R. 1912 = 13 Cr. L. J. 474.

502. (1) All or any sureties for the attendance and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond, either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants Discharge of sureties.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants and shall call upon such persons to find other sufficient sureties and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody

Note.—Magistrate must act on application of surety.—It is only on the appearance of the person released on bail, that the bond of the sureties is discharged (sub-sec. 3). When a surety applies for a cancellation of his bond under this section there is no such thing as hearing the application on the merits. The presentation of the application itself, imposes upon the Magistrate the duty of issuing a warrant for the arrest of the accused. Hence, if a surety after once presenting an application for the cancellation of his bail bound, fails to appear in person or by pleader, such failure cannot deprive him of his right to treat the bond as cancelled. When once the application is presented and received, there is no option left to the Magistrate but to act under this section, 9 Bom. L. R 4285

CHAPTER XL

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

503. (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

Issue of commission and procedure thereunder

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, he or such Magistrate of the first class as he appoints in this behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is or shall summon the witness before him and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may for this purpose exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant-cases under this Code.

(4) Where the commission is issued to such officer as is mentioned in sub-section (2) he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any officer subordinate to him whose powers are not less than those of a Magistrate of the first class in British India

Notes—See Chapter XXV for the mode of taking evidence in inquiries and trials

1. Power given by s. 503 cannot extend beyond India.—S 503 provides for the issue of a commission in criminal cases in India where the witness is residing in India or in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India. There is no provision in this Code for the issue of a commission in criminal cases for the examination of a witness residing elsewhere, 10 Cr. L. J. 871 (A.), 3 B. 338.

(i) No power to issue commission for examination of witnesses in England.—The High Court has no authority in a criminal case pending before it to issue a commission or a letter of request to the English Courts for the examination of a witness residing in England, see also 20 P. R. 1878 Statute 22 Vict., Cap 20 (if it has any reference to criminal cases at all) merely enables the English, Scotch or Irish Courts to enforce attendance of a witness before the person named in, and appointed by, the order of Courts in India or else where in His Majesty's dominions. The Courts in British India must only look to the Code of Criminal Procedure for authority to make such an order, and no such authority exists in this Code. Rules 54–59, Ord XXVII of the rules of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England, have been made to carry into effect the provisions of 22 Vict. Cap 20, s. 6, and other Acts. But where the Act itself does not authorize the issue of a letter of request independently of the issue of a commission, the rules made under the Act cannot authorize the issue of such commission, 10 Cr. L. J. 571 (A.).

(ii) No power to issue commission to a Colonial Court to take down evidence.—In 5 B. 338 it was held that the Bombay High Court had no power to issue a commission to Mauritius in a criminal case. See also the statement of the Advocate-General at p. 337 of 3 B. 334. The powers given by this Code (s. 503) cannot of course extend beyond India, nor has the law been altered by the Evidence Commission Act, 1885, 48 and 49 Vict., Cap 74, s. 3 which deals with taking evidence in criminal cases and enables Indian and Colonial Courts required by mandamus to take evidence in a criminal case arising beyond their jurisdiction to take such evidence in a particular manner. It does not, however, empower Indian or Colonial Courts to mandamus other Courts abroad to take evidence in criminal cases. In England under 13 Geo. III, c. 68, ss. 40, 44, 45 and 1 Will. IV, c. 22, ss. 1 and 2 the Court of King's Bench is authorized to issue a mandamus to Indian and Colonial Courts in certain criminal cases, but Indian and Colonial Courts have no power to issue a mandamus, to another or to English Courts to take evidence in criminal cases and there is in my opinion no provision of law by which witnesses in criminal cases arising at Chidambaram can be exercised in Ceylon.—Opinion of the Advocate General, Madras dated 27th February, embodied in G. O. No 464, Judicial, 12th March 1904

(iii) No commission can issue to French India.—As evidence taken before French Courts is inadmissible in criminal trials before English Courts and as the French Government is advised that it is not open to them to empower a British Consular Agent to administer an oath and enforce the attendance of witnesses within French territory, there appears to be no way in which commissions issued by English Courts in criminal cases for the examination of witnesses in French India can be executed, unless s. 503 of the Criminal Procedure Code is amended. Sessions Judges and Magistrates are therefore requested to discontinue the issue of commissions under this Court's Circular No. 2781, dated 13th October, 1886, which is hereby recalled except in so far as it relates to commissions issued for execution in British India by French Courts.—H. C. Cir, 4th October, 1887, Nos 25–49 Madras Rules, Nos 24 and 25, p. 12.

(iv) Can commission issue to Nepal?—Is Nepal in British India? See 7 G. W. N. 635 and Note 14

2 Section 503 applies to issue of commission only in cases pending before Courts therein specified.—Where the District Magistrate purporting to act under this section ordered a Subordinate Magistrate before whom the case was pending to examine one of the witnesses in her own house, held, that the order was illegal, as this section related to the issue of a commission and not to a case where the trying Magistrate had to examine a witness himself, and that even if the order be treated as an order for issue of a commission, the District Magistrate could not pass such an order without a reference under s. 506, being made to him 2 B. L. R. 8 = 10 Cr. L. J. 211

3. Application for commission must be made after commitment to the Court to which case is committed.—A committing Magistrate though he is competent to examine a witness on commission in the course of the inquiry, has no jurisdiction after making the order of committal, to issue a commission, so that the evidence recorded might be available, if need be, at the trial before the Court of Session or high Court

The party who desires to have witnesses examined on commission, must apply for it after the commitment either to the High Court or to the particular Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction or to the Court of Session as the case may be, 19 G. 113 followed in 19 B 749 at p. 756. The view of WILSON, J., in the Calcutta case, that the application should be made before the commencement of the trial, and an application made during the trial and after the jury had been sworn was too late, because a trial and a commission could not go on at the same time, seems to be opposed to the plain language of subsec. (1), which empowers a party to apply for a commission at any time, in the course of a trial.

4. Commission to examine in criminal cases, purely discretionary.—In 8 G. 398, WILSON, J., refused the application of a witness (who was 63 years old and unable to attend on account of sickness), saying that, in a criminal case, the issue of a commission would be a most unsatisfactory course of proceeding, and one dangerous to the interest of the prisoner. The issue of a commission is entirely in the discretion of the Court.

5. Expense or inconvenience of securing attendance of witnesses not sufficient ground for issue of commission.—Inconvenience to a witness is no ground for issuing commission especially when the question of identification of stolen property was a most material one, and the evidence of the owner and his wife and servant was of the utmost importance, the whole case resting on such evidence, and as regards the ground of expense, the sum of Rs 500, it must be said, was not large or unreasonable, considering that the entire case rested on the evidence of those witnesses, and that the accused had not had an opportunity to cross-examine these witnesses as his position did not permit him to make arrangements for that purpose. Held, that the Sessions Judge was not justified in issuing a commission under this section. Also if evidence taken on a commission in an inquiry be admitted at the trial, the circumstances stated in s. 33 of the Evidence Act to excuse the attendance of the witness must be established and inconvenience to witnesses is not a ground allowed by s. 33 of the Evidence Act, 5 A. 226.

6. Commission to examine expert witness not desirable.—Where an expert witness in handwriting appears to be the principal witness in the case, no application to examine him on commission should be granted, 9 M. L. T. 334—(1911) 2 M. W. N. 97—12 Cr. L. J. 64.

7. Witness residing within the jurisdiction of the Court may be examined on commission.—There is nothing in the language of this section to support the contention that the Court has no authority to examine a witness by commission when he is within the jurisdiction. Where a Government servant, who had executed his recognizance to appear and give evidence for the prosecution at a criminal trial at Bombay, was subsequently ordered to a distant station on public service, and could not, with due regard to public interests, return to Bombay in time for the trial. Held on the application to Government, that his evidence might be taken by commission before his departure from Bombay 6 B 295. In 24 C. 551 it was doubted whether a Presidency Magistrate or High Court has power to issue a commission for examination of a witness within the Presidency town. See Note 12.

8. Right of pardanashin to be examined on commission.—A pardanashin woman summoned as a witness in a criminal case has a right to be exempted from personal attendance at Court and to be examined on commission, see 4 C. 20 = 3 C. L. R. 93, 15 C 775, Weir II, 659; 42 C 19. In 11 P. W. R 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 3, the High Court directed the Magistrate to examine a pardanashin witness on commission and remarked that a Magistrate ought not to assume that a woman who is the daughter of a prostitute is not pardanashin when it is alleged that she is living a married life and she is obviously entitled as such to be treated with respect despite her lowly origin.

Contra—See 5 A. 92 where it was held, that it cannot be admitted as a general principle that pardanashin ladies, whose evidence is required in criminal trials are to be allowed to compel the Courts to examine them at some other place than the Court house itself. Although there is no provision in the Code which protects pardanashin ladies from appearing in a Court of Justice, nevertheless it is very undesirable to compel the attendance of such persons. Where a Magistrate considered it necessary to take the evidence of a pardanashin lady, who objected to appear in Court, the High Court directed him to make arrangements so as to take her evidence either in an empty Court room in the presence of himself, the accused and the pleader for the prosecution, or, if no empty Court room were available, in his own private room or some other room in the Court building, 12 A. 69. See also 1 S. L. R. 5 = 9 Cr. L. J. 249, Note 1 under s. 506, Note 3 above and Notes 9 and 10 at p. 592.

9. Complainant can be examined on commission.—The term witness will certainly include the complainant. If a complainant calls himself to testify to matters within his knowledge, he will, as regards such testimony, be a witness for the prosecution and the issue of a commission for his examination is perfectly legal, 10 P. R. 1895, 11 P. W. R. 1913 = 43 P. L. R. 1914 = 14 Cr. L. J. 3, and more so, when the complainant is a pardanashin lady, Welf II, 659. The terms of s. 503 are very wide. They refer not only to an inquiry or trial, but to any other proceeding and a complainant is a witness and may be examined on commission, 42 C. 19.

Contra.—Where a pardanashin lady sets the criminal law in motion, i.e., is a complainant, her position is not the same as that of an ordinary lady witness. It is the right and privilege of the accused to have her evidence taken in his presence in Court. Were it otherwise, it is impossible to conceive the dangers and mischief that would arise, 5 A. 92.

10. Mode of examining pardanashin ladies of rank in Presidency-towns.—There being no District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class in a Presidency town, to whom the commission could be sent, it is doubtful whether a Presidency Magistrate or the High Court has under this section power to issue a commission for examination of a witness within the Presidency town. But there is nothing to prevent a Presidency Magistrate from examining a witness residing within his jurisdiction at some place other than the Court house, 24 C. 551. Gosha women who are cited by parties as witnesses need not be compelled to attend Court for the purpose. If the witness secures a house or room near the Court house, her evidence may be recorded there, regard being had to her gosha being preserved, 12 Cr. L. J. 501 (M.), 4 S. L. R. 257 = 12 Cr. L. J. 398. See 16 C. 235 and Notes 2 to 5 to s. 333.

11. Admission of secondary evidence when witness examined on commission.—Where a commission to take evidence issues to any place beyond the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the commission, it is not necessary in order to admit secondary evidence of the contents of a document, that the party tendering it should have given notice to produce the original nor is it necessary to prove a refusal to produce the original, 9 C. 939.

12. Onus of proving that evidence taken on commission is admissible is on party who relies on evidence.—In a case where a commission was issued under this section for the taking of the evidence of witnesses in Nepal and the accused was convicted on such evidence held that the onus of proving that Nepal is in British India, as defined by s. 3 (27) of the General Clauses Act of 1897, lies on the party who alleges that the evidence taken there, is proper evidence and on their failing to do so, the conviction must be set aside 7 C. W. N. 835. Quare—Whether Nepal is in British India?

13. Evidence taken on commission issued by Magistrate, admissible in subsequent stage of same case.—Under the previous Codes it was held that the evidence of a witness taken upon commission is not admissible in a criminal trial held before the High Court, unless it can be shown that such evidence was so taken by an order made by that Court under s. 76 of Act X of 1875 (same as the present section), or unless it is admissible under s. 33 of the Evidence Act 5 C. 532; 19 C. 113; 6 A. 224; 19 B. 749. But see now cl. (2) of s. 507 and Notes 1 and 2 thereunder.

14. Fresh objections may be taken to admissibility of documents after return of commission.—If when evidence is taken before a commission, a document is tendered and objected to on any ground, the opposite party is not precluded from objecting to the document at the trial on any other ground, it not being necessary to state all the objections to the admissibility of a document, when it is first tendered, 9 C. 939.

15. Commission evidence admissible in trial for offence committed on high seas.—Evidence taken under a commission is admissible in a trial for an offence committed on the high seas, the procedure applicable being that of the Court by which the trial was held, i.e., lex fori, 16 C. 233.

16. Delegation of commission is permitted by sub sec. (4).—Under s. 503 of Act X of 1882, when commission was issued to an officer representing the British Indian Government for examining a witness residing in a Native State, he was bound to execute such commission personally and could not delegate his function to a subordinate, 1895 A. W. N. 106. This difficulty has now been removed by the addition of sub-sec. (4).

17. Magistrate executing commission, whether Court for purpose of granting sanction.—During the pendency of a Sessions case, a witness was examined on commission under this section. Subsequently, the Deputy Magistrate who examined the witness on commission being applied to, granted sanction to prosecute the witness under s. 193, I. P. C. Held that the proper authority to grant sanction in the matter was the Sessions Court, and not the Deputy Magistrate who acted only as a Commissioner, although the Commissioner appointed under this section, may be a Court within the meaning of this section for the purpose of issuing process against the witness and for recording his evidence, still he was not a Court within the meaning of s. 193 (1) (b). The word Court in s. 195 means, the Court whose duty it is to consider the evidence and to decide whether it is true or false, 11 C. W. N. 909 = 6 Cr. L. J. 160. See Note 69 at p. 509.

18 Examination of Mint Master, etc., in cases of false coining.—When the evidence of an officer, connected with the Mint of the Currency Department is required as to the genuineness or as to the spuriousness of a coin or currency note the Courts and Magistrates are recommended to send the coin or note to the Mint Master or to the Commissioner of Paper Currency as the case may be under cover of their Court seal or by a messenger whose evidence can afterwards be taken and at the same time to issue a commission for the examination of such officer or a witness under the provisions of this section. This rule prevents the great inconvenience of officers being called away from their duties on mere ordinary occasions. In special cases a careful discretion is to be exercised regard being had to the conditions above stated.—Bom Bk Cr p 30

19 Commission sent to Hyderabad (Deccan).—With a view to secure uniformity of practice in respect of commissions issued by Criminal Courts for the examination of witnesses at Hyderabad the following particulars have been communicated for information and guidance by the Secretary to the Resident and should be observed by all Courts in these Provinces.—As a rule all such commissions should be addressed to "The First Assistant Resident" and all remittances sent with such commission should be made payable to "The First Assistant Resident" without giving the name of the gentleman holding the appointment. No commission should ordinarily be addressed to the Resident, nor should any remittance be made payable to him. No commission should be sent direct to His Highness the Nizam's Minister without the intervention of the Residency office. Distant dates should be fixed for the return of commissions and names of the witnesses to be examined should be given in full with their correct address. The street or lane where they reside should as far as possible be ascertained and stated. Commissions for examination of witnesses residing at Secunderabad (Husen Sagar), or at Bolarum (Alwal) should be invariably addressed to the Cantonment Magistrate Secunderabad and the Superintendent of Police Bolarum respectively and remittances in such cases should be made payable to the officer to whom the commission is addressed. Remittances intended for the First Assistant Resident should be made payable at Hyderabad and not at Secunderabad.—C P Cr Cr Pt. II No 53

20 Translation of commission when to be made.—Commission sent for execution to any place where the language is different from that of the Court issuing them should be accompanied by translations in the language of such place or in English. Para 98 Bom H C Cr Cr p 77

21 Madras rules as to examination of witnesses on commission issued by French Courts.—The following rules approved and sanctioned in G O No 2386 Judicial dated 4th September 1886 have been made by the Madras High Court.—Commissions in criminal cases issued by French Courts for the examination of witnesses residing within the jurisdiction of any Criminal Court in this Presidency, shall be executed by such Court free of cost any expenditure incurred on account of batia and travelling expenses of witnesses being debited to the contingent fund of such Court.—(H C Cr) 13th October 1886 No 2781

22 American cases.—A commission is a process issued under the seal of the Court and the signature of the clerk directed to one or more persons designated as Commissioners authorizing them to examine the witness upon oath on interrogatories annexed thereto and to take and return the deposition of the witness according to the directions given with the commission.—S 638 of N Y Cr P C. A commission will not be granted for the examination of the plaintiff in his own behalf whilst he is a fugitive from justice residing in a foreign territory McMonagle v Konkey 14 Hun 328. The power to issue a commission is an innovation on the common law and must be strictly pursued Dwinnely v Howland 1 App Fr 87. It depends solely upon the statute 44 How Fr 452. Application must be made upon affidavit showing (1) the nature of the crime charged (2) the state of proceedings in the action and that issue of fact has been joined therein (3) the name of the witness and that his testimony is material to the defence of the action and (4) that the witness resides out of the State S. 6319 N Y Cr P C. * (1 A) When a commission is issued under this section to a Chief Presidency Magistrate, he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any Presidency Magistrate subordinate to him

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to effect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, s 3

1 Scope of the reference to the Slave Trade Act.—The statute referred to in the last paragraph is for the punishment of offences relating to the slave trade by British subjects or other persons protected by the British Government, and s 3 enable the High Court to obtain evidence by commission in such cases.—PRINSEP The Act referred to is 39 and 40 Vict. Chap 46

505. (1) The parties to any proceeding under this Code, in which a commission is issued may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing, which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed

Parties may examine witnesses.

† "or to whom the duty of executing such commission has been delegated" shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or, if not in custody, in person and may examine cross-examine and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness

Notes.—1 American cases.—Witness must answer each question specifically.—Union Bank v. Terry 3 Duer 826 Witness is not allowed to read his answer from a paper prepared beforehand.—*Creamer v. Power of provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply for issue of commission

District Magistrate it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate stating the reasons for the application, and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application

507. (1) After any commission issued under section 503 or section 506 has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the deposition of the witness examined thereunder, to the Court out of which it issued, and the commission, the return thereto and the deposition shall be open at all reasonable times to inspection of the parties, and may, subject to all just exceptions, be read in evidence in the case by either party, and shall form part of the record

Return of commission.

(2) Any deposition so taken if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court

Note.—1. Object of sub-section (2).—Sub-sec. (2) is based on the case reported in 19 B. 749. Its insertion is thus accounted for:—“Various High Courts have held that the depositions taken under this Chapter are only evidence in the Court from which the commission issued, and that if the evidence is required in another Court, a fresh commission must be issued. We have therefore, provided that depositions may, subject to certain qualifications, be received at subsequent stages of the case.”—See Com Rep See the next Note.

2. Practice.—Admissibility of evidence taken on commission by committing Magistrate.—Evidence taken under a commission issuing from the Chief Presidency Magistrate's Court, during the course of inquiry before him, cannot be used in evidence at the trial before the High Court under this section, 19 C. 113 approved in 19 B. 749; 6 C. 332. This difficulty is now removed by sub-sec. (2). Depositions of a witness taken on commission issued by the committing Magistrate and forming part of the record of his inquiry is admissible in evidence at the trial in the Sessions Court under s. 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, if the requirements of the proviso to the section have been satisfied. Much difficulty will be experienced, if the actual presence of the accused, so as to afford him an opportunity of cross-examining, were insisted on but the requirements of s. 33, Indian Evidence Act, are satisfied if the accused could have submitted cross-interrogatories, 19 B. 749. See 15 C. 233, where evidence taken on commission was held to have been rightly admitted on the trial of a seaman for an offence committed on the high seas

3. Deposition recorded in Colony not admissible as evidence.—Government accorded sanction under s. 188, for prosecuting a person in respect of offences punishable under ss. 405, 408 409 and 477 A, I P C., which were committed by him in Singapore. The complainant moved under s. 506, for the issue of commission for the examination of four important witnesses in Singapore. The Advocate-General gave as his opinion that Government has no power under s. 189, to direct that depositions recorded in Singapore be admitted as evidence in British India, and that the Government of Singapore cannot be asked to direct the Magistrate having jurisdiction at Singapore to summon the witnesses and record the depositions as the said section has no application to a case in which the Court of inquiry or trial is incompetent to issue a commission. Madras G O No 1803, Judicial, dated 27th December, 1909. See Note 1 to s. 503

508. In every case in which a commission is issued under section 503 or section 506, the inquiry, trial or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission

Adjournment of inquiry or trial.

Note.—The discretion given by this section must be exercised in a reasonable manner, so as not to subject the accused person to unnecessary detention. See the remarks of WILSON, J., in 19 C. 112.

CHAPTER XLI.

SPECIAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

509. (1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness, taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, or taken on commission under Chapter XL, may be given in evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, although the deponent is not called as a witness.

Deposition of medical witness.

Power to summon medical witness.

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine such deponent as to the subject matter of his deposition,

Notes.—1. Evidence of medical witness how to be recorded—

Bombay—The section requires that the deposition of a medical witness should not only be taken also attested in the presence of the accused by the Magistrate in order to render it admissible in proceedings. An attestation in the following form should, therefore, always be appended to such deposition—“Taken before me and signed by me in the presence of the accused.

(Signature of Magistrate)”

Date

—Bom. H. C. Cr. Cr., p. 18

Bengal and Assam—In order to secure compliance with provisions of this section Magistrate hereby directed to sign at the foot of the depositions of medical witnesses a certificate as follows—“The foregoing deposition was taken in the presence of the accused who had an opportunity of cross-examining witness. The deposition was explained to the accused and was attested by me in his presence—Magistrate Calcutta Gazette, 27th May, 1891, Part I p. 547 Assam Gazette, 6th June, 1891 Part III, p. 326.

When the attestation is wanting the Sessions Judge should summon such witness to give his evidence. R. A. Agra, 7th June, 1862, p. 122. The circumstance that the evidence of the Civil Surgeon given in Enquiry was not interpreted to the accused was held to be of small importance, where it was understood by prisoner's counsel, and all necessary questions were put to the witness, 24 W. R. 50. The insertion of italicised words enables the deposition of a medical witness taken on commission, to be put in evidence which could not have been done under the previous Code, 13 C. 129.

2. Deposition must be interpreted to accused to enable him to cross-examine witness.—Before a medical officer leaves the Court, his deposition is to be fully interpreted to the accused, who is to be allowed to cross-examine. In order to ensure that the medical officer's deposition may in all cases be admissible under this section, the Magistrate must sign at the foot of it a certificate in the following form—“The foregoing deposition was taken in the presence of the accused, who had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. The deposition was explained to the accused, and was attested by me in his presence.” This is, of course, specially necessary when the deposition is taken in an inquiry preparatory to commitment to the Sessions. C. P. Cr. Cr., Part II No. 55 N. W. P. H. C. Cr. Cr., para. 33, p. 17.

3. Magistrate's record must show that deposition was taken and attested in accused's presence.—Before the deposition of a medical witness, taken by a committing Magistrate can be given in evidence at trial before the Court of Session, it must either appear from the Magistrate's record or be proved by the evidence of witnesses to have been taken and attested in the accused's presence, not merely presumed under s. 111 (c) of the Evidence Act to be so taken and attested, 9 A. 720. This section does not enact that a deposition of a Civil Surgeon shall be taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused. What it provides is that a deposition of a Surgeon, if so taken and attested, may be put in evidence. A Magistrate should take and attest a deposition in the presence of the accused, and should also, by the use of appropriate words on the face of the deposition make it apparent that he has done so. Section 80 of the Indian Evidence Act does not affect the matter, 10 A. 174 at p. 173. The examination of a medical witness taken and attested may be given in evidence in any criminal trial, but in order that such evidence may be admissible against any individual accused person, the examination must have been taken in the presence of the accused person, 8 C. 739 = 12 C. L. R. 233; 18 C. 129, 4 C. W. N. 49. Where no objection was taken when the evidence was put in, that the evidence had not been taken in the presence of the accused, it was held that such irregularity, even if it existed, did not vitiate the proceedings, as it was not shown that it had prejudiced the prisoner, 8 C. 739 = 12 C. L. R. 233.

4. Any Magistrate may take the deposition.—“Taken and attested before a Magistrate.” i.e., Magistrate not necessarily the committing Magistrate while holding the preliminary inquiry 1893 A. W. N. 15.

5. Civil Surgeon's extra-judicial opinion is no evidence.—The only opinion of a Civil Surgeon which can be considered in judicially dealing with the case, is an opinion expressed by him when examined as a witness on oath. A copy of a letter from the Civil Surgeon containing expressions of his opinion is inadmissible in evidence as it is extra-judicial, 8 C. 211 = 40 C. L. R. 11; 12 W. R. 23, but the medical officer who held post mortem examination, may use the report to refresh his memory when giving evidence, 9 C. 45; 11 C. L. R. 569.

6. Substance of report from medical subordinate is no evidence.—The substance of a report from a subordinate medical officer, with an expression of concurrence by the Civil Surgeon, cannot be read in evidence under this section, 11 W. R. 2. A Sessions Judge is not authorized to allow a surgeon to describe the post mortem appearances merely from the knowledge acquired by him from a perusal of the notes made by another surgeon, Ratanlal 549.

7. Post-mortem report not evidence—how it may be used.—The only use of the medical officer's report will be to assist the Police in getting up the case, to refresh the memory of the medical officer at the time of giving his deposition and to aid the judicial officer in framing his queries. It cannot be admitted as evidence [except under s. 32, cl. (2) and s. 33 of the Evidence Act] nor is it sufficient to read it over to the medical officer and swear him to the truth of it, his deposition must be recorded de novo and at length in the presence of the accused. The Magistrate should therefore look into the case and make himself acquainted with its particular features, before the medical officer enters the Court, in order that proper questions may be asked—C P Cr. Cir., Part II, No 55, 6 C. W. N. 98. A post mortem report is not evidence. The person who made the report can use it to refresh his memory when giving evidence but the report itself is not admissible in evidence. Therefore when another medical expert is being asked his opinion on facts hypothetically stated the facts cannot be taken from the report but must be taken from admissible evidence on the record, 9 C. 435 = 11 C. L. R. 569; 27 C. 295, 11 W. R. 25. A post mortem report is not admissible as evidence except to contradict the officer who made it. It may, however, be used by that officer when under examination for the purpose of refreshing his memory, 27 C. 295.

8. The real use of and abuse of medical evidence.—It is not the proper way to try a case to rely on mere theories of medical men or skilled witnesses of any sort against facts positively proved, 11 W. R. 25. A Judge is not entitled to discard the whole of the direct evidence of credible and unimpeached witnesses who depose that with their own eyes they saw certain things done, upon the strength of the opinion of a medical witness, to the effect that those things could not have been done, 1899 A. W. N. 74; nor should a Judge elect himself into a medical expert without taking proper medical evidence 1833 A. W. N. 139. As a matter of precaution, medical evidence as to the cause of death should never be dispensed with in a case of murder, although prisoner admits having killed the deceased and pleads extenuating circumstances—N. A. Agra, 2nd January, 1882, p. 1.

Medical witnesses in murder cases—In all cases of murder, the committing Magistrate should bind over the medical witness to attend at the Sessions Court at the trial unless grave inconvenience will be caused thereby—See Rule 204 of the Madras Rules of Practice. If he is not bound over the special circumstances necessitating a departure from the above rule should be noted in the preliminary register.

9. Procedure in case depending entirely on medical evidence.—In a case depending almost entirely upon the medical evidence, the evidence of the Civil Surgeon should not be tendered or accepted as sufficient evidence. All the evidence before the Magistrate as to the symptoms should be re taken and the Civil Surgeon should be examined as an expert in regard to the case of those symptoms Weir II, 680.

10. When medical officer need not be examined by committing Magistrate—Except in the case provided for in s. 512 the examination of a medical witness taken in the absence of the accused is inadmissible in evidence in a criminal trial. When, however, there is sufficient prima facie evidence to warrant a commitment to the Sessions Court and the evidence of the medical officer is likely to be of a formal character and great inconvenience would result from his being summoned to a Magistrate's Court at a distance from the Sadar station, the examination need not be taken before the Magistrate, but the attendance of the medical officer before the Sessions Court should be ensured by the committing Magistrate. Under all other circumstances the Magistrate should invariably record the evidence of the medical officer before himself, Ratanlal 81.

11. Medical certificate is no evidence—The certificate of a medical officer as to the cause of death of a deceased person is no evidence. The facts contained therein must be proved by examining such officer as a witness. It is not sufficient to ask him merely to attest the accuracy of the statements made in the certificate. M H C. Pro., 18th July, 1881. This section does not in any way preclude the Sessions Judge from calling the Civil Surgeon and examining him as a witness and this should be done in every case in which the deposition taken by the Magistrate is essentially deficient or requires further explanation or elucidation, 9 C. 435 = 11 C. L. R. 569.

12. Medical officer's previous deposition not to be put in, unless he resiles from that deposition.—The evidence of a medical officer, before the committing Magistrate, whether attested or not by the Magistrate, ought not to be admitted under s. 288, unless he resiles from his original deposition, 4 C. W. N. 40. But see 8 C. 799 = 12 C. L. R. 233.

510. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code

Report of Chemical Examiner
Notes.—1. Letter or certificate of a medical officer no evidence.—A letter of a medical officer expressing an opinion is not evidence under this section, 12 W. R. 23; 9 C. 435 = 11 C. L. R. 569, but only the report. See Note 11 to s. 509

2. Original report should be put in evidence.—The original report of the Chemical Examiner bearing his signature, and not a copy of the report, should be put in evidence, 13 W. R. 49 = 6 B. L. R. Appx. CXXII.

3. Report to be signed by officer having personal knowledge.—In order that the report of the Chemical Examiner relating to the discovery of poison in matter submitted to him for examination, may be admitted in evidence under this section, it must be signed by the officer who detected the poison, and who from personal knowledge, can certify to the correctness of the result embodied in it, Weir II, 661.

4. Any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner.—The word 'any' would cover an "Additional Chemical Examiner" and the word was specially introduced to meet 10 C. 1026.

5. When substances should be sent to Chemical Examiner?—Substances ought not to be sent to the Chemical Examiner for analysis when there is neither a reasonable suspicion that poison has been used, nor anything in the post mortem examination of the bodies leading to such supposition. Magistrates should limit their references to that officer to cases of urgent necessity, and in which the local medical officer cannot afford the information required. Civil Surgeons and District Superintendents of Police are to remember that the duty of making a reference to the Chemical Examiner and of requiring that officer to make a report, which shall be admissible under s. 510 of the Criminal Procedure Code, lies solely within the province of the Magistrate conducting the inquiry for which information on the character of the suspected substance is required, such references should not, under any circumstances, be made by them directly. If the Civil Surgeon can give a decided opinion regarding stains supposed to be those of blood, it is unnecessary to refer to the Chemical Examiner. But, if the Civil Surgeon is unable to settle the question and, if evidence on it is desirable, it should be referred to the Chemical Examiner. Besides a copy of the post mortem examination, the Chemical Examiner should be furnished with replies to the following queries which replies the officer making the investigation has been directed to enter in his special diary—

(a) What interval was there between the last time that the person, who is supposed to have been poisoned, ate or drank anything and the first appearance of symptoms of poisoning? (b) What interval was there between the last time of eating or drinking and the death of the person (if death occurred)? (c) Did the person move from the place where the first symptoms were noticed? If so, how far did he go? (d) What were the first symptoms? (e) Did vomiting or purging occur? (f) Did the person become drowsy or fall asleep? (g) Were any cramps or twitching of the limbs observed or tingling of the skin or the throat complained of? (h) Mention any other symptoms noticed. The Magistrate making the reference should give the Chemical Examiner all the information that may guide him to the correct analysis of the substance forwarded. It seems to be apprehended by some officers that such particulars might influence the judgment of the Chemical Examiner, whereas analysis rests on facts and ascertained phenomena, not on opinion, and in order to guide the Examiner, he should be furnished with the fullest possible details regarding symptoms and post mortem appearances—Reg. and Ord., N W P., s. 10, p. 364

6. Link to connect evidence.—When committing cases, Magistrates must take care to send up evidence to prove that a body sent to hospital for post mortem examination is really the body of the person referred to in the case under trial or that an article analysed by the Chemical Examiner was actually the article sent to him for analysis in the case under trial. Sessions Judges must insist on being furnished with such evidence and must not record either the Criminal Analyst's report or the evidence of the medical officer until the connecting links requisite to render them admissible have been established, 1 Bar. B. R. 634. See also 1910 M. W. N. 77 at p. 99.

7. Duty of Judge to warn jury when dealing with Chemical Examiner's report.—The jury must be warned that before using the Chemical Examiner's report they must be satisfied on the evidence that the substances examined were in fact what they were said to be. 18 C. W. N. 480 = 15 Cr. L. J. 147. See also 10 C. 1026

Previous conviction or acquittal how proved

511. In any inquiry trial or other proceeding under this Code, a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force —

(a) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had to be a copy of the sentence or order or,

(b) in case of a conviction either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered

together with in each of such cases evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted

Notes—1 Proof of identity of old offender by finger impressions.—The manner in which a previous conviction may be proved is not limited to the method laid down in this section. Any relevant evidence upon which a Court can properly base a finding that the accused before it was on some previous occasion convicted for an offence will do as well as the methods indicated in this section. The papillary ridges on the bulbs of fingers and thumbs by means of which finger impressions are made while proved to be almost beyond change from birth to death are never wholly repeated in the case of the fingers of any other person and they therefore furnish a surer test of identity than a any other comparable bodily feature. Where two prints, made on different occasions resemble one another in the minutiae and contain no points of disagreement an irresistible conclusion arises that they were made by the same finger. The evidence of identification is thus both positive and negative and confirmation from other source is superfluous. Under s 43 of the Evidence Act as amended by Act 1 of 1899 expert evidence may be given on finger impressions while s 73 has been applied to them with necessary modifications so as to permit of comparison being made for arriving at a finding on the basis of their decipherment. But a document called a finger impression slip without authoritative signature or certificate of any kind showing it to be an authorized record of Police acts cannot be regarded as a public document within the meaning of s 74 of the Evidence Act. Even if it is assumed that it is such a public document it is nevertheless necessary under s. 81 of the Evidence Act to prove it. The mere production of it does not prove it and for evidentiary purposes such a document is no better than blank paper with the accused's finger impressions on it 3 N L R. 1 = 5 Cr L J 220. See also 6 Q. P L R. (Cr) 3, 1 Q. W N 33 and 32 G. 780. The moment there is some evidence of the identity of the accused on the record such as that a person of the same name as the accused and having a father of same name was convicted in the same district the accused may be asked to explain it under s. 342 and if he makes admissions further proof is unnecessary 4 N L R. 163 = 9 Cr L J 56. See Notes 12 and 15 to s. 342.

2 By production of previous judgment.—Previous convictions should be proved by copies of judgments or by any other documentary evidence of the fact but having regard to the scope of s 342 an examination of the original is not necessary. See justification 23 C 689, s. 310 (c) and s 33 of

3. An extract certified.—But a mere laissez from the record office is not sufficient 6 P L R Appx CLI = 15 W R 53.

512. (1) If it is proved that an accused person has absconded and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may in his absence examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution and record their depositions. Any such deposition may on the arrest of such person be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into or trial for the offence with which he is charged if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable

Record of evidence in absence of accused

510. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code.

Notes.—1. Letter or certificate of a medical officer no evidence.—A letter of a medical officer expressing an opinion is not evidence under this section, 12 W. R. 25; 9 C. 435 = 11 C. L. R. 569, but only the report. See Note 11 to s 509

2. Original report should be put in evidence.—The original report of the Chemical Examiner bearing his signature, and not a copy of the report, should be put in evidence, 18 W. R. 49 = 8 B. L. R. Appx. CXXII

3. Report to be signed by officer having personal knowledge.—In order that the report of the Chemical Examiner relating to the discovery of poison in matter submitted to him for examination, may be admitted in evidence under this section, it must be signed by the officer who detected the poison, and who from personal knowledge, can certify to the correctness of the result embodied in it, Weir II, 661.

4. Any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner.—The word 'any' would cover an "Additional Chemical Examiner" and the word was specially introduced to meet 10 C. 1026.

5. When substances should be sent to Chemical Examiner?—Substances ought not to be sent to the Chemical Examiner for analysis when there is neither a reasonable suspicion that poison has been used nor anything in the post mortem examination of the bodies leading to such supposition. Magistrates should limit their references to that officer to cases of urgent necessity, and in which the local medical officer cannot afford the information required. Civil Surgeons and District Superintendents of Police are to remember that the duty of making a reference to the Chemical Examiner and of requiring that officer to make a report, which shall be admissible under s 510 of the Criminal Procedure Code, lies solely within the province of the Magistrate conducting the inquiry for which information on the character of the suspected substance is required, such references should not, under any circumstances, be made by them directly. If the Civil Surgeon can give a decided opinion regarding stains supposed to be those of blood, it is unnecessary to refer to the Chemical Examiner. But, if the Civil Surgeon is unable to settle the question, and, if evidence on it is desirable, it should be referred to the Chemical Examiner. Besides a copy of the post mortem examination, the Chemical Examiner should be furnished with replies to the following queries which replies the officer making the investigation has been directed to enter in his special diary —

(a) What interval was there between the last time that the person, who is supposed to have been poisoned, ate or drank anything and the first appearance of symptoms of poisoning? (b) What interval was there between the last time of eating or drinking and the death of the person (if death occurred)? (c) Did the person move from the place where the first symptoms were noticed? If so, how far did he go? (d) What were the first symptoms? (e) Did vomiting or purging occur? (f) Did the person become drowsy or fall asleep? (g) Were any cramps or twitching of the limbs observed or tingling of the skin or the throat complained of? (h) Mention any other symptoms noticed. The Magistrate making the reference should give the Chemical Examiner all the information that may guide him to the correct analysis of the substance forwarded. It seems to be apprehended by some officers that such particulars might influence the judgment of the Chemical Examiner, whereas analysis rests on facts and ascertained phenomena, not on opinion, and in order to guide the Examiner, he should be furnished with the fullest possible details regarding symptoms and post-mortem appearances—Reg. and Ord., N W P, s 10, p 364

6. Link to connect evidence.—When committing cases Magistrates must take care to send up evidence to prove that a body sent to hospital for post mortem examination is really the body of the person referred to in the case under trial or that an article analysed by the Chemical Examiner was actually the article sent to him for analysis in the case under trial. Sessions Judges must insist on being furnished with such evidence and must not record either the Criminal Analyst's report or the evidence of the medical officer until the connecting links requisite to render them admissible have been established, 1 Bar. S R. 634. See also 1910 M. W. N. 77 at p. 99.

7. Duty of Judge to warn jury when dealing with Chemical Examiner's report.—The jury must be warned that before using the Chemical Examiner's report they must be satisfied on the evidence that the substances examined were in fact what they were said to be. 18 C. W. N. 160 = 43 Cr. L. J. 147. See also 10 C. 1026

Previous conviction or acquittal how proved.

511. In any inquiry trial or other proceeding under this Code a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force —

(a) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had to be a copy of the sentence or order or,

(b) in case of a conviction either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered

together with in each of such cases evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted

Notes —1 Proof of identity of old offender by finger impressions.—The manner in which a previous conviction may be proved is not limited to the method laid down in this section. Any relevant evidence upon which a Court can properly base a finding that the accused before it was on some previous occasion convicted for an offence will do as well as the methods indicated in this section. The papillary ridges on the bulbs of fingers and thumbs by means of which finger impressions are made while proved to be almost beyond change from birth to death are never wholly repeated in the case of the fingers of any other person and they therefore furnish a surer test of identity than a) any other comparable bodily feature. Where two prints made on different occasions resemble one another in the minutiae and contain no points of disagreement an irresistible conclusion arises that they were made by the same finger. The evidence of identification is thus both positive and negative and confirmation from other source is superfluous. Under s 45 of the Evidence Act as amended by Act V of 1899 expert evidence may be given on finger impressions while s 73 has been applied to them with necessary modifications so as to permit of comparison being made for arriving at a finding on the basis of their decipherment. But a document called a finger impression slip without authoritative signature or certificate of any kind showing it to be an authorized record of Police acts cannot be regarded as a public document within the meaning of s 74 of the Evidence Act. Even if it is assumed that it is such a public document it is nevertheless necessary under s 81 of the Evidence Act to prove it. The mere production of it does not prove it and for evidentiary purposes such a document is no better than blank paper with the accused's finger impressions on it. 3 N L R 1 = 3 Cr L J 220. See also 6 C P L R, (Cr) 3; 1 C W N 33 and 32 C. 750. The moment there is some evidence of the identity of the accused on the record such as that a person of the same name as the accused and having a father of same name was convicted in the same district the accused may be asked to explain it under s 342 and if he makes admissions further proof is unnecessary. 4 N L R 183 = 9 Cr L J 56. See Notes 12 and 15 to s 342.

2 By production of previous judgment.—Previous convictions should be proved by copies of judgments or by any other documentary evidence of the fact but having regard to the scope of s 342 an examination of the accused in respect of those convictions is without legal warrant or justification. 28 C 689, where 26 C. 49 is referred to. Another mode of proof would be by hearing evidence. See s. 310(c) and s 33 of the European Vagrancy Act IX of 1874. Appendix V.

3. An extract certified.—But a mere Kayfiat from the record office is not sufficient. 6 B L R Appx CLI = 15 W R 53.

512. (1) If it is proved that an accused person has absconded and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may in his absence examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions. Any such deposition may on the arrest of such person be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into or trial for the offence with which he is charged if his deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable.

(2) If it appears that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons unknown, the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the first class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence. Any depositions so taken may be given in evidence against any person who is subsequently accused of the offence, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or beyond the limits of British India.

Notes—1. The object of the new sub sec. (2).—The Bombay High Court suggested that the provisions of this section should be extended to cases where the offender is unknown and should not be confined to cases where he had absconded. We think, however, that a distinction should be drawn between the two cases, and therefore in adopting the Bombay High Court's suggestion we have provided that its procedure shall only apply to cases of great gravity, that it should only be put in force under an order of the High Court and that mere delay, expense or inconvenience in obtaining the presence of the deponent should not be sufficient ground for making the deposition evidence against the person subsequently accused.—Set. Com Rep

2. Dying declaration must be properly proved.—Dying declarations are not covered by the provisions of this Chapter and they must be properly proved like any other statement on the record, 17 P. R. 1911 = 13 Cr. L. J. 225. The mere fact that the Magistrate who recorded the statement was also the committing Magistrate could not dispense with the necessity of proving dying declarations by taking a statement from the Magistrate, 239 P. L. R. 1912 = 14 Cr. L. J. 131. There is nothing in s. 32 of the Indian Evidence Act to justify a Court in going beyond the ordinary rule that every statement on the record must be properly proved. See Notes 22—28 to s. 162.

3. Section can be availed of only when the witness is dead or cannot be procured.—This section can be made applicable only where the witness is dead or cannot be procured and though s. 145 of the Evidence Act admits of previous statements being referred to for purposes of cross examination it gives no authority to a Court to treat such statements as evidence against an accused. Statements previously made by a witness to a Magistrate and recorded in the absence of the accused cannot be treated as evidence in the Sessions Court if the witness was living and could be procured, 157 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 214. In Criminal Appeal 890 of 1905 (Allahabad), the appellant was charged under s. 400, I. P. C. He was not found and some evidence was recorded against him under this section. After his arrest, the evidence so recorded was tendered against him and admitted. Held, that before the evidence of any witness, recorded under this section can be admitted against the accused, it must be strictly proved that the witness is dead or cannot be found or cannot be produced without an unreasonable amount of delay or expense. See also Note 3 to s. 509. The latter part of this section seems clearly to intimate that the witnesses for the prosecution should be examined in the presence of the accused when practicable notwithstanding that their statements have been previously recorded in his absence, the commitment was quashed because there was no evidence against the accused except that of witnesses examined in the absence of the accused, and it was not impracticable to obtain the attendance of these persons at the inquiry before the Magistrate, 22 W. R. 33. See next Note.

4. Commitment on evidence taken in absence of absconding accused not necessarily bad.—Where an absconded prisoner is, upon his arrest, tried and committed upon the strength of the evidence taken in his absence and pleaded to the charge, his commitment cannot be quashed. If, however, the Sessions Judge thinks that the prosecution has not laid basis for the reception of evidence taken under s. 512, he should adjourn the trial and summon under s. 540, such witnesses as he may deem material. 12 C. L. R. 120.

5. The fact of absconding must be alleged, tried and found.—Proceedings under this section should commence by evidence being taken and recorded (1) that the accused has absconded, and (2) that due pursuit having been made, there is no immediate prospect of arresting him. Pun. Cr. 499. "Abscond" means not mere absence from the jurisdiction, but "to go out of the jurisdiction of the Court or to be concealed in order to avoid any of their processes" and also that after due pursuit he cannot be arrested, 1890 A. W. N. 100; 1896 A. W. N. 182, 8 A. 672. Where an accused has absconded and it is intended to record evidence against him under this section, it is requisite that the fact of absconding should be alleged, tried and established before the deposition is recorded. 10 C. 1097. Where it is intended to apply this section, it should be shown that when the former deposition was taken the accused had absconded and after due pursuit could not be arrested, 21 W. R. 12. Where there was no finding to that effect evidence recorded under this section was held inadmissible. 21 P. R. 1863. When there is no finding by the Magistrate at the time of taking evidence that the accused had absconded and there was no immediate prospect of arresting him, other evidence to that effect is inadmissible when the accused is found and it is proposed to use the previous evidence, 33 A. 29. But See 16 A. L. J. 902 = 41 A. 60 where 33 A. 29 is distinguished. See 6 Lah. 439 following 41 A. 60.

6. Evidence adduced at trial of co accused is no evidence against absent accused when tried subsequently.—The accused with other persons was charged with murder. The accused had absconded at the time of the preliminary inquiry, and his associates were committed to the Sessions and convicted; held, that the evidence given in the Sessions trial of the co-accused was not taken as evidence against the absconder, and therefore it could not be used against the accused at his trial, as s. 33 of the Evidence Act would not apply, and as the prisoner was not a party to the proceedings and had no opportunity to cross-examine, 8 A. 672. It was held in this case that the evidence taken by the committing Magistrate was admissible as he had recorded that the accused had absconded.

6-A. Evidence taken for another purpose at a previous trial cannot be converted into evidence against absconding accused at his subsequent trial under this section.—Evidence given at a trial for another purpose cannot be, by an ex-post facto operatio, converted into an equivalent of what is called a deposition taken under s. 512 when, at the time of taking the evidence, the question of recording a deposition under that section was never intended, 24 A. L. J. 394.

7. In what circumstances evidence under this section should be recorded.—A Magistrate cannot reject an application of the complainant to summon witness or to call on them to produce documents because the accused has absconded and no inquiry into the case was then before the Court. This section is specially intended for enabling the Magistrate to record evidence in the absence of an absconding accused, 2 Bom. L. R. 707. See Central Provinces Rules.—In all cases of heinous crime, such as murder, dacoity, heavy burglary, or highway robbery, if the accused person escapes pursuit it is the duty of the Police after making every possible inquiry, and getting all the information in their power, to forward, within four months from the date of the occurrence, all witnesses who can give any testimony regarding the circumstances, to the nearest Magistrate, in order that their depositions may be taken under s. 512. These depositions will prove of the utmost importance in the event of the discovery and apprehension of the criminal. A good Police-officer will never lose sight of a crime that has occurred in his jurisdiction until he is convinced that all further efforts to discover the criminal are hopeless. It not unrequently has happened that months, or even years, after the commission of some crime, circumstances have brought its perpetrators to light. In such cases, after so long a time has elapsed, most of the particulars connected with the crime have faded from the recollection of those who were cognizant of them at the time of its occurrence, but, if the depositions of these persons were taken when every thing was still fresh in their memories, the record becomes most valuable for prosecution.—C P Pol Man, p 177.

Punjab Rules.—Sec. 512 provides that whenever it is proved that an accused person has absconded and there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, any Court competent to try or commit such person for trial for the offence complained of may, in his absence, examine the witnesses produced for the prosecution and record their depositions and such depositions may on the arrest of the accused person be used in evidence against him, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be conveniently procured. It is also to be noted in connection with this that s 164 enables a Magistrate to record in the same manner as evidence any statement regarding an offence made by an accused person whosoever it may implicate. Proceedings under s. 512 (1) should commence by evidence being taken and recorded (1) that the accused person has absconded and (2) that due pursuit having been made, there is no immediate prospect of arresting him. In cases where the crime has terminated fatally or where medical evidence would ordinarily be required at the trial, the evidence of the medical officer as to the cause of death, or as to the injuries inflicted should invariably be recorded. Pun Cr, Vol II, pp 150-151.

CHAPTER XLII.*

PROVISIONS AS TO BONDS

513. When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond, with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court or officer may fix, in lieu of

Deposit instead of recognizance.

executing such bond

* The provisions of this Chapter shall so far as may be apply to bonds executed under section 192 of Act IX of 1890 (Indian Railway Act)

Notes.—1. Reasons for the exception in case of bonds for good behaviour.—See 2 N-W. P. H. C. R. 293, as to the reasons for the exception, the object being that sureties should be responsible for the good behaviour of the person bound over. Where a person was ordered by a first-class Magistrate to execute a bond for Rs. 25 for his good behaviour for six months and to deposit a sum of Rs. 7, which would be returned to him at the end of the six months if he had not in the meanwhile violated the order, held that the order as to deposit was illegal under ss 109, 118 and this section of the Code, Ratanlal 671.

2. Surety cannot be allowed to deposit money instead of executing bond.—The deposit allowed under s 513 is allowed in substitution only of the bond which the principal himself would otherwise execute, not in substitution of any bond which his surety executes 32 B 449

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, Procedure on for feiture of bond or, when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it, and it shall authorize* the attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found

(4) If such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months

(5) The Court may, at its discretion, remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond † ***

‡ "(7) When any person who has furnished security under section 106 or section 118 or section 562 is convicted of an offence the commission of which constitutes a breach of the conditions of his bond, or of a bond executed in lieu of his bond under section 514 B, a certified copy of the judgment of the Court by which he was convicted of such offence may be used as evidence in proceedings under this section against his surety or sureties, and, if such certified copy is so used, the Court shall presume that such offence was committed by him unless the contrary is proved "

Note.—Referring to the amendment of this section, the Sel. Com. say—

" We note that preference has been expressed for the draft of sub sec (7) as contained in the original Bill and on the whole, we have preferred to restore the original draft. It provides that in proceedings against a surety a certified copy to the judgment may be used to prove the commission of the offences which constituted a breach of the bond, but that this proof may be rebutted. It was indeed suggested to us that we should make a certified copy of the judgment conclusive proof but we are inclined to think that this would go too far."

* The word attachment substituted for the word distress by Act XVIII of 1923

† The words but the party who gave the bond may be required to find a new surety were omitted by 1914

‡ This subsection was inserted by 1914

Notes.—1. See ss. 76 and 91 for instance where bonds may be required, ss 106 and 107 for bonds for keeping the peace, ss 109 and 110 for good behaviour bonds, s 217 for bond from complainant and witnesses after commitment, ss. 57 and 169 for bonds taken at the instance of the Police. See ss 112 and 125 for proceedings in security for keeping the peace and good behaviour and s 499 for bail bonds of accused and sureties.

2. Forma.—See Schedule V, Forms XLIV to LIII. A notice to show cause must be in Forms 45, 46 and 49 of Schedule V.

3. Effect of amendment to sub-sec. (3) and of sub-sec. (6).—These amendments "will enable proceedings to be taken against the estate of a deceased surety where his liability accrued before his death"—Statement of Objects and Reasons. The provisions apply to all bonds, whether executed by principals, sureties or witnesses.

4. Application of section.—The provisions of this section apply to all bonds whether executed by principals, sureties or witnesses.

(i) To bonds for production of persons before Police—As there is no provision in the Code authorizing a Police-officer to take a surety-bond for the production of any person before the Police, such a bond is ab initio void, and a Magistrate has no power to alter it and impose fresh obligations thereunder, 11 C. 77. But this has been dissented from in 22 P. R. 1913 = 15 Cr. L. J. 631. See Note 11 to s 497. But in 42 B. 400 it was held that the Presidency Magistrate of Bombay had no jurisdiction under s 514 of the Code to order forfeiture of bonds taken under ss 106 and 107 of the City of Bombay Police Act, 1902.

(ii) To bonds under the Madras Abkars Act I of 1886—When an Abkari Inspector forwards a bail bond taken by him under the Madras Abkars Act s 43 to a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence of which the person bailed was accused, the Magistrate is not to be regarded as a mere executing officer, but has the same discretion which he would have had if a defaulter had failed to appear before his own Court: he should call upon the defaulter to show cause, why the penalty should not be enforced in accordance with the procedure laid down in this section, 18 M. 43.

(iii) To bonds under the Indian Railways Act 1890—This section is made applicable to bonds executed under s 123 of the Indian Railways Act IX of 1890.

(iv) Magistrate taking bond for appearing before another Magistrate—If a Magistrate takes a bond from the accused to appear before another Magistrate, the bond is not invalid, 2 Bom. L. R. 589.

(v) Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, cannot order forfeiture of a bond taken by Police under s 107 of City of Bombay Police Act, 20 Bom. L. R. 379.

5. Who can determine forfeiture of bond?—S 514 in its opening clause deals, first of all with bonds generally and then with a bond for appearance before a Court. So far as the bonds generally are concerned, there is a provision that action may be taken by the Court by which the bond has been taken or by the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class. But in the case of a bond for appearance before a Court, the tribunal indicated is that Court and there is no other tribunal. Where from the terms of a bond, the appearance is to be before the Sessions Court a Deputy Magistrate has no jurisdiction to initiate proceedings for forfeiture of the bond. The Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to delegate that power under s. 516 which deals with the levy of the amount only, 14 C. W. N. 259 = 10 Cr. L. J. 248. A bond was taken for appearance before a Magistrate at Karjat. On default notice was issued by that Magistrate. Meanwhile the case was transferred to the Magistrate at Chalapur who forfeited the bond and directed the accused's penalty. Held, the latter Magistrate had no jurisdiction as he was not the Magistrate who had taken the bond or before whom the accused had to appear on the date of default and that s. 531 does not apply, 15 Bom. L. R. 54 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 153 = 15 Cr. L. J. 295.

PRACTICE

6. Proceedings are in the nature of a civil proceeding.—The proceeding to realize a penalty is of the nature of a civil proceeding, and the person against whom it is held is competent to give evidence on oath in his own behalf, and is also entitled to go into evidence, 15 W. R. 87. See also 4 C. (355 F B.).

Proceeding is not a criminal trial—In a proceeding under this section no charge need be drawn up, but after the Magistrate has satisfied himself by evidence of the breach of the bond, he may at once call upon the person concerned to pay the penalty, or show cause why it should not be paid. It would seem therefore that the proceeding cannot be held to be a trial in the sense of the Code, 2 M. 159.

7. Sufficient evidence must be recorded before issuing notice to show cause.—The words "who has been proved" imply that evidence on oath should be taken by the Magistrate as to the forfeiture of the bond.

bond, before calling on the party bound thereby to pay the penalty or show cause why he should not do so. The use of the words 'whenever it is proved' make it necessary that evidence should be taken and recorded by the Magistrate in the usual way in order to afford a foundation for his jurisdiction to call on the party to show cause and to declare his recognizance forfeited. When this is not done, there is a failure of jurisdiction, and the defect cannot be cured by silence, neglect or waiver, positive or negative of the party interested, 11 B. H. C. R. 170; 10 C. L. R. 371. The procedure prescribed in this section is an exception to the general rule, 'that a man charged with an offence can only be convicted on evidence taken in his presence' see the judgment of the referring Judges in 4 C. 865.

(i) Magistrate must be satisfied that default was useful—In proceeding to forfeit a recognizance under s 219 (514 (1) (2), (3)) a Magistrate is bound to form a reasonable opinion that there has been a wilful default before issuing the process.—(H C Cr, 9th April, No 636)

8. Notice to show cause should be given to surety.—Before a warrant can be issued for attaching the property of a surety, he should be called on to show cause why he should not pay the penalty mentioned in his bond and it must appear clearly on the face of the record that he had such notice given him, 15 W. R. 83; 7 B. L. R. Appx. XXXVII; 9 W. R. 4. A mere verbal or unrecorded order to show cause is not sufficient. The notice must be in Forms 45, 46 and 49 of Sch. V

9. On failure to show cause Magistrate may decide on evidence already recorded—If no cause is shown or if the party called upon, declines to cross-examine the witnesses, the Magistrate may of course proceed to dispose of the case upon the evidence as it stands, that is on the evidence already recorded by him in the absence of the party before issuing the notice to show cause. It is obviously sufficient for the purposes of justice that the party has had the opportunity of cross-examination, 4 C. 865 (F.B.).

Absence of agent—Forfeiture of recognizance—If the agent of the accused neglects to attend when the case is called on, the recognizance bond may be held to be forfeited and the accused made liable for the payment of the penalty. A Magistrate has no legal authority to secure the attendance of an agent by such a bond, 5 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 64. See ss 116 and 205 under which agents may appear.

10. When party appears to show cause there must be a regular judicial trial and legal enquiry.—There must be a regular judicial trial and legal enquiry before the punishment can be inflicted, 12 W. R. 84 = 3 B. L. R. Appx. CLV; 155, 10 C. L. R. 371. 'The language of s 514 does not indicate that the final order making a person bound by a bond to pay can be made without taking any evidence in his presence or giving him an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses on whose evidence the forfeiture is held to be established' per BANERJEE J. 'Before it can be declared that a bond executed by a surety is forfeited, there must be a formal finding arrived at after taking evidence in the presence of such surety, which evidence must prove that the principal person has so acted as to necessitate or render it advisable that the surety should by reason of the act of the principal forfeit his bond' per WILKINS, J., 25 C. 440.

(i) No charge to be framed—See 2 M. 169 Note 6

(ii) Party must be allowed to adduce evidence and Magistrate must issue summonses for appearance of the defendant's witnesses—See 11 C. 77; 25 C. 440.

11. Party charged to have opportunity to cross-examine witnesses—A Magistrate is not justified in examined by the party showing cause upon the occasion when cause is shown against the rule, 4 C. 865 (F.B.) = 4 C. L. R. 243. The mere fact of the person for whom another stands surety being convicted of a breach of the peace ought not to be sufficient to make the surety bond executed by the latter liable to forfeiture without any evidence taken in the presence of the surety to show that the forfeiture has been incurred, 25 C. 440.

EVIDENCE

12. Evidence taken at another trial not legal evidence.—Evidence taken in another trial and admitted for the purpose of inquiry under this section is no legal evidence against the accused, 12 W. R. 54 = 3 B. L. R. Appx. CLV; 10 C. L. R. 371; 11 B. H. C. R. 170. The record of a case to which the obligor was not a party and which was not tried before the Magistrate by whom the bond in question had been called for, was held to be no evidence as to the obligor's liability in the matter then before the Court, 1891 A. W. N. 183. See also Note 10 above.

13. Party charged may himself give evidence—See Note 6 above

14. Admissibility of previous judgment of conviction—

(a) As against principal—When the bond is given by the person bound down to keep the peace, the judgment convicting him of a breach of the peace is admissible in evidence against, and may form a sufficient basis for an order under s 514, he having had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses on whose evidence the forfeiture is held established, 25 G. 440; 4 G. 885 (F.B.).

(b) As against the surety Is it necessary for making the surety liable to re adduce evidence of breach of the bond by the principal?—In the case of a surety bond on condition that it shall be forfeited if the person for whom it is given is convicted of a breach of the peace, the judgment in the case in which such person is convicted would be admissible in evidence against the surety under s. 43 of the Evidence Act as evidence of the fact of conviction, which is a relevant fact in the case, 25 G. 440. The mere production of the original record or of a certified copy of the original record of the trial in which the principal had been convicted of breaking the peace within the period covered by a bond would not be conclusive, if indeed it would be any evidence against the surety in a proceeding under this section. Where the bond is given by a surety and the condition in the bond is that it shall be forfeited not if the principal party is convicted of a breach of the peace, but if he commits a breach of the peace, the judgment convicting the principal of a breach of the peace is no evidence against the surety who was no party to it, to prove that the party bound down to keep the peace has really committed a breach of the peace. Such a fact must be proved by evidence taken in the presence of the surety, unless it is admitted by him, 25 G. 440; 11 G. 77. The previous conviction is not an estoppel, because the nature of the proceedings is charged and the surety had never had an opportunity of contesting the conviction, 15 W. R. 87. But this view is not accepted in Allahabad and Punjab. Where a person has given a security bond under s 118 for the good behaviour of another and the principal during the term for which the bond is in force is convicted of an offence punishable with imprisonment, the production of the conviction, and, if necessary, of proof of identity of the principal is sufficient evidence upon which the Magistrate is authorized to issue notice to the surety under this section to show cause why the penalty of the bond should not be paid. In such a case it is for the surety to show what cause he can. It is not incumbent on the Magistrate to re-summon the witnesses on whose evidence the principal was convicted and practically to re-try the case against the principal, 21 A. 85 followed in 32 P. R. 1903 and 226 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 804. But the conflict of decisions has been set at rest by sub-sec. (7) which is newly inserted. See the Styl. Com. Rep. in the preliminary note.

BREACH AND FORFEITURE

15. Surety-bond must be construed strictly.—See Note 3 to s 499 (i) Bond not warranted by law cannot be enforced—When a person was ordered to execute a bond under s 110, but by mistake a bond under s. 107 was taken, held the bond was bad in law and the order forfeiting the security furnished by him was set aside. The order against sureties was also cancelled, 32 P. R. 1903. In a case under s 498, 1 P. C., there is no legal sanction for the Magistrate taking cognizance, to issue a warrant to compel the complainant's wife to attend as a witness without first requiring her to attend by a summons, as required by s 252, and it is only when the summons is neglected that severe measures can be taken. Held, that under the above circumstances the security given by a person standing surety for producing the woman in Court, is against law, and cannot be forfeited, if he fails to carry out the terms of the surety bond. Held, further that in such like cases, forfeiture of the whole sum of security is a harsh measure in the absence of anything to show that the surety was really responsible for the disappearance of the person for whose appearance he stood surety and without inquiry into the circumstances under which he became a surety.

C. Cir., 18th March, 1868, No 480;

(ii) Failure to appear on day other than fixed works no forfeiture—Where a defendant charged with an offence bound himself to appear on a day fixed and did appear accordingly, but made default on the next day on which the case was called, held, that there was no forfeiture of recognizance, 4 M. H. C. R. App. XLIV (Madras Rules, pp 13 and 14). When the bond executed conditioned that the accused should attend on a specified date, and default was made on a date other than the specified date, it was held the penalty should not legally be enforced, Weir II, 663. B having bound himself by personal recognizance to appear at a Magistrate's Court on the 17th January, 1890, or until the disposal of the case, A executed a bond as surety for B's appearance at the aforesaid Court on the aforesaid date. The bond was not in accordance with Form III or XLII of Sch. V of the Code, there being no provision in the bond for the continued attendance of B until otherwise directed by the Court, or for A's attending on every day of the inquiry B failed to appear on the 3rd June, 1880 to which day the hearing had been adjourned. He held that the suretybond must be construed strictly and as according to the grammatical construction of the bond, A did not bind himself to secure the attendance of B on any date other than the 17th January 1880. A's bond was not forfeited Ratanlal 557. A Magistrate fixed the hearing of a case on a Sunday, and on the following Monday took up the case and on account of the nonappearance of the accused ordered the forfeiture of the bonds executed by the accused and their sureties. He held that in the particular circumstances of the case, it was not the intention of the petitioners not to answer to their bail, and that it was the Courts duty to take into the date that they were not bound to appear on the day following the bond, but that there was to have been forfeited 2 C. W. N. 519.

(iii) Failure to appear before a Court after a bail bond has been given as a condition—When the suretybond guaranteed that the accused should appear before a Deputy Magistrate before whom the case was pending, the case was subsequently transferred to the Court of the District Magistrate before whom the accused failed to appear. He held that the nonappearance of the accused at the Court of the District Magistrate was no breach of the condition of the bond, which only guaranteed the appearance of the accused before the Deputy Magistrate. 30 C. 107. Where the understanding in a bail bond was to produce the accused in the Sessions Court on every date that may be fixed by the Court or wherever required and in case of default, and subsequently the District Magistrate called on the sureties to produce the accused before him and on the failure to do so declared the bond forfeited, He held that the sureties were not bound to produce before the District Magistrate, in the words "wherever required" meant only that a requisition might be made by the Court of Sessions for the production of the accused in that Court, 35 C. 740. A bailbond providing only for the production of certain accused persons before the Sessions Court on a certain date is complied with by the appearance of the accused before such Court on such date, and the sureties are not bound to produce them subsequently before the District Magistrate. A bailbond to produce the accused in the Sessions Court on a certain date is complied with by the appearance of the accused in appeal, or whenever required, also complied with by the attendance of the accused during the hearing and though a requisition might be made by the Court of Sessions for the subsequent production in that Court, the sureties are not bound to produce them thereafter before the District Magistrate. A bailbond should contain a clear provision for the production of the accused before the Court or officer who is to take measures to secure their surrender and to recommend them to jail in terms of the warrant.—Gentoo Akas and others v. Orders (Ordnance) of the High Court of the 1st July 1880 referred to. Where a surety conditioned that he would be responsible for the continued presence of an accused person at one Court. And it was held that the surety was released from liability under his recognizance by the permission which the Court at A. And gave the accused with the surety's consent of leaving that place on business and also by subsequent transfer of the case to another Court—the Court at G. 13 W. R. 33. A bail bond by which the sureties bind themselves to be responsible for the appearance of the accused, during the preliminary inquiry and until he is committed to jail, is not forfeited if the accused absconded after the preliminary inquiry and during the trial at the Sessions, 9 W. R. 35, 13 A. L. J. 631, 2 Rang. 531.

(i) Bail bond as a security for the performance of a promise—Every bond taken under the provisions of the Code as security for the performance of a promise must necessarily include a money penalty for the breach of such promise. A document which does not provide for penalty or forfeiture of any kind is mere waste paper 17 C. P. L. R. 113 = 1 Cr. L. J. 354.

(ii) Condition of bail bond given by the accused and by the surety—Where the condition of bailbond given by the accused and by the surety was that the accused should appear when called upon it was held that the accused and the surety were entitled to reasonable notice of the time at which the former would be required to attend.—H. C. P. v. 4th Decr. 1879, 5 M. H. C. R. Appx. XV, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. XLV. The surety is always allowed a fixed time within which to produce the accused 1535 A. W. N. 41.

(iii) Failure to appear after a bail bond has been given—There is a binding effect in requiring defendants on bail to execute recognizance to appear from time to time as they may be required until the close of the trial. Before proceeding to enforce the penalty it is not necessary to give them notice.—(H. C. P. v. 1st Aug. 1879, 1 M. H. C. R. 1800.) There is no binding effect in requiring accused persons to execute recognizance to appear on every day from the date of the execution of the recognizance until the close of the trial, 6 M. H. C. R. Appx. XXXVIII. A person executed a bail bond appearing at the first inquiry or at other times required. He appeared on the first day mentioned in the bond and was verbally directed to appear on a subsequent day. He failed to comply with the verbal direction to attend at a certain time and place. It was held that there was no illegality in the forfeiture of his recognizance, Weir II, 653. The liability under a bond conditioned for the appearance in Court 'up to the conclusion of the case,' does not cease until the accused appears for receiving sentence and not when the Judge finds that the case against the accused is proved, 33 P. R. 1914 = 16 Cr. L. J. 76.

16. Sureties to a bail-bond discharged on suicide of accused.—Where an accused has committed suicide, the sureties are not liable for the default of his appearance, and the fact that the sureties did not take steps to prevent the accused from committing suicide, even though such possibility may have passed through their mind, does not amount to such neglect or default as to make them liable on the bond, 37 M. 156; 15 C. W. N. 550 = 13 Cr. L. J. 592. The principle laid down in Merrick v. Vander, 6 Term Rep. 50 and Falkner v. Critico, 13 East 457 and Robertson v. Pitterson 7 East 405 followed, see also 18 Bom. L. R. 683 = 17 Cr. L. J. 393.

17. What amounts to a breach of bond for keeping the peace.—See Notes 112 and 113 at p 210 "It has frequently been held that a bond to keep the peace cannot be forfeited except on proof of the commission of an offence involving a breach of the peace and that the use of the word 'probably' in Form X, Sch. V, limits forfeiture to cases in which a breach of the peace is the probable and not merely the possible result of the act of the person bound over. Thus a conviction for theft or for wrongful confinement and extortion will not justify a forfeiture of such bond (18 W. R. 63; 19 W. R. 48), nor will a conviction for the abduction of a woman (7 P. R. 1906). In the present case a secret attempt to poison a person cannot reasonably be regarded as an offence which would probably result in a breach of the peace, 22 P. R. 1912 = 47 P. W. R. 1914 = 252 P. L. R. 194 = 15 Cr. L. J. 605. Before a recognizance can be forfeited, it must be proved that the accused person has either personally broken the peace, or abetted some other person or persons in breaking it. The mere fact that the accused is a servant of one of the two rival parties for whose benefit the breach took place is not sufficient, 11 W. R. 52. A person bound down to keep the peace, some time afterwards, wrongfully confined and extorted a sum of money from two ryots, who were supposed to have committed theft on his lands. For this offence he was fined, and his recognizance was forfeited. Held, that the matter ought to have ended with the fine, and the order as to forfeiture of recognizance was bad as no breach of the peace had occurred, for the ryots had offered no resistance, 19 W. R. 48. See also 18 W. R. 63. In 7 P. R. 1906 = 4 Cr. L. J. 276, a person was bound over to keep the peace, or, not to do any act which would cause a breach of the peace. He, however, committed the offence of abduction within the period covered by the bond. Held, that the bond was not liable to forfeiture, the possible consequence of the offence committed being too remote to render the offender liable to forfeit his bond.

18. What amounts to breach of bond for good behaviour.—See s. 121 and Note 111 at p 209 The powers of determining the extent, if any, to which a conviction should justify the rigorous measure of forfeiture, should be reasonably and moderately exercised, 7 P. W. R. 1914 = 62 P. L. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 435. The man who stands surety for another should always be treated in a considerate manner and it is contrary to all principles of justice that he should be held liable for a sudden act of violence, especially when he himself belongs to another village and has no possible opportunity of controlling the every-day life of the offender. When men stand surety in respect of s. 110 they undertake liability for such good conduct only on the part of the person for whom they stand surety as is indicated by the circumstances under which the security was demanded. No man would ever undertake to be a surety if he was thereby compelled to undergo liability for any conceivable form of offence committed by the person for whom he stood surety, 15 P. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 575. In this case A was required to give security for being suspected as a thief and receiver of stolen property, and B stood as his surety. A was subsequently convicted on a serious charge for an offence under s. 326, I P C, held that B's bond should not be forfeited. See also 18 P. R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L. J. 435. A was convicted under the good behaviour was convicted under the action under this section, although having exercised the discretion conferred on him by sub-sec. (5) of this section, 1906 A. W. N. 13 = 3 Cr. L. J. 91. Good behaviour includes peace and he that is bound to be of good behaviour, is therein also bound to keep the peace, (4 Staph. Comm. 376) See s. 121 and Notes thereunder.

18-A. Bond may be in one district and breach in another.—See Note 114 at p 210

19. Compounding of offences will not prevent forfeiture.—A Magistrate is not prevented from taking steps under this section in cases in which a breach of the peace has been committed and the parties acting privately had compounded the offence, 26 A. 202.

20. Is it necessary to take action immediately after breach?—See Note 116 at p. 211 If on failure of recognizance, the Magistrate ought, at the time of making the order in respect of the second alleged offence, to take into consideration the fact that there is an outstanding recognizance, and determine once for all whether he will proceed on it or not. If he does not make any order for forfeiture of the recognizance, it must be taken that he is determined not to proceed on it for that particular breach, and he cannot after the expiration of the period covered by the recognizance, and after making an order for such second charge re-consider and add to such order by directing the forfeiture of the recognizance, 1 C. L. R. 134; also 3 C. L. R. 406, 25 C. 440. He cannot proceed piecemeal by passing a sentence and subsequently passing an order for forfeiture. When he orders forfeiture, he should inflict lighter punishment than he would otherwise inflict 26 P. R. 1904. But in 26 A. 202 these Rulings were entirely disapproved of, and it was held that a Magistrate who convicts a person (already bound over under Chapter VII) of an offence involving a breach of the peace and passes an appealable sentence, may very well wait until the period of appeal has expired or when an appeal has been filed, till it is decided, before he proceeds to take action under this section. Also when a Magistrate so convicting is unaware of the fact of the accused being bound over, he can institute proceedings under this section only when he becomes aware of the execution of the recognizance bonds. Cases may also occur in which subsequent proceedings taken after the lapse of a considerable time may be held bad. In view of the conflict of views on this point, a Full Bench of the Punjab Chief Court considered the point again and held that when convicting a person of an offence involving the forfeiture of the bond for the peace, if a Magistrate, who has knowledge of the fact that the person before him, has by his conduct forfeited his bond, does not make any order for forfeiture, he must be taken to have decided not to take action on the bond in respect of that particular breach of the peace and that he cannot thereafter re-consider and add to his order by directing forfeiture of the recognizance, 13 P. R. 1913 = 7 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 67 approving of 26 P. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 1100, 6 P. W. R. 1915 = 95 P. L. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 194. See also 32 P. R. 1903. In 44 A. 637 it was held that where proceedings for the forfeiture of a bond for keeping the peace have been commenced before the expiry of the period for which the bond was given the fact that such period has expired is no bar to their continuance, (25 A. 202 referred to)

21. Does the bond continue to be in force after it is once forfeited?—Further breach within the period covered by the bond.—When a bond for good behaviour is broken and the punishment for such breach is completely suffered before the period named in the bond expires, the sureties, when paying the forfeiture should be asked, whether they agree to the bond continuing in force, and if they do not agree, the Magistrate should proceed under s. 126 (3) and demand fresh security, 1904 U. B. R. 13. In 4 C. W. N. 121, there was, however, an obiter dictum that a security to keep the peace once given is sufficient for that purpose so long as it remains in force, in respect of every act of the person bound over breaking any of its conditions. But, having regard to the language of Sch. V, No. 11, this view is not correct, because the terms of the bond are "in case of making default" and not "in every case of making default."

Partial enforcement of bond extinguishes it wholly.—See Note 118 at p. 211. The forfeiture of a part only of the amount of a bond operates as a remission of the balance, and therefore the right of the State to recover such balance is at an end, and it cannot be regarded as forming the penalty of a new bond. A furnished security in Rs. 150 for his good behaviour for three years. He committed a breach of the bond and Rs. 25 of the penalty were forfeited. He again committed an assault under s. 352, I. P. C., within the said three years, and the Magistrate proceeded to forfeit Rs. 25 of the aforesaid bond. Held that his order was bad in law, 11 P. R. 1889.

22. Are both principal and surety liable to pay on forfeiture of bond?—See Note 117 at p. 211. A person who executes a bail bond for the appearance of an accused is not a security in regard to the accused's bond, but has himself undertaken to produce the accused or in default to forfeit a sum of money. Therefore on forfeiture of the bond, the surety is not discharged by the fact that the property of the accused has been sold under s. 88 and forfeited to the Government and the amount of the accused's own bail bond has been recovered, 10 Cr. L. J. 294 (M). Upon the forfeiture of a bond by a person to keep the peace for a term (s. 107) the surety is liable to pay the amount specified in the bond in addition to the penalty paid by the principal. The object of requiring sureties is not to ensure the recovery of the bond from the principal, but to serve as an additional security for the principals keeping the peace (see 20 A. 206). This is not a case of ordinary suretyship for the payment of money, 36 C. 862 distinguishing from 1903 U. B. R. (Cr. P. C.) 31 = 2 Cr. L. J. 463, where it is held that when the amount of the bond has been collected from the person bound over, there is no warrant for making a fresh demand on the sureties. The sureties required by s. 107 or s. 110 are merely sureties in the ordinary sense of the term. They undertake that the principal will be of good behaviour, and in case of a breach, the principal and sureties are jointly and severally liable for the sum named in the bond and no more. The penalty is not required to be paid twice over. See also 26 P. R. 1894. In my opinion the sureties to such are ordinary sureties. When A promises in a bond to pay Rs. 10 to B on a certain contingency arising, and C and D subscribe an undertaking to be sureties for A it can only mean that B, at most is entitled to a penalty of Rs. 10 which he can recover on the said contingency arising from anyone or all of three persons concerned, it is left to the option of the Government to select from among the three men that one against whom it will proceed, or it pleases, it may proceed against all three or any two and recover such fractions from each as it may think fit, 226 P. L. R. 1811 = 12 Cr. L. J. 404.

22-A. Forfeiture of bond against surety where principal is not bound.—One R. K. was arrested in Gwalior under warrant issued at Montgomery. He was released on bail on C. S. standing surety for him. He failed to appear before the Magistrate at Montgomery, and that officer forfeited C. S.'s security. The arrest of R. K. was thereafter found by the High Court to have been illegal and C. S. then applied for revision of the order of forfeiture, held, that although R. K. the principal, was under the circumstances not liable on his bond the surety C. S. was not free from liability on that account. S. 128 of the Contract Act only explains the quantum of a surety's obligation when the terms of the contract do not limit and has no reference to the nature of the obligation of the principal, 2 LAL. 304 (19 B. 597 followed).

23. Order for imprisonment cannot be made before attachment and sale of property.—The words "and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale" indicate that it is not competent to a Magistrate to direct that in default of payment, the person whose recognizance is forfeited should be imprisoned, without first ordering an attachment and sale of his moveable property, 10 C. L. R. 571.

24. Recovery of penalty is no bar to prosecution under Penal Code.—There is nothing in this section which prevents an accused person who has forfeited his bail-bond by default of appearance, from being proceeded against under s. 174, I P. C., notwithstanding his surety has paid the penalty mentioned in the recognizance, 10 W. R. 4 = 1 B. L. R. Cr. 1.

25. Liability of representative of deceased surety.—Sub-sec. (6) by which "the estate of the deceased in the hands of his representatives will be liable where the liability has accrued before his death is new" It was held the words "person bound" do not include the representative of a deceased surety, and such representative is not liable to be proceeded against in a summary proceeding under Chapter XLII, 22 P. R. 1894.

26. Portion of penalty may be remitted.—Revision.—The High Court it was formerly held had no power to reduce the amount of recognizances which have been forfeited, but in the case of hardship the matter should be referred to Government, 3 C. 757 = 2 C. L. R. 408; also 8 C. L. R. 72, 19 W. R. 1; Ratanlal 20; 2 P. R. 1883. But all these cases are no longer law, being decided under the old Code. Now, the present Code (sub-

ARVER, J, in Cr. Rev. Case No 77 of 1907, Madras High Court. See Note 2 to s 515. In 6 P. R. 1915 = 16 Cr. L. J. 287, the High Court revised the order directing the forfeiture of a bond and ordered a part only of the penalty to be levied.

27. Contract by principal to indemnify his surety is illegal.—An indemnity bond executed by the accused in favour of his surety cannot be enforced, the consideration being illegal, 32 B. 449 following Hermen v. Feuchner, 15 Q. B. D. 581. Money deposited with the surety by the principal for such a purpose cannot be recovered back, 1 A. 751.

AMERICAN LAW AND CASES

28. Analogous law under the New York Code.—Compare ss. 593, 594, 595 and 597 of the N. Y. Cr. Pro. C. Therein it is laid down that—(s. 593). If, without sufficient excuse, the defendant neglect to appear for arraignment, or for trial or judgment, or upon any other occasion where his presence in Court may be lawfully required, or to surrender himself in execution of the judgment, the Court must direct the fact to be entered upon its minutes, the undertaking of his bail or the money deposited instead of be, is thereupon forfeited. (S 594) If, at any time before the final judgment of the Court, the defendant appear and satisfactorily excuse his neglect, the Court may direct the forfeiture of the undertaking, or deposit to be discharged, upon such terms as are just (S 595) If the forfeiture be not discharged, the district attorney may, at any time after the adjournment of the Court, proceed against any surety upon his undertaking, such proceeding shall be by action only (S 597) After the forfeiture of the undertaking or deposit as provided in this Article, the Court directing the forfeiture may remit the forfeiture, or any part thereof, upon such terms as are just. It will be seen that the above procedure refers to principal, i. e. defendant and his surety, and the remedy for enforcement of forfeiture of bail is by action. With these exceptions the law is the same as that laid down in this section.

29. Forfeiture of the bond.—Bastardy proceedings instituted against the defendant were adjourned from 28th May to 7th June. On that day the defendant appeared and the hearing proceeded throughout the day, and were adjourned by consent to 26th June, on which day the defendant failed to appear. At the time of the first adjournment a bond with two sureties was given which recited the proceedings and the adjournment to 7th June. It was conditioned to be void, if the said defendant should personally be and appear before the Justice at the time and place aforesaid, and not depart therefrom without the leave of the Justices. On the second adjournment, the defendant and one of the sureties were present. It was stated by Counsel for the two parties, in their presence that the bond was to be held good. Held, that the sureties were not discharged from liability by the second adjournment.—People v. Mithan, 100 N. Y. 273; 4 N. Y. Cr. Rep. 137; but see People v. Swales, 33 Hun 208. A party, bound by a recognizance, be subsequently arrested on a Bench warrant, before a forfeiture and he escapes his bail is discharged. People v. Sliger, 10 Wend. 431. An arrest on a Bench warrant after a forfeiture does not release the bail. People v. Annable, 7 Hill, 33. A recognizance is forfeited though the defendant appear, if he depart before the conclusion of the trial. People v. McCoy, 59 Barb. 73. It is no defence to an action on a recognizance for appearance that no indictment was found against the principal at such Court. Champlain v. People, 2 N. Y. 82. A party under recognizance to appear may be called upon on any day during the continuance of the Court without notice. People v. Blankman, 17 Wend 252. If the defendant be called at any stage of the trial, and fail to appear and answer, the recognizance may be declared forfeited. People v. Pettry, 2 Hill 523. There is a breach of the recognizance if the defendant, though corporally present, does not answer when called. People v. Wigfus, 5 Den. 58.

30. Defence to forfeiture.—It is a good defence to an action on a recognizance for a person's appearance to answer a criminal charge that he had been arrested and committed to jail in another country. People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill, 370. It is a valid excuse for non appearance of the principal that he had enlisted as a soldier in the United States. People v. Chusney, 44 Barb. 118. When recognizance is conditioned for the appearance of the defendant on a certain day, and from time to time as directed by the Justice, and proceedings are adjourned at a time when the defendant is not present, there cannot be a forfeiture of the recognizance at a subsequent adjourned day. People v. Scott, 67 N. Y. 585.

31. Remission of forfeiture.—A judgment on a forfeited recognizance will not be discharged because of the illness of the surety at the time the recognizance was forfeited. People v. Mithan, 14 Daly 333. A judgment entered against surety and principal respectively on a forfeited recognizance will be cancelled on motion where it appears that, subsequent to the forfeiture, the accused person had appeared, was tried and paid the fine imposed. People v. Bossemeyer, 27 Week Dig 337. A judgment entered on a forfeited recognizance taken in a special sessions in a prosecution for assault and battery will be vacated where it is shown that the complainant appeared and acknowledged satisfaction for the injury and requested the discharge of the defendant. People v. Grossman, 5 N. Y. Sup. 446. To warrant the discharge of a judgment upon a forfeited recognizance, it must be shown to the Court that the accused did not escape conviction through the absence of the prosecutor and witness.—People v. Fliegenhener, 15 State Rep 376.

* 514-A. When any surety to a bond under this Code becomes insolvent or dies, or when any bond is forfeited under the provisions of section 514, the Court, by whose order such bond was taken, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, may order the person from whom such security was demanded to furnish fresh security in accordance with the directions of the original order, and, if such security is not furnished, such Court or Magistrate may proceed as if there had been a default in complying with such original order

Procedure in case of insolvency or death of surety or when a bond is forfeited.

Bond required from a minor

* 514-B. When the person required by any Court or officer to execute a bond is a minor, such Court or officer may accept in lieu thereof a bond executed by a surety or sureties only

Appeal from and revision of orders under s. 514

515. All orders passed under section 514 by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, or, if not so appealed may be revised by him

Notes.—1 First-class Magistrate not competent to hear appeal.—A first-class Magistrate not being a District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal against the order of a second-class Magistrate enforcing the penalty on forfeiture of a bond under s. 514. Ratanlal 356; a Sessions Judge is not competent to hear the appeal 2 M. 169. See s. 570 (a) as to the result of a Magistrate not duly authorized revising an order under s. 514. See also 15 P. R. 1903

2. High Court may revise District Magistrate's orders.—The cases in 3 C. 757 = 2 C. L. R. 405 and 19 W. R. 1 decided under the Codes of 1861 and 1872 are no longer of any authority. The jurisdiction of the High Court under ss. 439 and 423 (c) is very wide and gives it the power to revise orders under this section. This general power is not taken away by the power of revision given to the District Magistrate by the section. As the jurisdiction of a superior Court cannot be taken away except by express words or necessary implication (see 4 B. 626) 3 B. L. R. 179 = 13 Cr. L. J. 31. See also 15 P. R. 1903 = 2 Cr. L. J. 131 and Note 26 to s. 514

Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizances

516. The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond to appear and attend at such High Court or Court of Session

Note.—Scope of section.—Section 516 is only concerned with the power to direct the levy of the amount due and not with the forfeiture which is a condition precedent to the levy. The procedure on forfeiture is defined by s. 514. A power to try the forfeiture of the bond cannot be delegated under this section. 14 C. W. N. 259 = 10 Cr. L. J. 248.

CHAPTER XLIII

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY

† 516-A. When any property regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which appears to have been used for the commission of any offence is produced before any Criminal Court during any inquiry or trial, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the proper custody of such property pending the conclusion of the inquiry or trial and if the property is subject to speedy or natural decay, may after recording such evidence as it thinks necessary order it to be sold or otherwise disposed of

Note.—Section 516-A is a new section enabling the Court to pass orders for the custody or disposal of property during an inquiry whereas under the old law under s. 517 an order for the disposal of property could only be made on the conclusion of an inquiry or trial.

517. (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal ‡ by destruction confiscation or delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to possession thereof or otherwise * of any property or document produced before it or in its custody or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed.

* Sect on 516 B was inserted by Act XVIII of 1923

† Sect on 516 A was inserted by Act XVIII of 1923 s. 141

‡ The words — were inserted by 1861

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate

* "(3) When an order is made under this section such order shall not, except where the property is livestock or subject to speedy and natural decay, and save as provided by sub-section (4), be carried out for one month, or, when an appeal is presented, until such appeal has been disposed of"

† "(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit any Court from delivering any property under the provisions of sub-section (1) to any person claiming to be entitled to the possession thereof, on his executing a bond with or without sureties to the satisfaction of the Court, engaging to restore such property to the Court if the order made under this section is modified or set aside on appeal"

Explanation †.—In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise

Note.—Amendments.—Sub-sec. (1) is amended so as to make it clear that the phrase "disposal of property" means disposal by destruction, confiscation, etc. See 23 C. W. N. 1094.

Under sub-sec. (3) the period of one month is allowed for the presentation of an appeal or an application for revision where this is allowed

Sub-sec. (4) which is newly added enables the Court to restore the property to the possession of any person claiming it.

Notes.—1. Scope of section as enlarged Magistrate may deal with any property mentioned therein irrespective of commission of any offence.—To enable a Court to act under this section, the property or document in question (a) must be produced before it, or (b) be in its custody, or (c) it must appear that an offence has been committed regarding it, or (d) it must have been used for the commission of any offence, and one of these conditions at least, must exist in an inquiry or trial in such Court. The operation of this section has been enlarged so as to enable a Magistrate to pass orders for the disposal of any property produced before him.—Statement of Objects and Reasons Under the previous Codes, the words "any property" were held to include as well property voluntarily produced before the Magistrate by a witness in the case, as property seized by the Police or found on the person of the accused, 12 B. H. C. R. Cr. Ca. 217. Under s. 517 of the Code of 1882, the Magistrate could make "such order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any document or other property produced before it regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence." See 24 C. 499; 1 B. 630; 46 P. R. 1885; 10 B. 197; 14 C. 834. And it had further been held that the application of that section must be limited to the offence actually under investigation in an inquiry or trial. See Ratanlal 500. Under the present Code the scope of the section, as stated above is very much enlarged though the marginal note is left as it was. The words "or in its custody or" are newly inserted. Under the provisions of this section as it now stands amended, the Magistrate has now power to pass an order regarding the property produced before, or in the custody of the Court, even though no offence has been committed in respect of it, 34 C. 347. An order may be passed now, under this section, even though there has been no conviction or offence proved in which the property produced has been used, if it appears to the Court that any offence has been committed, irrespective of the charge or the result of it, Weir II, 666; 16 M. L. J. (5h. N.) 4; 11 Cr. L. J. 138 (M.), 1893 A. W. N. 61; 15 Cr. L. J. 811. The Rulings in Ratanlal 500 and 981 and 46 P. R. 1885 are no longer law. The Ruling in 30 C. 690, though under the present Code, seems to be erroneous, being based upon the Rulings under the previous Codes. In that case in acquitting the accused, the Magistrate made an order, directing the idol, in respect of which the alleged offence was said to have been committed to be delivered to the person in whose possession it was found. The Sessions Judge dismissed the appeal from this order, on the ground that the order, was not one under this section, as no offence was committed in respect of it. In revision, it was contended that the idol was practically in the custody of the Court, as the Magistrate who entertained the complaint, passed a provisional order, delivering the idol to the petitioner, on his giving security and directing him to produce it before the Court, whenever called upon to do so—an order not justified by the Code, 7 C. W. N. 531. The High Court erroneously held that no offence having been committed the order directing the restoration of the idol was not an order under this section and was therefore not appealable under s. 520. The High Court did not deal with the question of the custody of the Court. The High Court has power also, under s. 423 (1) (d) to make any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper. Therefore it might well pass an order under this section read with s. 439 as a Court of Revision, and thus exercise, in any event the powers of an Appellate Court. See also 8 C. W. N. 713; 9 C. W. N. 543 = 2 Cr. L. J. 269. In 34 C. 958 it has been held that the first part of s. 517 appears to have reference to cases of offences relating to property or relating to documents, e.g., where the Court directs as in cases of theft, or criminal misappropriation or offences of similar description that the property which is stolen or misappropriated be restored to its owner and the last words of the section "which has been used for the commission of any offence" must refer to cases of the same nature, i.e., to instruments like guns and swords produced in Court.

† Sub-sec. (4) was inserted by Act XVIII of 1922 s. 142

2. Scope of ss. 517 and 523.—s. 523 applies only to cases where the Police act pro motu and does not provide a procedure alternative to that provided by s. 517. See 17 B. 743; 21 B. 844, 2 A. 276; 1 B. 630. FULTON, J., however, in 25 B. 552, was of opinion that s. 523 applied equally whether the seizure by the Police is made under a Magistrate's warrant or without a warrant. See Notes to s. 523.

3. When sample is produced in Court, whole bulk taken to be produced.—When a portion of salt earth, salt or other article in bulk is produced and received in evidence as a sample of the bulk, the whole bulk is to be taken to have been produced before the Court, within the meaning of this section, Weir II, 670.

IN RESPECT OF WHAT PROPERTY OR DOCUMENT ORDER MAY BE MADE.

4. Does section deal with immovable property?—This section does not apply to immovable property. If the word 'property' comprehends both moveable and immovable property, s. 517 then becomes much more comprehensive in its meaning than s. 522 which would thus be superfluous (33 C. 372 referred to), 18 C. W. N. 1146 = 15 Cr. L. J. 175; see also 36 C. 44; 1900 A. W. N. 81. In 4 L. B. R. 219 = 7 Cr. L. J. 490, it was however held that the word 'property' includes immovable property.

5. Disposal of property found in accused's possession as to which no offence is committed.—In a case of criminal breach of trust, a Magistrate directed by his order that out of the money and ornaments recovered by the Police, the sum equal to the amount embezzled by the defendant (accused) should be made over to the complainant and the balance should remain with the Police until further orders pending the disposal of the other case—vide s. 517. Held, that there was nothing to show upon the record that any offence was committed in regard to the property found by the Police on the person of the accused or that it was used for the commission of any offence and that the Magistrate had no authority to make the order he did, 24 C. 499; Weir II, 665. But the correctness of this ruling may be doubted having regard to the enlarged scope of the present section, Weir II, 665. See also 9 C. W. N. 549 and 22 B. 844; 34 C. 347 dissenting from 30 C. 690; 11 Bom. L. R. 16 = 9 Cr. L. J. 162. In Ratanlal 636, it was laid down that, where on offence appears to have been committed regarding the money produced in a case, the Magistrate is entitled to refrain from making an order under this section, but if necessary, proceedings may be taken under s. 523 42 M. 9.

6. Property remotely connected with the offence committed cannot be dealt with.—A boat illegally used for hire in contravention of Bombay Act II of 1884 cannot be sold under this section. Neither this section nor the Bombay Public Ferry Act of 1884 does warrant such sale, Ratanlal 688. A man may use a lathe or other instrument for committing an offence and doubtless such a weapon can be dealt with under this section. But boats which were used by the accused in going to commit the theft or in escaping from pursuit, cannot be Printed in the Press in which seditious matters have been printed, cannot be said to be property which has been used for the commission of an offence within the meaning of this section, the Press being but a remote instrument, 34 C. 985. The accused was convicted of the offence of rash driving under s 279, I P C., and the convicting Magistrate passed an order under this section that the cart, pony and harness which the accused was driving should be sold and the sale-proceeds paid over to complainant as compensation, held the order was illegal. 9 P. L. R. 1904 = 1 Cr. L. J. 38. See also 37 P. W. R. 1907 = 8 Cr. L. J. 411; 8 C. W. N. 837; 4 P. L. R. 1904, 5 N. L. R. 59 = 2 Cr. L. J. 539.

Property falsely alleged to be stolen—The petitioner falsely charged A with having stolen certain articles which were subsequently found in the petitioner's possession. The petitioner was convicted under s 182 I P C., and the Magistrate directed the articles to be sold and the proceeds credited to Government. The High Court set aside the order and directed them to be restored to the petitioner, 9 C. W. N. 597 = 2 Cr. L. J. 273. See also 9 M. 448 Contra 24 M. L. J. 1, Note 12 (1).

7. Money given as bribe to public servant may be dealt with.—A public servant was convicted under s 161, I P C., and the Magistrate passed an order under s 418, Act X of 1872, in respect of money produced by one of the witnesses and alleged to have been given as a bribe. The High Court set aside this order, remarking that the section was inapplicable as it merely authorized the Magistrate to declare the ownership of the property which had been the subject of an offence, Weir II, 665. This was under the 1872 Code, but now the order of the Magistrate would be right as the money given as bribe may be considered as property which has been used for the commission of an offence Weir II, 665 (footnote). See also Weir II, 666 and the confiscation order made in the ruling printed at Weir I, 534.

8 Disposal of property to which original may have been converted or exchanged.—In view of the explanation, the objection that the coins directed to be returned are not the identical coins sold is unsustainable, 4 S. L. 255 = 12 Cr. L. J. 397. The words 'conversion' and 'exchange' must be taken in their ordinary sense. They apply to such acts as the melting down of gold and silver ornaments and the exchange of notes for cash. Where, therefore, A obtained a decree against B fraudulently on a forged note and in execution of the decree purchased B's garden and took possession thereof and was subsequently convicted of forgery and cheating, held that it was not open to the convicting Court to direct restoration of the garden to B as it could not be said that the garden was property acquired by the conversion or exchange of the forged promissory note into or for a decree, 4 Bur. L. T. 211 = 12 Cr. L. J. 473.

9. No order as to thing not in existence when offence committed.—A Magistrate has no authority to make an order under this section in respect of a thing which was not in existence when the offence was committed, e.g., an innocent purchaser of a stolen cow cannot be ordered to deliver up the calf which he got while the cow was in his possession 10 M. 25.

WHEN ORDER MAY BE MADE.

10 Order may be made only when there has been enquiry or trial—When an order directing delivery of property is made by a Magistrate without any criminal proceedings before him or any other Magistrate, but merely on the application of the person in whose favour such order is made, such an order is entirely without jurisdiction and this section cannot apply to the case, 6 C. L. J. 707 = 6 Cr. L. J. 402. Similarly, in 5 C. L. J. 229 = 5 Cr. L. J. 147, an order passed by a Magistrate directing delivery of property to the complainant, merely upon a complaint that some accused persons were detaining it unlawfully is illegal. The High Court, as a Court of Revision, set aside such an order, but declined to make a further order for restoration, on the ground that it would be illegal to do so.

(i) No order may be made when accused dies before trial—When a person charged before a Magistrate with criminal breach of trust in respect of certain jewels, died before trial, and before any evidence was recorded and the alleged owner of the jewels which were recovered by the Police from the pledges and sent to the Magistrate along with the charge-sheet, applied to be put in possession of them under this section and s 523 after inquiry as to their ownership, held, that this section did not apply to the case and further that as there was no evidence or finding about ownership, s 523 did not apply and that the Magistrate was not bound to hold an inquiry simply to determine the ownership of the jewels. The case not coming therefore either under this section or s 523 there was nothing to authorize the Magistrate to depart from the general rule that property taken under the authority of the law, for a particular purpose should on the fulfilment of the purpose go back to the custody whence it was taken, 29 M. 375, where 23 B 844 and 17 B 748 are referred to.

(ii) No order where trial is barred under s 403—Where the trial of a person is barred under s 403 it is not open to the Magistrate to pass an order regarding the disposal of property under this section as such an order could only be made "when an inquiry or trial in a Criminal Court is concluded." The trial having been barred by s. 403 there was no inquiry or trial at all within the meaning of s. 517, 4 L. R. 273 = 7 Cr. L. J. 490.

(iii) No order when complaint is dismissed—A Magistrate cannot pass any order under this section when dismissing the complaint under s. 203 as it cannot be said that there was any enquiry or trial before him, 21 M. L. J. 1 = 14 Cr. L. J. 27. Section 517 applies only when an inquiry or trial is concluded.

(t) Can any order be made when accused is absconding?—See 26 B. 552.

11. Order ought not to be made before conclusion of inquiry or trial.—An order under this section cannot be made before the conclusion of the trial. A was charged with theft in respect of gold and silver ornaments of B and C with having dishonestly received and disposed of them, under ss. 411 and 414, I P C. In the course of an investigation the Police seized from D ingots of gold and silver into which they alleged D had converted the ornaments which had been pledged to him by C. On A's conviction the Magistrate ordered the gold and silver ingots to be made over to B. The proceedings against C were adjourned and subsequently C was convicted. On D's application for revision of Magistrate's order regarding disposal of gold and silver ingots, held, that the order was illegal and that the Magistrate should pass fresh order according to law, Ratanlal 957. He must make the order at the time of passing judgment, 19 W. R. 3. But in 26 B. 552, a summons was issued for the appearance of two accused persons and certain property was produced on a search-warrant issued by the Magistrate. No further proceedings were taken against one of these persons, but he claimed the property seized as his own. It was held that he was entitled to an immediate inquiry, whether the property belonged, as alleged, to the complainant and formed the subject of the offence under trial or was in possession of that accused person as his own. But see the new s. 516 (a) which enables a Court to make an order of disposal during an inquiry or trial.

11-A.—Order can be made only after conclusion of trial and not on subsequent application.—Under s. 517 of the Code an order for the disposal of property can only be made upon the conclusion of an inquiry or trial and not on the application of a person subsequent to the conclusion of such trial. The applicant has his remedy by means of a civil suit, 4 Lab. 460. See also 46 M. 163 holding that an order under this section must be made either at the time of disposing of the appeal or so soon thereafter that it may be treated as part of the appeal proceedings.

WHAT ORDERS MAY BE MADE

12. Does 'disposal' include 'destruction' or 'forfeiture'? See now sub-sec. (1) as amended which expressly includes destruction or confiscation, etc., under "disposal."

(i) Order for disposal will include an order for forfeiture or confiscation—Ratanlal 492. The nature of the order to be passed for the disposal is not specified. If the property has been used for the commission of an offence it is impossible to suppose that the Legislature intended that it should be returned to the owner who would be the person guilty of the offence. If the property is the subject of the offence as in cases of theft, misappropriation etc. the proper order of course would be to direct it to be returned to the person from whom it was stolen or to the owner whose property was appropriated. The policy of the law as laid down in various enactments with respect to property used in the commission of an offence shows the order under this section may be according to the nature of the case either for the destruction of the property or for its forfeiture. A similar interpretation should be placed on s. 523. The power to order restoration is discretionary and the Court is not bound to exercise it. On principle the view taken in Wells 1, 534, apparently expressed in 9 M. 448 and 8 C. W. M. 887 = 1 Cr. L. J. 849 appears to be sounder than the contrary view expressed in, 34 C. 986; 9 C. W. R. 597 = 2 Cr. L. J. 273 and 19 M. L. J. 254 = 9 Cr. L. J. 149. 'Disposal' is a comprehensive word which would include forfeiture. An examination of the history of the section also shows that the powers of the Courts have been gradually widened. Where it was found A that had foisted certain articles into the accused's house for the purpose of bringing a false case of theft and brought a complaint in the investigation of which the articles were seized but the complaint itself was dismissed held the Magistrate had jurisdiction under s. 523 if not under s. 517 to direct the articles to be forfeited, 24 M. L. J. 1 = 14 Cr. L. J. 27.

(ii) Contra.—The word 'disposal' does not include either confiscation or destruction of property.—Under this section a Criminal Court has no power to direct forfeiture of property 34 C. 986; 37 P. W. R. 1907 = 6 Cr. L. J. 411. A Court cannot under this section direct the confiscated article to be sold or destroyed, 19 M. L. J. 254 = 9 Cr. L. J. 149. The object of the section is to enable the Magistrate to direct the property to be given to some person to whom it appears to belong or to allow it to continue in the possession of the person in whose possession it was found or to make some order of that character. Where, therefore, the accused was convicted under s 182, I P C, "or giving false information accusing B of theft of certain jewels, which were found on search in the accused's own house, and the Magistrate passed an order confiscating the jewels and directed them to be sold and a portion of the the proceeds be paid to B as compensation," and in making the said order, the Magistrate professed to act under this section. Held, this section was never intended to authorize the disposal of property in that manner and the orders regarding confiscation and payment of compensation were set aside as illegal, 9 C. W. N. 597. Where a person was convicted of seditious publication under ss 124-A and 153-A and the Press was directed to be confiscated and the Government contended that the Court had power to order confiscation inasmuch part of the Press was produced before it and the rest was in its custody and if confiscation is not legally permissible, destruction might and should be ordered, held that Chapter XLIII of the Code does not contemplate an order of such a nature. Penal laws are not to be extended in their scope. The Code of Criminal Procedure is a body of adjective law and such cannot readily be interpreted as authorizing the infliction of a suffering or an encroachment of natural liberty or rights. In these circumstances it would be strange indeed if the Legislature which in ss 62, 121, etc., of the Penal Code and in numerous other sections of other Acts has expressly provided for imposing penalty of confiscation upon persons convicted of specified offences, intended by using the general word 'disposal' to authorize the infliction of that punishment not merely on the offender under trial but also on others who may not even be before the Court. No distinction can be drawn between confiscation and destruction 8 H. L. R. 59 = 9 Cr. L. J. 539.

13. Section invests Magistrate with a discretionary power which must be exercised judicially.—Section 517 invests the Magistrate with a discretionary power and it is a rule of law that such power must be exercised judicially, ie, according to sound principles of law and not in an arbitrary manner. But what that means is, not that the order is in the opinion of the higher tribunal of revision an improper one which it would not have passed but that, having regard to the materials before the Court exercising the discretion that discretion was exercised in a legal manner. Now, if there were no materials whatever before him the Magistrate ought to have returned the property to the person from whom it was produced. But if there were some materials, then the Magistrate's discretion came into operation, and it was for him to say what order ought to be passed having regard to all the facts in the case. Where there was a quarrel amongst the members of a joint Hindu family and the Magistrate, although holding that no offence was committed passed an order directing the return of the property to the complainant, held this discretion ought not to be interfered with 11 Bom. L. R. 16 = 9 Cr. L. J. 162. See also 17 Bom. L. R. 922 = 16 Cr. L. J. 763. It should be exercised in favour of the person entitled to the possession of property before Court, so long as there is anyone entitled to the possession of the property, Government has no claim to it, 2 Bom. L. R. 748.

(i) Magistrate cannot on mere suspicion order forfeiture of property.—A Magistrate acting under this section cannot, on mere suspicion that an offence has been committed with respect to property produced during the trial of a criminal case, order forfeiture of the property, and he is only justified in so doing after having made a separate judicial inquiry in which the complainant has had an opportunity of explaining any suspicious circumstances, Ratanlal 492. But when the accused was convicted of an offence under s 241, I P C, and a counterfeit rupee which, it was not shown had been delivered or attempted to be delivered to anyone having been found in his possession, the Magistrate ordered its destruction. Held, that even if the order was not strictly covered by the terms of this section, the order should not be interfered with, Weir II, 669.

(ii) Generally in cases of acquittal, property should be restored to the person from whom it is taken.—After an accused has been acquitted of the offence of theft or burglary, the proper order to make is to direct that the property found in the possession of the accused should be restored to him. The complainant in that case could go to the Civil Court, file a suit and secure an order of injunction, 18 C. W. N. 959 = 15 Cr. L. J. 184. When the accused are acquitted of the offence charged any property seized by the Police during the investigation of the case from them, must be restored to them when no offence is found to have been committed in respect of it, 1 C. W. N. 561; 16 M. L. J. (B. N.) 24, especially, in the absence of a finding in the case that it belonged to somebody else 3 M. L. T. R. 334. Where a second-class Magistrate found that no offence had been committed in respect of certain property, and ordered the property to be restored to the accused from whom it had been taken by the Police, it was held the order was in accordance with this section and s. 523, Weir II, 669 and 638. When the accused is discharged under s 253 no offence is proved against him, therefore the pre requisites of an order under this section being wanting the property should be restored to the accused from whom it was taken, Weir II, 663 and 668. In 1 B. 630 followed in 9 M. 448; 24 C. 499; 14 C. 834; 10 B. 197; 17 B. 748; 22 B. 844 and 1896 A. W. N. 56, it was held that upon general principles, on the acquittal or discharge of the accused, property should generally be restored to the person from whom it is taken, 34 C. P. 60, or to the accused, Weir II, 665 and 666, but that when such property is delivered by Police under the illegal order of a Magistrate the High Court has no power to order its restoration. This defect is now removed by additions made to s 520. But having regard to the changes introduced in the sections, the decision in 30 C. 690 seems to be incorrect, and the order based on the general proposition that property in respect of which no offence has been committed, should be restored to the person in whose possession it was found, is not an order under this section, though this section in no way precludes the passing of such an order, Weir II, 688. See 20 C. W. N. 1302.

(iii) In special cases Magistrate may order property to be delivered to person other than the one in whose possession it was found—Even where a party is charged with theft and that charge is dismissed or the party is discharged, an order can be made under this section for the delivery of the subject matter of the alleged theft to some party other than the party in whose possession the property was found at the date of the alleged offence, Mad. Cr. Rev. Case 477 of 1905 referred to, 34 M. 96. Where a person was accused of dishonestly receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, and was discharged by the Magistrate on the ground that there was no evidence that the property was stolen held that the Magistrate was competent, believing that the property was stolen, to make an order under s 418, Act X of 1872 regarding its disposal and to refuse to restore it to the accused, 2 A. 378 (C) 9 M. 449. Where a Magistrate convicted a person of the dishonest receipt of certain stolen bangles, and the bangles were on the same day ordered to be restored to the owner, and on appeal the accused was acquitted, the Appellate Court finding that though the appellant had clearly displayed the most gross want of common caution in buying such articles from a comparative stranger, it was not proved that he knew or had reason to believe the bangles were stolen. It was held that under the circumstances the Magistrate was right in refusing the application and leaving the applicant to his remedy in a Civil Court, 1893 A. W. N. 61. Similarly, where a Magistrate finds the property belongs to the complainant in a case of theft, but acquits the accused on the ground that there was no dishonest intention on the part of the accused, he has jurisdiction to order that the property should be given over to the complainant, 16 M. L. J. (Sh. N.) 8 followed in 11 Cr. L. J. 138 (M.). But where property belonging to the estate of a deceased person, was found with a person who was acquitted by the Magistrate of having dishonestly taken it, so as to amount to theft, it was held, that the Magistrate was not competent to order it to be given to the heirs of the deceased person and his order was cancelled, 1 B. 630. See 14 C. 834. It was further held that the High Court had no power to direct restitution of property, already delivered by the Police under an illegal order of the District Magistrate. In 8 B. 338, where the accused was acquitted of having cut down and stolen wood belonging to the complainant, on the ground that he acted under a misapprehension that the land on which the trees grew belonged to him, the High Court refused to interfere with the Magistrate's order directing the wood to be given to the complainant because he was really entitled to the possession of it.

(iv) Magistrate has no discretion when accused convicted.—Where a Magistrate finds that the complainant was assaulted and forcibly dispossessed of a bungalow and its contents by the accused and convicts the accused under s 323, I P. C., held it was the duty of the Magistrate to pass orders under this section and s 522 directing restoration of the bungalow and its contents to the complainant, 36 C. 44.

(v) Property not to be returned when person in whose possession it was found disclaims it.—A Magistrate is not justified in ordering that the property should be delivered to the accused when he disclaims the property. The Court should retain the property until one or other of the parties has established his right to it. If it has been paid or delivered, the Court has power to call upon the recipient to return it 37 P. W. R. 1913 = 14 Cr. L. J. 898.

(vi) Proper order when there is a bona fide dispute and property perishable.—A complaint of theft in respect for certain fallen trees was dismissed as there was a bona fide dispute about the ownership but the Magistrate directed the trees to be delivered to the complainant on revision the order was set aside and the High Court ordered that the wood should be sold and the proceeds should be retained by the Court until they were shown to be payable to one or other of the parties, either in virtue of a decree of Court or in virtue of an agreement amongst themselves, 16 Bom. L. R. 951 = 2 Bom. Cr. Ca. 269 = 16 Cr. L. J. 111. After attachment of certain trees, proceedings under s 145 were dropped, and the Magistrate directed the produce to be delivered to one of the parties though there was a dispute to the ownership. Held the proper order was to retain the produce in the custody of the village officers until one party or the other obtained the order of a Civil Court, and if the property was perishable or difficult to be kept in safe custody, it might be sold and the sale-proceeds kept in deposit, pending the same event, 16 Cr. L. J. 104 (M).

(vii) When two innocent parties claim, the negligent party must suffer.—See 21 A. 630, in Note 16 (iii).

the ornaments in deposit with him as trust, and to produce them whenever required. In the meanwhile, the complainant was directed to have his claim proved in a competent Court. Held that there was no section of the law, which enabled a Magistrate to make the order demanding security, for the production of the articles when required. If the Magistrate thought that a criminal offence had been committed, he ought to have proceeded to direct their production under s 84 or, if necessary, take steps under s 96, if he did not intend to take proper steps, the only course open to him was to leave it to the Civil Court to take such steps as it might think fit to secure the property. Also the order having been made in a matter which had come before the Magistrate in his judicial capacity, could not be regarded as an executive order merely, and that as a judicial order it was made without jurisdiction, 7 C. W. N. 522, but see Weir II, 683.

18. Proper order when currency notes or current coin is produced before Court.—Property in a bank note passes like that in cash by delivery and partly taking it bona fide and for value is entitled to retain it as against a former owner from whom it has been stolen. (Muller v. Race, 4 M. L. Cases 445.) A currency note was changed at the Government Treasury by one M, who was subsequently convicted of stealing it from S. The note was produced in evidence in the Sessions Court, which directed it to be given to S from whom it was stolen. On petition from the Treasury Officer to revise the order of the Sessions Court, the High Court gave the following judgment:—"The question is whether the Salem Treasury or the person from whom the note was stolen is entitled to the currency note. The Sessions Judge has decided the case upon an illustration drawn from the new Contract Act embodying a very old rule of law, that possession by the taker in good faith is no defence against the owner of a chattel whose possession was lost through theft. The decision is inapplicable to the case, for money (and a note of this kind is in legal view money) does not stand upon the footing of other chattels. (Foster v. Green, 6 H. and N. 793.) In the language of English law the property passes by mere delivery, and in the interests of commerce and the security of human dealing nothing short of fraud in taking an instrument payable to the bearer will engraft an exception upon the rule, (Goodman v. Harvey, 4 Ad. and E. 870.) Here the treasury was bound to cash the notes and the original owner has no claim against it. The order must be reversed." 7 M. H. C. R. 233; also 3 C. 379 = 1 C. L. R. 339 and 1 N.-W. P. H. C. R. 298, where it was held, that the change of currency note for cash is the exchange of money in one form for money in another form, and either form being legal tender, it is impossible to say that one is the price of the other. This case was approved in 19 C. 52 at p. 62. See also 20 W. R. 39; 10 P. R. 1896; 9 P. R. 1873, 5 A. L. R. 153 = 13 Cr. L. J. 21; 17 Bom. L. R. 922 = 15 Cr. L. J. 783. Currency notes must generally be returned to the person from whom they were taken, 1911 (2) M. W. N. 370 = 12 Cr. L. J. 400. But in Weir II, 670 and 440, it was held that an order of a Magistrate directing that money obtained by the Police from the person to whom the same has been lent by a thief or receiver, should be paid over to the owner, is not in contravention of this section.

(i) Rule as to money applies only to current coin—Where Babashai coin came before the Court as part of the stolen property and no custom is set up to show that it is current coin or legal tender in British India, it was held that the rule enunciated in the preceding note relating to the current coin of the realm, does not apply and the Court is at liberty, under this section, to award the same to the complainant, from whom they were stolen, 23 B. 702.

(ii) The rule that title to money passes by mere delivery is however limited to cases where receipt of money is bona fide—See 4 B. L. R. 235 = 12 Cr. L. J. 397. An objection that the coins are not the identical coins stolen is unsustainable in view of the explanation.

(iii) Rule as to currency notes modified, when the question is which of two innocent parties is to suffer—The petitioner, a dealer in hides, received the right halves of two currency notes from another dealer in hides, as security for the payment of the price of skins delivered to the latter, who promised to give the other halves which had already been given to the respondent. It was found, that owing to the negligent conduct of the respondent, in having allowed the owner to retain the right halves with him he committed fraud on the petitioner. The Magistrate after convicting the owner of the currency notes for cheating, ordered the return of the right halves to the petitioner. The Court of Session, acting under s 520 annulled the order and directed the petitioner to hand them over to the respondent. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to recover the half notes originally made over to him from the respondent or to obtain compensation from the respondent, if he had parted with them inasmuch as it was owing to the negligence of the respondent that the owner of the currency note had committed fraud on the petitioner. Where a Subordinate Court makes an order under s 529 directing the disposal of any property, regarding which an offence has been committed, the High Court can interfere in revision against that order, "and make any further order that may be just," 27 A. 630, where 1898 A. W. N. 40 is followed. The jurisdiction of the High Court, as a Court of Criminal Revision to consider the rights of the parties and make this order, seems open to doubt, Contra, see 9 C. W. N. 549.

17. Proper order when third parties are involved.—

(1) Rights of the pledgee of stolen property—A Magistrate should not make an order for delivery to the owner or complainant, of property regarding which an offence has been committed, without giving the person (pledgee) from whom the property was taken an opportunity of being heard. An appeal lies from such order, and the Magistrate should not under sub-sec. (3) of this section, allow his order to be carried out until the period allowed for presenting such appeal has passed. When, however, the evidence disclosed a prima facie case, of a certain jewel having been obtained from the owner by means of an offence or fraud within the meaning of s. 178, Prov (2) Indian Contract Act, and being pledged subsequently to another person, the Court declined to interfere with the order of the Magistrate, directing the return of the jewel to the owner without hearing the person with whom the jewel was pledged. In such a case, the pawn-broker from whom the jewel was taken, was held to have the right to bring a suit in the Civil Court to enforce his lien on the jewel, 4 L. B. R. 13 = 6 Cr. L. J. 125. But where certain jewels were given to the accused to sell, but she did not sell them and her niece pawned them, and the Police seized the jewels from the pawnee and returned them to the owner under orders of the Magistrate, who convicted the accused of criminal breach of trust, held the question as to the validity of the pledge, and the question whether the circumstances were such as to raise a reasonable presumption that the pawnee as acting improperly ought to be left to a Civil Court, and the possession of the jewels ought not to be transferred in consequence of the Police having seized them. The owner having given the jewels to be disposed of for money, he is not entitled to the assistance of a Criminal Court in recovering them from a pawnee to whom they were so disposed of, 3 Bar L. T. 111 = 12 Cr. L. J. 88; 4 L. B. R. 25 = 6 Cr. L. J. 133, where 27 M. 415 and 12 B. L. R. 42 are referred to. M obtained a pair of diamonds worth Rs. 80,000 promising to return them the same day but instead of doing so, he pawned them with C for Rs. 4,000. M was convicted of criminal breach of trust and C was directed to return the diamonds to M. It was contended on the authority of 4 L. B. R. 25 = 6 Cr. L. J. 133, that the order for the return of the diamonds was wrong as they were not obtained by means of an offence or fraud, held following 4 L. B. R. 13 = 6 L. B. R. 125, that the order was justifiable in the circumstances of the case, 3 Bar. L. T. 111 = 12 Cr. L. J. 88, but if the articles were given to a broker for sale and he sells the jewels but misappropriates the proceeds and is convicted of criminal breach of trust of the money, the purchaser of the jewels is protected by s. 108 (except) to the Contract Act, and is entitled to have the jewels returned to him, 4 Bar. L. T. 170 = 12 Cr. L. J. 467. See also Weir II, 672.

(ii) Refund of prize money obtained by cheating—Where a person was convicted of cheating under s. 420 I P C, by falsely pretending to be the winner of a lottery prize and dishonestly inducing the lottery officials to pay the prize to him he may be directed to refund the money to the lottery officials under this section, 15 Cr. L. J. 555 (Bar)

(iii) To purchaser in market overt no protection in India.—Under s. 108, Indian Contract Act, a seller cannot give to a buyer a better title than he himself has. Held therefore the real owner of a stolen buffalo, was entitled to recover it from the possession of an honest purchaser who acquired it bona fide after it had been bought and sold in market overt, 2 P. R. 1903 = 6 P. W. R. 1903 = 7 Cr. L. J. 279; but see 7 and 8 P. R. 1872.

18 Court competent to direct joint delivery.—Where it is found that subject matter of the offence belongs partly to the accused who has been discharged and partly to him and another jointly, it is not illegal to pass an order to deliver the property to both on their joint receipt, 34 M. 92.

EXECUTION OF ORDERS.

19. Defect of order as to finality.—An order after trial, made by a Criminal Court for the restoration of property under this section, is conclusive as to the immediate right to possession, 9 B. 131. The only effect of the order is that it determines which of the parties shall be left to sue in the Civil Courts, 95 P. L. R. 1911 = 12 Cr. L. J. 400. The real owner may proceed against the holder of the property. It is not for the Criminal Court to consider whether such person is entitled to retain such possession, 17 B. 748, and thus assume the functions of a Civil Court, 1 B. 630, Ratanlal 500, 29 M. 375.

20. Order should not be carried out at once but kept in abeyance.—See sub-sec. (3). The intention of the Legislature is that even if the Magistrate directs restoration, the order should not be carried out at once but kept in abeyance till the order becomes really final either by there being no appeal or by any final order by a Court of final jurisdiction, 18 C. W. N. 839—13 Cr. L. J. 184. When an order directing delivery of possession to one party is set aside by a higher tribunal, that order carries with it the incident of restoration which the Magistrate is bound to carry out, 18 C. W. N. 1167—13 Cr. L. J. 222.

21. Responsibility of Magistrate returning property before appeal time has expired.—When a Magistrate in acquitting the accused returned the money produced before him, before the expiry of the appeal time, and the accused on being called upon, subsequent to the disposal of the appeal to refund it, did not do so, it was held the District Magistrate should report the matter to Government, in order that the Subordinate Magistrate who was clearly responsible, might be called upon to make good the amount.—M H C. No 784 J, dated 22nd March 1894. If in such a case, the amount is not made good the remedy is by civil suit against the Sub-Magistrate, accused or both.—Mad. G O No 830 J, dated 14th June, 1904. The amount may also be recovered under s. 547 as if it were a fine, 19 A. 112.

22. Magisterial control ends when property is handed over.—When a Magistrate hands over property to anyone of the parties his control qua Magistrate ceases. If he takes again the same property from such person for the inspection of the Appellate Court, it does not come into his possession as property seized by the Police or property over which he had any power of disposal, 1897 A. W. N. 26.

23. Counterfeit coins to be sent to Bombay Mint.—When any counterfeit coin has been ordered to be confiscated by a Court acting under the provisions of ss. 517, 523 and 524, the Court should send the same to the Mint at Bombay or to the nearest treasury or sub-treasury officer, to be remitted by him to the Mint.—Bom H C Cr. C. No 77

POWERS OF APPELLATE AND REVISIONAL COURTS.

24. Appellate Court can make an order under this section even when first Court does not do so.—See Note 87 at p 1026. An Appellate Court is entitled in an appeal from a conviction and in other cases, to make any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper. Thus, an order directing the restoration of property which was found to have belonged to the complainant, but the restoration of which was not ordered by the Court of First Instance, is a consequential or incidental order within the meaning of s. 423 (1) (d), 3 A. L. J. 770—4 Cr. L. J. 376. See also 6 C. W. N. 713. Under s. 520 the Appellate Court has the same powers as the Court which tried the case to pass an order under this section directing the parties to get their claim established in a Civil Court, 35 A. 375 where 9 C. W. N. 549—2 Cr. L. J. 269 is followed, 22 B. 844, is no longer good law as it was passed under the old Code, but in Weir II, 674, it was held that the Appellate Court is not competent to pass any order under this section when the first Court fails to do so. See Note 87 at p 1026 and see 39 C. 1030.

25. High Court may in revision pass an order under this section.—See 15 Cr. L. J. 555 (Bur) and Note 66 to s. 439
